is not the same as a right to possession nor does it mean lawful or legal possession. This is clear from sub-section (4), for the Magistrate is not to determine who has a right to possess—Ambar Ali v. Piran Ali, 55 Cal 826, 32 C.W.N. 275 (280), 29 Cr.L.J. 503, 109 I.C. 231, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 344, 47 C.L.J. 233; Penumatsa Ranga Razu v. Zamindar, Gazzavaram, 39 Cr.L.J. 922, 177 I.C. 584, 11 RM 346, 1938 M.W.N. 252, 47 M.L.W. 340, A.I.R. 1938 Mad 654, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 453. It is clear from the provisions of sec 145, cl. (1) and cl. (4) that what the Magistrate is concerned with in proceedings relating to disputes as to immovable property under Chap 12, Cr. P. C., is not the rights to possess the subject-matter of dispute but the actual possession thereof at the date of the order under cl. (1), sec. 145. The expression 'actual possession' is plain and unambiguous and has no reference to any right to possess. In Agni Kumar Das v. Mantazaddin, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 610, 113 I.C. 181, 30 Cr.L.J. 69, 56 Cal 290, 32 C.W.N. 1173, 48 C.L.J. 193, a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court held that the words 'actual possession' in sub-sec. (1) of sec. 145, Cr. P. Code mean actual physical possession, even though wrongful, e.g., that of a recent trespasser in actual possession at the time of the proceedings under sec 145—Rahimallah v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Sind 61 (62), 41 Cr.L.J. 493 (494), 187 I.C. 627. The only point for determination is who was in possession at the time of the preliminary order. It does not matter whether such possession was wrongful or not. Actual possession is all that matters, subject of course to proviso 1, sub-sec. (4), sec. 145, Cr. P. Code—Abdul Latif v. Mohd Masud Khan, A.I.R. 1936 Nag 3, 18 N.L.J. 100, 1936 Cr.C. 34. See also China Tambi v. Virappa, A.I.R. 1937 Rang 202, 38 Cr.L.J. 805, 169 I.C. 939. It is not the duty of the Court in proceedings under sec. 145 to declare who is entitled to possession, the declaration must be as to who is actually in possession and entitled to remain in possession till a decision is given by a competent Court—Sabda v. Kushal, 27 Cr.L.J. 784, 95 I.C. 320, 7 P.L.T. 873. See also Suraj v. Tullock, 33 C.W.N. 574, A.I.R. 1929 Cal 632.

By actual possession is meant not merely bodily possession but the possession of a master by his servant, or the possession of a landlord by his immediate tenant, or the possession of the person who has the property in the land by the usufructuary—Sutherland v. Crowdy, 18 WR 11 (13).

Whether the possession is on behalf of others or in one's own right is quite irrelevant. This section is concerned solely with the fact of actual possession whether lawful or unlawful, whether in contemplation of law enjoyed by the possessor in his own right or on behalf of others—Narayana v. Kandasami, 3 L.W. 164, 16 Cr.L.J. 525; Taruja v. Asamuddi, 4 C.W.N. 426.

There is no authority to show that a servant can set up that possession by him for his master or superior is his own possession, or that the master or superior cannot set up that that possession is his own, though exercised for him by the servant—Perumal v. Tirumalai, 34 Cr.L.J. 88, 140 I.C. 900, 1932 M.W.N. 1079, Ind. Rul. 1933 Mad 63, 37 M.L.W. 143, A.I.R. 1933 Mad 245, 1933 Cr.C. 344. See also A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 60, 43 M.L.J. 624, 1922 M.W.N. 629, 16 M.L.W. 497 which lays down that the possession of a manager cannot be protected under this section against his master against whom he rebels.

Where the Magistrate restrained both the parties from exercising acts of possession over the disputed property under section 144, Cr. P. Code, and subsequently started proceedings under sec 145, Cr. P. Code, held that no evidence could be offered to show the possession of either party for the period during which the order under sec 144 was in force before the date of the preliminary order under sec 145, cl. (1), and that the Magistrate was consequently obliged to ascertain the possession immediately before the order under sec. 144 and to regard his intervention as an attachment suspending the previous possession whatever it might be, holding at the same time that the former possession continued, and although the lawful exercise of its rights had been forbidden for a time, the possession has never ceased to exist—Joyanti Kumar v. J. B. Middleton, 4 C.W.N. 562, 27 Cal. 785. See also Saddique v. Mohid, 32 Cr.L.J. 208, 129 I.C. 85, A.I.R. 1930 Pat 556, Ind. Rul. 1931 Pat. 69, 1930 Cr.C. 1110.

Possession of landlord by receiving rent from tenants is actual possession under this section—Narain Das, 1884 P.R. 19; Nobin Chunder v. Jogendranath, 25 W.R. 18; Mahesh, 11 O.L.J. 743, 26 Cr.L.J. 398, 1 O.W.N. 549, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 251. The fact that the tenants attorn to strangers by payment of rent to them, does not terminate the tenancy so as to put an end to possession of the landlord, and deprive him of his right to have recourse to this section in case of a likelihood of a breach of the peace, and to have his possession of the right to collect rent maintained—Sarbananda v. Pransankar, 15 Cal 527 (531). A lambardar who is in management of a village for the benefit of the three co-sharers of the village and who is himself a co-sharer, must be deemed to be in possession under this section—Ramdai v. Parbati, 1890 A.W.N. 178. See also A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 199, 23 Cr.L.J. 650.

In a proceeding under this section in respect of a tract of land a portion of which was admittedly in possession of tenants who had attorned to some of the second party, which party included these tenants, the Magistrate declared the possession of the first party in respect of the whole of the disputed property. Held that so far as the lands in the possession of the tenants were concerned, the possession of the first party must be declared through those tenants—Suraj v. Tullock, 33 C.W.N. 574, A.I.R. 1929 Cal 632.

The possession contemplated by this section is absolute, continuing and not occasional possession. Where the petitioners claim possession of a market stall for only one day in the week, this section is inapplicable—Nayan Manjari v. Fasley Haq, 71 I.C. 527, 49 Cal 871, 24 Cr.L.J. 175, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 502. So also, where one of the parties claimed only the right to worship on the disputed land on only one day in the year and the right to make preparations for the holding of that worship by erecting huts for the purpose of holding pujah, held that such right was in the nature of an easement and not in the nature of possession, and proceedings under this section could not be taken as this section contemplates absolute continuing possession of either party—Manik Chandra v. Preo Nath, 17 C.W.N. 205, 13 Cr.L.J. 789, 17 C.L.J. 397, 17 I.C. 533. But it is not intended that possession must be such as should be exercised every day of the year. Continuity of possession should be understood with reference to the object over which it is exercised. By continuous possession is meant such possession which a party in possession may have occasion to exercise and has exercised and exercises whenever he likes. With respect to lands which are fallow and liable to be submerged possession must be presumed to be with the owner until the contrary is proved. Occasional acts of user of such land by the owner constitute possession for the purpose of this section—Loke Nath v. Bazil Gani, 31 C.W.N. 334, 28 Cr.L.J. 343, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 313.

See also Note 399, paragraph 3.

Wrongful possession :—The words “actual possession” mean actual physical possession even though wrongful, e.g., that of a recent trespasser in actual physical possession at the time of the proceedings—Agni Kumar v. Mantazaddin, 56 Cal 290, 32 C.W.N. 1173, 30 Cr.L.J. 69, A.I.R. 1928 Cal 610, 113 I.C. 181, 48 C.L.J. 193 (F.B.); Raj Nandan v. Chhedi Thakur, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 185, 1932 Cr.C. 418, 142 I.C. 157, 34 Cr.L.J. 259, 13 P.L.T. 178; Abdul Lalif v. Mohd. Masud Khan, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 3, 1936 Cr.C. 34, 18 N.L.J. 100; Rahimalishah v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Sind 61, 41 Cr.L.J. 493, 187 I.C. 627; Ambar Ali v. Piran Ali, 55 Cal. 826, 32 C.W.N. 275 (280); Shriram v. Samirmal, 24 N.L.R. 148, 29 Cr.L.J. 902 (904), A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 284, 111 I.C. 662. The Magistrate's duty is to determine actual possession and not whether the possession is rightful or wrongful—In re Sangnbasawa, 7 Bom.L.R. 18, 2 Cr.L.J. 28; Sriram v. Samirmal, 24 N.L.R. 148, 29 Cr.L.J. 902 (903). The possession referred to in this clause is actual possession at the time of the initiation of proceedings and not possession at the date of the Magistrate's order. Therefore, possession, though obtained by wrongful means, but complete at the time of inquiry, is actual possession within the meaning of this section—Gauhar, 5 P.R. 1897. See Sabda v Kusha, supra.

Origin of possession.—A Magistrate ought to inquire into the question as to who is in actual possession of the property in dispute; he has no concern as to how the party obtained possession, provided that the possession dates more than two months prior to the date of the preliminary order—Ambler v. Pushong, 11 Cal 365.

Actual possession, what is not :—Possession by tenant is not possession of landlord in cases where there is a dispute between the tenant and the landlord as to the fact of possession—Baboo Reddi v. Kullappa, 2 Weir 107. Also, in case of dispute between two rival zemindars, constructive possession through intermediate holders (e.g., ticcadars) to whom the ryots pay rents, is not contemplated by this section—Thacoor Dayal, 3 Cal. 320. This section does not contemplate the possession of a superior landlord to whom the occupier of the lands does not pay rent. It contemplates the possession of a landlord by his immediate tenant, i.e., the person who pays rent to him—Sutherland v Crowdy, 18 W.R. 11 (13), 9 B.L.R. 229.

The possession contemplated by this section is a real tangible possession; therefore, where a party claims under a document or agreement the right to do certain things over a large extent of territory, the performance of acts under such alleged right in one portion of the ground, is not of itself a sufficient possession in respect of a distant locality—Bejay Nath v Bengal Coal Co, 23 W.R. 45 (48). So also, the mere purchase at an execution sale, without delivery of possession, does not amount to possession of the property purchased, and the rights of the purchaser will not be protected by this section—Ragava Aiyanger v Krtshnasamy, 31 Mad 416, 8 Cr.L.J. 312. The possession given by Amin in butwara proceedings is simply one of ownership, and not of occupancy, and is not contemplated by this section—Mackenzie v. Shere Bahadoor, 4 Cal. 378 (379).

A succession certificate only authorises the holder to collect the debts of the deceased and is no bar to the Magistrate maintaining another party in possession of the lands belonging to the deceased—Seetaram v. Roy Sheo Golam, 18 W.R. 34.

Possession of forest land —In a dispute regarding forest land, the right to possession of which was exercised by cutting timber from time to time and removing the timber upon a certain price being paid for, it is necessary to inquire as to who was in undisturbed possession of the land in dispute by felling the trees and removing the same without objection on the occasion immediately preceding the time when the dispute arose, and whichever party be found to have been in possession on that occasion, should be presumed to have possession when the proceedings commenced—Jagatkishore v Ashanulla, 16 Cal 281. Where it was found that certain jungle lands were in the khas possession of the Zemindar, and the other party without claiming any easement or customary right, cut a few trees and encroached upon a small portion of the jungle, held that such intermittent encroachment did not oust the possession of the Zemindar—Bhola Nath v Wood, 32 Cal 287. Cf Sec 147 (2) proviso.

Possession of minerals —In proceedings under sec 145, Cr P C., it is possession that matters and not ownership. In the case of unworked minerals possession follows title and the owner of unworked minerals is in possession of them though he is not actually engaged in working them. He is in a position to work them when he so desires, and he can lease them to others who may work them. If the owner of unworked minerals under a defined area sinks a shaft and begins to work the minerals in that area, he can properly be said to be in actual physical possession of the whole of the minerals in that area. In the same way, if the owner of minerals under a defined area grants to third parties mining leases of the minerals under portions of such area, he exercises acts of ownership over those minerals and he can truly be said to be in possession of the whole of the minerals under that defined area. Others are in possession of the minerals at the places which are actually being worked by them—Ranchi Zamindari Co. v Pratab Udainath, A I.R. 1939 Pat 209, 40 Cr.L.J. 631, 18 Pat. 215, 20 P.L.T. 105, 182 I.C. 89, 1939 P.W.N. 72, 5 B.R. 711, 11 R.P. 657.

Permissive possession :—Possession contemplated by this section is possession based on a claim of right to possession. The possession of a person which is merely permissive cannot come within the purview of this section. Thus, the possession of an agent or servant which is permissive cannot give a party to a proceeding a locus standi as against his principal or master—Nritta Gopal v. Chandi Charan, 10 C.W.N. 1088, 4 Cr.L.J. 215; Bajirao v. Dabidai, 27 Cr.L.J. 212, 92 I.C. 164, A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 286. See also Rahimalishah v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Sind 61 (62).

405. Joint possession :—If the contesting parties are in joint possession, then it is clear that no order can be made under sec. 145—Gopala v. Krishnaswamy, 54 I.C. 473, 21 Cr.L.J. 73, 27 M.L.T. 234, 11 M.L.W. 459; or under sec. 146—Nand Kishore v. Kalika, 24 Cr.L.J. 869, 75 I.C. 69, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 546, 5 P.L.T. 45; Shanti Prasad v. Emp., 1937 O.W.N. 214, 1937 A Cr.C. 37. Section 145 applies only to disputes about actual physical possessions and not to disputes about joint possession—Wali Muhammad v. Rahamt Ali, 29 Cr.L.J. 775 (777), 110 I.C. 807, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 818. Section 145 contemplates a dispute between two parties, each of whom asserts that right to hold exclusive possession of the property as against the other and not a dispute between a party claiming to hold joint possession with another and the latter contesting such right. Such a dispute nearly always arises out of a claim to hold a specific share in the property, and this obviously is a matter which no Criminal Court can properly deal with. Therefore, where two parties are in joint possession (or entitled to joint possession) of the property in dispute, and one of them tries to evict the other so as to endanger the public peace, this section does not apply, and an order allowing one of the parties to be in possession till evicted by law is bad—Tarujan v. Asamuddi, 4 C.W.N. 426 (428); Krishna v. Radhashyam, 7 C.W.N. 118; Dhani Ram v. Bholanath, 1902 P.R. 23; Makhan v. Barada, 11 C.W.N. 512, 5 Cr.L.J. 296; Shamlal v. Rajendra, 1 P.L.T. 594, 21 Cr.L.J. 790; Arjun v. Chandan, 24 O.C. 167, 22 Cr.L.J. 625. The Patna High Court has taken a contrary view in Nandkeshwar v. Sita, 13 P.L.T. 609, 34 Cr.L.J. 115, 140 I.C. 902, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 366, 12 Pat. 87, Ind. Rul. 1933 Pat. 35, 1932 Cr.C. 899 at p. 901 and Rajkishore Nargin Singh v. Amirul Hasan, 19 P.L.T. 211. The above view has also been followed by the Patna High Court in a recent case. It has been there held to be wrong to graft limitations upon the enactments which the Legislature has not placed there and that a case in which one party claims exclusive possession while another party claims to be in joint possession along with them is no less a question of disputed actual possession than if each party claimed exclusive possession of the entire area—Zafar Ahsan v. Jugeshwar Bux Roy, 41 Cr.L.J. 171 (172), 185 I.C. 346, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 135, 1939 P.W.N. 855, following Nandkeshwar v. Sita, supra. It is true that when it has been found that the contesting parties are actually in joint possession no order should be made under this section. The position is different where one of the parties claims to have and is actually found to have exclusive possession adverse to the other party. The mere fact that the other party sets up a title to joint possession does not then render this section inapplicable—Sheoprasad Shriram v. Govindram Hardit, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 265 (266), 1940 N.L.J. 375. It cannot be said that merely because the parties are brothers and presumably members of a joint Hindu family the Court should not give possession to one as against the other—Jialal v. Chhangelal, 28 Cr.L.J. 877, 104 I.C. 717, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 316, 1 Luck. Cas. 201, 9 A.I.Cr.R. 43. Even in cases covered by joint possession where one party is by some arrangement actually in physical possession of a certain part of the property, the Magistrate would have jurisdiction to decide who was in actual possession of that part. Where there is actual physical possession of definable and demarcated property, action under this section can be taken—Ramzan, 35 Cr.L.J. 1384, 151 I.C. 728, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 196, 1934 Cr.C. 895, 30 N.L.R. 300, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 257; Laxman v. Ganu, A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 44, 17 N.L.J. 216, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 217. A four-anna share in the annual produce of a mango grove cannot be held to be a specified or demarcated portion of it—Laxman v. Ganu, supra. A Magistrate has jurisdiction, under sec. 145, in the case of ijmali land, where each party claims to be in exclusive possession of specific portions of the same—Basanta v. Mahesh, 40 Cal 982, 17 C.W.N. 944, 14 Cr.L.J. 269, 19 I.C. 541; Dhani Ram v. Bhola Nath, 23 P.R. 1902 (Cr.); Dyawaappa, 29 I.C. 66; Mst. Malan v. Makhan Singh, 2 Lah. 372, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 348, 66 I.C. 65, 23 Cr.L.J. 225. This section is not intended to regulate the mode of enjoyment, and when the parties are jointly entitled, an order under sec. 145 should not be made—Surb Narain v. Brij Mohan, 23 Cal 80. Where the Magistrate passed an order to the effect that one party was in possession throughout the year, while the other was entitled to possession jointly with the former for a portion of that year, held that the order was beyond the scope of sec. 145 and was made without jurisdiction. The Magistrate was only authorised to decide which of the parties was in possession; he had jurisdiction only to find possession but not the mode of possession or how the possession was to be exercised—Rohini Nandan v. Jadunandan, 30 C.W.N. 873, 97 I.C. 78. The object aimed at by the Legislature is the prevention of a breach of the peace. This can be secured by asking one of the parties to keep away from the property. But where both parties have been in joint possession and are still prepared to commit a breach of the peace by trying to oust one another, it will not be in the interests of the preventive remedy that both should be maintained in possession. It will certainly not help to maintain order and peace. That is the reason why Courts have declined to declare the joint possession of the contending parties—Mohammad Koolayappa v. Sheikh Abdul, 27 M.L.J. 169, 15 Cr.L.J. 572. Even in such cases, the Magistrate is not competent to put one of the parties into possession; see Makhan v. Barada, supra. In a recent Allahabad case it has been held that in such a case the Magistrate should attach the property under sec. 146—Chiranjiv v. Mahadeo, 34 Cr.L.J. 480, 143 I.C. 54, Ind. Rul. 1933 All 168, 1932 A.L.J. 819, 1932 Cr.C. 938 (939), A.I.R. 1932 All 683. If there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace, proceedings should be taken to bind over either or both parties to keep the peace under sec. 107, Cr. P. C.—Shanti Prosad v. Emp., 1937 O.W.N. 214, 1937 A.Cr.C. 37. But see Venkataraman, A.I.R. 1930 Bom 172, 32 Bom.L.R. 340, 125 I.C. 718, 31 Cr.L.J. 933 where hesitation was made to follow Makhan v. Barada, supra. Where it was found that the second party was in possession of the disputed land on behalf of the first party as also on behalf of himself, both parties being members of the same family, and the Magistrate declared the second party to be in possession, the order was without jurisdiction—Kinu Mandal v. Haji Baul, 23 C.W.N. 1051.

Where a dispute related to a definite plot of land, but the question was whether this plot was included in a piece of land which was in the exclusive possession of one of the parties or in another which was the joint property of both the parties in dispute, held that the Magistrate had jurisdiction to proceed under this section—Mon Mohan v. Rajendra, 7 C.W.N. 462.

See Bande Ali Shaikh in Note 420.

Where the case is one of exclusive possession claimed by each set of landlords through their respective tenants, the Magistrate has jurisdiction to pass an order in favour of one tenant against the other persons setting up their tenancy—Gurudas v. Kedar Nath, 38 Cal 889, 12 Cr.L.J. 408, 15 C.L.J. 184. And the fact that there may be a joint title to land, does not prevent the application of this section, if the Magistrate finds that possession is with one party—Baynath v. Street, 20 C.W.N. 518, A.I.R. 1917 Cal 404, 17 Cr.L.J. 251, 34 I.C. 971; Malan v. Makhan Singh, 2 Lah. 372, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 348, 66 I.C. 65, 23 Cr.L.J. 225. The mere fact that the land is shamilat does not preclude the Court from making enquiry and taking proceedings under this section—Gians, 38 Cr.L.J. 123, 166 I.C. 71, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 1015, 38 P.L.R. 332, 9 R.L. 334, 1936 Cr.C. 1118. The only question for the Magistrate is whether either party has actual possession, and if he finds that one party has actual possession of a defined area and the other party has not, he can make an order under this section, irrespective of the fact that the parties may have joint title to the land—Basanta v. Mohesh, 40 Cal. 982, 17 C.W.N. 944, 14 Cr.L.J. 269.

Generally it is correct to say that this section does not apply to a dispute relating to an undivided share in land or to an undivided share in the produce of the land, because sec. 145, sub-secs. (4) and (6), Cr. P. Code, contemplates that one of the parties shall be or shall not be put in possession of the subject-matter of the dispute and a party cannot be put in possession of the undivided share of land or its produce. But with land which is owned by a zamindar and cultivated by him with his hais he must, before division of the produce or batai, be deemed to be in possession of the land and of the produce of the land and the hais are merely his agents for the cultivation and until the crop is divided between the zamindar and the hais, it is really the zamindar who has custody of the crops and divides them. The position is not altered merely because there is a jagirdar who is entitled also to his share because the jagirdar in effect takes the place of Government. Therefore, this section applies to a dispute relating to the batai share of a zamindar—Muhammad Araf v. Satramdas Sakhimal, 37 Cr.L.J. 1030 (1031), 164 I.C. 969, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 143, 9 R.S. 60, 1936 Cr.C. 859. See also Muhammad Ali v. Shamsul Haq, A.I.R. 1910 Sind 33 (36).

Where it has been declared by a Civil Court that the property is joint and partition has been ordered, no proceedings under this section can be taken until the partition has been effected—Dharani Kanta v. Girija Kanta, 8 C.W.N. 485. If the co-sharers have by express or tacit arrangement made a partition between themselves so that each of them is in possession of a specified and demarcated portion of the estate, there is nothing to prevent the application of this section—Basanta v. Mohesh, supra. So also, where it was found that each party to the dispute was in possession of separate dwelling rooms in the same house, the Magistrate was competent to pass an order that the separate possession of each party should continue—In re Krishnasami, 2 Weir 108.

If the public are declared to be in possession of any piece of land, then both the parties to the dispute are included in that term and the possession therefore is joint possession and the jurisdiction of the Court under sec. 145 is ousted—Manik v. Preo, 17 C.W.N. 205, 17 C.L.J. 397, 17 I.C. 533, 13 Cr.L.J. 789.

Debtor property being by nature impartible and inalienable, possession of such property by co-shebaits must always be necessarily joint and as such beyond the scope of an order under this section. Where one of several co-shebaits had been entrusted with the sole management of the debtor estate for convenience, a dispute between him and the other co-shebaits claiming to have joint management with him, is not a fit subject for a proceeding under this section—Nritta Gopal v. Chandi Charan, 10 C.W.N. 1088, 4 Cr.L.J. 215.

406. Clause (2)—‘Land or Water’:

Building—Temple:—A dispute relating to possession of a temple comes within the provision of this section—Sundara v. Vallinakaya, 2 Weir 110 (111), whether the temple be wholly or partly private property or dedicated to purposes of public worship—Anon., 2 Weir 99 (100). As regards disputes arising between two pujaris regarding the right to perform the puja in a temple, or regarding the collection of offerings, see Note 466 under sec. 147.

Markets:—A dispute about the exclusive right to collect the entire toll from one partitioned half of the market, may be a subject of proceedings under this section—Dunne v. Chandra Kishore, 30 Cal. 593. But where the benias and other persons, who come to the market to sell their goods there, appointed a chaudhuri of the market, an office which imposed on him certain duties, such as regulating the business of the market and so forth and agreed to remunerate him for his services by allowing him to collect two pice per head of cattle brought into the market laden with articles for sale, a dispute between the chaudhuri and the servants of the zamindar, who were employed by her to collect her legitimate rents and profits and sought to deprive the chaudhuri of this source of his income, should be dealt with under sec. 107 and not under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., as the payment to the chaudhuri was purely voluntary on their part and was in no way connected with the ordinary rents and profits of the market and was not a perquisite of the zamindar, but was a personal matter between the banias and the chaudhuri and the dispute did not relate to the “profits” of a market within the meaning of the section—Ram Lockan, 36 All 143 (146), 12 A.L.J. 162, 15 Cr.L.J. 27.

Fisheries :—Where there is bona fide dispute about a fishery or jalkar right, proceedings under this section may be properly instituted—Balaaji v. Bhoju, 35 Cal 117, 12 C.W.N. 487, 6 Cr.L.J. 398, 6 C.L.J. 697. See also Amulya Charan v. Amrita Lal, 24 C.W.N. 1075 (1076) in Note 234

The subject-matter of a proceeding under sec. 147 may also be fisheries to which one of the parties may have a right apart from any right to the land upon which the fishery stands. The subject-matter of the proceedings under sec. 145, if it relates to fisheries, must relate to the particular local area where the fishery extends. The difference, therefore, is that in the one case, that is in the case of sec. 147, the right may be a prescriptive right or right of easement to use water or land not belonging to the parties but belonging to somebody else, which has to be considered. Where the right claimed by the second party is the right to catch fish in waters upon the land of the first party, it is in the nature of an easement or profits a prendre and, therefore, the proceeding clearly comes within the ambit of sec. 147, Cr. P. Code—Ramroop v. Mano, 35 Cr.L.J. 481, 147 I.C. 774, AIR 1934 Pat. 86, 1934 Cr.C. 113, 13 Pat. 153, A.L.R. 1934 Pat 179, 15 P.L.T. 147.

Where parties have joint rights in a certain fishery and neither of them can be considered as claiming exclusive possession, and a dispute arises with regard to its possession, this section is inapplicable, because joint possession does not come within this section. (See Note 405 above). If what was in dispute was not a share in the fishery but a share in its profits (i.e., either the fish caught or their price when sold) it might have been dealt with under this section—Bhabanath v. Peary, 11 C.L.J. 412, 11 Cr.L.J. 370 See Note 466

Alluvial lands.—In the case of alluvial lands (in Bengal) recently reformed, where questions of breach of the peace arise, it is open to the Magistrate to deal with the matter either under the Bengal Alluvial Lands Act (V of 1920) or under the provisions of sec 145 of this Code. This section has not been impliedly repealed by Act V of 1920 in the case of alluvial lands recently formed—Abdul Jabad v. Mafizuddin, 29 C.W.N. 783, 25 Cr.L.J. 1107, 81 I.C. 391, AIR 1924 Cal 980.

Crops or other produce —The word 'land' includes crops or other produce of land. But crops mean standing-crops and not crops which have been severed from the land and stored on the thrashing floor—Ramzan v. Janardhan, 30 Cal 110, 6 C.W.N. 881; Basudev v. Mahadeo, 6 P.L.T. 454, 26 Cr.L.J. 1187; Ganga Prosad v. Narain, 15 All 394 (395); Chaurasi v. Ram Shankar, 28 All 266; Relumal v. Pherumal, 22 S.L.R. 386, 111 I.C. 411, 29 Cr.L.J. 857 (859); Ram Bhajan, 25 O.C. 137, 23 Cr.L.J. 650. Crops cut and severed from the land are from their very nature moveable property. To hold that such crops do come within the meaning of sec. 145, cl. (2) would be unduly straining the meaning of "immoveable property" to which alone the provisions of sec. 145, Cr. P. C., are applicable—Rajindra Lal v. Brich Kurimi, AIR 1938 Pat 527, 19 P.L.T. 728, 1938 P.W.N. 643, 40 Cr.L.J. 125, 178 I.C. 582 See also Maung Kau v. Maung Po Tok, 41 Cr.L.J. 123, 185 I.C. 119, AIR 1939 Rang 388 Contra—In re Krishnasami, 2 Weir 108 and Rahimdin, 22 S.L.R. 151, 28 Cr.L.J. 989 (990), AIR. 1928 Sind 68, 105 I.C. 813, where it has been held that crops include cut and stored crops and Munir Ahmed v. Mahmud-ul-Haq, 1938 A.W.R. (C.C.) 134 where it has been laid down that sec. 145, Cr. P. C., covers a case of dispute relating to removal of crops which had been cut and claimed by both parties on the basis of their possession of some lands. See also 18 Cr.L.J. 756, 2 Pat.L.J. 637, 41 I.C. 132, 2 P.L.W. 54 where it has been laid down that the Magistrate can deal under this section, with crops attached to, or if it is cut and lying on, the land but not when removed from it.

A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to pass an order under this section in respect of an undivided share in the annual produce of a mango grove—Laxman v. Ganu, 17 N.L.J. 216, A.L.R. 1934 Nag 217, AIR. 1935 Nag 44 The correct procedure would be an action under sec 107, Cr. P. Code—Laxman v. Ganu, supra.

Mines :—A dispute as regards mines and minerals and the right to work mines, falls under this section, as mining rights must reasonably be regarded as falling within the definition of the term 'land' which is intended to cover all profits derivable from land—Andrew Yule & Co. v. Skone, 49 I.C. 647, A.I.R. 1919 Pat. 210, 4 P.L.J. 154, 20 Cr.L.J. 199; Bimala Prosad v. Tata Iron & Steel Co., Ltd., A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 83, 71 I.C. 286, 35 C.L.J. 456, 24 Cr.L.J. 108, dissenting from The Indian Iron and Steel Company v. Banso Gopal, 32 C.L.J. 54, A.I.R. 1920 Cal. 824, 59 I.C. 403, 22 Cr.L.J. 99 if that case purports to lay down broadly that a license to dig minerals confers no interest or estate in the soil, and that a dispute concerning mining rights is not one which the Magistrate can deal under this section; Ranchi Zamindari Co. v. Pratab Udainath, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 209 (211), 40 Cr.L.J. 631, 18 Pat. 215, 20 P.L.T. 105, 182 I.C. 89, 1939 P.W.N. 72, 5 B.R. 711, 11 R.P. 657. When mica is dug and removed, this section does not apply—Sunder Malh v. Jhari Lal, 18 Cr.L.J. 756, 41 I.C. 132, A.I.R. 1917 Pat. 183, 2 Pat.L.J. 637.

Trees severed from the land do not come within the purview of this section, and no order under this section can be made with respect to them—Sajad Husain v. Nanak Chand, 1917 P.W.R. 22, 39 I.C. 301, 18 Cr.L.J. 461. But trees growing on the land come within this section, as being 'produce of land.'—Surjakanta v. Jagadindra, 11 C.W.N. 198 (201), 5 Cr.L.J. 332; Ali Mohammad v. Fakiruddi, 24 C.W.N. 1039 (1045), 48 Cal 522, 32 C.L.J. 270, 22 Cr.L.J. 213, 60 I.C. 325. But lac which is not a part of the tree itself but is a parasitic growth on it, is not a 'produce of land' or 'crop'—Ali Mahammad v. Fakiruddi, 24 C.W.N. 1039, 22 Cr.L.J. 131, 59 I.C. 634, A.I.R. 1920 Cal 708, 32 O.L.J. 255. It is true that lac itself would not be immovable property, but it can only be propagated on trees and is so connected with trees that any dispute with regard to it must also involve a dispute with regard to land or right to enter upon that land for the purpose of taking the lac—Narsingdas, 30 N.L.R. 311, 35 Cr.L.J. 1381, 151 I.C. 348, 1934 Cr.C. 490, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 112, dissenting from Ali Mahammad v. Fakiruddi, supra. The right to tap a tree is an intangible property and may be the subject of proceedings under this section—Jiblal, 3 P.L.J. 316, 19 Cr.L.J. 656, 45 I.C. 484. It would more properly come under sec. 147.

Rents :—A dispute as to collection of rents falls under this section—Sarbananda v. Pran Sankar, 15 Cal. 527 (531); Ramasami v. Danakoti, 12 Mad. 88; Abhayessari v. Sidhessari, 16 Cal 513; Laldhari v. Sukdeo, 27 Cal. 892 (903); Sri Mohan v. Narsing, 27 Cal 259; Haridas v. Abdul Hatleb, 19 C.W.N. 959, 16 Cr.L.J. 590. A right to collect a share of the rent of an undivided property is, however, not a dispute concerning tangible immovable property and sec. 145 does not apply to such a case—Surb Warain v. Brij Mohun, 23 Cal. 80.

Where there is no dispute as to the possession of, or extent of share in, a certain immovable property, and the dispute is merely as to who is entitled to collect rents on behalf of all from the tenants, this section does not apply—Md. Fazil v. Md. Abdul Samad, 10 O.C. 89, 5 Cr.L.J. 394; Akaloo v. Mohesh, 36 Cal. 986; Ramlochan, 36 All. 143, 12 A.L.J. 162; i.e., where there is no dispute as to the possession or share of land, a Magistrate cannot under this section determine the method by which the possession of the parties is to be exercised or the method by which the parties in possession are to collect the profits of land—Akaloo v. Mohesh, supra. See also A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 199, 69 I.C. 90, 25 O.C. 137 and 16 Cr.L.J. 284, 28 I.C. 332, 1915 M.W.N. 267, 17 M.L.T. 225.

This section applies where the dispute is as regards the collection of rents between joint owners governed by the Mitakshara Law, as for instance, where one of the joint owners dismisses the common manager and claims to collect the rents separately on his behalf—Sri Mohan v. Narsing, 27 Cal. 259 (261), 4 C.W.N. 420; Bhaskari v. Bhaskaram, 31 Mad 318.

Profits :—The profits must arise out of or emanate from immovable property; therefore fees paid by pilgrims at Gaya at performing Sradh ceremonies cannot be said to arise out of land, and proceedings under this section cannot be instituted in respect of a dispute regarding such fees—Narayan v. Bugwan, 3 C.L.J. 137, 3 Cr.L.J. 214. So also, a right to the offerings given by worshippers for the worship of any Deity cannot be said to be a right of profits issuing out of the temple, but arising out of the Deity, irrespective of the temple building in which the Deity may happen to dwell. A dispute relating to the rights to the offerings only, is a dispute relating to moveable property and is outside the scope of this section—Ram Saran v. Raghunandan, 38 Cal. 387, 9 I.C. 6, 16 C.W.N. 574, 13 C.L.J. 445, 12 Cr.L.J. 3; Guiram v. Lalbehari, 37 Cal. 578, 14 C.W.N. 611, 11 Cr.L.J. 292; Rao Sobhag Singh v. Thakur Bakhtawar, 23 N.L.R. 84, 28 Cr.L.J. 687, 103 I.C. 415, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 333. So also, a dispute concerning the right to take sandal wood paste, when removed from an idol, does not fall under this section—In re Pandurang, 4 Bom.L.R. 438. A dispute with respect to the collection of offerings at a karbala cannot be the subject-matter of a proceeding under this section—Ghulam Sibtain v. Kaniz Khaton, 5 P.L.J. 246, 1 P.L.T. 608, 21 Cr.L.J. 572. See Note 466.

A dispute as to the right to collect fees (as mere remuneration for conducting the business of the market) from the sellers of a market, the payment of such fees being purely voluntary on the part of the sellers and being in no way connected with the ordinary rents and profits of the market, and not being a prerequisite of the Zemindar, is not a dispute as to the profits of a market within the meaning of this section—Ram Lochan, 36 All 143, 12 A.L.J. 162, 15 Cr.L.J. 27.

Fees called Khatagari, arhat and Keals levied in respect of boats bringing grain and moored in a shallow channel, but dissociated from the ownership of the site, are not included within the expression "land and water" as used in sub-sec. (1) of sec. 145, and explained in sub-sec. (2) of that section. But though sec. 145, Cr. P. C., may not apply, sec. 147, Cr. P. C., will and order passed under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., can be upheld under sec. 147, Cr. P. C.—Kunjo Mandal v. Sarju Ram Marwari, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 206, 1939 P.W.N. 66, 20 P.L.T. 164, 181 I.C. 176, 40 Cr.L.J. 538, 5 B.R. 539, 11 R.P. 573.

Right of ferry—The right to a ferry, i.e., the right to carry passengers and their goods to and fro in a boat across a river, cannot be treated apart from the possession of lands used on either side of the stream for the purpose of landing them. Therefore, a dispute regarding a ferry including the land and the water upon which the right is exercised, comes under this section—Hurbullubh v. Luchmeswar, 26 Cal 188, 3 C.W.N. 49. But questions relating to rights to use a ferry come under section 147 and not under this section—Harbulla v. Bajrang, 3 C.W.N. 148; and action can more appropriately be taken under sec. 147, Cr. P. C.—Ch. Gajraj Singh, A.I.R. 1936 All 320.

A right to a bund (i.e., a completed bund) should be distinguished from a right to construct a bund. In the former case sec. 145 applies; in the latter case sec. 147, as it is a right of user of water—Sashi Bhusan v. Debendra, 33 C.W.N. 1004 (1005), 31 Cr.L.J. 94, 125 I.C. 857. When there is an apprehension of a breach of the peace regarding the cutting of the ridge of a pyne, the case falls exactly within the provisions of sec. 147, Cr. P. C.—Inderdeo v. Durga Prasad, 37 Cr.L.J. 378, 160 I.C. 945, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 59, 17 P.L.T. 22, 1936 Cr.C. 83. See also Ahmed Din v. Jiwam, 27 Cr.L.J. 801, 95 I.C. 465, A.I.R. 1926 Lah 550 where proceedings under sec. 107, Cr. P. C., against both sides were held to be a proper procedure.

Disputes as regards easements falls more appropriately under sec. 147 than under this section—Kali Kumar v. Bejoy, 21 Cr.L.J. 697 (Cal); Asaram v. Chotu Lal, 22 Cr.L.J. 768 (Nag). A dispute as regards the right to use a well falls under sec. 147, not under sec. 145—Nanhe v. Jamil-ur-Rahman, 23 A.L.J. 41, 26 Cr.L.J. 683 (684).

Proceedings under this section cannot be instituted with respect to moveables—Hira Lal, 25 Cr.L.J. 440, 77 I.C. 728, 11 O.L.J. 59, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 331. See also Mahadei v. Beni Prasad, in Note 427.

407. Clause (3)—Service of Notice:—A copy of the order, stating the grounds of the Magistrate's satisfaction must be served on the parties, for it is the intention of the law, not only that the Magistrate should have sufficient grounds for proceedings under this section, but that he should inform the parties concerned of the grounds on which the proceeding had been instituted—Gobind Chandra, 20 Cal 520. The Magistrate ought to satisfy himself that the copy of the order has been duly served on the parties alleging the non-receipt of the notice; and the Magistrate's omission to do so vitiates all subsequent proceedings—Sripati v. Ram Kumar, 8 C.W.N. 76. In a proceeding under sec 145, Cr. P. Code where no summons was affixed to the house or served upon the opposite party personally or upon an adult male member of his family, there was no service of any kind upon him. No ex parte proceedings are possible in cases where there has been no service. This is itself sufficient to vitiate all the proceedings of the Magistrate—Tutab Ali Khan v. Shromani Gurdwara, 34 Cr.L.J. 616, 143 I.C. 477, Ind. Rul 1933 Lah. 356, 1933 Cr.C. 267, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 145. Service of notice under the second part of sec. 145 (3) does not dispense with ordinary service upon the parties as required by the first part of that sub-section—ibid.

When the Court decides to take action, all processes should be served at the expense of the Crown—Phutania, 25 Cr.L.J. 1109, 81 I.C. 933, A.I.R. 1925 Nag. 142.

Local service :—The provision regarding the local service of notice was made with the intention of guarding against collusive proceedings as well as to give to any one interested, who may, through an oversight or otherwise, not have received a summons, an opportunity of coming in with his claim and to notify generally to all persons in the locality that a proceeding under this section has been set on foot—Krishna Kamani v. Abdul, 30 Cal. 155 (197), 6 C.W.N. 737 (F.B.). As regards the effect of clause (3) on the power of the Magistrate to add parties, see same case cited in Note 401, ante.

Notice under section 107 or 147 not sufficient :—Where notice was issued under section 107 to show cause why the accused should not execute a bond for keeping the peace, and the Magistrate when he tried the case recorded an order in the course of which he stated that on the facts the case was one for the application of sec. 145, and not one under sec. 107, and proceeded at once to pass an order under clause (6) of this section, the order was held to be bad—Sukru v. Ram Pergash, 30 Cal 443. Similarly, where a Magistrate gave notice under sec. 147 and started proceedings under that section, but no objection being taken, did not decide whether sec. 147 was applicable to the proceedings but passed an order purporting to be under sec. 145, without giving notice of his intention to act under sec. 145, the Magistrate's order was made without jurisdiction—Subramania v. Sanyasia, 19 M.L.J. 18, 2 I.C. 310, 5 M.L.T. 103, 9 Cr.L.J. 565. In both these cases the Magistrate ought to have issued fresh notice under sec. 145. See Notes 432 and 470A. But where proceedings under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., were converted into proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., in presence of the parties who filed their written statements and adduced evidence in support of their case, non-service of fresh notice of proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., on the parties would not invalidate the Magistrate's action as the parties were cognisant of the case and hotly contested it throughout—19 Cr.L.J. 396, 44 I.C. 748, 4 Pat.L.W. 234.

Proof of service :—Where one of the parties denies the service of the order, the written return of the serving peon is not sufficient proof of the service. The Magistrate should examine the serving peon on this point—Jogendra v. Abu, 8 C.W.N. 719.

Non-service of personal notice :—Failure to serve the notice upon the parties concerned is a mere irregularity cured by sec. 537 if the party professing to be aggrieved has full knowledge of the proceedings—Mg Mauk v. Mg Po, 3 Rang. 169; Bidhyadhar v Jagodish, 7 O.C. 334; Bhure Khan v. Kakira, 25 Cr.L.J. 159, 76 I.C. 303, A.I.R. 1924 Nag 171; such omission will not render the proceedings void, if the parties were present and no prejudice was caused—Debi Prosad v. Sheodat, 30 All. 41, 4 A.L.J. 705; or if the parties appeared before the Magistrate who explained matters to them fully, and they evidently understood everything that was requisite—Nur Bakhsh, 1917 P.W.R. 26, 39 I.C. 1001, 18 Cr.L.J. 633; or if the person did not question the order—In re Chennapudayan, 30 Mad 548. But if the party professing to be aggrieved had no knowledge of the proceedings, the omission to serve notice on him vitiated the trial—Sego Patel v. Parashram, 28 Cr.L.J. 418 101 I.C. 450, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 234. According to the Patna High Court, non-service of the notice is by itself a grave irregularity which vitiates the trial—Ram Sahai v. Deonandan, 19 Cr.L.J. 71, 43 I.C. 103, 4 Pat.L.W. 183; Sheonandan v. Wahidul, 19 Cr.L.J. 112, 43 I.C. 336, 5 Pat.L.W. 254, 1917 Pat.H.C. 200; but non-service of notice on one member invalidates the proceedings only so far as that member is concerned, and does not invalidate the whole proceedings—Nandan v. Siaram, 7 P.L.T. 156, 26 Cr.L.J. 1287. The Lahore High Court has also held that no ex parte proceedings are possible in cases where there has been no service. This is itself sufficient to vitiate all the proceedings of the Magistrate—Turab Ali Khan v. Shromani Gurdwara, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 145, 1933 Cr.C. 267, 143 I.C. 477, 34 Cr.L.J. 616, Ind Rul 1933 Lah 356. Where no preliminary order as required by sec. 145 (1) was served on a person nor was he given an opportunity to prove his possession over the subject of the dispute, he cannot be subjected to the final order passed by the Magistrate in the proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. Code—Muqin-un-Nisa v. Ahmad-un-Nisa, 26 Cr.L.J. 1581, 90 I.C. 541, 36 O.W.N. 704, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 605. The Bombay High Court set aside the order of the Magistrate where no notice was served on the opposite party—Pandurang, 24 Bom. 527 (533).

Where the Magistrate did not serve any notice upon any person, nor did he affix a notice on the property in dispute, nor received a written statement from either party, and passed the order in the absence of one party, the proceedings of the Magistrate were exceedingly irregular and were bad for want of jurisdiction—Ahmed Chowdhury v. Parbati, 35 Cal 774, 12 C.W.N. 848, 8 Cr.L.J. 119; Abdulla v. Gunda, 7 P.R. 1907, 71 P.L.R. 1908, 6 Cr.L.J. 133; Basawan v. Tilak, 4 P.L.T. 723, 24 Cr.L.J. 345.

Setting aside of ex parte order—If the proceedings were heard and an order passed ex parte on account of the absence of a party, and that party afterwards appears and alleges non-service of notice and applies for rehearing of the case, the Magistrate cannot reject the application but is bound to re-open the case after satisfying himself as to the truth of such allegation—Kali Charan v. Abdul Laskar, 24 C.W.N. 902, 21 Cr.L.J. 848, 32 C.L.J. 14, 58 I.C. 928. See also Sego Patel v. Parashram, 28 Cr.L.J. 418, 101 I.C. 450, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 234.

See Note 446.

Omission of publication of notice—The provisions to the publication of the order in some conspicuous place near the property in dispute, is directory and a matter of procedure only. Omission to publish the notice is not an illegality which deprives the Magistrate of his jurisdiction, and unless it be shown that some one interested has been materially prejudiced by the omission, the High Court will not interfere—Sukh Lal v. Tara Chand, 33 Cal 68, 2 C.L.J. 241, 9 C.W.N. 1046, 2 Cr.L.J. 618 (F.B.) (overruling 8 C.W.N. 590 and 9 C.W.N. 909); Debi Pyasad v. Sheodat, 30 All 41, 4 A.L.J. 795, 1907 A.W.N. 265, 6 Cr.L.J. 352; Muhammad Sharif v. Dhanpat, 1914 P.W.R. 15, 23 I.C. 487, A.I.R. 1914 Lah 295, 15 Cr.L.J. 279; Sajad Husam v. Nanak Chand, A.I.R. 1917 Lah 35, 34 I.C. 301, 18 Cr.L.J. 461; Nur Baksh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1917 Lah 35, 39 I.C. 1001, 18 Cr.L.J. 633; Iklas v. Raghuraj, 12 O.C. 400, 11 Cr.L.J. 69; Bhure Khan v. Kakra, 25 Cr.L.J. 159, 76 I.C. 303, A.I.R. 1924 Nag 171; Maung Mauk v. Maung Po Yon, 3 Rang 169, 94 I.C. 708, A.I.R. 1925 Rang 270, 27 Cr.L.J. 660; *Mad Mahdshah v. Where no notice was issued as required by the section and there is no finding that there was a danger of a breach of the peace, the final order must be set aside—Emp v. Sis Ram, 32 Cr.L.J. 139, 128 I.C. 313, A.I.R. 1930 Lah 895, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah 41, 1930 Cr.C. 991, 12 Lah.L.J. 147; *Budhan v. Ilahi, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 368, 88 I.C. 601, 26 Cr.L.J. 1177, 26 P.L.R. 187; Chanan Singh v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 702, 176 I.C. 124, 40 P.L.R. 20, 11 R.L. 165, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 345. In a very recent case the Lahore High Court dissented from the view expressed above and followed the earlier cases mentioned in the previous paragraph, holding that sec. 537, Cr. P. C., cured such defects—Ratan v. Tika, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 233, 41 P.L.R. 188, 40 Cr.L.J. 784, 183 I.C. 351.

Warrant to compel attendance of party:—Under this section, the matter in issue is not the commission of an offence, but the settlement of a dispute, and it is entirely optional with the parties to attend or not; therefore, the issue of a warrant to compel the attendance of any party is illegal—Kefatulla v. Feruzuddin, 5 C.W.N. 71.

408. Clause (4)—Inquiry:—Sub-sections (1), (4), (5) and (6) of this section are complementary. Once an order has been passed under sub-sec. (1), it is obligatory for a Magistrate to make the inquiry provided for in sub-sec. (4) subject only to the obligation under sub-sec. (5) to terminate the proceedings in the circumstances therein contemplated. The words of sub-sec. (4), "the Magistrate shall then....." are mandatory. The word 'then' refers to the stage when in compliance with the order under sub-sec. (1) the parties have put in their written statements and attended the Court. Sub-section (5) is emphatic that the order under sub-sec. (1) shall be final subject to the one exception that the Magistrate shall cancel the order and stay all further proceedings if it is shown that no dispute likely to cause breach of the peace exists or has existed. On the completion of the inquiry under sub-sec. (4) a final order under sub-sec. (6) must follow, it being obvious that the holding of the said inquiry is a condition precedent to the making of the order under sub-sec. (6)—Muhammed Ali v. Shamsul Haq, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 33 (36), 41 Cr.L.J. 486, 187 I.C. 636.

Inquiry by subordinate Magistrate:—The inquiry contemplated by this section is a personal inquiry to be made by the Magistrate who passed the preliminary order, and not by any one else. He has no jurisdiction, even with the consent of the parties, to make over the inquiry to any other Magistrate—Hamdul Haque v. Sk. Atait, 2 P.L.J. 86, 18 Cr.L.J. 145. Therefore, an order under this section based upon the report of a Subordinate Magistrate made after inquiry by such Magistrate is illegal—Anon, 4 M.H.C.R. App 200. Though sec. 148 enables a Magistrate acting under this section to depute a Subordinate Magistrate to make a local investigation, he ought not to depute to such Subordinate Magistrate the whole investigation under this section, but on the receipt of the report of such Magistrate, should himself take written statements from the parties and receive the evidence produced by them and conclude the investigation—Anon, 2 Weir 118; Baharsimuhuri v. Gadagamma, 35 L.W. 390, 33 Cr.L.J. 536 (537), 138 I.C. 68, 1932 M.W.N. 425, 1932 Cr.C. 334, Ind Rul. 1932 Mad. 496, A.I.R. 1932 Mad 368. If a Magistrate omits to take evidence as required by clause (4), but refers the case to a Subordinate Magistrate to report thereon, his order based on such evidence alone is made without jurisdiction and must be set aside—Arumuga v Venkatasubbier, 31 Mad 82, 17 M.L.J. 535, 3 M.L.T. 108; Baharsimuhuri v. Gadagamma, supra. But in another Madras case it has been held that the order based on the report of a Sub-Magistrate is not without jurisdiction. The essential requisite to give jurisdiction to a Magistrate is that he must be satisfied about the existence of a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace. His subsequent action is a matter of procedure and not of jurisdiction—Jagannatha v. Venkatagopalakrishna, 37 M.L.J. 589, 20 Cr.L.J. 773 (dissenting from 31 Mad. 82). See Note 477.

409. Procedure:—"It should be impressed upon Magistrates that the whole object of and only excuse for proceedings under sec. 145 is the prevention of a breach of the peace supposed to be imminent, and that the procedure to be followed in disposing of such cases is that laid down in section 145, sub-section (4) of the Code, which must be strictly observed. It should be the primary aim of the inquiry officer, therefore, to arrive at his decision with the utmost promptitude consistent with an adequate investigation into the dispute before him, and he should be specially careful not to permit the proceedings to assume the complexion of a civil suit, or in any way to countenance an endeavour on the part of either party to secure any advantage for the purposes of civil litigation."

"The trying Magistrate should be in a position to insist upon the taking up of the case on the date fixed for hearing, and it should not be necessary to grant adjournment after adjournment simply because the parties are not given due notice of the proceedings, or by reason of the proceedings themselves being inaccurate or incomplete. Once the case is commenced, the hearing should be continued de die in diem until the Magistrate is in a position to arrive at a decision, but in doing so he must remember that the sole object of his inquiry is to determine, if possible, the fact of actual possession, and that even in the case of an ex parte proceeding, there must be some recorded evidence to justify the order passed by him"—Cal G. R. & C. O., pp. 10, 11; Sastu Sahu v. Nathuni, 6 P.L.T. 258, 26 Cr.L.J. 105 (106, 107), A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 689, 83 I.C. 665, 3 Pat L.R. 145 (Cr.). Where the dispute has reached a stage so critical that a breach of the peace is immediately to be apprehended and the parties have had opportunity to say they have to say, the refusal of the Magistrate to grant adjournment, does not amount to an irregularity. A case under this section does not admit of procrastination and delay—Khan, 26 S.L.R. Cr.C. 681 (683). The idea of this section is that it is a short and summary manner of awarding possession until other cases connected with the subject-matter of the suit are decided. It is sec 145, Cr. P. C., case that has got to be finished quickly in order that there may not be breach of the peace until the other cases whose orders may overrule sec 145 decision, may be brought to a close—Ma Nyain Mya v Maung Po Htaik, 30 Cr.L.J. 344 (345), 114 I.C. 677, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 314, Ind Rul 1929 Rang 69, following Nga Po Tin v. Nga Po Saung, 74 I.C. 68, 1 Rang 53, 2 Bur L.J. 32, A.I.R. 1923 Rang. 211, 24 Cr.L.J. 740. In real proceedings under this section it does matter that the Magistrate's order should be passed quickly and it does not matter if the finding in regard to possession is wrong—Ganpat Kunbi v Dewaji, 29 Cr.L.J. 676, 110 I.C. 228, 10 A.I.Cr.R. 411. See also Gaya Prasad v Ram Sarober, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 471, 15 P.L.T. 453, 1934 Cr.C. 1064.

The sole procedure in an inquiry under section 145 by a Magistrate is as to who was in actual possession of the land in dispute, and a Magistrate should not deal with such proceeding as if it were a civil suit by framing several issues and trying them—Kochas v Romesh, 35 Cal. 795.

It is incumbent on Magistrate to dispose of proceedings under this section as quickly as possible, and therefore, the procedure of a summons case is to be followed and not that of a warrant case—Moti Singh v. Dhanukdhari, 24 Cr.L.J. 595, 73 I.C. 339, A.I.R. 1923 Pat 53; see also Biswanath v Shivanand, 2 P.L.T. 330, 22 Cr.L.J. 30; Khubi v Darbari, 2 P.L.T. 267, 22 Cr.L.J. 481 (482); Hurendra v Bhobani, 11 Cal. 762, and Ram Chandra v. Monohur, 21 Cal 29, where the procedure of a summons case has been recommended. In another Calcutta case it has been remarked that in cases dealing with taking securities for keeping the peace or for good behaviour as also in cases of public nuisance, the Legislature has expressly provided (see secs 117, 137) that in some specified instances the procedure of a summons case, and in others the procedure of warrant cases shall be followed. The conclusion, therefore, is that neither the procedure prescribed for a summons case nor that of a warrant case is to be followed, as such a protracted investigation would defeat the very object in view, viz., an effective prevention of a breach of the peace. The proceedings under section 145 are intended to be prompt and should be concluded without delay and the Magistrate may adopt a procedure which will best carry out the object of the Legislature—Tarapada v. Nurul Huq, 32 Cal 1093, 2 C.L.J. 280, 2 Cr.L.J. 679. The same view is taken in Suyya Kanta v. Hem Chandra, 30 Cal 508, 7 C.W.N. 404.

Sine die adjournment.—A Magistrate has jurisdiction to postpone sine die a proceeding under sec. 145, Cr. P. Code, especially when he expects that settlement proceedings will soon commence—Guru Das v. Weatheral, 13 C.W.N. 601 (603), 11 Cr.L.J. 7, 4 I.C. 537. But see Abdul Rauf v. Rahomuddin, 13 C.W.N. 104, 8 C.L.J. 504, 9 Cr.L.J. 35, 4 I.C. 328

Such parties:—The words "such parties" must be interpreted with reference to the words 'parties concerned in such dispute' in sub-section (1), the effect being to restrict the inquiry to the parties concerned in the dispute, notwithstanding that persons other than those may have been summoned by the Magistrate or may have come in of their own accord on the publication of the copy of the order in the locality—Krishna Kamini v. Abdul Jabbar, 30 Cal 155 (198) (F.B.). See also Babu Ram Pandey v. Shyamdeo Narayan in Note 429.

410. Question of title:—Chapter XII contemplates an inquiry solely with reference to the fact of actual possession, irrespective of title. The crucial point to be decided in proceedings under this section is as to who is in actual possession of the subject in dispute, and not who is entitled to such possession. This section contemplates a determination of the question of possession without reference to the merits of the respective claims of the disputing parties to a right to possess the subject of dispute—Tarapada v. Nurul Huq, 32 Cal. 1093, 2 C.L.J. 280, 2 Cr.L.J. 679; Arju Mea v. Arman Mea, 7 C.L.J. 369, 15 Cr.L.J. 470; In re Pandurang, 25 Bom. 179 (181, 185); Amir Hassan v. Qadir Baksh, 28 P.L.R. 107, 28 Cr.L.J. 328; Ram Prosad, 54 I.C. 616, 21 Cr.L.J. 136; Subda v. Kushal, 27 Cr.L.J. 784, 7 P.L.T. 873; Subbarama v. Mariya, 16 M.L.T. 52, 15 Cr.L.J. 559; Venkatapathi v. Sanyasiraju, 35 L.W. 390, 37 Cr.L.J. 536 (537); Daimulla v. Maharulla, 27 Cal. 918; Debendra v. Dhanmani, 37 C.W.N. 849 (851); Chochalingam v. Ammalalchi, 2 Weir 98; Abdul Wahab, 27 Cr.L.J. 44 (Oudh); In re Mallappa, 28 Bom.L.R. 488, 95 I.C. 62, 27 Cr.L.J. 734 (735); Gursahai v. Meghu, 36 Cr.L.J. 513 (515), 154 I.C. 426, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 83, 16 P.L.T. 19, 1935 Cr.C. 143; Baliarsimhuni v. Gadagamma, 33 Cr.L.J. 536, 138 I.C. 68, 1932 M.W.N. 425, 1932 Cr.C. 334, Ind. Rul. 1932 Mad 496, 35 M.L.W. 390, A.I.R. 1932 Mad 368; Abdul Latif v. Mohd. Masud, A.I.R. 1936 Nag 3, 1936 Cr.C. 34, 18 N.L.J. 100. Even a trespasser can be maintained in possession—Subda v. Kushal, supra. See also Manickam Pillai v. Meenammal, 1937 M.W.N. 732. Where a Magistrate in deciding a case under this section refers to the claim of any parties to a right to possess the land in dispute, he exceeds his jurisdiction and his order will be set aside—Ram Dayal v. Kedarnath, 6 C.L.J. 182; Prayag v. Gobind, 32 Cal 602, 2 Cr.L.J. 552. The reason for the prohibition is that before possession can be awarded merely in virtue of the true title, the true title must be determined and that may involve a difficult enquiry for which a Criminal Court is ill-adapted—Shaikh Sujaddi Mondal v. F. L. Cork, 22 C.W.N. 499 (504), 19 Cr.L.J. 681.

Questions of title are of little importance under this section except in so far as they may be available to show who was in actual physical possession of the land at the time when proceedings are taken—Debendra v. Dhanmoni, 35 Cr.L.J. 489, 147 I.C. 817, A.I.R. 1934 Cal 95, 37 C.W.N. 849, 1934 Cr.C. 81. Questions of title are irrelevant under this section—Sunderlal, 38 Cr.L.J. 375, 167 I.C. 359, A.I.R. 1936 Nag 271, 1936 Cr.C. 1114, 9 R.N. 179, 1 L.R. 1937 Nag 174.

The Magistrate may, if necessary, take and consider evidence of title to enable him to decide the question of actual possession, but proof of title is not proof of actual possession—Panaganti Parthasarathy v. Pallikapu, 34 Mad 138, 6 I.C. 398, 910 M.W.N. 400, Shriram v. Samirmal, 29 Cr.L.J. 902 (903), 111 I.C. 662, A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 284, 24 N.L.R. 148. Where no sufficient evidence of possession is produced by the parties, the Magistrate may use evidence of title merely to guide and assist his mind in coming to a decision upon the question of possession—Raja Babu v. Muddun Mohun, 14 Cal. 169; Ramesh Chandra v. Mahim Chandra, 35 C.L.J. 155, A.I.R. 1920 Cal 889, 61 I.C. 174, 22 Cr.L.J. 350; Ram Sarup v. Darsano, 1 P.L.T. 387, 21 Cr.L.J. 748, A.I.R. 1920 Pat 499, 58 I.C. 252; Adaikhan v. Nellakaruppan, 1922 M.W.N. 12, 23 Cr.L.J. 197, 65 I.C. 853, 15 M.L.W. 62, A.I.R. 1922 Mad 188; Balbhadhar v. Aditya Prasad, 6 O.W.N. 17, 114 I.C. 810, A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 82, 30 Cr.L.J. 381, Ind. Rul. 1929 Oudh 202; Jagdamba

Devi v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 1107, 171 I.C. 181, 1937 O.L.R. 526, 10 R.O. 95, 1937 A.Cr.C. 151, 1937 O.W.N. 1016, A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 510. The Court, in proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., can properly consider questions relating to title where such is necessary in order to ascertain who is in possession—Ranchi Zamindari Co. v. Pratab Udainath, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 209 (211), 40 Cr.L.J. 631, 18 Pat. 215, 20 P.L.T. 105, 182 I.C. 89, 1939 P.W.N. 72, 11 R.P. 657, 5 B.R. 711.

But if the Magistrate finds that the evidence of possession on both sides is equally unreliable, he cannot rely on the presumption that possession follows title; in such a case he should act under sec. 146. If, however, he finds the evidence on both sides reliable and equally balanced and he is unable to conclude from such evidence which party is in possession, then he is entitled to corroborate the evidence of possession given by one side by the presumption as to possession arising from the title which he finds in that side—Akshoy v. Brojeswar, 26 C.W.N. 1000, 24 Cr.L.J. 141, A.I.R. 1923 Cal 303, 71 I.C. 365. But he must use the evidence of title for his limited purpose. Instead of proceeding to decide as to the actual possession he virtually puts aside the consideration of this question and determines the question of title alone, he is doing that which the law has forbidden him to do—Kali Kristo v. Golam Ali, 7 Cal. 46. And a decision under this section ought to be based upon evidence of possession and not of title—Ibid. Where evidence of possession is available, a Magistrate acts clearly without jurisdiction in deciding the claim of the parties to possession on documentary evidence of title—Juthen v. Ram Narain, 18 C.W.N. 700, 15 Cr.L.J. 202; Srimanavedan v. Parapravan, 38 M.L.J. 73, 21 Cr.L.J. 46.

411. Perusal of statements:—The Magistrate shall peruse the written statements of both parties. An ex parte order made on the written statement of one of the parties and upon the failure of the other party to file one, without some evidence on the side of the party filing the written statement in support of it, is without jurisdiction—Gobind v. Nibaran, 8 C.W.N. 642; Najem v. Jariatali, 12 C.W.N. 771, 8 Cr.L.J. 27. And the Magistrate fails to exercise jurisdiction if he refuses to grant further time to the parties to file written statements—Sk Mansar Ali v. Matullah, 12 C.W.N. 896. See Note 403, ante.

412. "Hear the parties":—If a party is absent, the Magistrate can proceed ex parte, but he should take some evidence to show that the party who is present is entitled to an order in his favour—Ram Krista v. Aghore, 6 C.W.N. 925. The Magistrate has no jurisdiction to found an order upon the mere absence of the other party without recording any evidence at all upon the question of possession—Chinnaparedigari v. Mala Dasari, 31 Cr.L.J. 190, 120 I.C. 895, 1929 M.W.N. 708, A.I.R. 1929 Mad 847, 31 M.L.W. 104. Once a Magistrate has found that there is an apprehension of a breach of the peace it is his duty to inquire into the possession of the parties and to pass orders accordingly either under sec. 145 or under sec. 146, Cr. P. C. It becomes unnecessary for him to pass such an order with regard to possession only on his being satisfied either that there is no longer any apprehension of a breach of the peace or that no dispute between the parties exists or has existed. The mere fact that one of the parties was absent on the date fixed does not entitle a Magistrate to dismiss proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., when there has been a definite finding that there is an apprehension of a breach of the peace. There is no provision in sec. 145, Cr. P. C., which would warrant the dismissal of the case, merely because the complainant failed to attend, and such order of dismissal is ultra vires—Mt Raquma v. Mt Ghiran, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 22, 1939 O.W.N. 974, 1939 O.L.R. 651, 184 I.C. 751, 41 Cr.L.J. 96. The Magistrate must hear the arguments at the conclusion of the evidence on both sides, just as it is the procedure prescribed in a summons trial; and the refusal of the Magistrate to hear the arguments of the parties vitiates the final order—Dhabari v. Gorakh Prasad, 46 I.C. 517, 5 P.L.W. 103, 19 Cr.L.J. 741 (Pat.). "Hear the parties" means hear the evidence of the parties and arguments of Counsel or Pleaders appearing on their behalf, or arguments addressed by themselves, and if the Magistrate refuses to hear arguments he is not complying with the provisions of law which are imperative—Ghulam v. Kaniz,

57 I.C. 92, 5 P.L.J. 246, 21 Cr.L.J. 572, 1 P.L.T. 608, following Surendro v. Bhobani, 11 Cal. 762 (767); Jitan v. Dukkha, 1917 Pat. H. C. C. 118

See also Bogampedda Griddasami v. Bogum Achigadu, 40 Cr.L.J. 32, 178 I.C. 251, 1938 M.W.N. 824.

413. Receiving evidence:—The Magistrate is bound to examine the parties and receive evidence—In re Dyawappa, 17 Bom L.R. 382, 16 Cr.L.J. 434, 29 I.C. 66. An order under this section without taking evidence is invalid and must be set aside—Lowson v. Kali Charan, 8 C.W.N. 719 (720); Tara Chand v. Behari, 1916 P.R. 22, 18 Cr.L.J. 36; Fatech Sher Khan, 1916 P.R. 4, 17 Cr.L.J. 129; Jhenger v. Bajnath, 11 A.L.J. 586, 14 Cr.L.J. 277; Palani v. Kulandavelu, 43 M.L.J. 716; Velayudu v. Narayan, 2 L.W. 1208; Basawan v. Tilak, 4 P.L.T. 723; even in an ex parte case—Gobinda v. Nibaran, 8 C.W.N. 642. A Magistrate will be acting illegally in the exercise of his jurisdiction if instead of taking the evidence tendered by the parties he proceeds to the spot, makes a local inspection and decides the case only on the statements of witnesses picked up by himself—Khubi v. Darbari, 2 P.L.T. 267, 22 Cr.L.J. 481 (482); Lal Behari v. Bejoy, 10 C.W.N. 181, 3 Cr.L.J. 193; Sahadal v. Tajuddin, 46 Cal. 1056, 52 I.C. 608, 23 C.W.N. 750, 20 Cr.L.J. 688; Srimanavedan v. Parapravan, 38 M.L.J. 73, 1920 M.W.N. 133, 11 M.L.W. 285, 21 Cr.L.J. 46, 54 I.C. 254; Gagan v. Karimuddi, 25 C.W.N. 1007, 23 Cr.L.J. 199; or if he acts merely on a Tahsildar's report without receiving evidence and hearing the parties—Sardha Prasad, 13 Cr.L.J. 777, 17 I.C. 409, 10 A.L.J. 456. See also Piziruddin v. Totajannessa, 14 Cr.L.J. 302, 19 I.C. 958. An order passed by a Magistrate on the basis of his own knowledge without recording any evidence, and relying solely on the evidence in another case, is invalid—Raza Husan v. Mehdi Hasan, 25 O.C. 148, A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 256, 69 I.C. 268, 23 Cr.L.J. 684; Subhan, A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 15, 1938 O.W.N. 1099, 1938 A.W.R. (C.C.) 99, 1938 O.A. 404, 1938 A.Cr.C. 137, 1938 O.L.R. 475, 182 I.C. 252, 40 Cr.L.J. 33. So also, an order passed merely on a consideration of the written statements and without taking any evidence, though there were witnesses present in Court, is invalid and must be set aside—Kalra v. Muneswar, 34 Cal. 840 (842). Similarly, an order under this section without giving either party an opportunity of adducing oral evidence as to possession, is illegal and liable to be set aside—Sakhayur v. Alhadi, 21 C.W.N. 928, 19 Cr.L.J. 108, 27 Cr.L.J. 88, 43 I.C. 332.

The Magistrate must consider both oral and documentary evidence in the cause—Kailash v. Jai Narain, 1 P.L.T. 291, 57 I.C. 169, 21 Cr.L.J. 601; Hanuman v. Sheo Chandra, 2 P.L.T. 333. The Magistrate must discuss the evidence on which he comes to the conclusion that a certain party is in possession. Mere prominent mention of his inspection and of the fact that in the course of his inspection he found hundreds of people who were in favour of the second party, is not a ground upon which possession may be found in favour of that party—Abdud Misser v. Satruhan, 8 P.L.T. 755, 28 Cr.L.J. 603 (604), A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 301, 102 I.C. 779.

The words "receive all such evidence as may be produced" have been substituted for the words "receive the evidence produced". This shows that the Magistrate is now bound to receive all the evidence produced by the parties and has no discretion to refuse any evidence. "In order to meet certain difficulties which have arisen in connection with the words 'receive the evidence produced by them' in sec. 145 (4) we have made an amendment adopting the phrasology of section 244 (1)"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922). It is not open to a Magistrate to refuse the evidence tendered to him—Tirumalraja v. Lodd Gobind Doss, 29 Mad 561. The Magistrate's act in preventing the objector from producing evidence to prove his case, constitutes a grave irregularity and the Magistrate's order is liable to be set aside—Dani Ram v. Bhola Nath, 1902 P.R. 23. The High Court set aside an ex parte order in favour of the first party where the second party had no notice of the place of trial in sufficient time to procure the attendance of his witnesses before the Magistrate who had been moving about from place to place and was holding his camp—Kali v. Abhoy, 7 C.W.N. 706. The Magistrate is bound to grant adjournment for the production of important evidence; if he refuses to do so, his order is liable to be set aside—Biswambhar v. Amiuddin, 25 C.W.N. 602, 33 C.L.J. 507, 61 I.C. 63, 22 Cr.L.J. 335. But see Natho Khan, 34 Cr.L.J. 216, 141 I.C. 628, A.I.R. 1932 Sind 145, 26 S.L.R. 353, 1932 Cr.C. 681, Ind. Rul. 1933 Sind 67 where refusal of an adjournment for filing a sale-deed was justified on the ground that it would be valuable evidence of title but not of possession with which the Magistrate is concerned.

The action of a Magistrate in admitting documents of one party after the close of the case without notice to the other party and without giving them an opportunity to adduce rebutting evidence is illegal—Ramroop v. Mano, 35 Cr.L.J. 481, 147 I.C. 774, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 86, 1934 Cr.C. 113.

A Magistrate cannot decide a case under this section merely on the basis of a decision in the land registration case. He is under a legal obligation in the terms of the section, to receive all such evidence as may be produced by the parties respectively and consider the effect of such evidence, however great may be the weight which he will eventually attach to the decision in the land registration case—Gaya Prasad v. Ram Sarober, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 471, 15 P.L.T. 453, 1934 Cr.C. 1064, 36 Cr.L.J. 624, 155 I.C. 36.

Where in mutation proceedings the Revenue Court, instead of deciding which party was in possession, went into the question of title and held that a party had a better claim, the Magistrate, on production of the order of the Revenue Court, cannot abruptly drop the proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., release the property from attachment and direct that possession be delivered to the said party in accordance with the terms of the Revenue Court—Radha Raman v. Emp., A.I.R. 1936 All. 177, 1936 All.L.R. 30, 160 I.C. 20, 1936 A.W.R. 125, 1936 A.L.J. 197, 37 Cr.L.J. 215, 1936 Cr.C. 211.

The record must show the ground of rejection of evidence. A general remark in an order that the oral evidence is not reliable, without referring to it and without giving any reason, is not a proper disposal of the case on the evidence—Lakhpur, 4 P.L.T. 579, 24 Cr.L.J. 482, 72 I.C. 544.

Order of taking evidence.—It is certainly unusual for the second party to begin his evidence in a case under sec. 145, Cr. P. C. The order in which the evidence ought to be received by the Court is not dealt with in the section at all. Where a Magistrate directed the second party to begin to adduce evidence in the case, the High Court refused to interfere but directed the Magistrate to reconsider the matter again—Ram Prasad, 54 I.C. 616, 21 Cr.L.J. 136.

Examination of witnesses.—An order passed without examining the witnesses is without jurisdiction—Marudanayakam v. Md. Rowthen, 17 Cr.L.J. 217, 34 I.C. 329 (Mad.); Nojem v. Jamalali, 12 C.W.N. 771. So also, an order passed on the evidence of a person who was not a witness of any of the parties is bad—Jogendra v. Abu, 8 C.W.N. 719; Fateh Sher Khan v. Crown, 1916 P.R. 4, 17 Cr.L.J. 129.

Where the final order is avowedly based on much evidence which was recovered behind the back of a person at a time when he was not a party to the proceedings at all, the order is wholly illegal—Narayan v. Chandrabhaga, 26 Cr.L.J. 1289 (1290), 89 I.C. 153, A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 457. It would probably be necessary in such a case to start the enquiry afresh as the party added would have a right to have the evidence taken in his presence—Krishnakumari v. Abdul Jabbar, 6 C.W.N. 737 (764), 30 Cal. 155 (F.B.).

Under the old law, the Magistrate was not bound to examine all the witnesses adduced by the parties but could limit the number for good and sufficient reasons. He could refuse to examine a particular witness. He had a discretion in the matter of examining witnesses—Samir Sheikh v. Jahed Sheikh, 3 C.L.J. 478, 3 Cr.L.J. 423 (explaining Manmatha v. Baroda, 31 Cal. 685); Abhayessari v. Sidhesari, 16 Cal. 513; In re Nathu Mal, 24 All. 315; Surya Kanta v. Hem Chandra, 30 Cal. 508.

The present Amendment of this sub-section, however, makes it obligatory on the Magistrate to examine all the witnesses produced by the parties, and leaves no discretion to him in this matter.

But the Court has undoubted jurisdiction to curtail the number of unnecessary witnesses upon the ground that their examination will delay and possibly defeat the ends of justice, though he cannot arbitrarily restrict the number of witnesses that a party wishes to examine—Biswanath v. Shivanand, 2 P.L.T. 330, 22 Cr.L.J. 430; Wahidunnissa v. Fichit Lal, 24 Cr.L.J. 954 (Pat.). See also Penumatsa Ranga Razu v. Zamindar, Gazzavaram, 39 Cr.L.J. 922, 177 I.C. 584, 11 R.M. 346, 1938 M.W.N. 252, 47 M.L.W. 340, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 654, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 453.

Inquiries under Chap. XII, are governed by sec. 356, Cr. P. C. Mere non-compliance with the provisions of this section does not vitiate the proceedings, unless there has been a failure of justice. The defect is cured by sec. 537, Cr. P. C.—Natho Khan, 34 Cr.L.J. 216, 141 I.C. 628, A.I.R. 1932 Sind 145, 26 S.L.R. 353, 1932 Cr.C. 681, Ind. Rul. 1933 Sind 67. See Note 1025

Summons to witnesses—See sub-section (9) and Note 436.

Admission by party.—If one of the parties admits that the other is in possession, the Judge is not bound to take any evidence—Gangadharam v. Sankarappa, 9 M.L.T. 91, 12 Cr.L.J. 47, 9 I.C. 285. See also Amriteshwari v. Darpa, 7 C.W.N. 558 (561). An admission by a party's Mukhtear that his client had no actual possession, is sufficient to dispense with the evidence—Haro Mohan v. Gobind, 7 C.W.N. 351 (352). See also Pratap v. Sunderbans, 24 Cr.L.J. 279, 3 P.L.T. 623, 71 I.C. 999, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 76.

Compromise.—Where the parties filed a petition of compromise according to which the land would be in the possession of both sides as stated in the petition, held that the fact that the parties had compromised and that there was no longer any dispute likely to lead to a breach of the peace, ousted the jurisdiction of the Magistrate. He was bound to stay all further proceedings and he should have recorded an order of cancellation. The very fact that they had compromised precluded him from passing an order under sec. 145, cl. (6), Cr. P. C.—Sadhu v. Mahammad Ali, 15 C.W.N. 568, 12 Cr.L.J. 32, 9 I.C. 167; Gangadhar v. Balkrishna, 31 Cr.L.J. 191, 121 I.C. 47, A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 285.

Withdrawal by a party.—Where the first party after examining some witnesses represented to the Court that he would conduct the case in the Civil Court and gave an undertaking not to enter upon the said land until the matter should have been settled by the Civil Court, the Magistrate could pass an order declaring the second party to be in possession, without taking evidence on behalf of the second party or recording a formal finding as to possession—Yar Md. v. Hayat Md., 18 Cr.L.J. 1024 (Cal.).

Special Oath.—As regards the refusal of one of the parties to take a special oath, the refusal is of course not to be treated as anything conclusive but it is a matter which the Court is entitled to take into consideration along with the other evidence and it is open to the trial Court to draw such inference from this conduct of the party as it thinks fit—Nandkishore Singh v. Bigan Lohar, 41 Cr.L.J. 101, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 113, 184 I.C. 817, 1940 P.W.N. 6, following Chintaman Bhat v. Shrinivas Bhat, 22 Bom. 680

Standard of proof.—In a proceeding under this section it would not be proper to set up any absolute standard and to say that evidence not up to this standard will not be acted on by the Court for the purpose of an order under this section. The proceeding under this section can be decided on the balance of evidence and if the Magistrate can see his way to express an opinion that the evidence of one side is superior to the evidence on the other side, then he is entitled to and should, if possible, form a definite opinion on the question of fact who is in possession. An order under sec. 146, Cr. P. C., attaching the property is a desperate remedy for cases in which the Magistrate finds it quite impossible to choose between the conflicting evidence adduced by the two sides. It would be regrettable if it were necessary for the High Court to pass such an order when the first Court has been able to make up its mind in favour of one party. If the Magistrate thinks that the evidence for the first party, weak though it might be, is preferable to the evidence for the second party, it is the Magistrate's duty to give a decision in favour of the first party—Kandkishore Singh v. Bigan Lohar, supra.

416. Reference to arbitrators:—This section requires the Magistrate himself to receive the evidence adduced by the parties, and on a consideration thereof to come to a decision. The procedure laid down by this section does not contemplate that the question as to who is in actual possession should be delegated, even by consent of parties, to arbitrators—Banwari v. Hriday, 32 Cal. 552, 2 Cr.L.J. 347, 1 C.L.J. 432; Hamidul v. Sheikh Atait, 2 P.L.J. 86, 18 Cr.L.J. 145; Jamuna Das v. Hanuman, 25 C.W.N. 719, 63 I.C. 159, 33 C.L.J. 338, 22 Cr.L.J. 623; Hari Prasad Tewari v. Sewak Das, 1917 Pat. H. C. C. 251, 18 Cr.L.J. 685, 40 I.C. 323. But where the parties themselves agreed that the question of possession should be decided by an arbitrator, and the matter was thereupon referred to arbitrator, the Magistrate was bound to take into consideration the finding of fact by the arbitrators as to which party was in actual possession—Taramoni v. Gyanendra, 7 C.W.N. 461 (462). So also, where the dispute was referred to arbitration by consent of parties both of whom accepted the award that followed, it was not open to the Magistrate to insist on the production of evidence—Haladhar v. Bulaki, 3 P.L.J. 248, 19 Cr.L.J. 266, 44 I.C. 122, 4 P.L.W. 104. Where the parties themselves applied that the matter should be referred to arbitration, and the Magistrate made an order in terms of the award, the parties were not entitled afterwards to object to the course, and the High Court declined to interfere in revision—Janki v. Kalika Miser, 6 C.W.N. cix.

In Uttam Singh v. Jodham Rai, 3 Pat. 288, 92 I.C. 172, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 589, 7 P.L.T. 288, 27 Cr.L.J. 220, Foster, J. considered all the above cases and came to the conclusion that a distinction should be drawn between cases in which the reference to arbitration was made for the purpose of deciding existing and past possession, and cases in which the reference was made for deciding future possession. The scheme of an inquiry under sub-section (4) of sec. 145 is retrospective and not prospective; that is, the Magistrate is to consider who was in possession at the date of the institution of the proceeding or within two months prior thereto, and not who is entitled to possession and will henceforth be in possession of the property in dispute. Therefore, if the reference to arbitration is made for the purpose of deciding the question as to who was in possession at the date of the institution of the proceedings, such reference is not improper, and the Magistrate can pass an order on the basis of the award of the arbitrators. But if the reference is made for the purpose of deciding future possession, and the arbitrators give an award to the effect that the disputed lands will be divided among the parties, the award is prospective, and the Magistrate cannot pass any order on the basis of that award.

In the same case it has also been decided (at p. 294) that if the parties refer the disputes to arbitration, and the arbitrators give an award, it shows that the parties have come to a settlement of their disputes, and that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace. In such a case the Magistrate should pass an order under sub-section (5) dropping the proceedings, and cannot pass a final order (declaring the possession of the parties in terms of the award) under sub-section (6). See also Gangadhar v. Balkrishna, 31 Cr.L.J. 191, 121 I.C. 47, A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 285.

417. Decision as to possession:—The Magistrate must give a decision as to possession. An order merely declaring one of the parties to be in possession, without deciding and giving a finding as to who was in actual possession of the land in dispute on the date of the preliminary order, is one made entirely without jurisdiction and consequently void—Kochai v. Romesh, 35 Cal. 795, 12 C.W.N. 773, 8 Cr.L.J. 28; Penna Subba v. Sinna Subbaya, 45 M.L.J. 56, 23 Cr.L.J. 670. Where the Magistrate made no attempt to deal with the question of possession but made some general observation in regard to the ownership of the property, and declared the petitioner to be in possession, held that the order was an obvious infringement of the provisions of this section—Shukulathi v. Gulam Moideen, 1922 M.W.N. 689, 16 L.W. 338.

Where the trial Court comes to a finding under the first part of sub-sec. (4) of this section in favour of the first party, a further finding on the question of the forcible dispossession of the first party is unnecessary, especially when such dispossession is not, in fact, a part of the first party's case, but it does not affect the validity of the order of the Magistrate in so far as it contains a finding with regard to the possession of the first party—Gobardhon v. Khired Chandra, 44 C.W.N. 427.

If it is difficult for a Magistrate trying a case under this section to come to a conclusion as to the fact of possession, the wise and proper course to be adopted is to pass an order under sec. 146. If in such a case he passes an order under sec. 145, the High Court in revision can alter the order under sec. 145 into one under sec. 146—Reid v. Richardson, 14 Cal. 361; Kattras Coal Co. v. Shiikristo, 22 Cal. 297.

As to the effect of a previous Civil Court decree regarding possession, see Notes 438 and 439, post. If one of the parties had already brought a civil suit against the other for possession, and in that suit he admitted that he was out of possession and claimed to recover possession from the other party, there is no question as to possession for the Magistrate to decide under this section. In such a case proceedings under this section must be dropped—Amriteshwari v. Darpa, 7 C.W.N. 558 (561).

That the land is small in area is a neutral consideration and does not help either party and to say that the dispute is one of a civil-nature begs the whole question. If either party has a good case that party will obtain a proper decision from a Civil Court; but till such a decision can be obtained, proceedings under the criminal law are taken to avoid a breach of the peace—Guruditta v. Taja, A.I.R. 1939 Lah 108, I.L.R. 1938 Lah. 611, 40 Cr.L.J. 519, 181 I.C. 59, 41 P.L.R. 217.

See also Note 413.

418. Possession at the date of the order:—The question of possession has to be determined with reference to a specified point of time, viz, the date of the initial order, or in the case of forcible dispossession, a date within two months next preceding such order—Tarapada v. Nurul Haq, 32 Cal. 1093. No question of title can be taken into consideration, nor can any order be passed as regards future possession without reference to the actual possession at the date of the preliminary order—Gangadhar v. Balkrishna, 31 Cr.L.J. 191 (193), 121 I.C. 47, A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 285. The rulings in 11 Cal. 365, 12 Cal. 521, 12 Cal. 539, 15 Bom. 152, 18 Mad. 41, 13 All. 362 are no longer good law.

Delivery of possession by the Civil or Revenue Court:—The actual possession of the land in dispute is the only subject for inquiry. The fact of symbolical possession delivered under the C. P. Code has no bearing on the Magisterial inquiry—Ramalingam v. Raja of Ramnad, 16 Cr.L.J. 736 (Mad.); Promoda v. Khetra, 25 Cr.L.J. 1104 (Cal). Where a party is given symbolical possession of certain lands, and shortly afterwards proceedings under sec. 145 are instituted in respect of the same land, it is incumbent on the Magistrate to go into the fact of actual possession between the two dates and consider the evidence tendered on that question before passing the final order—Hazari Khan v. Nafar Chandra, 22 C.W.N. 479, 18 Cr.L.J. 718; Ambar Ali v. Piran Ali, 55 Cal. 826, 32 C.W.N. 275, 29 Cr.L.J. 503. Where it was found that notwithstanding the delivery of symbolical possession given to the auction purchasers (second party), the judgment-debtor and his heirs and representatives (first party) had continued all along to be in possession and were in actual possession on the day on which proceedings under this section were instituted, but the Magistrate made his final order in favour of the second party, held that the order made in favour of the second party could not be supported, as they were not in actual possession at the date of the order—Shahabaj v. Bhajahari, 49 Cal. 177 (180), 24 Cr.L.J. 875. If the successful party in the Civil Court allows the unsuccessful party to get into and retain possession for a sufficiently long period of time, the Magistrate may make a declaration in favour of the unsuccessful party in the civil suit, if he clearly finds possession in his favour—Agni Kumar v. Mantazaddin, 56 Cal. 290 (F.B.), 32 C.W.N. 1173, 30 Cr.L.J. 69 (84).

But recent symbolical possession is as good as actual possession. See Meherali v. Bidyut Baran, 34 Cr.L.J. 810, 144 I.C. 708, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 424, 37 C.W.N. 562 (655), 1933 Cr.C. 622. "If, on a given date, the plaintiff has been put in possession by the Civil Court, however inefficiently or irregularly, then on that date the plaintiff got possession as against the defendant. The defendant's actual possession has been broken as a matter of fact, even if only for a moment. This is as true of symbolical possession as of any other possession, though what happened at the time of delivery may well be important on the question whether the plaintiff continued in possession very long or was ousted in the following week. Still it is an error to hold in such cases that the decree-holder was never in possession or to ignore the delivery to him"—Per Rankin C.J. in Agni Kumar v. Mantazuddin, 56 Cal. 290 (310), 32 C.W.N. 1173, 113 I.C. 181, 30 Cr.L.J. 69, 48 CLJ. 193, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 610, Ind. Rul. 1929 Cal. 82 (F.B.). Once it is established that possession was delivered, that fact proves the possession of the party taking delivery on the date when it was delivered and raises a strong presumption in favour of the continuance of that possession unless the other side can show that subsequently they have succeeded effectively in displacing the holder of it and restoring their own possession. On the other hand, there is no rule of law that a Magistrate is bound to accept the evidence that the Civil Court peon went to the village and actually performed the acts which are required to constitute a delivery of possession—Dalip v. Rasik, 35 Cr.L.J. 154, 146 I.C. 631, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 586, 1933 Cr.C. 1347, following Agni Kumar v. Mantazuddin, supra and Rambarai v. Sagina, 75 I.C. 363, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 437, 24 Cr.L.J. 939, 4 P.L.T. 333.

When the bailiff is entrusted with giving possession what he can do is to go to the property and proclaim in the name of the Court that so and so has been dispossessed and so and so has been put in possession of it. This delivery of possession is not symbolical but actual and is as effective against the judgment-debtor as his physical removal from a house. Such a possession may be called formal in the sense that there is no physical ousting of any individual but not symbolical. Even when the delivery of possession is under O. 21, R. 36 or R. 96 of the Civil Procedure Code, i.e., when the property is in possession of some one on behalf of the judgment-debtor who is not liable to be dispossessed under the writ, the service of the writ effectively dispossesses the judgment-debtor and he cannot interfere with the man who has been given possession. Regarding third party, the matter stands on a different footing. If he is rightly or wrongly physically removed from the property (that is, if he is dispossessed) and if he does not take proper remedy in time, he will lose his right. But if the delivery of possession is purely formal in the sense that nobody has been physically ousted but that there has been a proclamation to that effect, he, if actually in possession, cannot be said to have been dispossessed. Now if, however, circumstances show that the decree-holder or auction-purchaser has slept over his right and has allowed that judgment-debtor to regain possession of the property and he is at the time of the proceeding in peaceful possession of it, the matter stands on a quite different footing. But in such cases the Magistrates must take it as an indisputable fact, once delivery of possession is proved, that on the day of delivery of possession the party to whom possession was given was in possession as against the man who was party to that delivery of possession and was bound by the writ. He must start with the presumption that the state of things which existed on that day continued to exist thereafter unless the contrary is established. The judgment-debtor can only succeed if he establishes beyond doubt that he had completely ousted the man who was put in possession by the Court and was in peaceful possession of the property in dispute—Rajendra Narayan v. Chintamani, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 151, 1938 P.W.N. 526, 19 P.L.T. 632, 40 Cr.L.J. 339, 180 I.C. 322.

The Criminal Court ought to hold that if on a given date the plaintiff has been put into possession by the Civil Court then on that date the plaintiff got possession as against the defendant. But where a considerable period elapses between the date of delivery of possession and the date on which possession of the land is disputed, a stale delivery of possession cannot be conclusive as to present possession—Zafar Ahsan v. Jugeshwar Bux Roy, 41 Cr.L.J. 171 (172), 185 I.C. 346, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 135, 1939 P.W.N. 855.

Where in execution of a decree the Civil Court orders delivery of possession of judgment-debtor's property to the decree-holder and the Officer of Court executing the delivery warrant gives effect to the order and since then the decree-holder is in possession, both in fact and in law, of the property in question but the judgment-debtor within two months of the execution of such warrant attempts forcible entry upon the land whereupon the decree-holder files a petition under this section, held that in the face of the decree of the Civil Court in favour of the applicants, the order of the Magistrate referring the parties to the Civil Court for the determination of their rights under sec. 146 (1), Cr. P. C., is highly improper. So far as the land is concerned, it is absurd to think that the parties should again fight out in a Civil Court the question as to who is entitled to the possession of the land which the Civil Court has not only decreed in favour of the applicants but which the Civil Court has already enforced by the execution of its delivery warrant. When a decree is inter partes, it is immaterial whether the delivery of possession made under that decree is actual or merely symbolical. In an enquiry under this section there is only one conclusion possible for the Magistrate to arrive at with reference to the land, that is, that it was in the possession of the applicants on the date of the order passed under sub-sec. (1). Even assuming that the applicants have been forcibly dispossessed at any time after the execution of the delivery order, the first proviso to sub-sec. (4) will operate in favour of the applicants, as such dispossession must have taken place within two months next before the date of the order under sub-sec. (1)—Maung Kan v. Maung Po Tok, 41 Cr.L.J. 123, 185 I.C. 119, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 388, 1940 Rang.L.R. 157. That would be applicable to possession obtained against the judgment-debtor but not when the party in possession at the time is not the judgment-debtor but one of the decree-holders claiming exclusive title—Sheoprasad Shriram v. Gobindram Hardit, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 265 (267), 1940 N.L.J. 375.

Where the Magistrate found one party to have been in possession a few days before the date of the preliminary order, and confirmed his possession without finding who was in possession on the date of the preliminary order itself, but the interval between the two dates was very short (viz. 5 days only), and there was nothing on the record to show that there was any change of possession in that short interval, and the party confirmed in possession had a decree of a Civil Court declaring him entitled to possession, held that the order of the Magistrate was valid—Md Hussain v. Pachayappa, 42 M.L.J. 147, 23 Cr.L.J. 92. But, where the Magistrate declared possession in favour of the opposite party as evidenced by certain documents of title relating to a period as old as 10 years prior to the proceeding, without taking further evidence, oral or documentary, to see whether that possession continued up to the date of proceeding, the High Court set aside the order as contrary to the provisions of this sub-section—Juthan v. Ram Narayan, 18 C.W.N. 700, 15 Cr.L.J. 202.

See Note 438.

Record of rights:—Whatever presumption may be raised by a recently published record-of-rights, it does not in itself establish the factum of possession in a proceeding under sec. 145, Cr. P. C.—Chintamani v. Jagannath, 19 C.W.N. 123, 16 Cr.L.J. 315, 28 I.C. 651. In deciding a case under this section a Magistrate has jurisdiction to go behind the orders passed in favour of a party under the Bengal Survey Act (V of 1875 B.C.) and under the Bengal Tenancy Act (VII of 1885 B.C.). The Magistrate's order cannot be said to have been made without jurisdiction, because he has not expressly stated that the presumption arising from the entry in the record-of-rights has been rebutted. The finding that the first party are in possession, is in itself a finding of change of relationship since the decision under the Bengal Survey Act and the entry in the record-of-rights—Syed Sadek v. Sachindra, 37 C.L.J. 128, 24 Cr.L.J. 569, 73 I.C. 265. But see Profulla v. Hodding, cited in Note 438.

Where the record-of-rights and rent receipts granted to the second party related to a period seven years back, the Magistrate was right in refusing to accept them as evidence, when there was a mass of oral evidence given by a large number of witnesses to show that at the date of the order the possession was with the first party—Debendra v. Dhanmani, 37 C.W.N. 849 (851), 35 Cr.L.J. 489, 147 I.C. 817, A.I.R. 1934 Cal 95, 1934 Cr.C. 81. But where a Magistrate discarded a record of rights filed by the first party simply on the ground that it was an old document prepared more than thirty years ago, held that the fact that it was prepared more than thirty years ago does not in any way affect the presumption attaching to it in law, that the presumption is no doubt a rebuttable one and that it was open to the Magistrate to find upon the evidence adduced by the second party that the presumption raised by the document had been rebutted—Ramroop v. Mano, 35 Cr.L.J. 481, 147 I.C. 774, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 86, 1934 Cr.C. 113.

The continuity of the right given under the wajib ul-arz must be presumed and it is for the other side to establish that such a right had been abandoned—Fajju v. Sirya, 38 Cr.L.J. 881, 170 I.C. 392, 10 R.L. 107, 39 P.L.R. 491

Land under water:—Where the Magistrate, finding that owing to the land being under water, there could not be any act of peaceful possession within two months of the date of the proceeding, declared that the possession in the current year was to be presumed in favour of the man who was in possession during the previous years, and made the final order in his favour, it was held that the order was in direct contravention of this section and the Magistrate should have passed an order under sec. 146—Satyendra v. Krishnadhan, 20 C.W.N. 1014, 18 Cr.L.J. 80

Joint possession:—See Note 405, ante

419. Forcible and wrongful possession:—A perusal of the first proviso to sub-sec (4) of this section together with sub-sec (4) leaves no room for doubt that the procedure prescribed in the proviso is not mandatory and that if a Magistrate chooses to act under sub-sec (4), that is to say, decides the question which of the parties was in possession at the date of the order made under sub sec. (1), it is not necessary to see whether or not any of the parties has been dispossessed within two months next before the date of the order—Mohammad Nasir v. Duarka Singh, 39 Cr.L.J. 963 (964), 177 I.C. 974, 1938 O.L.R. 459, 1938 O.A. 778, 1938 O.W.N. 1018, 1938 A.Cr.C. 132, A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 31

The Magistrate is to decide which party was in actual possession on the date of the preliminary order. When there was no dispossession it is not necessary for the Magistrate to decide whether one party was dispossessed by the other—Natho Khan, 34 Cr.L.J. 216, 141 I.C. 628, A.I.R. 1932 Sind 145, 26 S.L.R. 353, 1932 Cr.C. 681, Ind. Rul. 1933 Sind 67. The Magistrate's duty is to find peaceful possession. Ouster of a person lawfully in possession by a trespasser, does not confer on the latter any rights which can be recognised under this section. The Magistrate must look to the possession which may be termed peaceful. He must go back to the time when the present dispute originated—In re Mohesh Chandra, 4 Cal. 417. The recent occupation of a trespasser is not a possession which a Magistrate can direct the party to retain under this section. The possession is still with the person ousted by the trespasser, and an order directing him to have possession and the trespasser to be dispossessed, is the proper order to be made—Ram Singh v. Dalla, 1876 P.R. 8. But where the Magistrate finds that on the date when the proceedings under this section were instituted and for more than two months preceding that date, the members of the first party have been and are in possession, although the members of the second party obtained delivery of possession of the property through Court a year ago, held that the Magistrate should pass his order in favour of the first party—Shahabaj v. Bhajahari, 49 Cal. 177 (181), 24 Cr.L.J. 875. Section 145, Cr.P.C., gives protection of law even to a squatter unless his possession commenced within two months of the filing of a petition under the section—Manickam Pillai v. Meenammal, 1937 M.W.N. 732.

When the Railway authorities establish a case under sec. 122, Railways Act, entitling them to eject the person asserting possession over a well in the railway premises, the person ejected cannot be said to have been forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed and therefore the Magistrate is justified in passing order under sec. 145 (6), Cr. P. C., declaring the Railway authorities entitled to possession of the well—Hotchand Ramchand v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Sind 167 (168).

Two months:—This proviso lays down that if a party has been dispossessed within two months before the date of passing the preliminary order, that party should be maintained in possession. But if through delay in the action of the Magistrate the preliminary order is not passed within two months of the date of dispossession, the dispossessor should not have the benefit of the delay. The proviso should be interpreted reasonably and not literally—Srinivasa v. Dasaratha, 52 Mad. 66, 30 Cr.L.J. 144, 28 M.L.W. 504, 1928 M.W.N. 794, Ind. Rul. 1929 Mad. 118, 56 M.L.J. 33, 113 I.C. 336, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 198. See also Dhummun Singh v. Baleshwar Prasad, 35 Cr.L.J. 91, 146 I.C. 551, 1933 Cr.C. 1363, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 601; Chinchilada v. Chintalaswami, 28 Cr.L.J. 782, 104 I.C. 110, 8 A.I.Cr.R. 574, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 816; Ammanna Sastri v. Sitaramayya, 1939 M.W.N. 336, 49 M.L.W. 473. The Nagpur Court dissents from this view and holds that words of the proviso must be construed literally, and that the date from which the period of 2 months is to be computed, is the date of the order and not the date of the complaint—Parashram, 26 N.L.R. 377, 1931 Cr.C. 222 (223), Ind. Rul. 1931 Nag. 57, A.I.R. 1931 Nag. 38, 130 I.C. 153, 32 Cr.L.J. 476; Nago v. Atmaram, 27 Cr.L.J. 68, 91 I.C. 244, A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 371. There is no provision allowing for extension of the period of two months laid down in this section, whatever the cause of delay may be. The proviso to sub-sec (4) of this section is only permissive and not a mandatory one. The Magistrate may treat the party forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed within two months as if he had been in possession. The main order is to be based on possession at the date of the preliminary order and the words used with reference to it are positive—Sunderlal, 38 Cr.L.J. 375, 167 I.C. 359, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 271, 1936 Cr.C. 1114, 9 R.N. 179, 11 L.R. 1937 Nag. 174. This view of the Nagpur Court has also been adopted by the Oudh Chief Court, the Lahore and the Allahabad High Courts and the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court—Baij Nath, A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 526, 124 I.C. 363, 31 Cr.L.J. 678, 5 Luck. 440; Meharban v. Bhola, A.I.R. 1935 All. 35, 152 I.C. 496, 57 All. 488, 1934 A.L.R. 1007, 1934 A.L.J. 1157, 4 A.W.R. 929, 36 Cr.L.J. 102; Ghulam Hussain v. Sajawal Shah, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 143, 142 I.C. 430, 34 P.L.R. 365, 1933 Cr.C. 241; Muhammad Ali v. Shamsul Haq, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 33 (37), 41 Cr.L.J. 486, 187 I.C. 636.

"Forcible" does not mean that actual force or violence should have been used; when the dispossession of a person is effected by a show of criminal force, that person is said to be forcibly dispossessed—Sith Nath v. Harvey, 33 C.L.J. 353, 63 I.C. 333, 25 C.W.N. 601, 22 Cr.L.J. 637. If a party, after obtaining the sanction of the Municipality proceeded to dig a tank upon the land in dispute to the exclusion of the other party who was then in possession, held that it was 'forcible' dispossession (though no criminal force was used)—Manmatha v. Ganga, 20 C.W.N. 978 (981), 17 Cr.L.J. 449, 36 I.C. 129. The correctness of this decision may be doubted.

The mere ouster of people having no title to the land, by the rightful owner, without using any physical violence, and by removing things which had no right to be on the land, cannot be said to be an unlawful and forcible entry on the land within the meaning of this section, and the persons so ousted cannot be treated to have been in possession—Collector of Howrah v. Santak, 44 C.L.J. 593, 28 Cr.L.J. 210, 99 I.C. 1010. Where a landlord resumes possession of an abandoned holding after compliance with the procedure laid down in sec. 87, Bengal Tenancy Act, it cannot be said that he has taken forcible possession of the holding—Nikunja Behari v. Usabati, 31 C.W.N. 242, 28 Cr.L.J. 245, 100 I.C. 117.

This sub-section contemplates that the dispossession should be forcible as well as wrongful; the mere wrongful dispossession, without any evidence to show that it was forcible as well, does not come within the purview of this section. The remedy of the party wrongfully dispossessed lies only in the Civil Court—H. V. Law & Co. v. Manindra

Chandra, 3 Pat. 809 (813, 814), 26 Cr.L.J. 268; Ata Husain v. Lalit, 28 Cr.L.J. 437, 101 I.C. 469 (All).

The words "wrongfully dispossessed" mean dispossessed without due warrant of law, or dispossessed otherwise than in due course of law, even though the dispossessor be the rightful owner—Bai Jiba v. Chandulal, 27 Bom.L.R. 1353, 27 Cr.L.J. 661, 94 I.C. 709, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 91.

420. Attachment:—See second proviso to clause (4).

Time:—The first step to be taken under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., is to draw up a proceeding in terms of sub-sec. (1) thereof. It is only after that has been done that the Magistrate acquires jurisdiction to make an order of attachment under the last proviso to sub-sec. (4). Therefore an order of attachment made before the preliminary order and proceedings contemplated under sec. 145 (1), Cr. P. C., is illegal—Faizur Rahman v. Shaikh Ladley, 42 C.W.N. 351. See also Ghulam Hussain v. Sajawal, A.I.R. 1933 Lah 143 (144), 1933 Cr.C. 241, 34 P.L.R. 365, 142 I.C. 430.

Emergency:—When a Magistrate considers a case to be one of emergency, the matter is one within his discretion and the action taken by him for maintenance of peace cannot be lightly interfered with—Prem Kaur v. Benarsi Das, 34 Cr.L.J. 342 (343), 14 Lah. 615, Ind. Rul. 1933 Lah 177, 142 I.C. 207, 34 P.L.R. 368, 1933 Cr.C. 650, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 409.

Where there is a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace concerning any land, a Magistrate is empowered to institute a proceeding under sec. 145 (1), Cr. P. C., and also can attach the land under sub-sec. (4) of that section pending his decision, although the land is claimed by one party to be in joint possession of both the parties—Bande Ali Shaikh, (1939) 2 Cal. 419, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 163 (164), 41 Cr.L.J. 396, 187 I.C. 125.

Mode of attachment—A mere restraint on alienation would generally be of no use in preventing a breach of peace which is the primary object of proceedings under this section. The Code of Criminal Procedure certainly does not contemplate prohibitory order as the only mode of attachment under sec. 88 of the Code, e.g., it is laid down that attachment may be made by taking possession or by appointment of a Receiver, or by a prohibitory order restraining payment of rent, delivery of possession etc. These are recognised modes of attachment and in the absence of any restriction in the section itself, there seems to be no good reason why one or the other method should not be adopted, as may be considered appropriate for the object in view—Gopala v. Krishnaswamy, 21 Cr.L.J. 73, 54 I.C. 473, 11 M.L.W. 459, 27 M.L.T. 234; Prem Kaur v. Benarsi Das, supra, where the view taken in Mewa Lal, 44 I.C. 41, 3 P.L.J. 147, 4 P.L.W. 359, 19 Cr.L.J. 249 was dissented from.

Under this section a Magistrate has no power to restrain the parties from entering the disputed property (i.e., Kyaung) and its compound until further orders. He has powers to attach it. But to attach the property is not the same thing as ordering both parties to vacate it—U Pymnya v. U Wilatha, 32 Cr.L.J. 637, 131 I.C. 63, Ind. Rul. 1931 Rang 127, 1931 Cr.C. 153, A.I.R. 1931 Rang 51.

Power is given to a Magistrate for the purpose of preserving the peace, and only for that purpose, to attach the disputed property. An order of attachment cannot be passed for the mere purpose of avoiding a future litigation in respect of the right to the present produce of the land in dispute—Atma Singh v. Harnam, 7 Lah. 136, 27 P.L.R. 311, 27 Cr.L.J. 761.

The order for attachment would remain in force only pending the Magistrate's decision, and not until a decree or order of the Civil Court is obtained—Farid v. Piru, 8 S.L.R. 207, 16 Cr.L.J. 235; Guru Das v. W'catheral, 13 C.W.N. 601 (603), 11 Cr.L.J. 7, 4 I.C. 537. The order of attachment will remain in force even when the case is adjourned sine die—Guru Das v. W'catheral, supra. But the attachment would continue pending the decision of the Magistrate himself under sec. 145, and not the decision in any other case that might be pending before any other Magistrate or any other Court—Faizur Rahman v. Sheikh Ludley, 42 C.W.N. 351 (352).

Where a land was attached under this section and the crops standing on the land were sold and the sale proceeds kept in deposit in the Court, but the preliminary order was afterwards cancelled by the Magistrate on the ground that there was no immediate danger of a breach of the peace, the Magistrate could order the sale-proceeds to be restored to the persons who raised the crops—Suryanarayana v. Ankineed, 47 Mad. 713 (715), 46 M.L.J. 565, 25 Cr.L.J. 978; Mahalakshmi v. Subbarayadu, 17 L.W. 429, 24 Cr.L.J. 783; or he could order the money to be kept in deposit in the Court, until one party or the other obtained an order in his favour—Suryanarayana v. Ankineed, 47 Mad. 713 (715); Changa Reddi v. Ramasamy, 16 Cr.L.J. 104 (Mad.). An order confirming the attachment and directing the parties to seek redress in a Civil or competent Court, after dropping the proceedings, is without jurisdiction. If the Magistrate thinks it unnecessary to hold an enquiry or continue the proceedings, he ought to set aside the attachment and pass orders as to the disposal of the property in the custody of the Court—Lakshmana Rao v. Satyanarayana, 1937 M.W.N. 55. See also Note 435.

Moveable property:—This section does not authorise the Magistrate to attach moveables—Q-E v. Ramchandra, Ratanlal 891; Gopala v. Krishnaswamy, 27 M.L.T. 234, 21 Cr.L.J. 73, 11 M.L.W. 459, 54 I.C. 473; Arjun v. Chandan, 24 O.C. 167, 22 Cr.L.J. 625; Gajraj, 20 A.L.J. 906, 24 Cr.L.J. 85, 71 I.C. 213, A.I.R. 1922 All 528.

The attachment of shop goods is illegal under this section—Dhani Ram v. Bhola Nath, 23 P.R. 1902. But where the dispute relates not to the mere building or structure itself but also to the valuable property inside, e.g., valuable machinery, goods, etc., on the premises, the Magistrate has powers to attach such moveable property also in the case of emergency under this section—Prem Kaur v. Benarsi Das, 34 Cr.L.J. 342 (344), 14 Lah. 615, Ind. Rui 1933 Lah. 177, 142 I.C. 207, 34 P.L.R. 368, 1933 Cr.C. 650, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 409. See Rambhari, 16 Cr.L.J. 224, 27 I.C. 848 where a shop together with goods therein was attached. Once a house is attached the Court is deemed to be in possession of it and neither party can enter it or go into the premises appurtenant to it to remove any moveable property which may be on those premises—Nuranjan Lal, 37 Cr.L.J. 346, 160 I.C. 870, A.I.R. 1936 All. 141, 1936 A.L.J. 83, 1936 Cr.C. 140. See also Kochunny v. Manarikaram, 1912 M.W.N. 540, 13 Cr.L.J. 222, 14 I.C. 318, where forest together with elephants therein was attached; and Bharat v. Ramchandra, 18 Cr.L.J. 287, 38 I.C. 319, 1 Pat.L.J. 356. But see Gajraj, supra and Mahadevi v. Beni Prasad, 42 All. 214, 18 A.L.J. 242, where a different view was taken.

Where land is attached under sec. 145 (4), Cr. P. C., the land must be taken to include the crops—Bande Ali Shakh, (1939) 2 Cal. 419, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 163, 41 Cr.L.J. 396, 187 I.C. 125.

Possession.—The object of proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., being to determine which party was in possession at the date of the proceedings and to declare such party to be entitled to retain possession, the possession of the Court during attachment in the course of those proceedings should enure for the benefit of such party in whose favour such a declaration is made. The object of an attachment under sec. 146, Cr. P. C., is to hold the property in anticipation of an action in which the right or title to possession is to be declared by a competent Court and the possession of the Court during such attachment should enure for the benefit of party or person in whose favour a competent Court would make such a declaration—Abinash v. Tarai, 30 C.W.N. 541 (546), A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 782, 95 I.C. 117; Rajjabali v. Faku, 58 Cal. 1070, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 29 (31), 35 C.W.N. 483, 134 I.C. 906, 1932 Cr.C. 66.

421. Appointment of receiver:—A Magistrate cannot appoint a receiver under the proviso to clause (4) of this section before the commencement of the inquiry. He can do so only under sec. 146, and after the conclusion of the inquiry—Subhadramma v. Satyam, 1910 M.W.N. 821, 8 M.L.T. 314, 11 Cr.L.J. 536; Mewa Lal, 3 P.L.J. 147, 19 Cr.L.J. 249, 44 I.C. 41, 1917 Pat.H.C.C. 363; Diwan, 30 P.L.R. 23, 30 Cr.L.J. 411 (413), A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 223, 10 Lah. 800, 115 I.C. 29; Ramakrishnam v. Narayana, 1933 M.W.N. 917; Dasrath v. Tarachand, 21 N.L.R. 191, 26 Cr.L.J. 1378 Even though a receiver may not be appointed consequent on an attachment made under the last proviso to sub-sec. 4 of sec. 145, a Magistrate is competent to make suitable arrangements for the custody of the property attached—Faizur Rahman v. Sheikh Ludley, 42 C.W.N. 351 (352). The word "attach" merely means to bring under the control of the Court, and the Magistrate is entitled to effect that object in any way which is within his power. Certainly, the appointment of a Receiver with the powers of a Receiver under the Code of Civil Procedure is not one of those ways, because unless that power is expressly given a Magistrate cannot exercise it. It is, however, clear that if the Magistrate's attachment is to be effected, he must put some person into possession of the property—Maung San U v Maung Lu Gale, 39 Cr.L.J. 484, 174 I.C. 958, 10 R.R. 451, A.I.R. 1938 Rang 88. Even if a Magistrate appoints a receiver under this section, such receiver will only be an agent or servant of the Magistrate acting under his order. The right to attach (under the second proviso to this clause) carried with it the right to take the necessary steps for the custody and management of the property, and the Magistrate may appoint a receiver for that purpose—Srinivasa v. Sathayappa, 13 Cr.L.J. 295, 14 I.C. 759 (Mad.). The power of such receiver will not be the same as that of a receiver appointed under sec. 146. His duty will be simply to take and keep possession of the properties attached and to make an inventory thereof—Gopala v Krishnaswami, 27 M.L.T. 234, 21 Cr.L.J. 73, 11 M.L.W. 459. Possession by such receiver amounts to possession on behalf of the party who will eventually succeed. It does not amount to dispossession of any person—Rajjabali v. Faku, 58 Cal 1070, 35 C.W.N. 483 (486), 1932 Cr.C. 66, 134 I.C. 906, Ind Rul 1931 Cal 906.

The amount of the receiver's remuneration should be reasonable, and should not in any case exceed the amount of the nett income realised by the receiver—Yamunabai, 27 Cr.L.J. 22, 8 N.L.J. 167, 91 I.C. 54, A.I.R. 1925 Nag 462. See also Maung San U v Maung Lu Gale, supra.

A receiver can be appointed only by the Magistrate while the inquiry is proceeding and only when he is satisfied that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace still exists. The High Court in revision cannot appoint a receiver, because when the matter has come to the High Court the inquiry is already over and there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace, as the Magistrate's order has put one party in possession of the property in dispute—Marudayya v Shanmugasundara, 49 M.L.J. 593, 27 Cr.L.J. 126, 1925 M.W.N. 772, 22 M.L.W. 723.

422. Joint Inquiry:—(1) One dispute as to several plots —When the dispute is one, the fact that it embraces several distinct parcels of land does not necessitate an independent proceeding in respect of each. His findings should naturally be directed to possession of particular plots, but the fact that he did not take separate proceedings in respect of each plot would not invalidate his entire proceedings—Krishna Kamini v. Abdul Jabbar, 30 Cal 155 (185, 220), 6 C.W.N. 737 (F.B.); Sajani Kanta v Shamsher, 24 Cr.L.J. 235, 71 I.C. 699 (Cal); especially if it was shown that none of the parties had been precluded from giving any evidence and no party was prejudiced by the Magistrate's action in not taking separate proceedings—Ishwar Chandra v Ambica, 5 C.W.N. 455; Gajadhar v Thakur, 26 Cr.L.J. 421, 85 I.C. 40, A.I.R. 1923 Pat 515. Although it may be desirable under such circumstances to deal with each dispute relating to each of several plots separately, it is impossible to extend to such proceedings the strict rule of procedure observed in civil actions—Manik Mandal v Gobinda, 6 C.W.N. 206. But proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., with regard to a large mauza may cause a great injustice to the persons in actual occupation—The Indian Iron and Steel Company v. Banso Gopal, 32 C.L.J. 54 (63), 59 I.C. 403, A.I.R. 1920 Cal 824, 22 Cr.L.J. 99.

See Note 397A.

(2) Different disputes as to different subjects —When there are independent disputes relating to distinct parcels of land, they ought to be dealt with in separate proceedings—Krishna Kamini v. Abdul, 30 Cal. 155 (200) (F.B.). Where the parties are found to be in possession of different and separate pieces of land, e.g., when the dispute is alleged to exist in 230 villages and each village stands on its own footing, the Magistrate should not club together 230 subjects of dispute and treat them as one. He should decide which party is in possession of this or that village, instead of arbitrarily finding that one party was in possession of all the villages—Trumalraja v. Lodd Gobind Doss, 29 Mad. 561; Crown v. Jamal, 1 S.L.R. 25, 9 Cr.L.J. 265.

(3) Different claims :—In a dispute regarding possession of 708 bighas of land belonging to a zemindari, the parties to the dispute were persons interested as tenants under the zemindari on the one side, and on the other side, persons claiming under the same Zemindar to be interested in various portions of the land as their maurasi jote in different quantities and under interests acquired at different times; and the Magistrate tried the case together and passed an order in favour of the former, directing that they as a body should remain in possession until evicted therefrom by order of a Civil Court; held that the Magistrate should have distinctly specified which persons were entitled as against which, and to which portion of the land in dispute. The proceedings were set aside—Kutuhul v. Uma Singh, 15 Cal. 31.

(4) Where parties in all cases are not the same :—Where the parties in several cases under sec. 145 are not the same, the Magistrate is not competent to try all the cases together, although the parties consent to the adoption of such a procedure. Evidence already taken in one case may be accepted in the other cases, but the cases must be tried separately—Roy Kumar Singh y. Mahadeo, 4 C.W.N. 748.

423. Sub-section (5)—Addition of parties:—This clause provides for interested parties coming in even if they have not been served with notice—Bhure Khan v. Fakira, 25 Cr.L.J. 159 (Nag). Clause (5) does not enable a Magistrate to add parties to the proceeding. It merely enables a stranger to come in and show that no such dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace concerning any land, etc., existed. He does not become, nor can thereby be made, a party to the dispute which, he seeks to show, has never existed—Janaki Nath, 3 C.W.N. 329. The "person interested" who is empowered under clause (5) to show that no dispute exists or has existed, does not come in for the purpose of joining in the proceeding but for the purpose of bringing it to an end—Krishna Kamini v. Abdul Jubbar, 30 Cal. 155 (199), 6 C.W.N. 737 (F.B.). Where a person applies on the ground that he is interested in the land in dispute as a tenant of a part of the property in dispute, and there is nothing to show that is not the case, he should be allowed to come in and show under clause (5) that there is no dispute—Haran Mandal v. Mohim Chandra, 37 Cal. 285, 11 Cr.L.J. 371, 11 C.L.J. 414. But as he does not become a party to the proceedings, no order can be passed under sub-section (6) in favour of such person; and the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to declare any land to be in possession of such person—Radhamohan v. Naimuddi, 19 Cr.L.J. 653 (Cal.); Rasik v. Jagabandhu, 25 C.W.N. 214, 22 Cr.L.J. 502.

A person not a party to the original proceedings cannot intervene and ask the Court to keep the proceedings pending with a view to enable him to adjudicate his rights when original contesting parties had settled their disputes and there was no likelihood of a breach of the peace—Chunilal, 1939 N.L.J. 197.

For further notes on addition of parties, see Note 401, ante.

424. Cancellation of preliminary order:—The apprehension of a breach of the peace is the first condition necessary to give the Magistrate jurisdiction under this section, and if it is found that there is no longer any such apprehension, the Magistrate's jurisdiction ceases. He is then bound to cancel the initial order and stay all further proceedings under this clause—Mad Khandu v. Sadakali, 38 C.L.J. 284, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 577, 25 Cr.L.J. 291. If any party or other person interested denies the existence of a dispute, the onus lies on him to show that it did not exist—Munnu, 8 O.W.N. 1062, 33 Cr.L.J. 46 (48), 134 I.C. 1018, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 415, 1931 Cr.C. 994, Ind. Rul. 1931 Oudh 426.

The mere fact that in a prior criminal case between the parties a Magistrate expressed his opinion that one of the parties was in possession, is not conclusive as to possession, and can in no sense be said to have settled the dispute between the parties; and on the basis of such a decision a Court cannot stay the proceedings started under this section—Abdul Shakur v. Abu Sayeed, 6 P.L.T. 710, 26 Cr.L.J. 870, 86 IC 806, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 593.

A Magistrate can cancel his preliminary order only on facts being brought to his notice which are sufficient to satisfy him that no dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists; and, therefore, the cancellation of proceedings merely on the ground that one party admits that the other party was in actual possession of the land in dispute, is without jurisdiction and should be set aside—Tara Charan v. Bengal Coal Co., Ltd., 13 C.W.N. 125. The Magistrate can cancel a preliminary order only when the parties are in a position to give positive evidence that there is no likelihood of a breach of the peace. The mere absence of a finding by the Magistrate in respect of a likelihood of a breach of the peace is not sufficient—Ranada Ranjan v. Bharat Chandra, 25 C.W.N. 215, 22 Cr.L.J. 484, A.I.R. 1921 Cal 631, 62 IC 180, 33 C.L.J. 69. Unless a party is in a position to show to the Magistrate that there is no likelihood of a breach of the peace, the Magistrate's order under sub-section (1) stands (ibid). A proceeding under this section was drawn up between two parties. Thereafter a third party was added who claimed the disputed property but asserted that there was no likelihood of a breach of the peace. Subsequently the first and second parties filed a petition of compromise stating that there was no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace. The Magistrate made his final order in favour of the third party. Held that the flaw in the proceeding appears to be this that there is no evidence of, and nothing in the proceedings showing, the likelihood of a breach of the peace as between the third party and the first two parties or either of them and that therefore the order must be set aside—Rasik Lal v. Jagabandhu, 25 C.W.N. 214. The information that there is no likelihood of a breach of the peace need not be confined to what the parties give under sub-section (5). If the Magistrate is satisfied, whatever the source of his information may be, that the likelihood of a breach of the peace does not exist, he can cancel the order passed under sub-section (1) and stay the proceedings—Mamndra v. Barada Kant, 30 Cal. 112, 6 C.W.N. 417; Kamalammal v. Varu Rowther, 4 L.W. 57, 17 Cr.L.J. 138; Santok v. Ram Singh, 2 Lah. 364, 23 Cr.L.J. 292; Daljit Singh v. Tej Singh, A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 284 (285), 1939 O.W.N. 891, 1939 O.L.R. 602, 184 IC 290, 40 Cr.L.J. 930, 1939 A.W.R. (C.C.) 203, 12 R.O. 97, 1939 A.C.R. 178, 1939 O.A. 734. The Magistrate's power to drop the proceedings is not limited to the circumstances mentioned in clause (5). He is entitled to drop the proceedings on his own initiative whenever he is satisfied that there is no further likelihood of a breach of the peace, without giving an opportunity to the parties to show by evidence that there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace—Narasayya v. Venkiah, 49 Mad. 232, 49 M.L.J. 784, 27 Cr.L.J. 95. But there must be some materials before the Magistrate to show that there is no longer any apprehension of a breach of the peace. He cannot cancel the proceedings merely on the assumption that since a long time has elapsed from the date of the preliminary order there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace—Sastu v. Nathuni, 6 P.L.T. 258, 26 Cr.L.J. 105 (108), 53 IC 665. He can drop the proceedings if it appears to him from a police report that the likelihood of a breach of the peace no longer exists. He can so act on a police information and is not bound to take evidence—Abdur Rahman v. Dmesh, 33 C.W.N. 399, 31 Cr.L.J. 409, 122 IC 296. A Magistrate will not be acting illegally if he drops the proceedings after being satisfied upon the information given by a third party that the dispute no longer exists—Suryanarayan v. Ankineed, 47 Mad. 713 (715), 46 M.L.J. 565, 25 Cr.L.J. 978; Krishna Kamini v. Abdul, 30 Cal. 155 (161). And in so dropping the proceedings at the instance of a third party, the Magistrate is not bound to record the evidence of the witness of one of the parties who might have shown by evidence that a dispute still existed. If the Magistrate is able to act on a police report or other information in starting proceedings under this section there is no reason why he should not be able to stay further proceedings on similar information, without being obliged to record the evidence produced by the parties with the same formality as he would have done if he had gone on with his inquiry instead of dropping it—Suryanarayan v. Ankineed, 47 Mad. 713 (715), 25 Cr.L.J. 978.

Section 145, sub-sec. (5), Cr. P. C., applies only to those cases where any of the parties concerned in the dispute or any other person appears before the Magistrate and denies the existence of such dispute, and if this is not the case, sub-sec. (5) does not come into operation at all. Where, after filing written statements, the parties and their witnesses were not present in Court on the date fixed for evidence and the Magistrate dismissed the case and consigned it to the record room, held that, in absence of any denial of the existence of the dispute, his order had become final as laid down by sub-sec. (5) and that he could neither dismiss the case for default nor could he cancel the notice under sub-sec. (1), sec. 145, Cr. P. C.—Sri Chand v. Bashambar Nath, 38 Cr.L.J. 242, 166 I.C. 580, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 1012, 1936 Cr.C. 1115, 9 R.L. 393. But sub-secs. (4) and (5) are not exhaustive and are not intended to prevent a Magistrate from terminating proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., when he is satisfied that the very cause and reason of proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., has ceased to exist. It does not mean that the Magistrate cannot in fact cancel his order under sub-sec. (1) or terminate the proceedings when, upon other information, or, it may be, on his own information he is satisfied that no dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists. Even though the proceedings relate to a breach of the peace, it is desirable that as a certain formality is required in the institution of these proceedings, so they should be terminated by the Magistrate likewise with some formality. And as proceedings are instituted upon some information, so they should be terminated likewise upon some information and that ordinarily it is desirable before a Magistrate terminates proceedings of this sort in the exercise of powers which by necessary implication the section confers, that he should have on record a police report or other information to the effect that no dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists. But where the diary shows that the parties attended the Court from time to time, talked about a compromise and then finally stayed away and did nothing for months on end, that might be said to constitute information which would justify a Magistrate in his opinion that no dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace existed any longer and would justify his order terminating proceedings—Muhammad Ayoob v. Gulzar Mehar, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 51, I.L.R. 1939 Kar. 775, 187 I.C. 752, 41 Cr.L.J. 507. Sub-section (5) of this section is not exhaustive. A Magistrate, apart from the particular provisions of this section, can at any time for proper reasons terminate the proceedings under this section which are proceedings in an emergency in the interest of the public peace and which are not concerned with private interests and which are designed to preserve and protect public order—Hotchand Ramchand v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Sind 167 (168).

When the Magistrate has cancelled his preliminary order and dropped the proceedings, he becomes functus officio and has no jurisdiction to direct the delivery of the property or of its sale-proceeds (e.g., where the property is sold, being perishable) to one of the contending parties, or to allow one of the parties to reap the crops to the exclusion of the other. The proper course under these circumstances is to retain the property or its sale-proceeds in Court, until one of the parties obtain an order of a Civil Court—Narasayya v. Venkiah, 49 Mad. 232, 49 M.L.J. 784, 27 Cr.L.J. 95; Chenga v. Ramaswamy, 16 Cr.L.J. 104, A.I.R. 1915 Mad 588, 27 I.C. 152; Dasrath v. Tarachand, 21 N.L.R. 191, A.I.R. 1925 Nag 297, 89 I.C. 514, 26 Cr.L.J. 1378; Karimuddin v. Namuddin, 3 Cr.L.J. 466, 3 C.L.J. 573; Daljit Singh v. Tej Singh, A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 284 (285), 1939 A.W.R. (C.C.) 203, 12 R.O. 97, 1939 A.Cr.R. 178, 1939 O.W.N. 891, 1939 O.A. 734, 1939 O.L.R. 602, 184 I.C. 290, 40 Cr.L.J. 930. Where the Magistrate drops the proceedings and orders that the property, which has been attached, should be released in favour of one party, the High Court has power, under sec. 561A, Cr. P. C., to pass an order that the attachment shall continue since release from attachment might result in a conflict between the parties or their servants before action to prevent it could be taken by the authorities—Daljit Singh v. Tej Singh, supra.

A Magistrate has jurisdiction to cancel the order of his predecessor—In re Krishnaswami, 2 Weir 108. Where a proceeding under sec 145 has been drawn up by a Deputy Magistrate, the District Magistrate can cancel the proceeding after transferring the case to his own file, and on a consideration of the facts and after hearing the objections of the parties—Tara Charan v Bengal Coal Co., Ltd, 13 C.W.N. 125, 10 Cr L.J. 125, 4 I.C. 351. But the District Magistrate cannot quash the proceedings merely on the basis of a so-called admission of a party contained in a letter addressed to him, ibid.

An order striking off proceedings under this section does not amount to an adjudication of the question of possession for the purpose of sub-section (6)—Manindra v. Baroda, 30 Cal 112, 6 C.W.N. 417.

A Magistrate can, after withdrawing the proceedings under this section, start proceedings under sec 10 of the Bengal Alluvial Lands Act, 1920—Digendra v. Janaki, 33 C.W.N. 1115 (1117), 57 Cal 607.

425. Clause (6)—Final order:—

Contents.—Whether sections 366 and 367 do or do not apply to proceedings under sec 145, the Magistrate in his final order must give reasons for his decision sufficient to enable the High Court to determine whether he has complied with the terms of sub-section (4) and directed his mind to the consideration of the evidence adduced before him, and whether he has acted with jurisdiction in making his final order. A statement in the final order that the witnesses have been examined, pleaders have been heard on both sides, and oral and documentary evidence on both parties has been considered, is of a stereotyped nature applicable to any and every case and does not enable the High Court to understand what in fact the evidence was or to say that the mind of the trying Magistrate was properly and sufficiently directed to its consideration. Such a final order is bad and the case must be retried—Bhuban Chandra v Nisaran, 49 Cal 187 (189), 34 C.L.J. 125, 25 C.W.N. 887, 22 Cr L.J. 499, Peria Subba v Sinna Subbaya, 45 M.L.J. 56, 23 Cr L.J. 670, Mothahar Ali v Eshaque, 39 C.L.J. 366, 25 Cr L.J. 1115; Ishan Chandra v. Hriday, 29 C.W.N. 475, 26 Cr L.J. 915, 41 C.L.J. 357.

The final order should declare which party is in possession and should state that he will continue in possession until evicted therefrom in due course of law, and should forbid all disturbance of such possession. A brief order simply in these terms "I warn the opposite party not to interfere with the possession of the first party in any way" is not one in sufficient compliance with the law—Khubi v Darbari, 2 P.L.T. 267, 22 Cr L.J. 481 (482).

The Magistrate should come to a definite finding as to the fact of possession on the date of the preliminary order regarding each item of property when first party claim all the items and these items of property are claimed severally by many persons who compose the second party—Chockalingam v Negalingam, 1933 M.W.N. 1260.

Who can pass order.—The jurisdiction to make a final order under this section is not personal to the Magistrate who initiates the proceedings; and a District Magistrate may of his own motion transfer a case under this chapter to another Magistrate of the first class subordinate to him, and the latter can pass the final order—Ram Kishore v. Dwarka, 10 C.W.N. 1095; Satish v Rajendra, 22 Cal 898 (901).

But where a Magistrate who heard a case under this section handed over his charge to another Magistrate and was transferred to another district, and subsequently delivered the final order in the case, held that as soon as he handed over the charge and was transferred to another district he became functus officio and ceased to have any jurisdiction in the case. He therefore acted without jurisdiction in delivering the final order—Jagatbandhu v Jagabandhu 38 C.L.J. 201, 25 Cr L.J. 192 (following Anand Sarup, 3 A.I. 563).

"Or should be treated as being":—"We think that this sub-section should apply not only to the case of a party in actual possession but also to one who is to be treated as being in possession under the proviso to sub-section (4), and we have amended sub-section (6) in this sense"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916.

426. "May restore to possession," etc.:—"Power has been given to restore to possession a party forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed"—Statements of Objects and Reasons (1914). "We think that this is a logical carrying out of the provision contained in the first proviso to sub-section (4)"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916.

Prior to this amendment, it was held in several cases that the only order which a Magistrate was competent to pass under this section was one declaring one of the parties to be entitled to possession, but he had no jurisdiction to deliver possession, or to oust one person and place another in possession of the property—Tulsi Ram v. Abrar Ahmad, 37 All. 654; Rameshar, 27 All. 300; Sheorani v. Baj Nath, 14 A.L.J. 146, 17 Cr.L.J. 145; Moore v. Monoranjan, 12 C.W.N. 696 (699); Ranendra v. Kishori, 14 C.W.N. 78, 11 Cr.L.J. 26. These cases are no longer of any authority.

427. Order in respect of joint possession:—Where in a proceeding under sec. 145 in respect of a dispute concerning some land, the Magistrate finds that one party has been in possession of a portion of the land in dispute and the other party is in possession of the rest, and the possession of the one is not likely to interfere with the enjoyment of the possession of the remaining portion by the other, the Magistrate can, in the exercise of his jurisdiction vested in him under this section, maintain both parties in possession of their respective portions, and an order of attachment under sec. 146 is unnecessary—Kangali Das v. Muti Lal, 11 C.W.N. 743. Thus, where the Magistrate finds that each party was in possession of separate rooms in the same building, he is competent to pass an order that the separate possession of each party should continue—Devaji v. Gotha, 2 Weir 108. Where the component parts of the subject of dispute are quite divisible from each other, it is quite possible to make an order confirming the possession of one of the parties in regard to one of those parts, and it is not competent for the Magistrate to make an order for attachment of the whole property—Sadar Ali v. Abdul Karim, 5 C.W.N. 710. If, however, the subject matter of dispute is one and indivisible, the proper order to make is an order of attachment under sec. 146. Thus, in a dispute in respect of a certain colliery, it appeared that the first party was in possession of the building which contained the office where the business of the colliery was conducted and the cash-books and the papers of the business were kept, and the second party was in possession of the pits, wharves and tramway of the colliery. The Magistrate passed an order in favour of the second party considering that party to be in actual possession. It was held that as the subject matter of dispute was indivisible, and as the second party was not in possession of the whole of the colliery, the order of the Magistrate was bad, since its effect would be to place the second party in possession of that portion (viz., the building) which was in the possession of the first party. The proper order of the Magistrate was one under sec. 146 attaching the whole property—Katras Jheriah Coal Co. v. Sib Krista, 22 Cal. 297. Similarly, where there was a dispute concerning certain immovable and moveable property, the Magistrate took proceedings under this section and gave possession of the house to one party, except two rooms in which the Magistrate locked up the moveables until the rights of the parties in respect of the moveables were determined by the Civil Court, held that the order was illegal—Mahadevi v. Beni Prasad, 42 All. 214, 18 A.L.J. 171, 21 Cr.L.J. 242.

428. Effect of order:—An order under this section is passed as a result of a summary proceeding about the possession of the parties, and the aggrieved party can always have recourse to the Civil Court to establish his right—Kunj Behari, A.I.R. 1936 All. 322 (324), 1936 A.L.J. 370. An order under this section does not bar a suit for ejectment, e.g., under the Agra Tenancy Act. The expression "ejection in the due course of law" is equally applicable to ejectment proceedings under Ch. V of the Agra Tenancy Act and to ejectment under a Civil Court decree—Iqbal Ahmed v. Suraj Balli, A.I.R. 1925 All. 210, 82 I.C. 651. Although a Magistrate's order under this section confers no title, the fact of possession remains and the person in possession can only be evicted by a person who can prove a better right to possession himself—Dinomoni v. Brojo Mohini, 29 Cal 187, 29 I.A. 24, 8 Sar. 224, 6 C.W.N. 386 (P.C.). Where after the order under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., the unsuccessful party are able on some occasions either surreptitiously or forcibly to cultivate the lands, these would be no more than isolated acts of trespass—and offences punishable under sec. 188, I. P. C., but not acts amounting to the dispossession of the other side and constituting the juridical possession of the offenders unless the other side refrain from asserting their possession for a sufficiently long period and give up the protection of the order under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., in their favour. The possession of the party which succeeds in proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., cannot be put an end to by the unsuccessful party by mere violence or surreptitious invasion. The whole object of sec. 145, Cr. P. C., is to stop a breach of the peace by deciding which party is to remain on the land and which party is to seek his remedy in the Civil Court. Breaches of the peace will continue, and the object of the Legislature will be frustrated if the party who has, on the finding that he is not in possession, been forbidden to disturb the possession of the successful party until eviction in due course of law, is allowed to interfere with the possession of the successful party and to plead once more that whatever the order might have been, he is still in possession or has been able to regain possession by force, and thus either compel the successful party to go to the Civil Court or to coerce a Magistrate to proceed again under sec. 145, Cr. P. C. This will be a definite encouragement to disobedience of orders under the section—Ambika Thakur v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 611 (618), 18 Pat 544, 1939 P.W.N. 747, 41 Cr.L.J. 191, 185 I.C. 529, 21 P.L.T. 45. The order throws upon the person contending its validity the burden of proving his title. The onus is not upon the person in possession to show that the judgment in his favour is right; it is for his opponent to show that it is wrong, and where and why it is wrong—Ibid. The onus is on the plaintiff to show that the person in possession under the order of the Magistrate has no right to possession—Manindra v. Saradindu, 23 C.W.N. 593.

The fact that there is an order under this section does not bar the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to appoint a Receiver under O XL, C. P. Code, 1908. The C.P. Code and the powers of the Civil Court under that Code are in no way fettered by an order passed by a Magistrate under this section. The Magistrate's order is only intended to control any period up to the time when the Civil Court takes seisin of the matter—Barkatunnissa v. Abdul Aziz, 22 All 214.

Suit under sec. 9, Specific Relief Act—An unsuccessful party in a proceeding under this section cannot be said to have been dispossessed, and therefore he has no cause of action to bring a suit under sec. 9 of the Specific Relief Act—Moore v. Monoranjan, 12 C.W.N. 696, 7 C.L.J. 547. The defendants started proceedings under sec. 147, Cr. P. C., for a right of way over the disputed land. At the date of the proceeding there was no obstruction but during the pendency of the proceeding the plaintiffs fenced the land. The defendants obtained an order under sec. 147 in their favour and removed the fencing for exercising their right of way over the land. Whereupon the plaintiffs instituted a suit under sec. 9 of the Specific Relief Act. Held, following Moore v. Monoranjan, supra, that the suit was not entertainable as the act of the defendants in passing over the land did not amount to dispossession within the meaning of sec. 9 of the Specific Relief Act and that the plaintiffs had not been turned out and they could use the land in any beneficial way they liked provided they did not interfere with the reasonable use of the same by the defendants as a path way—Jogendra v. Birendra, A.I.R. 1935 Cal 454, 39 C.W.N. 394, 61 C.L.J. 307. But where the plaintiff was forcibly dispossessed by the defendant before the institution of proceedings under this section, and the trespasser's possession was maintained by the Magistrate, the plaintiff is entitled to sue under sec. 9 of the Specific Relief Act—Jwala v. Ganga Prasad, 30 All 331, 5 A.L.J. 297, 1908 A.W.N. 142. Where the dispossession took place long before the order of the Magistrate under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., which merely confirmed the status quo, the order is no bar to a suit under sec. 9 of the Specific Relief Act—U Kyawa Lu v. U Shwe So, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 21, 6 Rang 667, 114 I.C. 293.

Evidentiary value :—Orders of Magistrates under this section are admissible in evidence to show the fact that such orders were made. They are also evidence of the following facts all of which appear from the orders themselves, viz., who the parties in dispute were, what the land in dispute was, and who was declared entitled to retain possession. For this purpose and to this extent such orders are admissible in evidence for and against every one, when the fact of possession at the date of order has to be ascertained. If the order refers to a map, that map is admissible in evidence to render the order intelligible—Dinomoni v. Brojo Mohini, 29 Cal. 187, 6 C.W.N. 386, 29 I.A. 24 (P.C.).

As between parties to the proceeding, the order is also admissible as evidence as regards possession before 2 months from the date of the order, because if there had been a dispossession within 2 months before the date of the order, the Magistrate would have made over possession to the person dispossessed—Jogendra v. Mohima, 57 Cal. 987, 34 C.W.N. 358 (361), A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 450, 128 I.C. 251.

Where a person claiming to be a tenant under the plaintiff was found to be in possession in a proceeding under this section, the possession of the tenant, although subsequently found to be wrongful, was sufficient to destroy the adverse possession of the defendant against the plaintiff—Satulal v. Asiraddi, 38 C.W.N. 743, 61 Cal. 879, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 641, 59 C.L.J. 362, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 703.

Where in a proceeding under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., the Magistrate came to a conclusion as to possession in his final order which was, however, set aside in revision by the High Court on other grounds, his conclusion as to possession cannot be accepted in a subsequent case but his order is evidence that possession was then claimed by the complainants who alleged that they had been forcibly dispossessed and brought a complaint—Debi Singh v. Sisram, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 188 (190), 41 P.L.R. 120.

See Note 442

429. Orders which cannot be made under this section:—Where possession is found to be in one party, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to grant to the other party permission to cultivate the lands in dispute pending any suit that might be subsequently brought—Shub Churn v. Ishen, 18 W.R. 27. A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to order a division of crops on the land between the parties—Ram Narain v. Kailash, 8 C.L.J. 242. Nor can he order that a person shall be maintained in possession until he has reaped the crops and then he shall give way to another—In re Bunwari Lal, 1 C.L.J. 136.

Where a Magistrate found that the disputed land was in the possession of the second party, and declared that party to be in possession of the land, but directed that two pathways on the land should be made over to the first party, held that there was nothing in this section which gave the Magistrate power to pass an order of this kind—Asit Mohan v. Sarat Chandra, 17 C.W.N. 793, 20 I.C. 215, 14 Cr.L.J. 391. But the Bombay High Court dissents from this ruling and holds that in proceedings under this section, it is competent to the Magistrate not only to award possession of the land in dispute but also to grant a right of way to one of the parties. If the Magistrate has power to put the petitioners in possession of a certain portion of a land, he is also empowered (under sec. 147, if not under sec. 145) to give them a lesser right, viz., the right to pass over a strip in that land—In re Amarsang, 48 Bom. 512 (515), 26 Bom.L.R. 436, 26 Cr.L.J. 772, 86 I.C. 404, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 452. See also Note 470A.

A Magistrate is not competent to pass an order directing the method by which the possession is to be exercised or the agency by which the person in possession is to collect the profits—Akaloo v. Mohesh Lal, 36 Cal. 986, 11 Cr.L.J. 28. A direction requiring the party found in possession of the disputed land to restore two old cemeteries to their old state and allow access to Mussalmaus if they should desire to go near the cemetery to invoke the blessing of God is beyond the powers of the Magistrate—Balakrishna v. Jalaluddin, AIR. 1939 Mad 791, 1939 M.Cr.C. 77, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 111, 1939 M.W.N. 737, 50 M.L.W. 338, 41 Cr.L.J. 18, 184 I.C. 451, 12 R.M. 452.

Where there was a danger of the breach of the peace between two contending parties who were served with a notice under this section but a third party, although not served with a notice, appeared and filed a written statement, claiming to be in possession of a part of the disputed property and the Magistrate decided in her favour, ordering that her possession should not be disturbed till evicted by an order of a competent Court. Held that the Magistrate fell into an error and exceeded his jurisdiction as he decided questions which were not raised in the notice—Tej Bhan v. Jagdish Prasad, AIR. 1936 Oudh 188, 1935 O.W.N. 373, 1936 Cr.C. 325. An order in favour of persons who are not parties to the proceedings is without jurisdiction—Babu Ram Pandey v. Shyamdeo Narayan, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 187, 1938 P.W.N. 810, 179 I.C. 548, 40 Cr.L.J. 220.

430. Supplementary order without notice:—Proceedings under this section were drawn up in respect of certain premises consisting of a dalán, a hotel and a privy, and the Magistrate made his final order with regard to the first two. Subsequently, the omission in respect of the privy being brought to his notice by one of the parties, the Magistrate declared that party's possession of it without notice to the other party. It was held that the order in respect of the privy should not have been made without hearing the other party—Natabar v. Bireswar, 22 C.W.N. 552, 19 Cr.L.J. 732, 46 I.C. 412.

431. Order in respect of land not covered by proceedings:—In a proceeding under this section, the Magistrate is bound to ascertain and define the land in dispute, and he has no jurisdiction to pass an order in respect of lands which were not covered by the initiatory proceeding—Amruteshwari v. Darpa Naram, 7 C.W.N. 558 (561), Sukhari v. Ram Khelawan, 4 P.L.T. 372, 24 Cr.L.J. 309, 1 Pat.L.R. 255 (Cr.), AIR. 1923 Pat. 528, 72 I.C. 69; Kirpal Singh v. Hari Choudhury, AIR 1939 Pat 565, 1939 P.W.N. 392, 182 I.C. 54, 12 R.P. 5, 5 B.R. 710, 40 Cr.L.J. 629; Uttam Singh v. Jodhan Rai, 3 Pat 288 (295), 27 Cr.L.J. 220, Chaman Singh v. Cook, 11 C.W.N. xliii. See also Tej Bhan Singh v. Jagdish Prasad Singh, 37 Cr.L.J. 1058, 164 I.C. 1120, 1935 O.W.N. 373, AIR 1936 Oudh 188, 1936 Cr.C. 325, 9 R.O. 138.

432. Alteration of proceedings:—If a Magistrate, after having initiated proceedings under sec 145, afterwards finds that the dispute is as regards a right of way over a land, rather than regarding the possession of the land, he can alter the proceedings under sec 145 into proceedings under sec 147 and pass an order under the latter section—In re Amarsang, 48 Bom 512 (515), 26 Bom.L.R. 436, AIR 1924 Bom 452, 26 Cr.L.J. 772, 86 I.C. 404; Anath Bandhu v. Wahid Ali, 26 Cr.L.J. 558, 85 I.C. 654, AIR. 1925 Cal 1022. See Notes 407 and 470A.

433. Persons bound by the order:—The parties whom the Magistrate has to deal with are not merely the actual parties to, but all persons who may be concerned in, the dispute, the object being to prevent a breach of the peace. Therefore it is not only the actual parties but all parties who may have notice of the proceedings that are bound by the order—In re Nathubhai, 11 Bom.L.R. 277, 2 I.C. 513, 11 Cr.L.J. 64. This is borne out by sub-section (3) which lays down that the preliminary order must be published at some conspicuous place at or near the subject of dispute. An order under this section is binding not only on the actual parties but also on persons who, though not made parties, were aware of the proceedings and acted in collusion with the second party—Satya Charan, 33 C.W.N. 1002 (1004), AIR. 1930 Cal 63, 1930 Cr.C. 15, Ind Rul 1930 Cal 634, 31 Cr.L.J. 945, 129 I.C. 858. But see Janaki Nath, 3 C.W.N. 329 (331) where it has been laid down that one of the first principles on which Courts proceed is that judicial proceedings cannot bind a person who is not a party to them. Once a declaration has been made as regards the possession of a land, it is binding on all persons interested therein. Consequently, it is for the person who disputes that possession, whether he was a party to the proceedings or not, to institute a suit in a Civil Court—Jainath v. Ramlakhan, 10 P.L.T. 689, 30 Cr.L.J. 840 (841), 117 I.C. 643, Ind. Rul. 1929 Pat. 451, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 505; Raghunandan Pandey v. Kishin Mohan Singh, 10 P.L.T. 685, 77 I.C. 1005, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 210, 25 Cr.L.J. 541 (542). The same High Court has, however, taken a different view in Inder Deo Singh v. Kesho Singh, 39 Cr.L.J. 268, 173 I.C. 107, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 1, 18 P.L.T. 886, 4 B.R. 211, 10 R.P. 372, 1937 P.W.N. 845. See also Nepal Chandra v. Prafulla Kumar, 44 C.W.N. 928.

Where the manager of a joint family has taken proceedings under sec. 145 as the managing member, he and the whole family are bound by the order under it—Ram Sahai v. Binode Bihari, 45 All. 306, A.I.R. 1923 All. 151. An order under sec. 145 applies to any body bound by such order or any one claiming under such person. Where proceedings were taken against the plaintiffs' father alone under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., but the plaintiffs, who were the undivided sons of their father, were aware of the proceedings and the property was acquired for the joint family and the plaintiffs' father was in possession as manager on their behalf, held that the plaintiffs, who admittedly had notice of the proceedings, should also be bound by the order passed under sec. 145 Cr. P. C.—Venkatasommaraju v. Alla-i Varahalaraju, A.I.R. 1930 Mad 48, Ind. Rul. 1930 Mad 299, 52 Mad. 787, 57 M.L.J. 228, 1929 M.W.N. 518, 30 M.L.W. 201, 122 I.C. 171. See also Thakurdas v. Narayan, 38 Cr.L.J. 307 (311), 166 I.C. 709, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 192, 1936 Cr.C. 805, I.L.R. 1936 Nag. 205, 9 R.N. 144; Muneshwar Bakhsh Singh v. Gajju Singh, 39 Cr.L.J. 868, 177 I.C. 247, 1938 O.A. 635, 1938 O.W.N. 828, 1938 O.L.R. 401, 1938 A.Cr.C. 83, 11 R.O. 40.

The Oudh Chief Court and the Lahore High Court are of opinion that orders under this section are not binding on persons who are not made parties to the proceedings. See Afuqimunnissa v. Ahmedunnissa, 2 O.W.N. 704, 26 Cr.L.J. 1581; Mahesh, 11 O.L.J. 743, 26 Cr.L.J. 398; Maya Debi v. Divan Chand, A.I.R. 1935 Lah 115, 1935 Cr.C. 181. See also Peare Lal, A.I.R. 1934 All. 853, 1934 Cr.C. 1043, 1934 A.L.J. 650, 4 A.W.R. 896, A.I.R. 1934 All. 622, 152 I.C. 500, 36 Cr.L.J. 114; Muneshwar Bakhsh Singh v. Gajju Singh, supra.

An order under this section binds not only the actual parties but their representatives also. It is binding on a purchaser from the person against whom it was made and with knowledge of such order—Goluck v. Kali Charan, 13 Cal. 175. It is binding upon all persons who may claim the property through the parties to the proceedings under a title derived subsequent to the order—Jogendra v. Brojendra, 23 Cal. 731.

But a person who was merely examined as a witness in the proceeding is not bound by an order under this section—Kuppayyar, 18 Mad. 51. See also, Janoki Nath, 3 C.W.N. 329.

If a party is declared to be entitled to possession, and the world at large is forbidden to disturb his possession, he would be entitled to take possession and no one would have any right to interfere with his doing so—Bahawala v. Duni Chand, 24 Cr.L.J. 461, 72 I.C. 621 (Lah.).

433A. Disobedience of the order:—Where a complaint about the disobedience of an order under sec. 145, is made after a lapse of nine months and the reasons for the delay are given and the Magistrate is satisfied that there has been a disobedience of the order, action should not be refused—Emp. v. Zahirus Sayed Alvi, 35 Cr.L.J. 820, 16 N.L.J. 178, 148 I.C. 1014, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 114, 1934 Cr.C. 492.

434. Duration of the order:—An order of the Magistrate is meant to be only a temporary order and is to be operative until one or other of the parties obtains a determination of his rights in a Civil Court—Kunya Behari v. Khetra Pal, 29 Cal. 208 (210). It is intended to control only the period up to the time when the Civil Court takes seisin of the matter and passes such order as may be necessary for the protection of the property—Barkatunnissa v. Abdul Aziz, 22 All. 214. This section does not empower a Magistrate to make an order permanently settling the difference of the parties—Mad. High Court Pro., 23-6-1883.

Eviction in due course of law:—An order under this section lasts only until the party in whose favour it is made is evicted in due course of law. A suit for regaining possession is not in all cases necessary; an order of restitution validly made by a Court may be regarded as eviction of the person against whom the order is made—Rajjabali v. Faku, 58 Cal 1070, 35 C.W.N. 483 (486), 1932 Cr.C. 66, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 29, 134 I.C. 906.

See Note 458.

435. Sub-section (7)—Continuation of proceedings:—"The Magistrate has been authorised, on the death of a party, to make his legal representative a party to the proceedings, and if necessary, to decide who such legal representative is"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914). This clause supersedes the decision in Bechu v. Debkumari, 21 Cal. 404, where it was held that a son could not be made a party in place of his deceased father.

Where an order dropping the proceedings under this section is made merely because one of the parties to the proceedings died, the order is ultra vires and the proper course for the Magistrate on being informed of the death of one of the parties to the proceedings, is to continue the enquiry after making such substitution as might seem to him to be necessary. Fresh proceedings started thereafter are without jurisdiction and the first proceedings must be held to be still subsisting—Misl Mirdha v. Abdul Rahim, 38 C.W.N. 724, 1934 Cr.C. 1209, A.I.R. 1934 Cal 787, 36 Cr.L.J. 303, 153 I.C. 174.

The words "may cause" show that the Magistrate is not bound to continue the proceedings on the death of a party. The provision in clause (7) is intended to keep alive the jurisdiction of the Court where the danger of the peace still exists, inspite of the death of any party to the proceedings. If, however, the dispute no longer exists and the danger has disappeared, the Magistrate has jurisdiction to discontinue the proceedings—Kamalammal v. Vavu Rowther, 4 L.W. 57, 17 Cr.L.J. 138, 33 I.C. 314.

Death of Petitioner before High Court—The death of the petitioner (who applied for revision of an order of a District Magistrate) during the pendency of the application for revision in the High Court, causes the application to abate. This sub-section only applies to proceedings before a Magistrate—Krishen Deo v. Hari Singh, 1919 P.R. 23, 20 Cr.L.J. 720; Subbaraju v. Ramachandra, 4 L.W. 440, 17 Cr.L.J. 389, 35 I.C. 821.

Sub-section (8):—"The Magistrate has been empowered to pass necessary orders for the custody or sale of the property in dispute which is subject to speedy and natural decay"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914). Thus, if the subject-matter of dispute is a crop growing on the land, the Magistrate can cause the crop to be sold by auction and the price placed in deposit, as was done in Mir Singh v. Makkhan, 45 All. 404.

If the Magistrate drops the proceedings he cannot pass any orders in favour of either party, as regards the disposal of sale-proceeds of the crops raised on the land in dispute but should keep the same in deposit pending orders of a Civil Court—Narasayya v. Venkat, 49 Mad. 232, 49 M.L.J. 784, 27 Cr.L.J. 95. See Notes 420 and 424.

The word "produce" in this sub-section is necessarily confined to what is grown from the ground. It refers also to a finished article or a semi-finished article made from raw material. A sugar mill produces molasses and the molasses can be fairly called the produce of the mill. In the same way a flour mill produces flour and the flour can be considered to be the produce of a flour mill. Where, therefore, proceedings under this section were drawn up in respect of factory building including vats, the molasses in the vats can be treated as the produce of the factory within the meaning of this sub-section. The Magistrate has jurisdiction to pass orders for sale of molasses found in the vats of factory and to order for the disposal of the sale-proceeds on such terms as he thinks fit—Nihal Chand v. Jai Ram, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 165, 5 Luck. 462, 6 O.W.N. 1070, 1930 Cr.C. 257, 31 Cr.L.J. 688, 124 I.C. 441.

436. Sub-section (9):—"We have added this sub-section on the lines of section 244 (2)"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922). Even prior to this amendment there were numerous decisions empowering the Magistrate to issue summons to witnesses, which are given below.

Summons to witnesses—If the parties cannot procure the attendance of witnesses, it is the Magistrate's duty to issue summons for their attendance—Ram Chandra v. Monohur, 21 Cal 29; Surya Kanta v. Hem Chandra, 30 Cal. 508, 7 C.W.N. 404. When an application for the issue of summonses to witnesses is made at a proper time, the Magistrate should not arbitrarily refuse his assistance merely on the ground that the number of witnesses mentioned is large—Harendra v. Bhowani, 11 Cal. 762, or on the ground that the application for the issue of summonses is vexatious—Gajjudd v. Ainuddi, 18 C.W.N. 94, 22 I.C. 431, 15 Cr.L.J. 79. But it is not obligatory on a Magistrate to assist the parties in producing their witnesses, and they cannot claim as a matter of right that processes should be issued by the Court to enable them to bring forward their evidence—Taropada v. Nurul Haq, 2 C.L.J. 280, 32 Cal. 1093; Harendra v. Gvish Chandra, 38 Cal 24, 7 I.C. 798, 11 Cr.L.J. 530; Arjun v. Juggar Nath, 3 P.L.T. 433, 23 Cr.L.J. 275. A Magistrate is not bound to exhaust the processes of the Court in order to enforce the attendance of witnesses that do not appear or cannot be found—Haripada v. Sanyasi, 17 C.W.N. 144, 17 C.L.J. 610, 18 I.C. 264, 14 Cr.L.J. 40. Cf. the words "may if he thinks fit" in the sub-section. These words, however, have not been taken into account in Chakrapani, 52 All. 91, 31 Cr.L.J. 839 (840), 1930 Cr.C. 432, Ind. Rul. 1930 All. 671, A.I.R. 1930 All. 319, 1930 A.L.J. 484, 125 I.C. 463, where it has been ruled that the Magistrate is bound to summon such witnesses as may be mentioned to the Court by either party. In Chakrapani's case it was also held that after the amendment in 1923 the ruling, Taropada v. Nurul Haq, supra, is no longer good law. The view of law as laid down in Chakrapani's case was doubted and was not followed in Kunj Behari, 37 Cr.L.J. 694, 162 I.C. 736, 1936 Cr.C. 492, 58 All. 920, 1936 A.L.R. 463, 8 R.A. 892, A.I.R. 1936 All. 322, 1936 A.L.J. 370, where it was held that it could not be said, in view of the wording of sub-sec. (9), sec. 145, that the Magistrate was bound to issue process to compel the attendance of witnesses. The High Court will interfere in revision only where serious and substantial injustice has been done to the applicant for not compelling attendance of his witnesses—Kunj Behari, supra. The recent amendment to cl 4 which requires the Magistrate to receive all such evidence as may be produced by the parties and to consider the effect of such evidence, does not mean anything more than that he must receive evidence actually put before him by the parties but does not require him to summon witnesses at the instance of the parties who are unable to bring the witnesses to Court—A. Meah v. Steel Brothers & Co., Ltd., 39 Cr.L.J. 708 (710), 176 I.C. 266, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 229, 11 R.R. 40.

Where a Magistrate ignoring the evidence as a whole attached the land under sec. 146, Cr. P. C., relying exclusively on the evidence of the Superintendent of Police, was directed by the High Court to pronounce judgment after consideration of the evidence as a whole and was transferred before he could do so, his successor had no obligation upon him to summon any witnesses other than those originally produced by the parties in the proceeding—Bhupal v. Abdul Hakim, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 281, 40 Cr.L.J. 276, 179 I.C. 896, 1939 P.W.N. 155, 5 B.R. 319, 11 R.P. 423.

437. Sub-section (10)—Power to proceed under Sec. 107:—In Balajit v. Bhoju, 35 Cal. 117, it has been held that, the word "shall" in sub-section 1 ("he shall make an order in writing", etc.) is mandatory; and therefore where there is a bona fide dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace, the Magistrate is bound to proceed under this section, and he has no discretion to act under sec. 107. This decision is no longer authoritative in view of the present sub-section.

There may be cases in which it would be necessary to bind parties under sec. 107, in order to prevent a breach of the peace even though proceedings under sec. 145 had been taken. An order under sec. 145 is no bar to the passing of an order under sec. 107—In re Muthia, 36 Mad 315, 14 Cr.L.J. 559; Bandi, 24 O.C. 21, 22 Cr.L.J. 384. See Note 234.

Miscellaneous:—

438. Effect of prior decree on a proceeding under this section:—

Where there is a decree of a Civil Court for possession in respect of the disputed land, the duty of a Criminal Court proceeding under this section is to find which party held such Civil Court decree and then to maintain that party in possession. The Magistrate is not competent to ignore the decree of the Civil Court—Sims v. Johurry, 5 C.W.N. 563; Atul Hazra v. Uma Charan, 20 C.W.N. 796, 17 Cr.L.J. 182; Md. Husain v. Pachayappa, 42 M.L.J. 147; Ram Krishna, 3 P.L.T. 335, 23 Cr.L.J. 321; Kedar Nath v. Jaleswar, 4 P.L.T. 248; Kunja Behari v. Khetra Pal, 29 Cal 208 (210). It is the duty of the Magistrate to maintain any order which has been passed by the Civil Court; and therefore to take proceedings which must necessarily have the effect of modifying or cancelling such order or of interfering with the rights of parties determined by a Civil Court, is to assume a jurisdiction that the law does not contemplate—Doudat v. Rameshwari, 26 Cal 625 (628), 3 C.W.N. 461; Sims v. Johurry, 5 C.W.N. 563; In re Pandurang, 24 Bom 527 (533); Brahmanath v. Sundarnath, 17 A.L.J. 434, 20 Cr.L.J. 410; Behari Gir v. Bhubaneshwari, 1 P.L.T. 9, 5 P.L.J. 104, 21 Cr.L.J. 200; Abhoy Mandal v. Basu Rai, 27 C.W.N. 267, 37 C.L.J. 256, 73 IC 53, A.I.R. 1923 Cal 176, 24 Cr.L.J. 517; Maung Kan v. Maung Po Tok, 41 Cr.L.J. 123 (124), 185 IC 119, A.I.R. 1939 Rang 388. But see China Tambi v. Virappa, 38 Cr.L.J. 805, 169 IC 939, 10 RR 39, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 202. In a proceeding under this section, the Magistrate has no right to compel a party who has obtained a decree from a Civil Court in respect of the property in dispute to go back to the Civil Court and get something else. The Magistrate has nothing to do but to give effect to the decree of the Civil Court—Lachmi v. Partab, 27 Cr.L.J. 43, 91 IC. 75 (Oudh). The allegation that the decree was fraudulent cannot be examined in the Criminal Court. Where the decree was for confirmation of possession, the Criminal Court, in a proceeding under sec 145, Cr P C., will assume that on the date of the decree the decree-holder was in possession and that his possession has continued until the judgment-debtor in the previous suit disturbed that possession, if at all. So far as onus is concerned, it is upon the judgment-debtor to establish that he has entered into possession by some means or other since the date of the decree—Kishori v. Anand, 31 Cr.L.J. 1005, 126 IC 293, 10 P.L.T. 862, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 162, 1930 Cr.C. 258. This view has been dissented from in Raghunath Singh v. Emp., 37 Cr.L.J. 1126, 165 IC 289, A.I.R. 1936 Pat 537, 15 Pat 336, 17 P.L.T. 526, 3 BR 30, 9 RP 165, 1936 Cr.C. 915, where it has been held that the decree for confirmation of possession cannot be regarded as conclusive proof that the decree-holder was in possession on the date of the decree, although in a case under sec 145, Cr P C., since that decree presumably declared title, the presumption that possession followed title might possibly have some force. The Magistrate cannot ignore the decree of the Civil Court on the ground that the Court had no jurisdiction over the property. He cannot go behind the decision of the Civil Court and ignore the decree, even though the Court had no jurisdiction over the land. It is not for the Magistrate to put his own interpretation or construction on the decree or to question the validity of a decree that has not been set aside by a competent Court—Abhoy Mondal v. Basu Rai, 27 C.W.N. 267; Tufani v. Bibi Umatul, 5 P.L.T. 535, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 765. Thus, where in execution of a Civil Court decree in a suit in which only one of the members of a Mitakshara family was a party, the whole of the family property was delivered over to the purchaser, it was not competent to a Magistrate acting under this section to declare that the purchaser should be put into possession of fractional share and that the shares of those persons who were not made parties to the suit ought not to have been included in the decree. The Magistrate must find possession according to the decision of the Civil Court, whether it was rightly or wrongly given—Madholal v. Jaglal, 6 C.W.N. 841 (843). Where the Civil Court decree has defined the boundaries of a jalkar right, the Magistrate in instituting proceedings under this section ought to follow that decree and not to assume that the boundary has not been definitely settled by the Civil Court.

—Fani Bhusan v. Jamiruddin, 6 C.W.N. 161 (162). Where a dispute between the parties had been terminated by an order under the provision of secs. 40 and 41 of the Bengal Survey Act, and there had also been an entry in the Record of Rights in accordance with that order, the Magistrate should, in determining the question of possession between the parties in a proceeding under this section, presume that the possession of the land was with the person who had title as determined by the decision under the Survey Act, and which title was further to be presumed from the entry in the Record of Rights—Prafulla v. Hodding, 21 C.W.N. 1059, 26 C.L.J. 39, 18 Cr.L.J. 988; Srinath v. Pravat Chandra, 18 Cr.L.J. 301 (Cal.). A summary decision under the Bengal Land Registration Act is entitled to the same respect as a Civil Court decree on the question of possession, in a proceeding under this section—Kulbans v. Ramsidh, 1 P.L.T. 501, 21 Cr.L.J. 735; Babu Lal v. Manager, Bettia Estate, 1 P.L.T. 588, 21 Cr.L.J. 785, 58 I.C. 513. But if in the land-registration proceedings there was no adjudication of possession by the Revenue Courts, and they refused to register the name of a particular party, the Magistrate in a proceeding under this section is bound to determine as to which of the parties is in actual and physical possession of the property in dispute—Babu Lal v. Manager, Bettia Estate, supra.

It is nowhere laid down that possession given by the Civil Court, even though there be no overt act beyond the actual taking of possession under the orders of the Court, is ineffective to break a previous continued possession on the part of another party. For the purposes of this section a decree-holder has no advantage over anyone else except that he can date his possession from the date when the Civil Court delivered possession to him, but he must maintain that possession as any other person would have to maintain it. His possession might be lawful as against one person and unlawful as against another; but the possession is his—Hakimkhan, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 217, 152 I.C. 28, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 246, 17 N.L.J. 261, 1934 Cr.C. 988, 36 Cr.L.J. 52. When a Civil Court peon delivers possession to a person under O. XXI, r. 95, C. P. C., he gets actual possession of the property with title. It is the duty of the Criminal Court to respect, maintain and preserve such a possession. It is the duty of the Criminal Court to give all help provided by law to the man who has been put in possession of a property by the Civil Court—Mahabir, 36 Cr.L.J. 146 (150), 152 I.C. 591, 1934 Cr.C. 1218, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 565. See also Chandeshwar Prasad Narain Singh v. Dwarka Singh, 38 Cr.L.J. 1096, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 557, 1937 P.W.N. 571, 171 I.C. 593.

Where delivery of possession is given to a party under sec. 29 of the Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act (Act XI of 1859), the utmost effect of the dakhaldeshani, which is formal is that on the day of the dakhaldeshani that party must be taken to be in possession of the lands in dispute. But where there was a difference of more than two months between the date of dhakhaldeshani and the initiation of the proceedings under sec. 145 and if in the meantime in spite of the dakhaldeshani the other party have regained possession and were in peaceful possession when the proceedings started, their possession has to be maintained under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., unless it can be shown that they have obtained that possession within two months of the initiation of the proceedings by force or fraud—Gursahai v. Meghu, 36 Cr.L.J. 513 (516), 154 I.C. 426, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 83, 16 P.L.T. 19, 1934 Cr.C. 143. The effect of delivery of possession under sec. 29 of the Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act (Act XI of 1859) is to place the purchasers in actual possession of the property and is not merely to give them the right to possess.

The effect of the delivery of symbolical possession is to transfer to the purchasers the possession which was in the proprietors—Meherali v. Bidyut Baran, 37 C.W.N. 652, 1933 Cr.C. 622, 34 Cr.L.J. 810, 144 I.C. 708, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 424, following Syed Golam Barea v. Lala Deoki Nandan, 6 C.L.J. 472 (484).

Even when delivery of possession was given to one party under O. XXI, r. 95, C. P. C., the Magistrate has jurisdiction to act under sec. 145, Cr. P. C. If he decides that the other party was not dispossessed by the delivery of possession, that decision will still be a decision which he has jurisdiction to make. It may be a decision so grossly erroneous that the High Court would have no option but to interfere in revision, but the time for such interference is not at the stage when only the preliminary order under this section has been drawn up by the Magistrate—Raj Nandan v. Chhedi, 13 P.L.T. 178, 1932 Cr.C. 418, 34 Cr.L.J. 259, 142 I.C. 157, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 185, Ind. Rul. 1933 Pat. 117.

But every previous decree of a Civil Court or order of a Criminal Court is not necessarily conclusive; the evidentiary value to be attached to such a decree or order must depend upon the circumstances of each particular case—Kuloda Kinkar v. Danesh, 33 Cal. 33. No hard and fast rule can be laid down to the effect that a Magistrate in a proceeding under this section must give effect to a prior decision or order of a Civil or Criminal Court. The Magistrate is not bound to maintain the decision blindly. If he finds that after the passing of the decree the possession of the party to whom possession was delivered by the Civil Court, has been disturbed or that the property has changed hands, he has jurisdiction to pass order irrespective of the Civil Court decree—Parmeshwar v. Kailaspati, 1 P.L.J. 336, 17 Cr.L.J. 369; Bhulan v. Kumari, 5 P.L.T. 69, 25 Cr.L.J. 951; Kedar Nath v. Jaleswar, 4 P.L.T. 248, 24 Cr.L.J. 467; Ram Baran v. Sagina, 4 P.L.T. 333, 24 Cr.L.J. 939; Ranj Nandan v. Chhedi, 13 P.L.T. 178, 1932 Cr.C. 418 (419), 34 Cr.L.J. 259, 142 I.C. 157, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 185, Ind. Rul. 1933 Pat. 117. So also, it is open to a Magistrate to go behind the order passed in favour of a party under the Survey and Settlement Act and the Bengal Tenancy Act. It is also open to the Magistrate to hold that on the evidence the presumption arising from an entry in the Record of Rights has been rebutted—Syed Sadek v. Sachindra, 37 C.L.J. 128, 24 Cr.L.J. 569.

439. In order that the decree of the Civil Court may be binding on the Magistrate, three things are necessary, namely —

(1) First, the decree must be recent —It is the duty of the Magistrate to maintain the rights of the parties, when such rights have been declared by a competent Court within a time not remote from that of his taking proceedings under this section—Doulat v. Rameshwar, 26 Cal. 625 (628), 3 C.W.N. 461; Pratap v. Sundarbans, 24 Cr.L.J. 279, 3 P.L.T. 628, 71 I.C. 999, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 76; Parameshwar v. Kailashpati, 1 P.L.J. 336; Kedarnath v. Jaleswar, 4 P.L.T. 248; Rambaran v. Sagina, 4 P.L.T. 333. Thus, it is the duty of the Magistrate to have found possession in accordance with the decree of the Civil Court, when a party had been put into possession by that Court eight days prior to the institution of proceedings under this section—Gulraj v. Sheikh Bhatoo, 32 Cal. 796, 2 Cr.L.J. 761, or within three months or so—Kunja Behari v. Khetra Pal, 29 Cal. 208 (210), 6 C.W.N. 38; Durganand v. Hiranand, 25 Cr.L.J. 88, 76 I.C. 24 (Pat.).

But if the decree of a Civil Court is not recent but several years old, it would be unsafe to act on that documentary evidence alone—Booke Khan, 5 W.R. 79. A decree which is 23 years old is not conclusive as to the question of possession, because it is not absolutely impossible that the party who obtained the decree 23 years ago should have been subsequently dispossessed—Lowsen v. Kali Charan, 8 C.W.N. 719 (720). So also, with the case of a decree 17 years old—Kuloda Kinkar v. Danesh, 33 Cal. 33. Even a decree four years old is not sufficiently conclusive and the Magistrate in disregarding that decree would not be acting without jurisdiction—Matangi Charan v. Lakkan, 11 C.W.N. ccx.

(2) Secondly, the decree must have been passed between the same parties. A decree passed ex parte under which only symbolical possession was delivered or one which was not inter partes is not binding on a Criminal Court in proceedings under this section—Pronoda v. Khetra, 25 Cr.L.J. 1104 (Cal.); Atul v. Sinnath, 23 C.W.N. 982, 20 Cr.L.J. 840. But see Sims v. Johurry, 5 C.W.N. 563 where it has been laid down that it is not necessary that such decree should be a decree for possession as between the parties to the proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. C.

(3) Thirdly, the decree or order of the Court must give possession —Possession must have been given to one of the parties either by the decree itself, or by an order of the Court in execution of the decree (e.g., to an auction-purchaser). See Guru Das v. Weatheral, 13 C.W.N. 601 (604), 11 Cr.L.J. 7, 4 I.C. 537.

Where the Civil Court deals only with the question of proprietaryship of land, the decree of such Court will not bar a Magistrate from deciding the question of possession under this section—Baldeo v. Raj Ballam, 2 A.L.J. 274, 2 Cr.L.J. 236; Shriram v. Samirmal, 29 Cr.L.J. 902, 111 I.C. 662, A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 284, 24 N.L.R. 148. Under sec. 145, the Magistrate has to make an inquiry as to possession, which may be quite contrary to title supported by a decree of a Civil Court—In re Anya Shidiya, 29 Bom. L.R. 715, 28 Cr.L.J. 578 (579), A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 654. So also, where the suit in which the decree was passed was merely one for damages, in which the determination of title was incidentally necessary, but the suit was neither for possession nor for declaration of title, the decree in such suit was not conclusive as to possession and the Magistrate was competent to take proceedings under this section; see Subbarama v. Mariya, 1914 M.W.N. 798, 1 L.W. 493, 15 Cr.L.J. 559; Shriram v. Samirmal, 24 N.L.R. 148, 29 Cr.L.J. 902 (903); Baldeo Baksh Singh v. Raj Ballam Singh, 2 A.L.J. 274, 2 Cr.L.J. 236. So also, where the question of possession was raised by the parties but was neither fought out between them nor decided by the Court, the decree would not bar a proceeding under this section—Annaswamy v. Multhu Kumara, 15 Cr.L.J. 663 (Mad.).

There must be actual delivery of possession under the decree or order of the Civil Court. Where merely the sale was confirmed and the sale certificate issued, but there was no delivery of possession, actual or symbolical, to the petitioners, their rights were not protected from proceedings under this section—Ragava v. Krishnasami, 31 Mad. 416, 8 Cr.L.J. 312. Thus, where in spite of a formal order for delivery of possession passed under O XXI, r. 35, C.P. Code in favour of a party, the Magistrate found that physical possession did not pass to that party, he was entitled to institute proceedings under section 145—Raj Nandan v. Chhedi, 13 P.L.T. 178, 1932 Cr.C. 418 (419). Symbolical possession given to the purchaser would raise the presumption that the purchaser had possession, although it may be that slight evidence would suffice to rebut that presumption—Raja Babu v. Muddun Mohan, 14 Cal. 169. It is for the other party to show that they subsequently came into possession by some lawful means—Chandeshwar Prasad Narayan Singh v. Darka Singh, 38 Cr.L.J. 1096, 171 I.C. 593, 1937 P.W.N. 571, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 557, 4 B.R. 41, 10 R.P. 223. So, where it was found that in spite of symbolical possession being given to one party, the other party continued in possession, the Magistrate had to determine who was in actual possession and it was no part of his duty to protect the symbolical possession given by the Civil Court—Ambar Ali v. Piran Ali, 55 Cal. 826, 32 C.W.N. 275, 29 Cr.L.J. 503. See Note 418, ante.

Where an order (of a Criminal Court) under section 522 of this Code was passed, directing restoration of immoveable property, but possession as a fact was never delivered to the petitioners, such infructuous order would not bar the jurisdiction of the Magistrate in taking proceedings under this section in respect of the same property—Probhat v. Prosanna, 18 C.W.N. 1088, 15 Cr.L.J. 700.

See Note 418.

Effect of previous decree on third party :—Where in a proceeding under this section it appeared that the first party had previously brought a suit for rent against some persons (tenants) not parties to the proceeding and purchased the disputed properties at a sale held in execution of an ex parte decree obtained therein, and had been put in possession without the knowledge of the second party, and the Magistrate found that the rent suit brought by the landlord against the tenants in possession was not a bona fide one and declared the second party to be in possession of the disputed land, it was held that under the circumstances of the case the order of the Magistrate was not erroneous and was not liable to be set aside. Decree of Courts so far as third parties are concerned may have different value in different cases. Where, for instance, there has been a real contest between the parties to a suit, and upon an adjudication regarding title or possession a party has been awarded a decree and has been put in possession in execution of such a decree, it would be conclusive upon any person even though he was not a party to the decree. But cases of money decrees followed by sale of property would stand on a different footing. In these cases, the sale in execution only passed the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor, consequently, there is no adjudication regarding title to property, and therefore, it is not conclusive upon a third person as regards possession or title—Atul v. Srinath, 23 C.W.N. 982 (1985), 30 C.L.J. 123, 20 Cr.L.J. 840.

In estimating the value of delivery of possession against third parties it is also material to see what is the true nature of the possession said to have been delivered—Atul v. Srinath, 23 C.W.N. 982 (1985).

See Note 418.

440. Effect of previous decision of Criminal Courts as to possession:—In proceedings under sec. 145, the Magistrates have always upheld the previous possession given by Civil Courts. But possession given by previous orders of Criminal Courts cannot be treated in the same manner—Kedar v. Laht, 2 Cr.L.J. 512, 2 C.L.J. 147. A Magistrate does not act without jurisdiction merely because he does not accept the decision in a previous case of rioting as to possession—Bhulan v. Kumari, 5 P.L.T. 69, 25 Cr.L.J. 951; or in a previous case of trespass under sec. 447, I. P. C., as to possession—44 IC 741, 3 UBR 33 (1917), 19 Cr.L.J. 389. A judgment of a Criminal Court in which a person was acquitted and in which it was incidentally found that he was in possession, can only be evidence of the fact there was such a case and that it ended in such acquittal, but the finding on the question of possession which is a ground of such acquittal, can hardly be any evidence in subsequent proceedings between the parties with regard to the property in dispute—Shashimukhi v. Sarat Chandra, 31 C.W.N. 201, 45 C.L.J. 537, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 337, 28 Cr.L.J. 329 (331). Such a decision is not conclusive as to possession and can in no sense be said to have settled the dispute between the parties, so as to put a stop to the trouble and consequent breach of the peace. It can, however, be treated as a piece of evidence of possession quantum valebat in the case—Abdul Shakur v. Abu Sayeed, 26 Cr.L.J. 870, 86 IC 806, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 593, 6 P.L.T. 710.

But possession given by a Magistrate in a previous proceeding taken under sec. 145 would be conclusive in a subsequent proceeding freshly instituted under sec. 145 against the same parties, and the Magistrate was not entitled to take any action contrary to the previous decision, unless he found that there had been a change of possession since the decision of the first case—Jagat Singh v. Sunder Singh, 27 P.L.R. 630, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 479, 95 IC 479, 27 Cr.L.J. 815; Elmuddin v. Umed Ali, 63 C.L.J. 7, 38 Cr.L.J. 79, 165 IC 878, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 659, 1936 Cr.C. 881, 9 RC 462. The fact that the Magistrate who disposed of the previous proceedings was a different officer from the Magistrate who passed the order in the latter case, makes not the slightest difference—U Thi Ha v. Maung Ngai, 37 Cr.L.J. 92, 159 IC 308, 1935 Cr.C. 1243, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 447, 13 Rang. 302.

The Magistrate is, however, not bound to make a declaration in favour of the first party on the basis of a previous sec. 145 proceeding in course of which they obtained an order in their favour, when in those proceedings the second party admittedly had no concern. The Magistrate has to come to a decision as to the fact of possession on the evidence before him. He may take into consideration as part of that evidence the fact that the first party obtained a decision in the previous sec. 145 case, but he must also take into consideration the other evidence of possession given by both the parties and come to a decision accordingly—Nepal Chandra v. Prafulla Kumar, 44 C.W.N. 928.

The possession which a party obtained from the Civil Court, and the declaration that he was in possession which was subsequently afforded him by a Magistrate under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., continues and is not lost or disturbed merely because the sons of the judgment-debtor trespass on the land and plough it. It cannot be said that, if trespassers obtain possession for a sufficient length of time to sow crops themselves, they have then established a title to remain in possession and are not amenable to the sanctions of the criminal law—Thakurdas v. Narayan, A.I.R. 1936 Nag 192 (196), 38 Cr.L.J. 307, 166 I.C. 709, 1936 Cr.C. 805, I.L.R. 1936 Nag 205, 9 R.N. 144.

But an order made in the previous proceeding under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., does not and cannot legally bar the initiation of a fresh proceeding under the same section, if there be reasonable grounds for such initiation, as contemplated by law, the question to be taken into consideration by a Criminal Court under sec. 145 being the question as to the present possession of the parties concerned—Haripado v. Dhani Ahamad, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 494, 1935 Cr.C. 886, 157 I.C. 674. See Note 444.

See also Probhat v. Prosanna in Note 439

441. Suit for damages for improper proceedings:—Where proceedings are initiated under this section by a party who is eventually unsuccessful, it is open to the successful party to sue for damages. The damages in such a case are remote and are sufficiently compensated by any order for costs that might be made in the proceedings—Ram Das v. Md Faqir, 20 A.L.J. 205, A.I.R. 1922 All 143. But see Rani Mina Kumari v. Surendra Narain in Note 459.

442. Effect of order on subsequent civil suit:—An order under this section does not decide any question of title. Therefore, where a case under section 145 was compromised by the parties, and the Magistrate passed an order in terms of that compromise, it was held that the order simply settled the question of possession but did not determine the question of title, and the parties were not therefore precluded by the order from having recourse to the Civil Court for the determination of that question—Gopi Das v. Madho Lal, 45 All 162, 20 A.L.J. 932, A.I.R. 1923 All 77.

The judgment of the Criminal Court under this section is evidence of possession in a subsequent civil suit. But the statements of witnesses in the criminal case cannot be admitted in evidence unless they are examined by the Civil Court and those statements are put to them and duly proved—Sheikh Barkat Ali v. Basant Nunia, 21 C.W.N. 175 (177), 39 I.C. 356.

See Note 428

443. Effect of order on a subsequent criminal case:—Although the Magistrate may declare a certain party to be in possession of a certain field, the other party on being subsequently charged under sec. 379, I. P. Code for carrying away the crops of the field may show by adducing evidence that he was in actual possession of the field, in spite of the order under sec. 145 declaring the first party in possession—Rakhal v. Makhani, 31 C.W.N. 964, 28 Cr.L.J. 827, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 701, 104 I.C. 443. But see Ambika Thakur v. Emp, A.I.R. 1939 Pat 611 (618), 18 Pat. 544, 1939 P.W.N. 747 where this view of law was not followed.

Limitation for subsequent civil suit:—See Art 47, Indian Limitation Act.

443A. Effect of the pendency of a Civil Suit:—Where during the pendency of proceedings under this section a suit for declaration of title to and possession of the disputed properties is instituted in a Civil Court and the Civil Court appoints a Receiver, held that it would be a sheer waste of public time to allow two parallel proceedings to go on simultaneously, one in the Civil Court, and the other in the Criminal Court and evidence being led by the parties in both cases in support of their possession, that the mere institution of the suit in the Civil Court would not by itself have been sufficient to justify the dropping of proceedings under sec. 145, if there was a danger of a breach of the peace which can best be averted by summary proceedings under sec. 115, but the order of the Civil Court appointing a Receiver removes all such danger and that the only proper course would be to drop the proceedings under sec. 145, in order to avoid unnecessary harassment to the parties and useless waste of time, money and energy. The High Court quashed proceedings in this case in exercise of the inherent powers vested in it under sec 561A, Cr. P. C.—Makhna v. Kamla Pat, 36 Cr.L.J. 461, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 255, 1935 O.W.N. 239, 154 I.C. 121, 1935 O.L.R. 112. See also Ramchandra v. Shankarrao, 33 Cr.L.J. 556, 138 I.C. 38, Ind. Rul. 1932 Nag

71, 15 N.L.R. 28, 1932 Cr.C. 433, A.I.R. 1932 Nag 83 where proceedings were drawn up under sec. 147, Cr. P. Code.

When a civil suit is pending for the determination of the rights of the parties it is not proper to start proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. C.—Ali Mohammad v. Fakiruddin, 24 C.W.N. 1039 (1048), 22 Cr.L.J. 131, 59 I.C. 643, 32 C.L.J. 255. The Criminal Court should not interfere at a time when questions about delivery of possession were pending before the Civil Court—Rajendra Narayan v. Chintamani, A.I.R. 1939 Pat 151, 1938 P.W.N. 526, 19 P.L.T. 632. But it is nowhere laid down that a Magistrate has no jurisdiction to proceed under sec. 145 with regard to properties that may be the subject of civil proceedings. Such proceedings certainly cannot take away the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to initiate proceedings under sec. 145, if he finds reasonable grounds for apprehending that without such proceedings a breach of the peace may be caused—Kishori Lal v. Srimath, 36 Cal 370 (372), 13 C.W.N. 530, 9 Cr.L.J. 399, 1 I.C. 817.

Where the opponent instituted a suit in the Civil Court and obtained an interim injunction against the applicant restraining her from taking possession of the disputed property at the very last moment, held that it would be unfair to allow the opponent all the advantage of his forcible and wrongful dispossession, merely because he has, since the Magistrate's findings gone to the Civil Court, almost at the very last minute before the matter came before the High Court for final orders and that the advantage should, under the decision of the Magistrate as finally settled by the High Court, be given to the applicant, and any subsequent civil suit ought to start on the basis of her having obtained that advantage. However, to avoid conflict of judicial decisions the High Court adjourned the case for three weeks during which the interim injunction was dissolved by the Civil Court and thereafter directed the Magistrate to restore possession of the disputed property to the applicant—Bai Jiba v. Chandulal, 27 Cr.L.J. 661 (665), 94 I.C. 709, 27 Bom.L.R. 1935, A.I.R. 1926 Bom 91.

See also Note 428

444. Fresh proceedings:—If proceedings are cancelled by the Magistrate under clause (5) owing to there being no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace, it does not preclude him from instituting fresh proceedings, upon a fresh dispute arising between the parties—Sadhu v. Mahamad, 15 C.W.N. 568 (569), 12 Cr.L.J. 32, 9 I.C. 167. But the fresh proceedings must be started upon fresh materials, and cannot stand upon the basis of the earlier proceedings—Tarini v. Amulya, 20 Cal 867; Manik v. Azimuddin, 6 C.W.N. 923; Khubi v. Darbari, 2 P.L.T. 267, 22 Cr.L.J. 481; Ghulam Md., 3 Lah. 401, 24 Cr.L.J. 160, A.I.R. 1923 Lah 81, 71 I.C. 512. When a party has been declared to be in possession as a result of proceedings under sec. 145, fresh proceedings under the same section cannot be started against him, unless it is shown that the previous order has been duly vacated. But subsequent proceedings can be started and a fresh order made in respect of properties other than the one comprised in the first order—Bajji Lal v. Harakh Singh, 1 P.L.T. 557, 21 Cr.L.J. 753.

But although fresh proceedings under sec. 145 can be started upon fresh materials, still it is not the proper course for a Magistrate to do so. It is his duty to see the previous order is obeyed and the possession adjudged under that order is not disturbed. If there is a fresh dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace, the Magistrate has ample powers under the law to maintain peace. But if he goes on to start proceedings under sec. 145 afresh, the result will be that the binding effect of an order under sec. 145 would be disregarded and any number of proceedings may be initiated by any disappointed party leading to no result whatsoever—Arjun v. Hara Sundar, 27 C.W.N. 171 (173), 24 Cr.L.J. 97, 37 C.L.J. 39, A.I.R. 1923 Cal 95, 71 I.C. 225. See also Elibuddin v. Umed Ali, 38 Cr.L.J. 79, 165 I.C. 878, A.I.R. 1936 Cal 659, 1936 Cr.C. 881, 9 R.C. 462, 63 C.L.J. 7. A temporary change in the character of the land cannot nullify the previous order passed with regard to it, so as to entitle a Magistrate to start fresh proceedings—ibid. Once proceedings with regard to land have been taken under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., and possession declared, then it is the duty of the Court to uphold that order and not to enter upon any further enquiry under that section—Jainath v. Ramlakhan, 30 Cr.L.J. 840, 117 I.C. 643, 10 P.L.T. 689, AIR 1929 Pat. 505, Ind. Rul. 1929 Pat. 451; Raghunandan Pandey v. Kishin Mohan Singh, 10 P.L.T. 685, 77 I.C. 1005, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 210, 25 Cr.L.J. 541. But actual possession of a person who was no party to a previous proceeding under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., should not be ignored when there is a dispute in fact about the possession and the Magistrate must proceed under this section—Inder Deo Singh v. Kesho Singh, 39 Cr.L.J. 268 (272), 173 I.C. 107, 1937 P.W.N. 845, 18 P.L.T. 886, 4 B.R. 211, 10 R.P. 372, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 1; Ambika Thakur v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 611 (619), 18 Pat. 544, 1939 P.W.N. 747, 41 Cr.L.J. 191 (198), 185 I.C. 529, 21 P.L.T. 45.

See Note 440. See also Note 393.

Power of High Court—The High Court cannot direct the revival of proceedings under sec. 145, when they have been stayed by the Magistrate—Manindra v. Barada Kanta, 30 Cal. 112

445. Further Inquiry:—Section 437 (now 436) allows a further inquiry into a complaint, which means under sec. 4 (h) a complaint of an 'offence'; and since sec. 145 is not directed to any offence at all, sec. 436 does not authorise a District Magistrate or Sessions Judge to order a further inquiry into a case under sec. 145—Chathu v. Niranjan, 20 Cal. 729. All that he can do in revision is to make a reference to the High Court under sec. 439. Section 436 gives him no power to direct a further enquiry into the matter—Maung San E v. Maung Mye Du, 30 Cr.L.J. 709, 117 I.C. 59, AIR 1928 Rang. 292, Ind. Rul. 1929 Rang. 171.

446. Review:—There is no authority for holding that a Magistrate can review a final order passed by himself or by his predecessor under this section—Parbutty v. Sajjad Ahmad, 35 Cal. 350, 12 C.W.N. 605, 7 Cr.L.J. 401; Ram Dulare v. Ajodhya, 16 O.C. 192, 14 Cr.L.J. 605; Narayan v. Chandrabhaga, 26 Cr.L.J. 1289, 89 I.C. 153, AIR 1925 Nag. 457; Lallan v. Ram Richcha, 48 All. 258, 24 A.L.J. 227, 27 Cr.L.J. 466; U Thi Ha v. Maung Ngai, AIR 1935 Rang. 477, 13 Rang. 302. The remedy of the person aggrieved is to go to the Civil Court—Lallan v. Ram Richcha (supra).

See Note 407 under the heading "Setting aside of ex parte order".

447. Revision:—Under sub-section (3) of section 435, before it was omitted by the Amendment Act of 1923, proceedings under this Chapter were not liable to revision by any Court, whether by the High Court or by the Sessions Judge or by the District Magistrate; so that the High Court in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction under section 439 of this Code was not competent to revise an order passed under this Chapter—Laldhari v. Sukdeo, 27 Cal. 892; In re Pandurang, 25 Bom. 179; Kamal Kuttly v. Udayvarma, 36 Mad. 275; Maharaj Tewari v. Har Charan, 26 All. 144; Jhingai v. Ram Partap, 31 All. 150; Syeda v. Lal Singh, 36 All. 233; Nathu Ram, 15 A.L.J. 270; Har Han v. Natha Lal, 18 A.L.J. 1140; Ibadulla v. Rahatulla, 18 O.C. 69, 16 Cr.L.J. 541; Balmukund v. Crown, 1 S.L.R. 50; Farid v. Piru, 8 S.L.R. 207.

In order to exercise its revisional power in respect of order passed under this Chapter, the High Court had to invoke the aid of sec. 15 of the Charter Act—Hurbullubh v. Luchmeswar, 26 Cal. 188; Laldhari v. Sukdeo, 27 Cal. 892; Sukhlal v. Tarachand, 33 Cal. 68; Sri Mohan v. Marasingh, 27 Cal. 259; Jagamohan v. Ram Kumar, 28 Cal. 416; In re Nathu Lal, 24 All. 315; or sec. 107 of the Government of India Act—Nathu Ram, 15 A.L.J. 270, 18 Cr.L.J. 557; Parameswari v. Kaliashpati, 1 P.L.J. 336; Thylae v. Srirangaraya, 43 M.L.J. 624; Moiram v. Brijan, 47 Cal. 438; Ali Md. v. Piggot, 48 Cal. 522. But this power could be exercised only by the Chartered High Courts, and not by the non-chartered High Courts, e.g., the Chief Courts and the Judicial Commissioner's Courts.

The only cases in which the High Court could exercise its powers of revision under sec. 439 were those in which the proceedings, though purporting to be proceedings under this Chapter, were not really so; as for instance where there was an initial want of jurisdiction by reason of there being no dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace, or by reason of the Magistrate not being a first class Magistrate, or where the Magistrate exceeded his jurisdiction by exercising powers not conferred by this section—In re Pandurang, 24 Bom 527; In re Pandurang, 25 Bom 179 (186); Mahadeo v. Basu, 25 All 537 (538); Thyalce v. Sriangaraya, 43 MLJ 624; Udai Bhan v. Ram Samujh, 19 O.C. 135, 18 Cr L.J. 100. And unless there was want of jurisdiction on the part of the Magistrate, the High Court could not exercise its power of revision even though the decision of the Magistrate was wrong—Chintamani v. Jagannath, 19 C.W.N. 123 (124); Iklas v. Raghuraj, 12 O.C. 400, 11 Cr L.J. 69.

Now, by the Amendment Act XVIII of 1923, sub-section (3) of section 435 has been omitted, and the effect of this amendment is to confer on the High Court the power of revision under this Code in respect of orders under this Chapter. These orders can now be revised by the High Court not only on the question of jurisdiction but also on the ground that they are illegal or erroneous—Chhakauri v. Isher Singh, 6 P.L.T. 799, 27 Cr.L.J. 142; Chinnappaeddigari v. Mala Dasari, 31 Cr.L.J. 190, 120 I.C. 895, 1929 M.W.N. 708, AIR 1929 Mad 847, 31 M.L.W. 104; Raj Nandan v. Chhedi, 13 P.L.T. 178, 1932 Cr.C. 418 (421), 34 Cr.L.J. 259, 142 I.C. 157, A.I.R. 1932 Pat 185, Ind Rul. 1933 Pat 117.

But though the High Court is invested with powers of revision, still orders passed by a competent Magistrate are not to be lightly interfered with by the High Court except in exceptional cases; first, because the object of such orders is to preserve peace, and secondly, because the aggrieved party has his remedy by a civil suit—Krishnappier v. Alamelu, 5 L.W. 165, 18 Cr.L.J. 23; In re Lingaraja, 17 Cr.L.J. 143 (Mad); Hardeo v. Ram Charitar, 17 Cr.L.J. 286 (Pat). Proceedings under this chapter are of a special nature, and are such that the Magistrate may be allowed greater liberty in carrying out those provisions than they are allowed in trying ordinary crime, because upon the Magistrate and the police is thrown the burden of maintaining the public peace. In this view, it is undesirable that such orders should be interfered with in revision, unless they are made without jurisdiction and are obviously unreasonable or unjust—Sudalaimuthu v. Enan, 16 Cr.L.J. 767 (Mad). Where a Magistrate duly empowered to act under this Chapter takes proper proceedings and passes an order, the High Court has no power to revise the proceedings either under this Code or under sec. 15 of the Charter Act—Jhنگar v. Ram Pratab, 31 All 150; or under sec. 107 of the Government of India Act—Matukdhari v. Jaisari, 39 All 612, 15 A.L.J. 576; Sundar Nath, 40 All 364; Sakhawat, 17 A.L.J. 321, 41 All 302. Thus, the High Court as a Court of Revision cannot interfere with the decision of a trial Court on the fact of possession so long as there is evidence in support of the finding—Abdul Satar v. Udha Lal, 27 P.L.R. 102, 27 Cr.L.J. 471, 93 I.C. 695. Where the evidence had been fully discussed by the trial Court, any attempt on the part of the High Court to review the evidence and interfere with the decision of the Magistrate, would be to convert an application for revision into an appeal—Abdul Satar v. Udha Lal, (supra). It is seldom that the High Court interferes on facts with an order passed under secs. 145 and 146—Sandi v. Sukhlal, 35 Cr.L.J. 611, 148 I.C. 198, AIR 1934 Pat 33. See also Ram Satoop v. Khurram Singh, 35 Cr.L.J. 1056, 150 I.C. 143, 11 O.W.N. 375, AIR 1934 Oudh 158, 1934 Cr.C. 502. The High Court does not interfere in revision with orders under sec. 145, Cr.P.C., on the merits as a rule—Babu Ram Pandey v. Shyamdeo Narayan, 40 Cr.L.J. 220, AIR, 1939 Pat 187, 1938 P.W.N. 810, 179 I.C. 548; Guruditta v. Taja, AIR 1939 Lah 108, I.L.R. 1938 Lah 611, 40 Cr.L.J. 519, 181 I.C. 59, 41 P.L.R. 217. Where the decision of the Magistrate is grossly erroneous, the High Court would have no option but to interfere in revision—Raj Nandan v. Chhedi, supra.

It is the practice of the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court that it will not interfere with proceedings of Magistrates under Chap. XII in which sec. 145 comes, merely because the Judges would have exercised their discretion differently upon the facts, because proceedings under this Chapter are proceedings only of a quasi-judicial nature. They are temporary and emergent in their nature, and it is generally conceded that Magistrates on the spot are in a better position to judge of the true state of affairs than Judges in Courts many miles away. But where it is shown that there is a section—Jamath v. Ramlakhan, 30 Cr.L.J. 840, 117 I.C. 643, 10 P.L.T. 689, 1929 Pat. 505, Ind. Rul. 1929 Pat. 451; Raghubandan Pandey v. Kishin Moha, 10 P.L.T. 685, 77 I.C. 1005, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 210, 25 Cr.L.J. 541. But actual po. of a person who was no party to a previous proceeding under sec. 145, Cr. P. should not be ignored when there is a dispute in fact about the possession and the Magistrate must proceed under this section—Inder Deo Singh v. Kesho Singh, 3 Cr.L.J. 268 (272), 173 I.C. 107, 1937 P.W.N. 845, 18 P.L.T. 886, 4 B.R. 211, 10 R.P. 372, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 1; Ambika Thakur v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 611 (619), 18 Pat. 544, 1939 P.W.N. 747, 41 Cr.L.J. 191 (198), 185 I.C. 529, 21 P.L.T. 45.

See Note 440 See also Note 393.

Power of High Court :—The High Court cannot direct the revival of proceedings under sec. 145, when they have been stayed by the Magistrate—Manmunda v. Barada Kanta, 30 Cal. 112.

445. Further Inquiry :—Section 437 (now 436) allows a further inquiry into a complaint, which means under sec. 4 (h) a complaint of an 'offence'; and since sec. 145 is not directed to any offence at all, sec. 436 does not authorise a District Magistrate or Sessions Judge to order a further inquiry into a case under sec. 145—Chathu v. Niranjana, 20 Cal. 729. All that he can do in revision is to make a reference to the High Court under sec. 439. Section 436 gives him no power to direct a further enquiry into the matter—Maung San E v. Maung Mye Du, 30 Cr.L.J. 709, 117 I.C. 59, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 292, Ind. Rul. 1929 Rang. 171.

446. Review :—There is no authority for holding that a Magistrate can review a final order passed by himself or by his predecessor under this section—Parbatty v. Sajjad Ahmad, 35 Cal. 350, 12 C.W.N. 605, 7 Cr.L.J. 401; Ram Dulare v. Ajodhya, 16 O.C. 192, 14 Cr.L.J. 605; Narayan v. Chandrabhaga, 26 Cr.L.J. 1289, 89 I.C. 153, A.I.R. 1925 Nag. 457; Lallan v. Ram Richcha, 48 All. 258, 24 A.L.J. 227, 27 Cr.L.J. 466; U Thi Ha v. Maung Ngai, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 477, 13 Rang. 302. The remedy of the person aggrieved is to go to the Civil Court—Lallan v. Ram Richcha (supra).

See Note 407 under the heading "Setting aside of ex parte order".

447. Revision :—Under sub-section (3) of section 435, before it was omitted by the Amendment Act of 1923, proceedings under this Chapter were not liable to revision by any Court, whether by the High Court or by the Sessions Judge or by the District Magistrate; so that the High Court in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction under section 439 of this Code was not competent to revise an order passed under this Chapter—Laldhari v. Sukdeo, 27 Cal. 892; In re Pandurang, 25 Bom. 179; Kamall Kutty v. Udayvarma, 36 Mad. 275; Maharaj Tewari v. Har Charan, 26 All. 141; Jhingai v. Ram Partap, 31 All. 150; Syeda v. Lal Singh, 36 All. 233; Nathu Ram, 15 A.L.J. 270; Har Hari v. Natha Lal, 18 A.L.J. 1140; Ibadulla v. Rahatulla, 18 O.C. 69, 16 Cr.L.J. 541; Balmukund v. Crown, 1 S.L.R. 50; Farid v. Piru, 8 S.L.R. 207.

In order to exercise its revisional power in respect of order passed under this Chapter, the High Court had to invoke the aid of sec. 15 of the Charter Act—Hurbullubh v. Luchmeswar, 26 Cal. 188; Laldhari v. Sukdeo, 27 Cal. 892; Sukhlal v. Tarachand, 33 Cal. 68; Sri Mohan v. Marasingh, 27 Cal. 259; Jagamahan v. Ram Kumar, 28 Cal. 416; In re Nathu Lal, 24 All. 315; or sec. 107 of the Government of India Act—Nathu Ram, 15 A.L.J. 270, 18 Cr.L.J. 557; Parameswari v. Kaliashpati, 1 P.L.J. 336; Thylae v. Srirangaraya, 43 M.L.J. 624; Moiram v. Brijan, 47 Cal. 438; Ali Md. v. Piggot, 48 Cal. 522. But this power could be exercised only by the Chartered High Courts, and not by the non-chartered High Courts, e.g., the Chief Courts and the Judicial Commissioner's Courts.

The only cases in which the High Court could exercise its powers of revision under sec. 439 were those in which the proceedings, though purporting to be proceedings under this Chapter, were not really so; as for instance where there was an initial want of jurisdiction by reason of there being no dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace, or by reason of the Magistrate not being a first class Magistrate, or where the Magistrate exceeded his jurisdiction by exercising powers not conferred by this section—In re Pandurang, 24 Bom 527; In re Pandurang, 25 Bom. 179 (186); Mahadeo v. Basu, 25 All 537 (538); Thyalee v. Srirangaraya, 43 M.L.J. 624; Udai Bhan v. Ram Samujh, 19 O.C. 135, 18 Cr.L.J. 100. And unless there was want of jurisdiction on the part of the Magistrate, the High Court could not exercise its power of revision even though the decision of the Magistrate was wrong—Chintamani v. Jagannath, 19 C.W.N. 123 (124); Iklas v. Raghuraj, 12 O.C. 400, 11 Cr.L.J. 69.

Now, by the Amendment Act XVIII of 1923, sub-section (3) of section 435 has been omitted, and the effect of this amendment is to confer on the High Court the power of revision under this Code in respect of orders under this Chapter. These orders can now be revised by the High Court not only on the question of jurisdiction but also on the ground that they are illegal or erroneous—Chhakauri v. Isher Singh, 6 P.L.T. 799, 27 Cr.L.J. 142; Chinnappaeddigari v. Mala Dasari, 31 Cr.L.J. 190, 120 I.C. 895, 1929 M.W.N. 708, A.I.R. 1929 Mad 847, 31 M.L.W. 104; Raj Nandan v. Chhedi, 13 P.L.T. 178, 1932 Cr.C. 418 (421), 34 Cr.L.J. 259, 142 I.C. 157, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 185, Ind. Rul. 1933 Pat. 117.

But though the High Court is invested with powers of revision, still orders passed by a competent Magistrate are not to be lightly interfered with by the High Court except in exceptional cases; first, because the object of such orders is to preserve peace, and secondly, because the aggrieved party has his remedy by a civil suit—Krishnappier v. Alamelu, 5 L.W. 165, 18 Cr.L.J. 23; In re Lingaraja, 17 Cr.L.J. 143 (Mad); Hardeo v. Ram Charitar, 17 Cr.L.J. 286 (Pat). Proceedings under this chapter are of a special nature, and are such that the Magistrate may be allowed greater liberty in carrying out those provisions than they are allowed in trying ordinary crime, because upon the Magistrate and the police is thrown the burden of maintaining the public peace. In this view, it is undesirable that such orders should be interfered with in revision, unless they are made without jurisdiction and are obviously unreasonable or unjust—Sudalaimuthu v. Enan, 16 Cr.L.J. 767 (Mad.). Where a Magistrate duly empowered to act under this Chapter takes proper proceedings and passes an order, the High Court has no power to revise the proceedings either under this Code or under sec. 15 of the Charter Act—Jhungai v. Ram Pratap, 31 All 150; or under sec. 107 of the Government of India Act—Matukdhari v. Jaisari, 39 All 612, 15 A.L.J. 576; Sundar Nath, 40 All 364; Sakhawat, 17 A.L.J. 321, 41 All 302. Thus, the High Court as a Court of Revision cannot interfere with the decision of a trial Court on the fact of possession so long as there is evidence in support of the finding—Abdul Satar v. Udha Lal, 27 P.L.R. 102, 27 Cr.L.J. 471, 93 I.C. 695. Where the evidence had been fully discussed by the trial Court, any attempt on the part of the High Court to review the evidence and interfere with the decision of the Magistrate, would be to convert an application for revision into an appeal—Abdul Satar v. Udha Lal, (supra). It is seldom that the High Court interferes on facts with an order passed under secs. 145 and 146—Sandi v. Sukhlal, 35 Cr.L.J. 611, 148 I.C. 193, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 33. See also Ram Saroop v. Khurram Singh, 35 Cr.L.J. 1056, 150 I.C. 143, 11 O.W.N. 375, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 158, 1934 Cr.C. 502. The High Court does not interfere in revision with orders under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., on the merits as a rule—Babu Ram Pandey v. Shyamdeo Narayan, 40 Cr.L.J. 220, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 187, 1938 P.W.N. 810, 179 I.C. 548; Guruditta v. Taja, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 108, 1 I.L.R. 1938 Lah. 611, 40 Cr.L.J. 519, 181 I.C. 59, 41 P.L.R. 217. Where the decision of the Magistrate is grossly erroneous, the High Court would have no option but to interfere in revision—Raj Nandan v. Chhedi, supra.

It is the practice of the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court that it will not interfere with proceedings of Magistrates under Chap. XII in which sec. 145 comes, merely because the Judges would have exercised their discretion differently upon the facts, because proceedings under this Chapter are proceedings only of a quasi-judicial nature. They are temporary and emergent in their nature, and it is generally conceded that Magistrates on the spot are in a better position to judge of the true state of affairs than Judges in Courts many miles away. But where it is shown that there is not upon the record material on which the Magistrate could properly exercise jurisdiction, then the Court will interfere—Muhammad Araf v. Satramdas Sakhimal, 37 Cr.L.J. 1030, 164 I.C. 969, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 143, 9 R.S. 60, 1936 Cr.C. 859.

If an illegality more than an irregularity has been committed, the High Court has discretion to refuse to interfere in revision if substantial justice has been done—Giani, 38 Cr.L.J. 123, 166 I.C. 71, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 1015, 38 P.L.R. 332, 9 R.L. 334, 1936 Cr.C. 1118

Reference:—The District Magistrate cannot himself set aside the decision of the lower Court passed under sec. 145; he must refer the case to the High Court under sec. 438—Eseruddi v. Otaruddi, 88 I.C. 526, 26 Cr.L.J. 1166, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 1234; Hiralal, 11 O.L.J. 59, 25 Cr.L.J. 440, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 331. Where the order of the Magistrate is illegal, the Sessions Judge should report the case for the orders of the High Court in revision—Kefatullah v. Feruzuddin, 5 C.W.N. 71 (72). The referring Courts must always bear in mind the limits which the High Court has, in practice, put upon its own discretion and they should not make a reference where the only objection is to the findings of the Court below upon the merits—Phakir v. Madar, 32 Cr.L.J. 1237, 134 I.C. 915, 58 Cal 1081, 35 C.W.N. 374, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 619, Ind. Rul 1931 Cal 915, 1931 Cr.C. 803. See also Gomia v. Naukhoo, 28 Cr.L.J. 901, 105 I.C. 229, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 88

448. Grounds of interference:—The High Court has the power to interfere where in a proceeding under this section necessary parties were left out or wrong persons were made parties—Laldhari v. Sukdeo, 27 Cal 892; or where the Magistrate refused to receive the evidence tendered to him—Tirumalraja v. Lodd Gobind Doss, 29 Mad. 561; Jhengar v. Baijnath, 11 A.L.J. 586, 14 Cr.L.J. 277; Kotha Koer v. Muneswar, 34 Cal. 840 (842); or where the Magistrate's finding of facts as regards possession was perverse and contrary to a mass of un rebutted evidence—Sarju Prosad, 27 O.C. 290, 25 Cr.L.J. 1066, 81 I.C. 890; or where no order in writing such as is required by sub-section (1) was recorded by the Magistrate—Hakam v. Ralia Ram, 4 Lah. 66; Md. Hasham v. Md. Jhami, 20 Cr.L.J. 124; Bihari v. Chajju, 1907 A.W.N. 49; Budhan v. Ram Rakha, 1915 P.L.R. 169, 16 Cr.L.J. 628; but not where the preliminary order under sec. 145 (1) is not complete—Dalle v. Kehri Singh, 39 P.L.R. 503; or where the Magistrate adopted none of the procedure required under this section and passed an order without any reference thereto—Dewan Chand, 1899 P.R. 2; Dhani Ram v. Bhola Nath, 1902 P.R. 23; Abdulla v. Gunda, 1907 P.R. 7; Budhan v. Ram Rakha, 1915 P.L.R. 169, 16 Cr.L.J. 628; Tara Chand v. Behari, 1916 P.R. 22, 18 Cr.L.J. 36; or where the Magistrate refused to issue process for the attendance of material witnesses—Surya Kanta v. Hem Chunder, 30 Cal 508; Madhab Chandra v. Martin, 30 Cal 508 (Note); or where no opportunity was given by the Magistrate to the applicant to produce his evidence—2 Cr.L.J. 286n; or where the Magistrate discarded the evidence altogether and based his decision merely upon his local inquiry—Lal Behari v. Bejoy Sankar, 10 C.W.N. 181; Shahadat v. Tajuddin, 46 Cal 1056; or where the proceedings were initiated by the Magistrate on a vague Police report—Suryakanta v. Jagadindra, 11 C.W.N. 198; or where the Magistrate declared possession with a party who had long been out of possession—Shansar v. Bhayaji, 20 Cr.L.J. 445 (Nag.); or where the Magistrate passed an order in respect of a property which was not in dispute and declared the property to be in the possession of a person who was not a party to the proceedings—Radhamohan v. Naimuddi, 19 Cr.L.J. 653 (Cal.).

449. What the High Court can do in revision:—The High Court, in the exercise of its power of revision, is competent to consider the whole evidence—Reid v. Richardson, 14 Cal. 361; and to find out whether there was evidence on which the Magistrate could come to the conclusion which he arrived at—Raja Babu v. Muddun Mahun, 14 Cal. 169; and can pass the proper order which the Lower Court ought to have made. Thus, where it is difficult to come to a conclusion as to the fact of possession, the wise and proper course is to pass an order of attachment under sec. 146; and if in such a case the Magistrate has passed an order under sec. 145, the High Court in revision can alter the order under sec. 145 into one under sec. 146—Reid v. Richardson, 14 Cal. 361 (364); Katras Jheria Coal Co. v. Sibkristo, 22 Cal. 297; Satyendra v. Krishnadhane, 20 C.W.N. 1014, 18 Cr.L.J. 80. The High Court in revision can alter an order of the Magistrate under sec. 145 into an order under sec. 147—In re Amarsang, 48 Bom. 512 (515). The High Court has inherent power to give directions as to the disposal of property which was attached and has been dealt with by a subordinate Magistrate in the course of proceedings instituted without jurisdiction under this section—Ali Muhammad v. Piggott, 48 Cal. 522, 32 C.L.J. 270, 22 Cr.L.J. 213 (F.B.)

Costs in revision:—See Note 478 under sec. 148

146. (1) If the Magistrate decides that none of the parties was then in such possession, or is unable to satisfy himself as to which of them was then in such possession of the subject of dispute, he may attach it until a competent Court has determined the rights of the parties thereto, or the person entitled to possession thereof;

Provided that the District Magistrate or the Magistrate who has attached the subject of dispute may withdraw the attachment at any time if he is satisfied that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace in regard to the subject of dispute.

(2) When the Magistrate attaches the subject of dispute, he may, if he thinks fit, and if no receiver of the property, the subject of dispute, has been appointed by any Civil Court, appoint a receiver thereof, who, subject to the control of the Magistrate, shall have all the powers of a receiver appointed under the Code of Civil Procedure:

Provided that, in the event of a receiver of the property, the subject of dispute, being subsequently appointed by the Civil Court, possession shall be made over to him by the receiver appointed by the Magistrate, who shall thereupon be discharged

Change:—The two provisos and the italicised words in sub-section (2) have been added by sec. 29 of the Cr. P. Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923). For reasons see below

449A. Object of Section:—A Criminal Court is presumably unacquainted with the conduct of civil proceedings; and so where the Magistrate finds that the nature of the evidence is conflicting or that the fact of possession can be decided only after a proper trial of an issue of possession, the Legislature has provided that the wise and proper course for the Magistrate would be to keep the property under attachment until the Civil Court has determined the rights of the parties, instead of himself coming to a haphazard conclusion as to the fact of possession—Reid v. Richardson, 14 Cal. 361 (364)

Scope:—This section merely comes into operation if the Magistrate is unable to satisfy himself as to which of the parties is in possession. The section does not say that the Magistrate has got to write an order so convincing as to make a Revisional Court equally sure that one party is in possession rather than the other—Brij Pal v. Ram Naresh, 33 Cr.L.J. 157, 135 I.C. 246, Ind. Rul. 1932 All. 70, 135 I.C. 246, 1932 Cr.C. 294, A.I.R. 1932 All. 325.

450. Conditions precedent:—In order to give jurisdiction for an order under sec. 146, it is necessary that there should be jurisdiction over the proceedings under sec. 145, which again pre-suppose a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace. If there was no dispute concerning any land, there would be no jurisdiction of a Magistrate to proceed under secs. 145 and 146—Ballam v. Lal Babu, 19 Cr.L.J. 105 (Pat.). Section 146 is a continuation of sec. 145, and, therefore, the initiation of proceedings under sec. 145 is preliminary to an order under sec. 146. Where the record showed that the Magistrate made an order under this section without following the procedure prescribed by sec. 145 and without making an order in writing and that there was nothing to show that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace existed, the attachment was set aside by the High Court—Azizuddin, 2 A.L.J. 149. The legality of an order under sec. 146 depends upon its having been preceded by legal proceedings under sec. 145, and where the whole proceedings under sec. 145 are illegal (e.g., by reason of the Magistrate's failure to comply with the requirements of clause 4 of sec. 145), an order made in the case under sec. 145 cannot stand on a better footing—Subbarama v. Mariya Pillai, 1 L.W. 493, 15 Cr.L.J. 559.

451. Magistrate's duty to make inquiry and take evidence:—It is the duty of the Magistrate, before taking proceedings under this section, to take evidence and make inquiry (see clause 4 of sec. 145) in order to ascertain, if possible, who was in possession—Parsuram v. Shivajatan, 3 P.L.T. 434, 23 Cr.L.J. 277. Unless and until a Magistrate has made the inquiry contemplated by sec. 145, that is to say, unless he has examined his witnesses and considered the evidence produced by the parties, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to proceed under sec. 146—Inayatulla v. Amanat, 1 O.L.J. 242, 15 Cr.L.J. 470; Shiba Nath v. Ramkishore, 35 C.L.J. 291, 23 Cr.L.J. 688; Daulati v. Hedait, 32 C.W.N. 843; Ambika v. Wazidali, 23 C.W.N. 910 (911), 29 C.L.J. 459; Nilkanth v. Suryabhan, 24 Cr.L.J. 880, 75 I.C. 80, A.I.R. 1923 Nag. 297; Khedan v. Hussaini, 2 P.L.T. 15, 22 Cr.L.J. 323; Emp. v. Radha Raman, 37 Cr.L.J. 215 (216), A.I.R. 1936 All. 177, 160 I.C. 20. This section presupposes an enquiry by the Magistrate on the evidence recorded and the object of this section is to give the Magistrate jurisdiction to attach property if, upon the evidence so recorded, he is unable to come to a finding as to who was in possession on the date on which the order under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., was drawn up. Where there is no evidence of any kind, the order attaching the property under this section is without jurisdiction—Daulatali v. Hedait, 32 C.W.N. 843 (844), A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 703. See also Radha Raman v. Emp., in Note 453. Where a Magistrate in a proceeding under sec. 145 made an order under sec. 146 on the ground that it was doubtful which of the parties was in actual possession, without judicially considering the important documentary evidence of possession placed before him, it was held that the order must be set aside and the case re-heard by another Magistrate—Ambika v. Wazidali, 23 C.W.N. 910, 20 Cr.L.J. 342. Where the Magistrate did not make the slightest attempt to satisfy himself as to the factum of possession, and attached the land without taking any evidence and making any local inquiry—Sheo Balak v. Bhagwat, 40 Cal. 105, 13 Cr.L.J. 486, 16 C.W.N. 1052, 15 I.C. 486; or where the Magistrate discarded and rejected practically every piece of evidence that might have led to a correct finding as to possession—Prafulla v. Hodding, 21 C.W.N. 1059, 26 C.L.J. 39; or where the Magistrate omitted to receive the evidence produced by a party or consider the documents and passed an order of attachment merely on a consideration of the written statements of the parties—Kotla v. Muneswar, 34 Cal. 840 (842), 6 Cr.L.J. 452, his order was without jurisdiction. So also, where in a proceeding under sec. 145, the parties appeared on the day of hearing but did not file any written statements nor produced any evidence, and the Magistrate without granting time to the parties for the production of evidence or for filing written statements, said that it was impossible to come to a conclusion as to the fact of possession and passed an order under this section, the order was invalid—Sk. Mansar Ali v. Majiulla, 12 C.W.N. 896. But where the parties failed to adduce evidence, even though sufficient time was allowed to them to do so, the Magistrate could proceed under this section—Ronendra v. Kishori Lal, 14 C.W.N. 80, 11 Cr.L.J. 26, 5 I.C. 40; Bengali Parida v. Banchnanidhi, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 29, 30 Cr.L.J. 894, 118 I.C. 326, 10 P.L.T. 867, 1930 Cr.C. 5, 9 Pat. 639.

Effect of prior decree of Civil Court.—Where the petitioner had been put into possession of certain lands in execution of a decree obtained by him in a Civil Court, the Magistrate was not competent to attach the lands under sec 146. It was his duty to have found possession in accordance with the decree—Gulraj v. Sk. Bhatoo, 32 Cal. 796, 2 Cr.L.J. 761. See also Durganand v. Hiramul, 25 Cr.L.J. 88, 76 I.C. 24, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 711. Even though the petitioner has not obtained possession of the property in accordance with the Civil Court decree, still when the Civil Court has determined the rights of the parties and has also determined the possession so far as it was in its power to do so, it is not competent for the Magistrate to say that he is unable to determine the question of possession, and to attach the property under sec. 146. The order of attachment is unjustifiable—Parabhans v. Sheodarshan, 48 All 397, 24 A.L.J. 399, 27 Cr.L.J. 559. See Note 438 under section 145

452. Inability to decide the fact of possession:—All that sec. 146, Cr. P. C., requires is that the Magistrate should be unable to satisfy himself as to which of the parties was in "such possession," that is, actual possession, of the subject of dispute—Venkataraman, A.I.R. 1930 Bom 172 (173), 32 Bom LR 340, 125 I.C. 718, 31 Cr.L.J. 933. The doubt upon which a Magistrate can act under this section must be the result of his inability to determine the question of possession upon the evidence offered by both parties, and not a doubt in his mind entertained without receiving and considering evidence and without inquiry—Khedan v. Hussaini, 2 P.L.T. 15, 22 Cr.L.J. 323; Sheobalak v. Bhagwat, 40 Cal 105; Ambica v. Wajidali, 23 C.W.N. 910 (911). The Magistrate would not be justified in saying that it was not possible to ascertain who was in possession, and in attaching the property, merely because the parties did not appear. He ought to have made some inquiry into the question of possession—Parasuram v. Shibjatan, 3 P.L.T. 434, 23 Cr.L.J. 277. In order to show the Magistrate's inability to decide the question of possession, he ought to discuss the evidence in the case, and give reasons for his inability—Khedan v. Hussaini, supra; Munir Ahmed v. Mahmud-ul-Haq, 1938 A.W.R. (C.C.) 134. Where the order under this section did not show that it was not possible on the evidence to decide as to the fact of possession, but would rather seem to indicate that the Magistrate could not or would not decide whether the witnesses on either side were to be believed, or that the Magistrate did not consider the documentary evidence fairly and judicially for the purpose of arriving at a decision, the order was set aside—Neelamegan v. Mooroooguppa, 2 Weir, 110; Ambica v. Wajidali, supra. A Magistrate should be extremely reluctant to attach the property in dispute. In cases where the land is jungle or waste, it is quite possible that the Magistrate may be unable to satisfy himself as to the possession of the parties. But where the land is admittedly subject to cultivation year by year and season by season, the Magistrate will be only admitting his own weakness, if he states that he cannot come to a decision. It is his duty to collect information and sift it, and decide the fact of possession—Ram Bahal v. Rang Bahadur, 5 P.L.T. 589, 82 I.C. 367, 25 Cr.L.J. 1295, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 804. See also Gopammal v. Nallammal, 1937 M.W.N. 326. The general remark in an order under sec. 146, Cr. P. C., that the oral evidence is not reliable, without referring to it and without giving any reason, is not a disposal of the evidence upon the record. It amounts to a refusal to exercise the jurisdiction vested in a Magistrate by law and is remediable by the High Court in revision—Lachmi v. Bija, 63 I.C. 152, 1921 Pat. H. C. C. 110, 2 Pat.L.T. 168, 22 Cr.L.J. 616, Kaliashbchari v. Jai Narain, 57 I.C. 169, 1920 Pat. H. C. C. 288, 1 Pat.L.T. 291, 21 Cr.L.J. 601; Lakhpai, 24 Cr.L.J. 432, 72 I.C. 544, 1 Pat.L.R. 152 (Cr.), 4 Pat.L.T. 579, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 588; Munir Ahmad v. Mahmud-ul-Haq, 1938 O.W.N. 673, 1938 A.Cr.C. 53, 1938 O.A. 942, 1938 A.W.R. (C.C.) 134. The Magistrate ought to make a reasonable effort to decide the question as to possession, and ought not to attach the property so long as it is possible for him to decide which of the contesting parties was really in possession of the property, and if he can decide that question in favour of one of the parties, he should give effect to that decision by passing an order under sec. 145 (6)—Wayezul v. Shobrat, 4 P.L.T. 441, 24 Cr.L.J. 754. Where there is ample evidence on the point of possession, a Magistrate is not justified in passing an order under this section, though it may be difficult, but not impossible, to decide the question of possession—Miyakhan v. Mahomed Hanif, 1939 N.L.J. 213. See also Akshoy v. Brojeswar in Note 410.

Nature of possession :—If a party (female) is found to be in actual possession of the property, but the only doubt exists as to the nature of the possession, that is, whether her possession is on her own behalf or on behalf of her lunatic husband, such a doubt does not justify a Magistrate in taking action under this section—In re Juggodeshary, 3 C.L.R. 94.

Portion of subject of dispute :—If the Magistrate is unable to satisfy himself as to the possession of the whole of a property (fishery) extending over several miles in length, he should ascertain so far as he can the possession of some portion thereof. As regards the portion as to which he is able to say that so and so is in possession he should proceed under sec. 145, and only as to the remainder should he proceed under section 146—Upendra v. Prasanna, 20 Cr.L.J. 17 (Cal.). See also Sadar Ali v. Abdul in Note 455.

Rights of parties :—The Magistrate can attach the property only when he decides that none of the parties is in possession, or when he cannot satisfy himself as to which of the parties is in possession; but he cannot take action under this section merely because he is unable to satisfy himself as to which of the parties is entitled to possession or has a right to the property. Inability to decide the right to the property cannot justify an order of attachment—In re Somnath, 6 Bom.L.R. 723.

'Then' :—i.e., at the date of the preliminary order passed under section 145 (1). See Notes under section 145 (4).

453. When attachment can be made:—This section presupposes an inquiry by the Magistrate on the evidence recorded, and the object of this section is to give the Magistrate jurisdiction to attach the property, if upon the evidence so recorded, he is unable to come to a finding as to who was in possession on the date on which the order under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., was drawn up, and where there is no evidence of any kind on record, the order attaching property is without jurisdiction. A Magistrate cannot say that he is unable to satisfy himself if he has never made the slightest efforts to do so—Radha Raman v. Emp., A.I.R. 1936 All. 177 (178), 1936 All.L.R. 30, 160 I.C. 20, 1936 A.W.R. 125, 1936 A.L.J. 197, 37 Cr.L.J. 215, 1936 Cr.C. 211. See also Daulatal v. Hedait in Note 451.

To entitle a Magistrate to make an order of attachment, he must either decide that none of the parties are in actual possession, or that he is unable to satisfy himself as to which of them is in possession. An order of attachment made without one or other of these findings is without jurisdiction—Nathu Ram, 15 A.L.J. 270, 18 Cr.L.J. 557 (559). When a Magistrate is in an indecisive state of the mind he should record, as required by sec. 146, Cr. P. C., a finding in express terms to the effect that he is unable to satisfy himself as to which of the two parties was in possession of the subject of dispute, at the date of the preliminary order, and then proceed, in the event of continuance of the apprehension in regard to breach of the peace, to attach property, if it has not already been attached under the second proviso to cl. (4) of sec. 145, Cr. P. C. A failure to record an express finding to this effect and the consequent disregard of the express provisions of cl. (1) of sec. 146, Cr. P. C., are very much to be deprecated—Jan Mohammad v. Jiran Khan, 29 Cr.L.J. 861, 111 I.C. 445, A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 325.

Where the Magistrate finds neither the first party nor the second party in possession, but finds that actual possession is with a stranger who does not claim a right to be in possession, the Magistrate should proceed to attach the property—Bhagjogin, 20 Cr.L.J. 215 (Cal.).

When both parties are in possession of the disputed property, no order under this section can be made—Md. Koolayappa v. Shaik Abdul Khadir, 27 M.L.J. 169, 15 Cr.L.J. 572, 25 I.C. 324. Where the Magistrate found that both parties were at the time of the order collecting rents from the raiyats, this amounted to a finding that both parties were in possession, and consequently the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to order attachment—Rajendra v. Mahomed Arzumand, 9 C.W.N. 887. But the Allahabad High Court is of opinion that where both parties are in joint possession and fighting with each other, it is a case where the Magistrate cannot decide which of them are in exclusive possession. Consequently, he should attach the property under this section—Chiranjī v. Mahadeo, 1932 A.L.J. 819, 1932 Cr.C. 938 (939), 34 Cr.L.J. 480. See Note 405.

It is impossible to say that in no case can the fact that one party has been bound down to keep the peace under sec. 107, Cr. P. C., leave the Magistrate any jurisdiction to act under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., when the circumstances so require. The right course for the Magistrate to take would be to try and discover who is in actual possession. If he finds himself unable to do so, he can properly exercise his jurisdiction under this section—Bainsab v. Gatmath, 16 C.W.N. 384, 13 I.C. 830, 13 Cr.L.J. 142.

The petitioner applied under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., for an order restoring him to possession of a house as he had been dispossessed by the respondents five days before the date of the petition. The Magistrate held that it was impossible to decide on evidence whether any and which of the parties was at the date of his preliminary order in possession of the house and whether the petitioner has been dispossessed forcibly and wrongfully within two months before the date of his order. He, therefore, ordered the attachment of the property under sec. 146, Cr. P. C. Held that as the respondents were admittedly in possession at the date of the Magistrate's preliminary order, sec. 146 had no application and that if the Magistrate could have held that the petitioner was in possession within two months next before the date of his preliminary order, under sec. 145 (6), he could have restored the possession to the petitioner—Gurdas v. Narain Das, 31 Cr.L.J. 1075, 126 I.C. 577, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 422.

454. Order of attachment:—An order under this section cannot be made in the absence of the parties or ex parte; the proper course is to pass the order in the presence of both parties—Lachmi v. Bhusi, 19 Cr.L.J. 225, 43 I.C. 817 (Pat.).

A Magistrate in passing an order under this section must give reasons for making the order—Khedan v. Husain, 2 P.L.T. 15, 22 Cr.L.J. 323. But the High Court will not interfere merely on the ground that the order is brief and does not state reasons at length. If the High Court is satisfied that the Magistrate has given full consideration to the evidence on the record, it will not interfere—Kanai v. Hyder Ali, 37 C.L.J. 127, 21 Cr.L.J. 575. See Brj Pal v. Ram Naresh in Note 449A.

Effect of order of attachment:—One of the first principles on which Courts proceed is that judicial proceedings cannot bind a person who is not a party to them. Where, therefore, the Magistrate did not declare that some persons were parties to the proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., but he left it to them to appear or not to appear, in spite of their protest against being considered as parties and their manifest desire to have it declared that they were no parties, in the face of this order it could not be properly held that those persons were bound by the proceedings and by the final order under sec. 146, Cr. P. C.—Janaki Nath, 3 C.W.N. 329 (331).

455. What property can be attached:—In order that an order might be passed under sec. 145 or 146, the subject-matter of the dispute must be determined—Suryakanta v. Jagadindra, 11 C.W.N. 198.

The 'subject of dispute' referred to in secs. 145 and 146 must be read as referring to the whole or to any component part or parts of the property in dispute. If the component part in respect of which the dispute exists is distinct and separate from the rest, and the Magistrate finds that neither party has shown possession in regard to that portion, he is not bound to attach the whole property but may attach that part only. If, however, the subject-matter in dispute is indivisible and must be dealt with as a whole, it must be dealt with in such a way as to make in regard to it one order under this section—Sadar Ali v. Abdul, 5 C.W.N. 710 (712, 713); see also Katras Jheriah Coal Co. v. Shubkrishna, 22 Cal. 297 cited in Note 427 under sec. 145.

Temple :—To attach a temple does not necessarily mean that the temple must be closed together. When the third parties or the general community are interested in it, it is the duty of the Magistrate, when assuming charge of it in order to preserve the public peace, to make the best arrangements possible to preserve the rights of such third parties or the public, and to have the pūja of the temple performed—Sundara v. Vallinayaka, 2 Weir 110; In re Muttusami, 2 Weir 112.

Moveables :—The Magistrate ordering attachment of immoveable property can take charge of all moveables found inside the immoveable property, although he cannot attach the moveable property by itself. Therefore, where the Magistrate attached a mulh and took charge of all the moveables (e.g., cattle, jewellery) that were found by him in the mulh at the time of attachment, it was held that the Magistrate acted legally—Bharat Das v. Ram Chattrar, 1 P.L.J. 356, 18 Cr.L.J. 287, 38 I.C. 319; Gokul Nath v. Baram Nath, 24 A.L.J. 383, 27 Cr.L.J. 429, 93 I.C. 157, A.I.R. 1927 All. 125.

Cultivation of attached land :—A person who cultivates immoveable property which has been attached by a Magistrate under this section commits the offence of criminal trespass and he is liable to be punished under sec. 447, I. P. C.—Nagoji, 8 M.L.J. 253. No suit for damages for the loss of profits resulting from the non-cultivation of land owing to an attachment under this section lies against any party—Ammani v. Sellayi Ammal, 6 Mad. 426.

456. Powers of Magistrate :—A Magistrate attaching a property under this section has the power to make an order regarding the management of the property. The High Court will not interfere with such order—Lokenath v. Nedu, 29 Cal. 382, 6 C.W.N. 469. He can lease the land attached—Greesh Chunder, 17 W.R. 38; or after cancelling a lease already granted, can grant a fresh lease—Lokenath v. Nedu, 29 Cal. 382, 6 C.W.N. 469. The Magistrate can refuse to hand over the value of the produce of the property to any of the parties to the dispute, but he has no power to treat the profits as derelict and as the property of the Government—Mohar Singh, 1911 P.L.R. 123, 12 Cr.L.J. 403, 11 I.C. 587.

A Magistrate attaching a property under this section cannot hand over possession of the property to one of the contending parties on failure of the other to institute a suit for possession in the Civil Court—Ram Kumar v. Thakur Ojha, 3 P.L.T. 648, 23 Cr.L.J. 562.

457. Possession by Magistrate :—When a Magistrate attaches lands under this section, the possession of the Magistrate must be taken to be a possession on behalf of such of the rival parties as might establish a right to possession by a civil suit—Beni Prasad v. Shahzada, 32 Cal. 856. That is, the Magistrate's possession is not adverse to the true owner. The legal possession of the property is said to be in the true owner during the period of attachment—Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Isakapalli, 26 Mad. 410; Panna Lal v. Panchu, 49 Cal. 544; Brojendra v. Sarojini, 20 C.W.N. 481, 22 C.L.J. 283, 31 I.C. 242; Sarat Chandra v. Bibhabati, 34 C.L.J. 302, 66 I.C. 433, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 584; Chhaganmull v. Amanatulla, 39 C.L.J. 447. Though an order under this section interferes with physical possession, it does not affect the legal rights of the parties concerned and the property under attachment is held for the person ultimately shown to be entitled to possession—Shyama Charan v. Surya Kanta, 15 C.W.N. 168 (168). See also Note 420.

458. Decision of a competent Court :—The attachment is to continue until a competent Court has determined the rights of the parties; and therefore it is the duty of a Magistrate to withdraw the attachment and release the property as soon as it is brought to his notice that a competent Court has determined the rights of the parties or of the person entitled to possession—Maharaja of Venkatagiri v. Srinivasa, 17 M.L.T. 392, 16 Cr.L.J. 481; Jurauan v. Ram Sarekh, 12 Pat 261, 14 P.L.T. 113. The Magistrate is bound to abide by the subsequent decision of a competent Civil Court and to withdraw the attachment, even though the suit in the Civil Court was not inter partes, (as for instance where the suit was instituted by a third party, and the first party and some members of the second party were not made parties to it)—Asesh Kumar v. Kishori Mohan, 39 C.L.J. 353, 25 Cr.L.J. 937. The fact that an appeal has been preferred against the decision of the Civil Court and is pending, is no good reason for the Magistrate to keep the property any longer in attachment—Abdul Aziz, 1917 P.W.R. 46, 19 Cr.L.J. 261; Ramsri v. Sri Kishan, 46 All. 879, 22 A.L.J. 803, A.I.R. 1924 All. 277; Maung Tha Zan v. Maung Ba Gale, 7 Bur.L.T. 293, 15 Cr.L.J. 500.

It is not necessary that there should be a decree in favour of all the parties to enable the Magistrate to withdraw an attachment made under this section; and if there is an adjudication by a Civil Court in favour of some at least of the parties, that is sufficient for the purpose of enabling the Magistrate to walk out of the property—Vithoba v. Narasinga, 4 L.W. 55, 17 Cr.L.J. 331.

The expression 'competent Court' means not only a Civil Court, but includes a Survey Court—Ambler v. Sami Ahmed, 37 Cal. 331, 11 Cr.L.J. 372, 11 C.L.J. 417, 6 I.C. 545. Where, therefore, lands were attached under sec. 146, Cr. P. C., and subsequently one of the parties obtained an order in his favour from the survey authorities under sec. 41, Bengal Survey Act and applied to have the attachment released in his favour, held that the order of the Collector as to the lands under the Survey Act is a determination by a competent Court of the rights of the person entitled to possession thereof—Ram Ranbiyaya Prasad v. Ram Prasad, A.I.R. 1939 Pat 348, 1939 P.W.N. 260, 40 Cr.L.J. 797, 183 I.C. 388, 20 P.L.T. 595, 5 B.R. 906, 12 R.P. 141.

It also includes a Revenue Court. Under the Code of 1882, the words were 'Civil Court' and so it was held in Ganga Prasad v. Narain, 15 All. 394 (395), that this section did not authorise a Magistrate to pass an order of attachment in a dispute between parties, whose rights would have to be determined by a Revenue Court. But this ruling is no longer good law, and the Magistrate can release the property attached and hand it over to one of the parties, as soon as the Revenue Court has given a decision in favour of that party—Ram Shri v. Kishan, 46 All. 879 (881), 22 A.L.J. 803, 25 Cr.L.J. 1242; Surendra v. Bikram, 25 O.C. 242. But see Radha Raman v. Emp., A.I.R. 1936 All. 177, 1936 All.L.R. 30, 160 I.C. 20, 1936 A.W.R. 125, 1936 A.L.J. 197, 37 Cr.L.J. 215, 1936 Cr.C. 211, where it has been held that it is for the Revenue Court to put the party in possession if its order is enforceable and that the Magistrate has no authority to do so.

But an entry in the Record of Rights cannot be regarded as constituting an adjudication by a competent Court of the rights of parties—Kutiswar v. Jitendra, 30 C.W.N. 616, 26 Cr.L.J. 1055 (1056), 87 I.C. 975, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 316. See also 18 Cr.L.J. 682, 40 I.C. 330, 1 Pat.L.W. 642.

Burden of proof—What is required of the plaintiff who comes to Court after an attachment of lands under sec. 146, Cr. P. C., is to show to the Court that he has got the rights in the lands in dispute and is entitled to possession thereof—Hargobind Rai v. Keshwa Prasad Singh, 1924 Pat. H.C.C. 297 (300), A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 168.

See Note 343.

459. Suit—If there was only an order of attachment issued by the Magistrate and even if the Magistrate should actually take possession of the property and even though the Magistrate should appoint a receiver to be in possession of the property, what happens in the eye of the law is that the property is placed in custodia legis. It is held in the custody of the Court for the benefit of the person who may eventually and finally succeed in establishing his title to the property. In such cases no party is under an obligation to institute a suit for possession of the property. It is only necessary for the parties to establish their right against the other contending parties and the Court will give effect to the adjudication by the Court as against the other contending parties—Alagarswami v. Ramabadra, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 38 (41), 111 I.C. 152

Damage suit—A suit to recover damages suffered by the plaintiff by reason of his land having been kept for a year under attachment under an erroneous order under sec. 146, Cr. P. C., would not lie against the defendant upon whose complaint the enquiry leading up to the order was initiated—Ram Mina Kumari v. Surendra Narain, 14 C.W.N. 96. See also Ammani v. Sellani, 6 Mad. 426.

Limitation :—See Art. 120 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908. See also Arts. 47, 142 and 144 of the same Act in this connection. See also Note 457.

460. Proviso—Withdrawal of attachment :—“We have introduced a new clause which by an amendment of sec. 146 will enable a District Magistrate to withdraw the attachment of property at any time when he is satisfied that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace”—Report of the Joint Committee (1922).

Once an order under sec. 146 has been passed, it can come to an end only under one of two circumstances, the first being that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace, in which case the Magistrate is competent to withdraw the order of attachment, and he can do so at any time at which if he is satisfied that there is no longer any likelihood; and secondly, it is competent for a Magistrate to release the property from attachment if a competent Court has determined the rights of the parties to the proceedings or the person entitled to possession—Kutiswar v. Jitendra, 26 Cr.L.J. 1055 (1056), 30 C.W.N. 646, 87 I.C. 975, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 316.

Where the petitioner presented an application to the Magistrate praying for the release of the attached house on the ground that the other claimant had died and that he (the petitioner) was his heir, and the Magistrate refused the application as no judgment of a competent Court declaring the rights of parties was produced, held that the Magistrate ought to have granted the application and released the property from attachment, because by the death of the other claimant all likelihood of a breach of the peace had disappeared—Khushi Ram v. Crown, 1 Lah. 451. This proviso now expressly provides for the case.

But the Magistrate can cancel the order of attachment under the proviso only on the ground that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace. He cannot cancel the attachment on any other ground, e.g., on the ground that the attachment is not practicable—Ram Dulare v. Ajudhya, 16 O.C. 192, 14 Cr.L.J. 605.

Where the property attached under sec. 146 is released by the Magistrate on being satisfied that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace, the Magistrate should not simply direct the Receiver to abandon the property without making over the possession or the books of account to any body, and leave the parties to scramble for the estate. This is not the intention of the Legislature. Under this proviso, it is open to the Magistrate to make over the possession to any person he thinks fit, and he must of course exercise a judicial discretion in deciding to whom the possession is to be given. There may also be cases in which it is sufficient for him to make an order withdrawing the attachment and leave some person to take possession, without handing over the possession of the property to any body—Ali Bahadur, 2 O.W.N. 868, 26 Cr.L.J. 1629, 90 I.C. 925, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 146

461. Sub-section (2)—Appointment of Receiver :—A Magistrate is entitled to appoint a receiver under this sub-section only after the termination of the inquiry as to possession conducted under sec. 145 (4). The appointment of a receiver before the completion of the inquiry is without jurisdiction—Lakshminarayana v. Gnana-prakasa, 13 Cr.L.J. 536, 15 I.C. 808 (Mad). The passing of an order of attachment does not by itself justify the appointment of a receiver, unless on a subsequent inquiry the appointment of a receiver is found necessary—Raza Hussain v. Mehdi Hasan, 25 O.C. 148, 23 Cr.L.J. 684.

A person ought not to be appointed a Receiver who has shown a partiality for one of the parties, and a party to the action should not be appointed unless by consent or unless there are special circumstances justifying his appointment in preference to others. Thus, a party to the proceeding who was found by the High Court in a previous proceeding to be not in possession of the disputed property, ought not to be appointed a Receiver, because the effect of such appointment would be to place him exactly in the position to which he is not entitled—Lachmi v. Gajadhar, 7 Pat. 1, 28 Cr L.J. 776 (777), 9 P.L.T. 109, 104 I.C. 104, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 393.

A Receiver appointed under this section is entitled, unless some special circumstance is established, not only to the subject matter of the proceedings but also to all accretions to the property, and can give title to a tenant under him—Madhu v. Sadar Ali, 14 C.W.N. 681, 11 Cr.L.J. 288, 6 I.C. 177.

But any act done by the Receiver during the period of attachment cannot affect the rights of the party found by the Civil Court to be entitled to possession of the property—Jurawan v. Ram Sarekh, 12 Pat. 261, 14 P.L.T. 113, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 224.

Where a Receiver appointed under this sub-section applied to the Magistrate for permission to grant a lease without stating to whom it was intended that the lease should be granted and, on the very next day after the permission was given, granted the lease to one of the parties to the proceedings under sec 145, Cr P. C. Held that the Receiver was guilty of a very impudent fraud upon the Court and that the Magistrate had every justification in setting aside the lease summarily—Meyyappa v. Nagamai, 33 Cr.L.J. 956, A.I.R. 1933 Mad 67, 140 I.C. 281, 1932 M.W.N. 1154, 36 M.L.W. 651, Ind. Rul. 1932 Mad. 834. See also Srish v. Debendra, 50 C.L.J. 333 in this connection.

Proviso:—"We recommend the addition of a proviso to sec 146 (2) to meet the case of an overlapping appointment of a Receiver by the Civil Court"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916

462. Revision:—By reason of the omission of sub-sec (3) of sec 435 by the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act of 1923, orders passed under this section are now liable to revision under this Code. See Note 447 under sec 145.

But the High Court in revision should not lightly interfere with an order that may be passed by a Magistrate for the management of attached properties; but when the order of the Magistrate offends against an elementary rule, founded on the desire of the Courts to place the parties on a footing of absolute equality, the High Court can set aside that order in revision—Lachmi v. Gajadhar, 7 Pat. 1, 28 Cr L.J. 776 (778).

463. Review:—An order under this section is in the nature of a judgment and cannot be reviewed by the same Court—Luchmi v. Bhusi, 19 Cr L.J. 225, 5 Pat.L.W. 386; Raj Kumar v. Thakur Ojha, 3 P.L.T. 648; Ram Dulare v. Ajudhya, 16 O.C. 192, 14 Cr.L.J. 605. See sec. 369. When a property is attached under this section, the Magistrate has jurisdiction to release it from attachment, but he has no jurisdiction to review his own order releasing the attached property—Ballam v. Lal Babu, 19 Cr L.J. 105 (Pat.).

147. Whenever any such Magistrate is satisfied as aforesaid that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists concerning the right of use of any land or water (including any right of way or other easement over the same) within the local limits of his jurisdiction, he may inquire into the matter in manner pro-

147. (1) Whenever any District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class is satisfied from a police-report, or other information that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists regarding any alleged right of user of any land or water as explained in section Dispute concerning easements, etc.

Dispute concerning rights of use of immoveable property, etc.

vided by section 145, and may, if it appears to him that such right exists, make an order permitting such thing to be done, or directing that such thing shall not be done, as the case may be, until the person objecting to such thing being done or claiming that such thing may be done obtains the decision of a competent Court adjudging him to be entitled to prevent the doing of, or to do such things, as the case may be:

Provided that no order shall be passed under this section permitting the doing of anything where the right to do such thing is exercisable at all times of the year, unless such right has been exercised within three months next before the institution of the inquiry, or, where the right is exercisable only at particular seasons or on particular occasions, unless the right has been exercised during the last of such seasons or occasions before such institution.

145, sub-section (2) (whether such right be claimed as an easement or otherwise) within the local limits of his jurisdiction, he may make an order in writing stating the grounds of his being so satisfied and requiring the parties concerned in such dispute to attend the Court in person or by pleader within a time to be fixed by such Magistrate and to put in written statements of their respective claims, and shall thereafter inquire into the matter in the manner provided in section 145, and the provisions of that section shall, as far as may be, be applicable in the case of such inquiry.

(2) If it appears to such Magistrate that such right exists, he may make an order prohibiting any interference with the exercise of such right:

Provided that no such order shall be made where the right is exercisable at all times of the year, unless such right has been exercised within three months next before the institution of the inquiry, or, where the right is exercisable only at particular seasons or on particular occasions, unless the right has been exercised during the last of such seasons or on the last of such occasions before such institution.

(3) If it appears to such Magistrate that such right does not exist, he may make an order prohibiting any exercise of the alleged right.

(4) An order under this section shall be subject to any sub- sequent decision of a Civil Court of competent jurisdiction.

Change:—This section has been redrafted by sec. 30 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923); the substantial changes (as shown by the italicised passages) are:—“(1) The definition of the subject-matter in dispute has been modified so as to avoid the difficulties which have been created by decision raising doubts as to the applicability of the section to rights not resembling easements or to rights acquired by contract; (2) the specific reference to rights of way has been omitted, as it has been questioned whether it might not by implication exclude negative easements from the scope of this section; (3) the nature of the orders which a Magistrate may pass (see sub-sections 2 and 3) and their continuance pending the order of a competent Civil Court to the contrary (see sub-section 4) have been clearly defined”—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914). (4) The words “make an order in writing respective claims” have been added in order to bring this section into a line with sec. 145. “Doubts have been expressed as to the procedure to be followed in cases under sec. 147, and we have introduced amendments here to make it clear that the procedure is to be that laid down by section 145”—Report of the Joint Committee (1922).

464. Dispute:—The dispute contemplated by this section must at any rate be some substantial dispute necessitating the interference, in some way or other, of the criminal authorities. It would not be sufficient that there should be a mere discussion or verbal altercation between persons claiming rights of the kind described. There must be an actual dispute—Maharaja of Burdwan v Chairman, Darjeeling Municipality, 5 Cal. 191. See Note 393 under section 145. If on entering on an inquiry a Magistrate finds that the rights of the parties have been judicially ascertained by a previous decision, he should not enter into any investigation, as he cannot assume that a dispute would be continued on a question which has been set at rest by a judicial decision on the rights of parties—In re Balkrishna, 11 Bom. 584 (587); Anya Shidya, 29 Bom. L.R. 715, 28 Cr. L.J. 578 (579), 102 I.C. 546.

Police-report—If the Magistrate takes action under this section on the basis of a police-report it is not necessary for him to call on the Police Officer to give evidence as to the correctness of the report—Todar Mal, 53 All. 215, 1930 A.L.J. 1437, 32 Cr. L.J. 309.

465. Likelihood of breach of peace:—In order to give jurisdiction to a Magistrate under this section, he must be satisfied from Police reports or other materials that there is an imminent danger of a breach of the peace resulting from a dispute between the parties concerned. Where at the date of initiation of proceedings the materials before the Magistrate did not disclose the fact that there was an imminent danger of a breach of the peace, any evidence that he might have taken later on, in the course of the trial, could not give him a jurisdiction which he did not otherwise possess—Kali Kissen v. Amund, 23 Cal. 557 (562). This view, however, has been disapproved of in Kulada v. Danesh, 33 Cal. 33 (45). Unless there are special circumstances giving rise to an apprehension of the breach of the peace, there is no jurisdiction to make an order under this section—Parashram v. Gopal, 25 Cr. L.J. 353, 77 I.C. 289, AIR 1924 Nag. 291. The mere fact that the Magistrate had, only a few days before the institution of the present proceeding, recorded an order to the effect that no action was necessary to be taken as there was no likelihood of a breach of the peace, would not make the proceeding improper, if the Magistrate had at the date of the proceeding some fresh materials before him upon which he was satisfied as to the existence of the likelihood of a breach of the peace—Dukhi v. Halway, 23 Cal. 55 (58). For the purpose of initiation of a proceeding under this section, the Magistrate concerned must be satisfied that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists. If there was no present danger of a breach of the peace, the fact that there was a dispute between the parties which was likely to cause a breach of the peace in the future, will not justify a Mag-taking action under this section. There should be a present dispute and a present fear of disturbance; and the section will not apply to a state of things indicating that there may be a breach of the peace in future—Jagabandhu v. Manager, I. J. Mills, 40 C.W.N. 351, 37 Cr.L.J. 512, 161 I.C. 338.

466. Right to use land or water:—There must not only be a dispute regarding an alleged right of user of any land or water but, under sub-sec. (2), sec. 147, Cr. P. C., it must appear to the Magistrate that such right exists. By 'right' is meant legal right, and the purpose of the section, there can be no doubt, is by an order following a summary inquiry to prohibit interference with the exercise of a legal right. It follows that as the right to fish in the sea cannot form the subject-matter of property, or be enjoyed as an easement so no one can by contract or otherwise relinquish to another his right or any part of it. Accordingly it cannot be held, in the terms of sub-sec. (2) to sec. 147, that such right exists. Hence no order can be passed under this section against any person restraining him from fishing in the sea except in a certain manner—Sethukaruppan v. Peer Mahammad, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 350, 1935 M.W.N. 181, 68 M.L.J. 417, 37 Cr.L.J. 4, 159 I.C. 49, 41 M.L.W. 436, 1935 Cr.C. 447, 58 Mad. 876.

This section applies to disputes as to the right to use any land or water, as distinct from disputes as to title to or possession of the land itself, for which provision is made in sec. 145—Ram Dulare v. Ajudhya, 16 O.C. 192, 14 Cr.L.J. 605. Where a party claimed the right to use the land either as a public road or as a pathway, it would seem that sec. 147 is a more appropriate section than sec. 145, Cr. P. C.—Turab Ali v. Shromani Gurdwara, 34 Cr.L.J. 616, Ind. Rul 1933 Lah. 356, 1933 Cr.C. 267, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 145. There is nothing to prevent an alternative claim of this nature being made under sec. 147. A personal easement as well as a public right of way may be inconsistent claims but at the same time either one or the other may be capable of proof—Hamir v. Suresh, 27 Cr.L.J. 841, 95 I.C. 761, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 348.

In a Madras case it was held that the words "land or water" used in this section should be taken in their ordinary significance without the extended meaning given to them by section 145—Palaniyandi v. Palaniappa, 17 Cr.L.J. 325 (Mad.). In a Calcutta case also it was held that the word 'land' in this section did not include crop or produce as in sec. 145—Ali Mohammad v. Fakiruddin, 24 C.W.N. 1039, 22 Cr.L.J. 131. The present amendment, however, expressly lays down that those words are to have the same meaning as in sec. 145.

Since this section as now amended includes rights claimed as an easement, it applies to rights to the use of land or water belonging to others. See also Ganpat, 4 C.W.N. 779. The contrary view taken in Arunachalam v. Chidambaram, 29 Mad. 97 is no longer correct.

Right to tola from a 'hat' :—A dispute as regards the right to collect 'tolas' (small perquisites) from a hat on one day every year, is one concerning the right of use of any land within the meaning of this section—Sarat v. Mobarak, 21 C.W.N. 439, 24 C.L.J. 437, 18 Cr.L.J. 113, 37 I.C. 465.

Rights arising out of contract :—Prior to the present amendment of this section, it was held that a dispute between a landlord and his tenant regarding the right of the latter to reconstruct a gola which had fallen down, was not a matter properly coming within the operation of sec. 147. The settlement of such a dispute involved issues of right which could properly be determined by a Civil Court. The right of use of land contemplated by sec. 147 was one of an entirely different description resembling a right of easement, and not one arising from the terms of a contract between landlord and tenant—Ganpat, 4 C.W.N. 779. So also Arunachalam v. Chidambaram, 29 Mad. 97, 15 M.L.J. 391, 3 Cr.L.J. 31. But this is no longer law. By reason of the present amendment, the rights arising out of a contract will also fall under this section. See Notes under "Change" above. Before the present amendment, the words of the section were "the right of use of any land and water (including any right of way or other easement over the same).” The words of the present section (“whether such right be claimed as an easement or otherwise”) are more general.

Right to use of water :—Where it was found that the plaintiff had a right to the flow of water for purposes of irrigation from a certain channel passing through a village of the defendant who obstructed such flow by erecting bunds, the Magistrate was competent, under this section, to direct the removal of the obstruction—Pasupati v. Nandalal, 5 C.W.N. 67 (70). Where Christians were prevented by Hindus from the lawful exercise of their right to take water from a well, it was held that the Magistrate had jurisdiction under this section to pass an order prohibiting the Hindus from interfering with the exercise of that right—Hindus v. Christians, 21 M.L.J. 486, 11 Cr.L.J. 721, 8 I.C. 484, 1911 M.W.N. 44, 9 M.L.T. 209. See also Fajju v. Sirya, 38 Cr.L.J. 881, 170 I.C. 392, 10 R.L. 107, 39 P.L.R. 491.

Right to let off water :—The right to let off water by the natural course in which it has always flowed and would always flow, so as to prevent inundation of one's own land, is a natural right of every land-holder to the use and enjoyment of his own land. Where the second party erected a bund on the boundary of the first party's village to prevent the flow of such water, the Magistrate had jurisdiction to direct the removal of the bund—Dowlat v. Siva Pershad, 15 C.L.J. 267, 12 Cr.L.J. 319, 10 I.C. 615 (616). Where a party satisfied the Magistrate that he had a right to have an opening in the al for the purpose of passing water and that he exercised the right for several years and also during the last rains when the right was last exercisable, it is clearly the Magistrate's duty to direct the other party to make openings in the al within a reasonable time from the passing of the order—Ambica v. Gur, 39 Cal 560. But where the Magistrate invented a purely imaginary right which the opposite party never claimed, a right to discharge water over the petitioner's land in any direction he pleased simply because his own property was slightly higher, such right could not be made the basis of any order under this section—Haradhone Mukerjee v. Brojendra Nath, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 513, 171 I.C. 268, 38 Cr.L.J. 1071, 41 C.W.N. 900, 10 R.C. 261. As to bundh see Note 406.

Right to fish :—There is nothing in this section which limits its operation only to easement. It applies also to profits a prendre, for instance, the right to fish in a jhal—Dukhi v. Halway, 23 Cal. 55 (59); Kali Kissen v. Anund, 23 Cal. 557. See Note 406.

Right to ferry :—A dispute regarding right to use a ferry comes within the scope of this section—Harbullubh v. Bajrang, 3 C.W.N. 148. See Note 406.

Right to bury the dead is a right contemplated by this section, and the Magistrate has to see whether the right which is exercisable only on particular occasions or particular seasons was exercised during the last of such seasons or occasions—Md. Abdul v. Md. Ashroff, 51 Mad. 522, 29 Cr.L.J. 644 (645), 53 M.L.J. 523, 1927 M.W.N. 789.

Right to worship :—A right to perform the duties of a Pujari in a temple is not a right to the use of any land. It is the worship which is disputed and not the use of land. Therefore, a dispute regarding such a right cannot be the basis of a proceeding under this section—Gujram v. Lal Behary, 37 Cal. 578, 14 C.W.N. 611, 12 C.L.J. 22, 11 Cr.L.J. 292, 6 I.C. 182; Surendra v. Sashi Bhusan, 52 Cal. 959, 42 C.L.J. 127, 92 I.C. 223, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 437, 27 Cr.L.J. 239. See also Manik Chandra v. Prem Nath in Note 404. But when there is a dispute as to the possession of a temple and the right to perform pūja therein the Magistrate can deal with the claim as the right to perform pūja is part of the larger relief that is prayed for. If, however, it is not so included in the major relief, it is doubtful whether an application under sec. 147 can lie merely as to the right to perform pūja in a certain temple—Polaniyandi v. Palaniappa, 34 I.C. 651, A.I.R. 1917 Mad. 840, 17 Cr.L.J. 235, Perumat v. Tirumalai, 34 Cr.L.J. 88, 140 I.C. 900, 1932 M.W.N. 1079, Ind. Rul. 1933 Mad. 63, 37 M.L.W. 143, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 245, 1933 Cr.C. 344. After the amendment of the Cr. P. C., in 1923 no doubt remained as to the provisions of sec. 147 attaching to disputes as regards entry into a temple or mosque or samadh—Daya Ram, 31 Cr.L.J. 1217, 127 I.C.

1930 Cr.C. 672, Ind. Rul. 1930 All. 886, A.I.R. 1930 All. 452. Where the matters in dispute cannot be adjudicated by a Civil Court (e.g., disputes relating to performance of worship and other religious ceremonies), Magistrates have no jurisdiction to deal with those matters under sec. 147. In such matters, if the Magistrate apprehends that there will be a breach of the peace, he is to adopt the procedure prescribed by Chapter VIII, and to take security—In re Atmaram, 14 Bom. 25; Surendra v. Sashi Bhusan, supra. But in Mad. Musaliar v. Kunji, 11 Mad. 323, 2 Weir 117, Kader Batcha v. Kader Batcha, 29 Mad. 237 (238), 4 Cr.L.J. 58, In re Daneshwar, 3 Bom.L.R. 416 (418), Sinnasami v. Palani, 48 M.L.J. 528, 26 Cr.L.J. 1057, 188 I.C. 2, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 779, and Chidambara v. Sengoda, 27 M.L.J. 587, 25 I.C. 999, A.I.R. 1915 Mad. 84, 15 Cr.L.J. 671, a right to worship in a mosque or to officiate as Kazi therein or to perform a pūja, has been held to come within the operation of this section. In a Bombay case, however, it has been held that a dispute regarding the right to perform pūja in a certain temple falls under sec. 145—Pandurang, 24 Bom 527 (531), 2 Bom.L.R. 84. After discussing all the rulings quoted above Pandurang Row, J., observed "It seems to me that where the dispute is regarding a right which is inseparably connected with the use of any land or building, it must be regarded as being within the purview of sec. 147. It may be that the dispute in actual fact may have more to do with what a man does in the temple after entering into it and not so much with his actual entry into the temple nevertheless where the right regarding which a dispute exists is one which is inseparably connected with the right to enter a building and cannot be dissociated from it, the dispute cannot be said to be not one regarding an alleged right of user of the building. In this particular case it would appear that the dispute was also concerned with the right of possession of a particular room kept locked in the temple in which the pūja materials are kept. The possession of this locked room is inseparably connected with the right to worship as pūjari, for without these materials which are kept therein it is not possible for any one to perform pūja as a pūjari. It would, therefore, appear that the present dispute includes a dispute regarding the possession of the locked room in which these paraphernalia of worship are stored. It also appears to me that the policy of the Legislature has been consistently, in the past, to enlarge the jurisdiction of the Magistrate in respect of disputes connected with any kind of user of 'land' in its widest sense, and that it would be inconvenient if disputes which are really inseparably connected with lands or buildings were beyond the jurisdiction of the Magistrate"—Velappa Goundan v. Ramaswami Goundan, 39 Cr. L.J. 705 (706), 176 I.C. 127, 47 M.L.W. 305, (1938) 1 M.W.N. 348, 11 R.M. 32, A.I.R. 1938 Mad 537, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 817.

The Magistrate cannot properly pass any order allowing a person to enter upon land, admittedly in possession of another person, and perform ceremonies upon it against that person's wish. In any event, if the Magistrate feels that he ought to do so in the interests of the public peace, it is at least necessary that he should hold some enquiry under sec. 147, Cr. P. C., in order to discover for himself pending any decision by a Civil Court, whether he has any right to the user of the land in the manner in which he desires to use it—Abdul Majeed v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 383, 180 I.C. 499, 1938 A.W.R. (H.C.) 851, A.I.R. 1939 All 182, 1939 A Cr.C. 70, 11 R.A. 470.

A dispute as regards the offerings made in a temple is a dispute as regards moveable property, and therefore does not fall under this section—Ram Saran v. Raghunandan, 38 Cal. 387, 13 C.L.J. 446, 16 C.W.N. 574, 12 Cr.L.J. 3, 9 I.C. 6; Velappa Goundan v. Ramaswami Goundan, supra. A dispute with regard to collection of offerings at a temple or at a karbala cannot by any stretch of reasoning be said to be a dispute concerning land or water and, therefore, a dispute with respect to collection of offerings cannot come within the purview of sec. 145, Cr. P. C.—Ghulam v. Kaniz, 57 I.C. 92, 5 P.L.J. 246, 1 P.L.T. 608, 21 Cr.L.J. 572, following Guram v. Lal Behari, 6 I.C. 182, 37 Cal. 578, 14 C.W.N. 611, 12 C.L.J. 22, 11 Cr.L.J. 292 and Ram Saran v. Raghu Nandan, supra. See Note 406.

Right to use of privy is not a right to the use of land and water, nor is the use of the privy an easement—In re Shankar, 15 Bom L.R. 329, 14 Cr.L.J. 400 (401), 20 I.C. 224.

Right of way :—A Magistrate is competent to order the removal of an obstruction to a right of way caused by the owner of the land, if there be a likelihood of a breach of the peace in consequence of such obstruction—Lalit Chandra v Tarini, 5 C.W.N. 335 (336). In a dispute as to the right of way, the Magistrate should decide whether the complainant had been in use and occupation of the road, and if so, for how long and if he finds him to be in possession, should retain him in it, leaving the owner of the land to refer the question of the right to the easement to the Civil Court. The Magistrate should not decide against the complainant because he may have another right of way leading to the same place—Toylucko Nath, 2 W.R. 64. Under the Muhammadan law, a Muhammadan cannot say his prayers on the property belonging to another without an express or implied permission of the owner of the property. Therefore, a Muhammadan has no right to say his prayer at a grave situated in land belonging to another which is enclosed by a wall (which negatives any express or implied permission to say prayers on the land), and consequently, he cannot claim a right of way to go over a land belonging to another in order to worship at a grave situated in that land—Rampratab v. Satif, 6 P.L.T. 857, 27 Cr L J. 44.

Right to use public way :—The expression "land or water" in this section does not necessarily refer only to private property, but applies to a public street—Mad Amir Khan v Mahalingam, 51 Mad. 174, 53 M.L.J. 523, 28 Cr L.J. 948, AIR 1927 Mad 985. The section can be applied even when the right of way claimed is a right to a public path. The terms of this section are wide enough to cover the cases of public as well as private right of way. The Magistrate has therefore jurisdiction to direct a person who has obstructed a public pathway by a fence, not to obstruct such a pathway—Karuppanna v Kundasami, 26 M.L.J. 233, 15 Cr L.J. 363, 23 I.C. 730. A right to take a car in procession along a public road to a temple is a right of user of land under this section—In re Basappa, 27 Bom L.R. 1058, 26 Cr L.J. 1422, 89 I.C. 846. The Magistrate has jurisdiction under this section to pass order even against the right of passage through a public street. But he ought not to pass such a prohibitory order, unless it is clearly proved that there is a right by custom or by grant or by a Statute in one section of the public to prevent another section of the public from using the public street on particular occasions or for particular purposes, when such use is ordinarily and prima facie lawful—Sudalaimuthu v Enan, 16 Cr L.J. 767, 31 I.C. 367 (Mad). The Magistrate has jurisdiction to pass an order allowing the Hindus to pass through a public street with a procession and prohibiting the Muhammadans from interfering with the use by the Hindus of the public street, when it is found that the Hindus had used the street and had taken the procession during the previous season—Mad Amir Khan v Mahalingam, 51 Mad 174, 53 M.L.J. 523, 28 Cr L.J. 948. When the subject of a dispute is a public highway, a Magistrate has no power to object to the lawful use of it by any class of persons. Except when danger to the public health is occasioned, the conveyance of a corpse along a highway is not an unlawful use of the highway. Therefore, an order that the Hindus should not carry corpses through a street to which the Muhammadans object, is illegal—In re Narayana, 7 Mad 49. The right to use a public way for carrying corpses is a natural and ordinary right of citizens, and it is open to question whether section 147 applies to cases of dispute concerning the exercise of such a grant—Kelandai v. Kalabudda, 6 M.L.J. 193.

Bund :—Where the petitioners alleged that they had a right to irrigate their lands from a Nala but that the defendants had constructed a bund and thus prevented them from exercising their right and that there was an apprehension of breach of peace, the proper course for the Magistrate to adopt in the case would have been to have placed both sides on security under sec. 107, Cr. P. C., and left them to have their rights settled by the Civil Court, without passing an order directing the defendants to remove the bund under this section—Ahmad Din v. Jiwan, 27 Cr.L.J. 801, 95 I.C. 465, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 550.

The right to lay warps in a street is not a right to possession of land but a right to the use of it such as sec. 147, Cr. P. C., deals with—Sankara v. Kuthalinga, 19 Cr.L.J. 977, 47 I.C. 877.

A dispute regarding collection of certain fees called khutagari, arhat and keali, levied in respect of boats bringing grain and moored in a shallow channel, but dissociated from the ownership of the site, comes within the purview of this section—Kunjo Mandal v. Sarju Ram Marwari, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 206, 1939 P.W.N. 66, 20 P.L.T. 164, 181 I.C. 176, 40 Cr.L.J. 538.

467. Easements:—This section is not confined to easements acquired by uninterrupted enjoyment for 20 years provided by sec. 26 of the Limitation Act—Srimanta v. Indra Narayan, 13 C.W.N. 859, 10 Cr.L.J. 292. This term includes profits a pendre, e.g., a right to fish—Dukhi v. Halway, 23 Cal. 55 (59), or a right to moor boats and dry fishing nets on the land of another—Kalkumar v. Bijoy, 21 Cr.L.J. 697, 57 I.C. 937 (Cal.).

This section applies to positive as well as to negative easements. See the Statements of Objects and Reasons cited under heading "Change", supra.

468. Preliminary order in writing:—This section as now amended requires that the Magistrate must record as under section 145, a preliminary proceeding stating the ground of his being satisfied as to the likelihood of a breach of the peace. The contrary rulings in Miller v. Rajendra, 2 C.W.N. 670 and Chidambara v. Sengoda, 27 M.L.J. 587, 15 Cr.L.J. 671 are hereby overruled.

The preliminary order under section 147, just as in the case of an order under sec. 145 directing the parties to appear for the inquiry, must direct them to appear before the Magistrate himself who issued the preliminary order. An order directing them to appear before another Magistrate is without jurisdiction, and all proceedings on an inquiry so conducted are invalid—Misri Chaudhury v. Narasingh, 2 P.L.T. 186, 22 Cr.L.J. 483.

Interlocutory order:—Where the Magistrate ordered the non-applicant not to interfere in any way with the exercise of the alleged right by the applicant till the final decision of the case. Held that since there is no provision under sec. 147, Cr. P. C., for passing such an interlocutory order which in terms is nothing short of the final order, the same was obviously illegal—Ramchandra v. Shankarrao, 33 Cr.L.J. 556, 138 I.C. 38, 15 N.L.J. 28, 1933 Cr.C. 433, A.L.R. 1932 Nag. 83, Ind. Rul. 1932 Nag. 71.

The order purporting to be made under sec. 147 (2), Cr. P. C., prohibiting interference with the existing rights pending decision in the matter is not a legal order. Section 147 (2) contemplates a final order made after due enquiry in the manner provided for by that section and does not justify an interlocutory order of that nature. Should it appear to the Magistrate to be necessary to pass an ad interim order of any kind he may do so in the manner provided by sec. 145, cl. (4), proviso (2), Cr. P. C.—Khuda Bux v. Mozharul Haque, 44 C.W.N. 623, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 330, 41 Cr.L.J. 728, 89 I.C. 354.

469. Inquiry as under sec. 145:—A case under this section is to be decided by the same procedure and on the same principles as a case under sec. 145—Ram Saran v. Raghunandan, 38 Cal. 387 (390). This contemplates the filing of written statements, taking of evidence, and if necessary, local investigation. Therefore, an order under sec. 147 passed on proceedings taken under sec. 133, without any action in accordance with sec. 145, is without jurisdiction—Abdool v. Sagar Ali, 15 C.W.N. 667, 12 Cr.L.J. 43, 9 I.C. 262. Where the petitioners set up a right of easement over a road which the opposite party attempted to close, and the Magistrate, instead of following the procedure laid down in this section, went over to the office of the opposite party, examined certain documents and correspondence in respect of the road, and then passed an order declaring the road to belong to the opposite party and forbidding the petitioners to enter upon the road, held that the procedure was wholly unjustifiable, as he made inquiries in the absence of the petitioners, and without giving them an opportunity of adducing their own evidence and examining witnesses, and passed the order without coming to a distinct finding as to the alleged right of easement set up by the petitioners—Narendra v. E. I. Ry., 5 P.L.T. 419, 25 Cr.L.J. 455, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 717.

When proceedings are started under sec. 145 on the basis of a police report, but during the trial the Magistrate finds it is a matter falling under sec. 147, he can convert the proceedings into one under that section—Anath Bandhu v. Wahid Ali, 25 Cr.L.J. 558 (Cal.); In re Amarsang, 48 Bom 512 (515), 26 Bom L.R. 436

Long and protracted inquiry—Question of title—Where a dispute concerning easements is likely to involve a long and complicated inquiry and the presence of a large number of people, the proper course for the Magistrate to follow is to bind down under sec. 107 such of the person as are likely to disturb the peace, instead of embarking upon an inquiry under sec. 147—Kali Kissen v. Anund, 23 Cal. 557 (563); Bathoo v. Domi, 21 Cal. 727. So also, where the settlement of a dispute involves issues of right which can only be determined by a Civil Court, the proper course for the Magistrate is to proceed under sec. 107—Ganpat, 4 C.W.N. 779; Arunachalam v. Chidambaram, 29 Mad. 97.

470. Notice to parties:—The inquiry contemplated by this section is a judicial inquiry and the opinion to be formed must be a judicial one formed upon evidence legally before the Magistrate. The evidence before the Magistrate would not be legal, if it were taken behind the back of persons who claimed or denied the right, i.e., if they had not been represented at the inquiry and had no notice of it—Bathoo Lal v. Domi Lal, 21 Cal. 727. Where an order was passed under this section without giving notice to the party concerned, the order was without jurisdiction and liable to be set aside—Crown v. Bhana, 1909 PR 12, 11 Cr.L.J. 61. Where the proceedings were originally started in respect of a portion of a pathway, but subsequently the Court amended the proceedings by making them applicable to the whole pathway without notice to the party affected, held that the final order was not binding on the party affected—Janaki v. Monmohan, 25 Cr.L.J. 674, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 263, 81 I.C. 162.

Actual notice should be given to all the persons claiming or denying the right; notice to servants of such persons is not equivalent to notice to them—Bathoo Lal v. Domi Lal, 21 Cal. 727. The inquiry presumes not that one party only, but that both parties to the dispute, will be afforded an opportunity of appearing and adducing evidence on all the material facts—In re Alfred Lindsay, 4 Mad. 121.

470A. Section 145 and sec. 147:—No order can be passed under sec. 147, Cr. P. C., when notice was not issued under that section as required by the section itself but a notice was issued under sec. 145, Cr. P. C.—Turab Ali Khan v. Shromani Gurdwara, 34 Cr.L.J. 616, 143 I.C. 477, Ind. Rul. 1933 Lah. 356, 1933 Cr.C. 267, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 145. The Calcutta, Allahabad, Bombay and Patna High Courts seem to have taken a different view in Anath v. Wahid Ali, 26 Cr.L.J. 558, 85 I.C. 654, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 1022, Ch. Gajraj, A.I.R. 1936 All. 320, 37 Cr.L.J. 705, 162 I.C. 760, 1936 Cr.C. 490, 1936 A.L.J. 746, 1936 A.L.R. 472, 8 R.A. 900, Amarsang Shivasangi, 26 Cr.L.J. 772, 86 I.C. 404, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 452, 48 Bom. 512, 26 Bom. L.R. 436 and Kunjo Mandal v. Sarju Ram Marwari, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 206, 1939 P.W.N. 66, 20 P.L.T. 164, 40 Cr.L.J. 538, 181 I.C. 176, 11 R.P. 573, 5 B.R. 539 respectively. Conversely, when a notice was issued under section 147, Criminal Procedure Code and, on objection made by the parties, the Magistrate proceeded with the case and passed a final order under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., without informing the parties about the change and without making an order under sec. 145 (1), Cr. P. C., the Magistrate acted without jurisdiction—Subramania v. Sannasia, 5 M.L.T. 103, 19 M.L.J. 18, 9 Cr.L.J. 565, 2 I.C. 310. See Notes 432 and 407. In Indideo v. Durga Prasad, 37 Cr.L.J. 378, 160 I.C. 945, 17 P.L.T. 22, 1936 Cr.C. 83, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 59, the Patna High Court directed that notices issued by the Magistrate under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., be considered equivalent to notices under sec. 147 (1), following Kaniz Amina, A.I.R. 1918 Pat. 663, 47 I.C. 65, 19 Cr.L.J. 869, 3 Pat.L.J. 243, where notices issued under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., were treated by the High Court as equivalent to preliminary notices under sec. 145, cl (1), Cr. P. Code.

471. Parties:—In an inquiry under this section, it is sufficient if persons who claim for themselves the right (e.g., right to fish in a jhil), though that right be derived from others, are made parties. It is not necessary that the proprietors (of the jhil) should be added as parties—Dukhi v. Halway, 23 Cal 55 (59).

A Magistrate is not competent to add parties to a proceeding under sec. 147, after making a preliminary order. An order made after the addition of parties is null and void only as against the added party, but is binding on those to whom it is properly directed—Pasupati v. Nanda Lal, 5 C.W.N. 67 (70), 28 Cal. 734. But see Parasashram v. Gopal, 25 Cr.L.J. 353, 77 I.C. 289, A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 294 where it has been held to be a mere irregularity which does not vitiate the proceedings.

472. Evidence:—The inquiry contemplated by the section is a judicial inquiry and the opinion of the Magistrate must be a judicial one formed upon evidence legally before him—Bathoo Lal v. Domi Lal, 21 Cal. 727. A party against whom proceedings are instituted is entitled to produce evidence to prove that the case does not fall within this section—Bhana, 12 P.R. 1909, 11 Cr.L.J. 61, 4 I.C. 860.

An order passed merely on a written statement, without taking any evidence in proof of the allegation contained in the written statement, is bad in law—Md. Noor v. Bikkhan, 30 Cal 918, 7 C.W.N. 510. So also, an order passed without giving the parties an opportunity of calling evidence, is one without jurisdiction—Pilaji v. Darya, 20 Cr.L.J. 110, 48 I.C. 990 (Nag.). So also Narendra v. E. I. Ry., 5 P.L.T. 419 cited in Note 469 above.

But where the allegation of one party is admitted by the other, no evidence is necessary in addition to the written statement—Haromohan v. Gobind, 7 C.W.N. 351.

The action of the Magistrate in admitting documents after the close of the case without notice to the other party and without giving them an opportunity to adduce rebutting evidence is illegal—Ramroop v. Mano, 35 Cr.L.J. 481, 147 I.C. 774, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 86, 1934 Cr.C. 113.

Local inspection:—In a matter under this section, the Magistrate is bound to hear the evidence tendered by the parties. He cannot summarily deal with the case after local inspection—Ganpat, 4 C.W.N. 779. A decision of the Magistrate based substantially upon impression obtained as a result of his local inspection, is bad and liable to be set aside. But a decision based on the evidence as well as local inspection (the one corroborating the other) is not illegal—Muhammad Musa v. Shyam Sundar, 2 P.L.T. 681, 64 I.C. 131, 22 Cr.L.J. 739. The Magistrate can make a local inspection even prior to taking evidence in the case. But the finding must be based on evidence duly recorded and not merely upon the impressions formed on a local inspection—Abdul Hamid v. Hasan Raza, 4 P.L.T. 297, 72 I.C. 951, 24 Cr.L.J. 487. The rule that in criminal cases Courts are justified in making a local inspection only in order to explain the facts appearing in the evidence (i.e., only after hearing the evidence) does not apply to sec. 147. Thus, where the levels and the falls of water are concerned, the Magistrate can make a local inspection even before hearing the evidence in the case—Dowlat v. Siva, 15 C.L.J. 267, 12 Cr.L.J. 319, 10 I.C. 615.

473. Proviso—User of right:—In the absence of a finding that the right has been exercised within the periods specified by the proviso to sub-section (2), the final order under this section cannot be maintained—Sirkawal v. Bhuja Singh, 5 P.L.T. 457, 25 Cr.L.J. 996. Where a right is exercisable at all times of the year, there must be a finding that the right was exercised within three months—Guru Prasad v. Lachman, 14 Cr.L.J. 303 (Cal.); Bhana, 12 P.R. 1909, 11 Cr.L.J. 61; Grant v. Padarath, 2 P.L.T. 364, 22 Cr.L.J. 463. Where it is proved that the first party have had an uninterrupted use of water of a nala for a period of 20 years, which they have enjoyed as an easement and as of right, and the erection of a bund has led to a dispute, there is then a sufficient finding that the right in dispute has been exercised within either of the periods mentioned in the proviso—Pasupati v Nanda Lal, 5 C.W.N. 67 (70, 71). Where it is found that the Hindus had used a public street and had taken a procession along that street on a previous season, the Magistrate has jurisdiction to pass an order allowing the Hindus to take the procession on the present season and prohibiting the Muhammadans from interfering with the use by the Hindus of that street—Amir Khan v Mahalingam, 51 Mad 174, 53 M.L.J. 523, 28 Cr.L.J. 948 (949). Where the non-exercise of the right on the previous occasion was due to circumstances beyond the control of the party claiming the right, e.g., where the non-exercise was due to obstructions caused by the opponents of such party, the proviso to sub-section (2) does not apply, and the Magistrate is not justified in prohibiting the party claiming the right from exercising their right. The proviso obviously contemplates a non-exercise for reasons within the control of the persons claiming the right. Nor is the Magistrate justified in holding under sub-section (3) that the alleged right did not exist at all—in re Basappa, 27 Bom.L.R. 1058, 26 Cr.L.J. 1422 (1423), 89 I.C. 846. The Madras High Court dissents from this view and holds that the proviso applies equally well even though the non-exercise was due to circumstances beyond the control of the persons seeking to exercise the right—Vellayan v Balakrishna, 1931 M.W.N. 554, 32 Cr.L.J. 972.

The words "on the last of such occasions before such institution" at the end of the proviso mean "the last of such occasions before the institution" on which the right might have been asserted—Jadubans v. Pandey Bansidhar, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 557 (558), 15 P.L.T. 780, 152 I.C. 295, 36 Cr.L.J. 106.

"Institution of the inquiry"—The date of the "institution of the inquiry" within the meaning of the proviso, does not refer to the date when the formal proceedings are drawn up under this section. An inquiry is instituted within the three months of the obstruction complained of within the meaning of the proviso, where the Magistrate hears the pleaders of the parties and directs a local inquiry within three months of the date of the obstruction, even though the formal order is drawn up after three months—Rama Nath v. Saroda, 44 C.L.J. 214, 28 Cr.L.J. 1, 99 I.C. 33; Bhagawan v. Mathuri, 31 Cr.L.J. 791, 125 I.C. 143, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 349. See also Daya Ram, 31 Cr.L.J. 1217, 127 I.C. 422, A.I.R. 1930 All. 452.

The 'inquiry' that is contemplated by the proviso is the inquiry by the Magistrate into the rights of parties, and not an inquiry by the Police into the existence of the likelihood of a breach of the peace. Where in the case of an alleged obstruction of a pathway, proceedings under sec 147 were drawn up by the Magistrate more than three months after the date of the obstruction complained of, the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to proceed under this section. The fact that he ordered a police inquiry within three months of the obstruction could not give him jurisdiction—Ram Chandra v. Aditya, 53 Cal. 851, 30 C.W.N. 863, 27 Cr.L.J. 1089, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 1051, 97 I.C. 353; Sohan v. Jitu, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 291, 1930 Cr.C. 608, 122 I.C. 145, 31 Cr.L.J. 361; Vellayan v. Balakrishna, 32 Cr.L.J. 972, 133 I.C. 5, Ind. Rul. 1931 Mad. 693, 1931 M.W.N. 554, 1931 Cr.C. 559, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 495; Babu Khan v. Raj Kishore, 20 Cr.L.J. 558, 51 I.C. 846. But it would surely be unreasonable to hold that the applicant is out of time because the Magistrate was unable, notwithstanding the promptness of the applicant in coming to Court, to enter into an inquiry within the period of limitation—Jadubans v. Pandey Bansidhar, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 557, 15 P.L.T. 740, 152 I.C. 295, 36 Cr.L.J. 106. The date of the institution of the enquiry is the date when the likelihood of a breach of the peace was brought to the notice of the Magistrate and not the date when he dismissed the complaint of substantive offences under the Indian Penal Code—Kinci v. Gobind Prasad, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 44, 37 Cr.L.J. 327, 160 I.C. 795, 17 P.L.T. 37, 1936 Cr.C. 69.

474. Nature of order:—The order under this section is a thing to be done or directing that a thing shall not be done. This enables the Magistrate to make a purely declaratory order. It only prevent arbitrary interruption by any person of rights actually enjoyed which have been exercised by the public or by a person or class or persons—Maharaja of Burdwan v. Chairman, Darjeeling Municipality, 5 Cal. 194.

The Magistrate must have power to make an order whichever party establishes its right. In this clause, therefore, "if it appears to him that such right exists," the words "such right" must be understood as meaning such right as is claimed by either party. When the Magistrate had found that one of the parties has the right which he claims the enabling clause which follows, "may make an order permitting such thing to be done, or directing that such thing should not be done as the case may be," is clearly intended to give him the power to protect the right so found to exist. The relative words "such thing" have no true antecedent but the sense is not difficult. The protection is to be afforded by some appropriate order of permission or prohibition—Pyari Mohan v. Harish Chandra, 23 C.W.N. 956 (958), 49 I.C. 923.

The language of this section has been altered by the Amendment Act of 1923. Under the old section the Magistrate could make an order "permitting such thing to be done or directing that such thing shall not be done" That is, the Magistrate could make an order directing a party to do a positive act. Thus, he was competent to make an order for the removal of an obstruction to a right of way, if there was a likelihood of a breach of the peace in consequence of such obstruction—Lalit Chandra v. Tarini, 5 C.W.N. 335 (336); or an order for the removal of an obstruction to the right to the flow of water caused by the erection of bunds—Pasupati v. Nandalal, 5 C.W.N. 67 (70); and the Magistrate could order the removal of an obstruction under this section even though obstruction was caused to a public path, in spite of the express provisions of sec. 133—Karuppanna v. Kandasami, 26 M.L.J. 233, 15 Cr.L.J. 362; Sudalaimutha v. Enan, 16 Cr.L.J. 767 (Mad). In Ambica Prosad Singh v. Gur Sahay Singh, 39 Cal 560, it was held that the Magistrate had jurisdiction under this section, on being satisfied that a party had a right to have an opening in an ail, for the purpose of draining off the surplus water from his lands and that he had exercised the right for several years, ... to pass an order requiring the opposite party to make the opening within a reasonable time, and, on his failure to do so, directing the police to make the same. Under sub-s. (2) as now amended, the Magistrate can only make an order "prohibiting any interference with the exercise of such right." These words do not give the Magistrate any power of directing one of the parties to do a positive act, by way of mandatory injunction. The power given by this clause is analogous to the power of a Civil Court to grant a temporary injunction by issuing a prohibitory order restraining any person from doing any act which interferes with the right of another. Therefore, where the second party raised a wall on his own land blocking the windows in the house of the first party and thereby shut out light and air from a room in that house, the Magistrate had no power to order the second party to demolish the wall—Hari Mati v. Hari Dasi, 41 C.L.J. 568, 26 Cr.L.J. 1265, 88 I.C. 1041, 30 C.W.N. 238 (240), A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 991; Tarini v. Dwarka, 35 Cr.L.J. 1093, 150 I.C. 600, 38 C.W.N. 476, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 556, 1934 Cr.C. 789, not following Khajir v. Tabrej, 34 Cr.L.J. 1230, 146 I.C. 223, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 752, 1933 Cr.C. 1254 where a contrary view seems to have been taken. No mandatory order for removal of a fence can be passed under this section—Jogendra v. Birendra, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 454, 39 C.W.N. 394, 61 C.L.J. 307, following Hari Mati v. Hari Dasi and Tarini v. Dwarka, supra. Where the order directed a person not to obstruct a certain drain and there was added to it an injunction directing him to remove a wall which he had already constructed, held that there is nothing in sec. 147, Cr. P. C., which would entitle the Magistrate to direct him to pull down the wall—Haradhone Mukerjee v. Brojendra Nath, 10 R.C. 261, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 513, 41 C.W.N. 900, 171 I.C. 268, 38 Cr.L.J. 1071. The Magistrate has no power under sec. 147, Cr. P. C., to make an order in the nature of a mandatory injunction directing removal of an obstruction from any way lawfully used by the public. But under sec. 133, Cr. P. C., he has power to bring about the removal—Usman Ali v. Emp., A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 297, 1938 N.L.J. 139, 175 I.C. 234, I.L.R. 1938 Nag. 580, 10 R.N. 440, 39 Cr.L.J. 584. See also Note 322.

The Madras High Court, however, holds that the law has not been altered, and that this section enables a Magistrate to pass an order in the nature of a mandatory injunction; because an order "prohibiting the interference with the exercise of such right", e.g., an order to the effect that A shall not retain any obstruction to the flow of water to the exclusion of the enjoyment of the right of user of B, means the same thing as an order directing A to remove the obstruction which he has put to the flow of water—Venkana v. Venkata Surya, 59 M.L.J. 430, 32 Cr.L.J. 215 (217), 129 I.C. 68, Ind. Rul. 1931 Mad. 212, 32 M.L.W. 175, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 865, 1930 Cr.C. 1121, 1930 M.W.N. 987.

Discussing the rulings quoted above their Lordships of the Calcutta High Court, in a very recent case, have held that they are not prepared to say that the alteration brought about by the amendment of 1923 makes any difference to the power conferred upon Magistrates in matters of this kind. Section 147 (2) does in a proper case cover the power to order a person to do something or, in other words, the power to direct a mandatory injunction. On the analogy of sec. 145, Cr. P. C., the obvious intention of the legislature was to allow the free exercise of the right which had been established in this summary proceeding until the final rights of the contending parties had been ultimately decided in the Civil Court, and it seems to be clear that it would be impossible to give effect to this intention in many cases without issuing some order of a mandatory nature. The language of sub-sec (2) of sec 147 is sufficiently wide to confer a discretion upon the Magistrate as to the nature of the order that he may make in prohibiting any interference with the right of the successful party. Therefore in the case of the obstruction of a sweeper's passage by a fence it is both reasonable and legal to hold that an order prohibiting any interference with the right to use the passage should involve a direction to the effect that the obstruction should be removed—Badridas v. Sohan Lal, 44 C.W.N. 368.

Where a right exists, the Magistrate may make an order prohibiting any interference with its exercise. Therefore, the Magistrate may issue an ordinary injunction restraining the first party from interfering with the exercise of the rights to the water which have been declared to be in the second party by preventing them from interfering with the closing of the cutting by which the water is being diverted—Ram Dhan v. Barhamdeo Lal, 31 Cr.L.J. 247, 121 I.C. 461, 10 P.L.T. 376, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 351, 1929 Cr.C. 153. When a right has been given by a Court of competent jurisdiction the removal of any obstruction in the enjoyment of that right amounts to an ancillary order and does not amount to a mandatory order—ibid. See also B B Biswas v Muchiram Mahata, 40 Cr.L.J. 345, 180 I.C. 332, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 111, 20 P.L.T. 194.

This section (old) does not enable the Magistrate to order the Police to remove the obstruction. There is no indication in the Code that the Legislature intended the Magistrate to carry out an order under this section through the agency of the Police. This section clearly contemplates orders directed to persons who are parties to the dispute—Dalmir v. Khodadad, 36 Cal 923 (926). But see contra—Dowlat v. Siva, 15 C.L.J. 267, 12 Cr.L.J. 319, 10 I.C. 615 (616) (which professes to distinguish 36 Cal. 923) and Ambica v. Gur, 39 Cal 560. However, these are cases under the old section which has now been substantially altered.

When the Magistrate finds that the disputed road is the private road of the opposite party, the appropriate order to be passed is a declaration that the road is not a public road and a prohibition directed against the petitioners going on the road. An order declaring that the road is in the opposite party's possession and prohibiting all disturbance of such possession until eviction in due course of law is one really under sec. 145 (6) Cr. P. C., and is not a proper order under this section—Dhansar Coal Co. Ltd. v. Babu Lal Agarwala, 39 Cr.L.J. 363, 173 I.C. 750, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 133, 1938 P.W.N. 245, 4 B.R. 329, 19 P.L.T. 323, 10 R.P. 436.

It is not proper to use official means to enable any party to trespass upon land in the possession of another unless it is decided in the exercise of some jurisdiction that the party who wishes to enter upon the land is entitled to do so—Gurmanj Saran

v. Radha Swami Sat Sang Sabha, 38 Cr.L.J. 46 (48), 165 I.C. 721, A.I.R. 1936 All. 759, 1936 A.L.J. 1047, 1936 Cr.C. 1000, 1936 A.L.R. 945, 9 R.A. 303

Duration of order:—An order under this section is bad in form, if it contains no restriction of time for which it is to operate. The order must contain the restriction that it is to operate “until the person claiming that such thing may be done obtains the decision of a competent Civil Court adjudging him to be entitled to do such thing”—In re Atmaram, 14 Bom 25 (27). See Form XXIV of Sch. V.

Sub-section (4):—An order under this section must be subject to any subsequent decision of a competent Civil Court. It therefore follows that if the matters in dispute are not adjudicable by a Civil Court, this section has no application, and the Magistrate should take proceedings under Ch VIII to prevent a breach of the peace—Atmaram, 14 Bom 25 (27, 28). If the matter which is in dispute under this section (e.g., a disputed fishery right) has already been adjudicated upon by a Civil Court, a Magistrate has no jurisdiction to enquire into a claim which is entirely contrary to that Court's decree—In re Anya Shidya, 29 Bom L.R. 715, 28 Cr.L.J. 578 (579).

475. Revival of proceedings:—Where during the pendency of proceedings under sec. 147, the parties referred the dispute to arbitration, whereupon the Magistrate made an order to the effect that further proceedings were unnecessary, and they were therefore stayed, but after the arbitration proceedings (which remained pending for one year) became ineffectual, the Magistrate continued the proceedings under sec. 147, held that the Magistrate's order staying further proceedings ousted his jurisdiction to continue the proceedings. Moreover, the Magistrate could not revive the proceedings unless he had drawn up fresh proceedings and unless he was satisfied that there was a fresh dispute likely to cause a fresh breach of the peace after the arbitration proceedings ceased; and he was not justified in assuming that the causes which originally existed still continued to exist—Kalananda v. Rameshwar, 15 C.W.N. 271 (273), 11 Cr.L.J. 729.

Revision:—See Note 447 under sec. 145.

It is not usual for a High Court to interfere with the discretion of the Magistrate unless the order is made without jurisdiction, or if the Magistrate has not followed the procedure laid down—Parashram v. Gopal, 25 Cr.L.J. 353, 77 I.C. 289, A.I.R. 1924 Nag 294.

The High Court would not order a Magistrate to initiate proceedings under sec. 147, Cr. P. C., or under any of the preventive sections of the Code when he has refused to take action thereunder. The Magistrate is responsible for the peace of the district and when he says that it is not a proper case under sec. 147, Cr. P. C., and therefore, no action is necessary, it is not competent for the High Court to interfere with such an order—B. B. Biswas v. Muchiram Mahata, 40 Cr.L.J. 345, 180 I.C. 332, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 111, 20 P.L.T. 194.

148. (1) Whenever a local inquiry is necessary for the purposes of this Chapter, any District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate may depute any Magistrate subordinate to him to make the inquiry, and may furnish him with such written instructions as may seem necessary for his guidance, and may declare by whom the whole or any part of the necessary expenses of the inquiry shall be paid.

(2) The report of the person so deputed may be read as evidence in the case.

(3) When any costs have been incurred by any party to a proceeding under this Chapter for witnesses' or pleaders' fees or both, the Magistrate passing a decision under section 145, section 146 or section 147 may direct by whom such costs shall be paid, whether by such party or by any other party to the proceeding, and whether in whole or in part or proportion. All costs so directed to be paid may be recovered as if they were fines.

Order as to costs.

(3) When any costs have been incurred by any party to a proceeding under this Chapter, * * * * the Magistrate passing a decision under section 145, section 146 or section 147 may direct by whom such costs shall be paid, whether by such party or by any other party to the proceeding, and whether in whole or in part or proportion. Such costs may include any expenses incurred in respect of witnesses, and of pleaders' fees which the Court may consider reasonable.

Order as to costs.

Change:—Sub-section (3) has been amended by sec 31 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923). For reasons see Note 478 below.

476. Local inquiry:—"Local investigations should only be ordered in cases where they are absolutely required by the Courts on subordinate points for a determination of the main issue in the case, for instance, in cases in which it is necessary to ascertain whether particular lands are identical with the lands detailed in documents, and in such cases only. When, however, any fact can be elicited by evidence, that evidence should be heard by the Court itself"—Cal H. C. Civ No 41 of 166. The scope of local inquiry is extremely limited. It should be restricted solely to some questions relating to the feature of the property about which the dispute has arisen, and should not be directed to any matter which can be proved before the Magistrate by oral evidence, such as the question of actual possession—In re Baikunt, 3 C.L.R. 134; Lachmi Narain v. Mukhram, 24 Cr.L.J. 507, 72 I.C. 971 (Pat). The object of local inspection is to understand and appreciate the topography of the land in dispute in order to aid the Magistrate in appreciating the evidence offered by the Court; but the local inspection cannot take the place of legal evidence, much less the result thereof can be used as a basis for the decision—Ram Ratan v. Tarak Nath, 25 Cr.L.J. 412, 77 I.C. 492, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 249. Thus, in a case where the levels and the falls of water are concerned, local inspection is eminently necessary—Doulat v. Siva, 15 C.L.J. 267, 12 Cr.L.J. 319, 10 I.C. 615. So also, where rights of irrigation and rights of taking water through particular reservoirs are concerned, a local inspection is immediately necessary—Abdul Hamid v. Hasan, 4 P.L.T. 297, 24 Cr.L.J. 487.

The term "local inquiry" in this section contemplates delegation of judicial functions; the mere making a survey of the disputed land and preparing a map thereof do not amount to a local inquiry under this section, because they are not judicial but purely ministerial acts; and such acts can be entrusted to a person other than a Magistrate, e.g., to a pleader Commissioner (or even an amin). The report of such a person cannot be read as evidence under sub-section (2) but he must be called as a witness and examined and cross-examined as to his report—Chulas Mahto v. Surendra, 1 Pat. 75, 3 P.L.T. 17, 23 Cr.L.J. 152, 65 I.C. 616.

Who can make the inquiry—The trying Magistrate can himself make the local inquiry. Though as a rule it is better to have the local investigation carried out by some other person, there is nothing in law to prevent the presiding Magistrate from conducting the inquiry himself, provided he records what he saw and does not act upon hearsay evidence—Dowlat v. Siva, 15 C.L.J. 267, 10 I.C. 615 (616); Abdul Hamid v. Hasan, 4 P.L.T. 297, 24 Cr.L.J. 487.

This section empowers the presiding Magistrate to depute a subordinate Magistrate to make the inquiry, but the person deputed must be a Magistrate, not a Kanungoe—In re Uma Churn, 7 C.L.R. 352. If, however, the trying Magistrate deposes a Kanungoe to make an inquiry, his report cannot be taken as evidence in the case, like the report of a sub-Magistrate, but the Kanungoe (like any other private person who has seen the place) must come into the witness-box and depose on oath as to what he saw—Achambut v. Sarada, 12 Cr.L.J. 480 (Cal.).

The deputed Magistrate must make the inquiry himself; he cannot delegate it to some body else—Jaiwant v. Rama Rao, 20 Cr.L.J. 107, 48 I.C. 987 (Nag.).

Recording evidence by the deputed Magistrate:—The local inquiry authorised by this section is not merely a local inspection by the sub-Magistrate, but includes the act of examining witnesses and recording evidence by such Magistrate in the course of the inquiry—Muthuswami v. Kalinga, 33 M.L.J. 78, 18 Cr.L.J. 715 (716).

477. Report of the deputed Magistrate:—Sub-section (2) provides that the report of the deputed Magistrate may be read as evidence in the case; but it is not necessary to examine such Magistrate on oath as a witness—Achambut v. Sarada, 12 Cr.L.J. 480 (Cal.).

When a local inquiry is instituted, and the result reported, such report becomes a part of the proceedings in the case, and the party affected by it is entitled to be acquainted with the result of it and to have an opportunity of rebutting the report, if he thinks necessary so to do—Jaiwanti v. Rama Rao, 20 Cr.L.J. 107, 48 I.C. 987 (Nag.); Mir Dhunoo v. Brown, 21 W.R. 25. If a Magistrate makes a local inquiry he must make a note of what he saw and must place it on the record so that the parties may be in a position to know what impression the Magistrate has got by the local inquiry. It is possible that the Magistrate may have formed a wrong impression, and if the results of his inspection are recorded, the parties would be in a position to know, if there has been an error, and to remove the wrong impression formed by the Magistrate—Abdul Hamid v. Hasan, 4 P.L.T. 297, 24 Cr.L.J. 487.

Decision based on report:—A Magistrate cannot base his decision merely on the report of the subordinate Magistrate, without examining any witnesses—Pitambar v. Saroda, 10 A.L.J. 465, 13 Cr.L.J. 777; Baliarsimhuni v. Godaganma, 33 Cr.L.J. 536, 138 I.C. 68, 1932 M.W.N. 425, 1932 Cr.C. 334, Ind Rul 1932 Mad. 496, A.I.R. 1932 Mad 368, 35 M.L.W. 390; Ramratan v. Taraknath, 25 Cr.L.J. 412 (Pat.). The recording of evidence and the examination of witnesses by the sub-Magistrate do not absolve the trying Magistrate from the duty imposed upon him by sec. 145 (4) of receiving the evidence produced before him by the parties and taking any further evidence he may think necessary—Muthuswami v. Kalinga, 33 M.L.J. 78, 18 Cr.L.J. 715 (716). But if the parties neither asked to be heard nor tendered any evidence which the Magistrate refused, held that the Magistrate deciding the case on the basis of the report of the inquiry acted within his jurisdiction—Pisruddin v. Totajannessa, 14 Cr.L.J. 302 (303) (Cal.). Where the trying Magistrate based his order on the report of the sub-Magistrate and on the evidence recorded by him during the local inquiry, and both parties were quite content to abide by the result of the sub-Magistrate's inquiry, and no objections were advanced before the trying Magistrate against the sub-Magistrate's finding, and no further evidence was produced by them before the trying Magistrate, it was held that the order of the trying Magistrate was not without jurisdiction and should not be interfered with in revision—Muthuswami v. Kalinga, 33 M.L.J. 78, 18 Cr.L.J. 715 (716). Where a Magistrate twice made local inspection and without making any record of the result of his observations he used his conversations at the time of his local inspections in the course of his judgment in substitution of and in order to supplement the evidence recorded by him, held that the Magistrate turned himself into a witness in the case, that he ought to have recorded the result of his local inspections which would have given both parties a chance of challenging the correctness of his observations and that the order must be set aside—Ramsundar v. Kesho Prasad, 25 CrLJ. 545, 81 I.C. 33, A.I.R. 1922 Pat 294. See Note 408

478. Costs:—Before this section was amended by the 1923 Amendment Act, it was held that only costs which a Magistrate could award under this section were those incurred for witnesses or pleaders' fees or both. He could not make an order for any other costs, e.g., costs on account of damage to crops—Prayyag v. Gobind, 32 Cal. 602, 9 C.W.N. 862. See also 22 CrLJ 481, 62 I.C. 177, 2 P.L.T. 267. So also, he could not include in the costs the penalty paid by one party on behalf of the other under section 44 (3), Stamp Act in respect of an improperly stamped document produced in evidence in a proceeding under sec 145 of this Code—Popuri v. Tummalaganta, 13 M.L.T. 224, 13 Cr.L.J. 297.

An order permitting the withdrawal of proceedings, and more so a final and irrevocable order staying proceedings instituted under sec. 145 after the Magistrate has assumed jurisdiction under that section, is an order falling within the purview of sub sec. (5) of that section, and as such a decision under that section within the meaning of sec. 148. It is, therefore, competent to the Magistrate on making such an order to award costs to a party to the proceedings—Rehumal v. Pherumal, 29 CrLJ. 857, 111 I.C. 441, 28 S.L.R. 386, A.I.R. 1928 Sind 193 dissenting from Narasingha v. Pillana, 12 CrLJ. 49, 9 I.C. 289, 9 M.L.T. 324

Under the present section as amended, the word "include" shows that the Magistrate is able to award costs other than those incurred for witnesses or pleaders' fees.

The value of the property in dispute cannot, by itself, be taken as a fair test of the costs which should be awarded in a case under sec 145, Cr P. C.—Kallu v. Bashiruddin, 32 CrLJ 372, 129 I.C. 269, 1930 A.L.J. 1504, A.I.R. 1931 All 3, Ind. Rul 1931 All. 141, 53 All 172, 1931 Cr.C. 3.

In awarding costs for witnesses and pleaders' fees, the Magistrate should not include additional costs incurred for extra fees and for travelling and other expenses of a like nature incurred for bringing pleaders or counsels from a distance—Rajendra v. Md. Arzumand, 9 C.W.N. 887.

Witnesses may be examined locally to avoid expense; but that does not mean that no expense is properly incurred at all so as not to award costs to any party—Kunjo Mandal v. Sarju Ram Marwar, A.I.R. 1939 Pat 206, 1939 P.W.N. 66, 20 P.L.T. 164, 40 CrLJ 538, 181 I.C. 176

A Magistrate has jurisdiction to award only the actual costs incurred; and the order must give particulars as to how the Magistrate arrived at the figure; otherwise the order is bad—Udoy Narain v. Satish, 14 C.W.N. 1800. There must be materials on the record to show that the Magistrate arrived at the figure as the result of a calculation of the costs incurred by the party. An order arbitrarily awarding a round sum of Rs. 50 or Rs. 100 as costs, where there was nothing on the record to show that the said amount was actually incurred is bad in law and must be set aside—Jhaman v. Thakuri, 1 P.L.T. 369, 57 I.C. 449, 21 CrLJ 625; Hira Mathon v. Raj Kumar, 3 P.L.T. 484, 23 CrLJ 508; Khubi v. Darbari, 2 P.L.T. 267; Manglu v. Ramdhuni, 9 P.L.T. 835, 30 CrLJ 252. So, before making an order as to costs, it is necessary and proper that the Magistrate should hold an inquiry as to what expenditure in costs was actually incurred—Nemdhari v. Ram Tahal, 17 CrLJ. 348 (Pat.). But it is extremely difficult to prove the exact sum spent in costs in a semi-criminal case such as one under sec. 145, Cr P. C. The Court may very well use its discretion in awarding an amount which it considers reasonable—Brij Pal v. Ram Naresh, 33 CrLJ. 157, 135 I.C. 216, 1932 CrC 294, A.I.R. 1932 All 325, Ind. Rul 1932 All. 70.

The Magistrate may direct that the costs of any party are to be paid by any other party to the proceeding, but not by persons who are not parties to the proceeding—Chet Khan, 27 CrLJ 21, 91 I.C. 53, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 269

In a proceeding under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., the Magistrate has discretion to award costs. Where he gave no reason for not exercising that discretion in favour of the party who was declared to be in actual possession of the land after a lengthy trial, the High Court thought it proper that the party should be given a reasonable amount of costs—Udhab Chandra Pal v. Sideswar Prasad Singh, 38 Cr.L.J. 1099, 18 P.L.T. 714, 1937 P.W.N. 636, 171 I.C. 604, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 559, 4 B.R. 43, 10 R.P. 224.

If the costs are such as could fall within the scope of this section, the High Court will not consider whether they are excessive or deficient—Bansi v. Syed Mohd. Akbar, 15 C.W.N. 811, 12 Cr.L.J. 376. If there was anything to show that the Magistrate arrived at the figure as the result of calculation of the costs claimed by the successful party as incurred, the High Court should not interfere. But where there is nothing to show this in the order or in the proceedings, the order as regards costs was made without jurisdiction—Uday v. Satish, 14 C.W.N. lxxiii.

The costs will be recoverable as fines. See sec. 547. The words "All costs fines" have been omitted as unnecessary, because a general provision to that effect has been made in sec. 547.

Costs in revision.—The costs referred to in this section are the costs incurred in the magisterial proceedings. Magistrates have power under this section to direct by whom any costs incurred by the parties in proceedings before them under this Chapter are to be paid. So also, the High Court in revision can pass any order which the Magistrate himself could have passed, i.e., the High Court can in revision direct the costs incurred before the Magistrate to be paid by one party to another. But the High Court cannot, in revision of proceedings under Ch. XII, direct the costs incurred before the High Court in revision to be paid by one party to another. Even the award of costs cannot be treated as incidental or consequential to the disposal of a revision petition within the meaning of sec. 423 (1) (d), for it does not necessarily follow from an order passed in revision—Veerappa v. Avudayammal, 48 Mad 262, 48 M.L.J. 106, 26 Cr.L.J. 707 (F.B.); Kapoor v. Suraj, 1933 A.L.J. 188, A.I.R. 1933 All. 264, 1933 Cr.C. 434, 142 I.C. 537, 55 All. 301, 34 Cr.L.J. 414 (419) (F.B.). The Full Bench of the Rangoon High Court has also laid down that in proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., where the Magistrate who passed the decision has failed to make any order in regard to the costs of the proceedings under sub-section (3) of this section, the High Court in revision has power to make an order for the payment of the costs of such proceedings—Ma Mya Khin v. Maung Po Htwa, 35 Cr.L.J. 1, 145 I.C. 837, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 288, 11 Rang 361, 1933 Cr.C. 1084 (F.B.).

But the Bombay High Court is of opinion that the High Court can award the costs incurred in the hearing of the revision petition; such power is given by sec. 439 read with sec. 423 (1) (d)—Bai Jiba v. Chandulal, 27 Bom.L.R. 1353, 27 Cr.L.J. 661, 94 I.C. 709, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 91.

Who can order costs.—Only the Magistrate who passes the final order under sec. 145, 146 or 147 can pass an order awarding costs, though the actual assessment may be made by his successor. The successor of the Magistrate who passed the final order cannot award costs. Where the Magistrate making the final order declaring possession left the district, and his successor made an order granting costs, the order as to costs was set aside as made without jurisdiction—Iklas v. Raja Raghuraj, 13 O.C. 66, 11 Cr.L.J. 335, 5 I.C. 943.

The Magistrate passing the order as to costs must be the Magistrate passing the decision in the case—Nagar Chandra v. Siddhartha, 47 Cal. 974, 24 C.W.N. 672; Manglu v. Ramdhani, 9 P.L.T. 835, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 93, 30 Cr.L.J. 252. But he may or may not be the Magistrate who initiated the proceedings under this chapter. Where the proceedings under this chapter are initiated by one Magistrate, and the final order is passed by another, it is the latter Magistrate who can award costs—Vythindha v. Mayandi, 29 Mad. 373.

Time of awarding costs.—An order for costs should ordinarily be made at the time of passing the original order—Tomijuddi, 24 Cal. 757; Iklas v. Raja Raghuraj, 5 I.C. 943, 13 O.C. 66, 11 Cr.L.J. 335. But there is no hard and fast rule which lays down that an order for costs must necessarily be made at the time the judgment is delivered.

When the circumstances of a case really require it, the disposal of the question of costs may be postponed, and the fact that the award of costs has not been made at the very time of the decision of the case, does not necessarily render the award invalid—Vythianatha v. Mayandi, 29 Mad. 373; Binodasundari v. Kalikrishna, 22 Cal. 387; Doulat v. Siva, 15 C.L.J. 267, 12 Cr.L.J. 319, 10 I.C. 615

If the order awarding costs is not passed at the time of passing the decision in the case, it must be passed within a reasonable time after the disposal of the case and in the presence of both parties—Vythianatha v. Mayandi, supra; Nasir v. Siddhartha, 47 Cal. 974; Manglu v. Ramdhani, supra; Doulat v. Siva, 15 C.L.J. 267. What is reasonable time must depend upon the circumstances of each case—Nasir v. Siddhartha, supra. An order awarding costs made long (three months) after the original order and without giving notice to the parties affected and without allowing them an opportunity to appear and show cause is bad—Tomijuddi, 24 Cal. 757; Palaniandi v. Sammanidi, 16 L.W. 613, 24 Cr.L.J. 80, 71 I.C. 128, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 87; Manglu v. Ramdhani, supra; Narain v. Krishnamurthi, 1938 M.W.N. 1011, 48 M.L.W. 444. But an order awarding costs made two days or even ten days after the passing of the order under sec. 145 (6) is not illegal by reason of the delay—Kapoor v. Suraj, 1933 A.L.J. 188, 34 Cr.L.J. 414 (419), A.I.R. 1933 All. 264, 1933 Cr.C. 434, 55 All. 301 (F.B.); Bansi v. Syed Mohd., 11 I.C. 144, 12 Cr.L.J. 376, 15 C.W.N. 811; Chadhari v. Ramsingh, 19 Cr.L.J. 390, 44 I.C. 748, 4 P.L.W. 234

478A. Assessment of costs:—Who can assess costs—Where the Magistrate who passed the decision under sec. 145 had already awarded the costs, it is not necessary that the costs should be assessed by the same officer who decided the case—Giridhar v. Ebadulla, 22 Cal. 384. Another Magistrate (e.g., his successor) has jurisdiction to assess the amount of costs—Mid Ershad Ali v. Saroda, 23 Cal. 37 (dissenting from Bhojal v. Nirban, 21 Cal. 609); Giridhar, 22 Cal. 384; Bansi v. Syed Mohd., 15 C.W.N. 811; Subbiah v. Chokkalinga, 27 M.L.J. 613, 15 Cr.L.J. 676; Dilbasi v. Desrati, 10 C.W.N. 1030.

Time of assessing costs—An order awarding and assessing costs should be made at the time of the original order—Tomijuddi, 24 Cal. 757. This shows that the assessment of costs should be contemporaneous with the order awarding costs. But there is no inflexible rule that the costs must be assessed at the time of passing the decision in the case—Giridhar v. Ebadulla, 22 Cal. 384. Once an order as to costs is made, the amount of costs may be subsequently assessed—Medapati, 14 M.L.T. 195, 14 Cr.L.J. 570. But the assessment must be made within a reasonable time after the award of costs. An assessment of costs more than two years after the date of the order awarding the costs is bad in law—Bhojal v. Nirban, 21 Cal. 609.

Application by legal representative for assessment of costs—Where through the negligence of the Court's officers, the amount of costs was not included in the final order directing payment of costs to the petitioner, and nearly three years after, the legal representative of the petitioner (the petitioner having died in the interval) applied to the Magistrate's successor in office for the costs being assessed, held that the application was sustainable and the applicant was entitled to have the costs assessed although this Code contains no special provision for bringing on record the representatives of the deceased parties—Subbiah v. Chokkalinga, 27 M.L.J. 613, 15 Cr.L.J. 676, 1914 M.W.N. 790.

Notice to parties:—If the order for costs is made at the time of passing judgment under sec. 145, 146 or 147, no question arises as to the giving of notice to any party. The Magistrate will decide the question of costs after hearing the arguments of both sides then and there—Debendra v. Dhanmani, 37 C.W.N. 849 (851); 35 Cr.L.J. 489, 147 I.C. 817, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 95, 1934 Cr.C. 81; Nezamul v. Golam, 35 Cr.L.J. 478, 147 I.C. 800, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 80, 37 C.W.N. 852, 1934 Cr.C. 35. But if the Magistrate makes an order of costs not at the time of passing judgment, but on a subsequent day, it is his duty to give notice to the party against whom the order is made in order that he may have an opportunity of showing cause against the order—Debendra v. Dhanmani, supra; Kapoor v. Suraj, 1933 A.L.J. 188, 34 Cr.L.J. 414 (419), A.I.R. 1933 All. 264, 1933 Cr.C. 434, 55 All 301 (F.B.); Dowlat v. Shiva, 15 C.L.J. 267, 10 I.C. 615 (616), 12 Cr.L.J. 319, 15 C.W.N. 645; Kali Prasad v. Kali, 12 C.W.N. ccvii; Jogdip v. Bikan, 13 C.W.N. clxxx; Vythinatha v. Mayandi, 29 Mad 373. An order awarding and assessing costs without allowing all the parties affected an opportunity to appear and show cause is bad—Q E v. Tomijuddi, 24 Cal. 757; Prakash v. Ram Prasad, 28 Cal. 302, 5 C.W.N. 291; Bansi v. Syed Mohd., 15 C.W.N. 811; Dwarka v. Nathuni, 19 Cr.L.J. 764, 46 I.C. 604 (Pat.).

Even an order setting aside a previous order as to costs cannot be passed without giving notice to the opposite party—Dubasi v. Deorati, 10 C.W.N. 1030

Revision:—Orders under this section are now open to revision. See Note 447 under sec. 145. The rulings in Rajendra v. Md. Arzumand, 9 C.W.N. 887, 1 C.L.J. 331, 2 Cr.L.J. 408, Mussummat Gulab v. Trilok Bhagat, 4 C.W.N. lxxxiii are no longer correct.

With the deletion in 1923 of sub-sec. (3) of sec. 435, Cr. P. C., the High Court has full revisional power over proceedings under sections 145 and 147, Cr. P. C., and though even now the High Court will be slow to interfere with a real exercise of discretion by the lower Courts, there can be no hesitation in interfering in revision when no discretion has been exercised at all, or when, what discretion has been exercised, has been exercised on wrong principles altogether. Therefore the High Court interfered in revision when costs were not allowed to the successful party without sufficient cause—Kunjo Mandal v. Sarju Ram Marwari, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 206, 1939 P.W.N. 66, 20 P.L.T. 164, 181 I.C. 176, 40 Cr.L.J. 538.

CHAPTER XIII.

PREVENTIVE ACTION OF THE POLICE.

149. Every police-officer may interpose for the purpose of preventing, and shall, to be best of his ability, prevent, the commission of any cognizable offence.

Police to prevent cognizable offences.

478B. Scope:—See Moni Mohan, 35 C.W.N. 623 (627), 58 Cal. 1312, 33 Cr.L.J. 138, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 745, 1931 Cr.C. 1009, 135 I.C. 289 quoted above sec. 154.

This section provides for the prevention of cognizable offences only. Section 23 of the Police Act (V of 1861) appears to give wider powers for the prevention of offences in general—Nga Kala, 8 L.B.R. 329, 17 Cr.L.J. 347.

The word 'interpose' in this section connotes the idea of actively intervening and not merely a prohibition by word of mouth. But the word is not wide enough to cover all orders given by police-officers. It was not intended by the Legislature that the police officer would be empowered to pass all sorts of sweeping orders, with the consequence of the disobedience being punishable under sec. 188, I. P. Code. Such wide powers vested in a police officer would interfere unreasonably with the ordinary liberty of private citizens and could not have been contemplated by this section—Raghunath, 47 All. 205, 26 Cr.L.J. 599, 85 I.C. 823, 22 A.L.J. 1049, A.I.R. 1925 All. 165.

150. Every police-officer receiving information of a design to commit any cognizable offence shall communicate such information to the police-officer to whom he is subordinate, and to any other officer whose duty it is to prevent or take cognizance of the commission of any such offence.

As to the powers and duties of a police-officer, see secs. 82-85.

151. A police-officer knowing of a design to commit any cognizable offence may arrest, without order from a Magistrate and without a warrant, the person so designing, if it appears to such officer that the commission of the offence cannot be otherwise prevented.

Arrest to prevent such offences.
By sec. 151, a Police Officer may arrest without warrant, if it appears to him that the commission of an offence cannot otherwise be prevented. Should he do so, his subsequent procedure must be regulated by sec. 60—Bengal Police Manual, 2nd Edition, p. 374.

Where no emergency for arrest which this section contemplates is shown to have existed, the attempt, to arrest on the part of the police is not only "not strictly justifiable by law," but is illegal. Therefore neither cl (1) nor cl (2), sec 99, I P. C., can afford protection to the police. The accused are entitled to offer resistance to their arrest which is illegal—Gaman v Emp, AIR 1930 Lah 348 (349), 121 IC 734, 31 PLR 285, 31 CrLJ 294, 13 AICrR 410, 1930 CrC 396.

152. A police-officer may, of his own authority, interpose to prevent any injury attempted to be committed in his view to any public property, moveable or immovable, or the removal or injury of any public landmark or buoy or other mark used for navigation.

153. (1) Any officer in charge of a police-station may, without a warrant, enter any place within the limits of such station for the purpose of inspecting or searching of any weights or measures or instruments for weighing, used or kept therein, whenever he has reason to believe that there are in such place any weights, measures or instruments for weighing which are false.

(2) If he finds in such place any weights, measures or instruments for weighing which are false, he may seize the same, and shall forthwith give information of such seizure to a Magistrate having jurisdiction.

478C. The section expressly authorises an inspection of the weights and measures by an officer-in-charge of a Police station. In comparing the weights used in the bazar, some reasonable allowance should be made for wear and tear and of the rough and ready methods of bazar shop-keepers—Nanak Chand, 1913 P.R. 20, 15 Cr.L.J. 11, 22 I.C. 155.

This section does not apply to the Police in the towns of Calcutta, Bombay and Madras, because similar provisions have been made in Calcutta by secs. 55 and '56 of the Calcutta Police Act (Bengal Act IV of 1886), in Bombay by sec. 4 of the Bombay City Police Act IV of 1902, and in Madras by sec. 32 of the Madras City Police Act III of 1888

See Act XXXI of 1871 relating to weights and measures of capacity, and the rules framed under sec. 11 of that Act. As to offences relating to weights and measures, see Chapter XIII, I. P. Code.

PART V.

INFORMATION TO THE POLICE AND THEIR POWERS TO INVESTIGATE.

CHAPTER XIV.

This Chapter, except sec 155, does not apply to the Police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay. Sec 155 only applies to the Police of Calcutta and Bombay—Q. E. v. Nilmadhab, 15 Cal. 595; Q. E. v. Visram Babaji, 21 Bom. 495 (499); Plucknett v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Cal 545 (555), 43 C.W.N. 120, I.L.R. (1939) 1 Cal. 162; Hoshide v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Cal 97 (103), 44 C.W.N. 82. For section 164, see Note 509

The distinction between Chap XIII and Chap. XIV of the Code may not be of real importance. These two Chapters cannot be said to be mutually exclusive Chapter XIV constitutes Part V of the Code and deals with "information to the police and their powers to investigate." It prescribes the procedure for investigation But this investigation is not confined to cognizable offences. It may be into non-cognizable offences under sec 155, or into cases of no crime at all, e.g., unnatural deaths as under sec 174. Outside Part V of the Code, a police officer may do many things, for example, he may arrest, take preventive action, disperse an unlawful assembly, and so forth He may do these things while investigating or even without investigating Even "information" may be given by one police officer to another under Chap XIII, sec 150 Thus, it cannot be said that, because a police officer is investigating, therefore, he is not doing anything under any other Chapter or vice versa On the contrary, it is quite consistent with human conduct and the natural course of events that preventive action started under Chap. XIII may lapse into investigation under Chap XIV. So far as the beginning of the latter is concerned, it will be marked by a record of a statement which is known as the first information of the offence for the purposes of the procedure—Moni Mohan, 35 C.W.N. 623 (627), 58 Cal 1312, 33 Cr.L.J. 138, A.I.R. 1931 Cal 745, 1931 Cr.C. 1009.

154. Every information relating to the commission of a cognizable offence, if given orally to an officer in charge of a police station, shall be reduced to writing by him or under his direction, and be read over to the informant; and every such information, whether given in writing or reduced to writing as aforesaid, shall be signed by the person giving it and the substance thereof shall be entered in a book to be kept by such officer in such form as the Provincial Government may prescribe in this behalf.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937

479. Scope:—This section enables a Station House Officer to receive and record the information of the commission of a cognizable offence outside his station limits, though he has no power under sec. 157 to conduct an investigation in respect of such offence—Nandamuri, 1914 M.W.N. 382, 15 Cr.L.J. 622, 25 I.C. 630

480. First information:—The First Information Report is a well-known technical description of a report under this section, giving first information of a cognizable crime. This is usually made by the complainant or by some one on his behalf. The language is inapplicable to a statement made by the accused—Subedar, 25 Cr.L.J. 490, 77 I.C. 890, A.I.R. 1924 All. 207. See also Moni Mohan, supra; Mir Rahman, 37 Cr.L.J. 225 (226), 159 I.C. 890, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh. 165, 1935 Cr.C. 1156. The Legislature has laid down procedure to be observed in recording first information; but whether that procedure be adopted or not, does not affect the question of admissibility in evidence—Mir Rahman, supra. The word "information" in this section means something in the nature of a complaint or accusation, or at least information of a crime, given with the object of putting the police in motion in order to investigate, as distinguished from information obtained by the Police when already investigating a crime. When the information which is first given to the police is of such a vague and indefinite character that it cannot be treated as coming under section 154, so as to make it incumbent upon the officer in charge of the police station to start an investigation, and he may reasonably require more information before doing so, any further information given to him in such circumstances may fall within section 154. In such a case such further information will not fall within section 162. The information referred to in section 154 may come from more than one source, and more than one such information may be recorded at or about the same time under the section; but once the police have taken active steps to investigate, any written statements taken by them fall within section 162 and are inadmissible in evidence—Gansa Oraon, 2 Pat. 517, 4 P.L.T. 462, 24 Cr.L.J. 641, 73 I.C. 561, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 550. This section does not necessarily contemplate that only one information of a crime should be recorded as a First Information Report and that all information given to the Police before investigation is started, may amount to First Information within the meaning of this section. So informations lodged at two different police stations regarding the same offence are both admissible in evidence—Mir Rahman, supra. So, where two informations were given by two different persons before two different police officers of the same police station but found at different places before the commencement of the investigation, the latter information cannot be excluded from evidence as it was not a statement made to a Police Officer in the course of investigation but was an independent first information report—Emp. v. Lalji Rai, 37 Cr.L.J. 235, 160 I.C. 181, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 11, 16 P.L.T. 730, 1936 Cr.C. 6; Aftab Mohd. Khan, A.I.R. 1940 All. 291 (300), 41 Cr.L.J. 647, 188 I.C. 649, 1940 A.L.J. 206, dissenting from Moni Mohan, supra, if an opposite view is to be implied in that decision.

The information referred to in this section is the first information of the offence by whomsoever given. The first information is that information which is given to the police first in point of time (on the basis of which the investigation commences) and not that which the police may select and record as first information—Bhutnath, 7 C.W.N. 345 (348). Thus, where upon information given by the Chowkidar of an offence, which was duly recorded in the Station Diary, the Sub-Inspector went to the Hospital to see the dying man and took down his dying statement and filed it as the first information, it was held that the statement of the Chowkidar, and not that of the dying man, was the first information of the offence—Daulat, 6 C.W.N. 921. Where a person reported to a police officer that he had seen a certain woman with her throat cut, and the officer did not make a record of the fact but subsequently treated an information lodged by the woman's father as the first information in the case, held that the unrecorded information, and not the information given by the woman's father, was in fact the first information—Chandrika, 1 Pat. 401, 3 P.L.T. 771, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 535, 24 Cr.L.J. 127, 71 I.C. 353; Patil Subba Reddi, 37 Cr.L.J. 357, 160 I.C. 988, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 160, 1935 M.W.N. 1197, 43 M.L.W. 261, 1936 Cr.C. 163, distinguishing Chidambaram, 55 M.L.J. 231, 110 I.C. 461, A.I.R. 1928 Mad 791, 29 Cr.L.J. 717, 28 M.L.W. 187. The information given by a Chowkidar to the effect that the mother of the accused had told him that the latter had assaulted his younger brother whilst under the influence of drink and that he (the Chowkidar) had seen blood-stains on the younger brother's head, was entered in the Station-Diary but not signed by the Chowkidar, and the police officer proceeded to the scene of occurrence and there took down the statement of the wife of the accused and took her thumb impression thereon; held that the Chowkidar's information was the first information in the case and that the statement made by the wife of the accused to the investigating officer was not admissible in evidence (sec. 162)—Gansa Oraon, supra. A different view seems to have been taken in Ahman v. Emp., A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 787 (789), 40 Cr.L.J. 435, 180 I.C. 507, 40 P.L.R. 697. In that case the Sub-Inspector left the thana before the first information report was recorded. He caused an entry to be made in the daily diary of the thana and in that mentioned the names of some of the culprits alleged to have been given to him by one of the persons alleged to have been assaulted and injured. It was not treated as first information in the case but was held to be a part of the proceedings of the police and therefore inadmissible as evidence for any purpose in Court. Where the Sub-inspector was told by a Head Constable that he heard that there was a shooting case in the marriage house of a Chettiar, entered the substance of this information in the General Diary, then went to enquire into the matter and recorded the statement of a witness which was treated as a first information, held that the Sub-inspector had no information of the commission of a cognizable offence when he went to the house of the deceased as he was merely told that there was a shooting incident which might be due to accident or design and that it was impossible to say that the statement was recorded by the Sub-inspector in the course of an investigation into the offence and was, as such, inadmissible in evidence. The question whether a statement was recorded during investigation or not is a question of fact—Mylaswami Chetty, A.I.R. 1939 Mad 66 (68), 1938 M.Cr.C. 110, 1938 M.W.N. 905, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 750, 40 Cr.L.J. 308, 180 I.C. 78.

A statement made by a witness during investigation after the police officer has actually arrived at the scene and himself seen what has happened is not first information—Chittar Singh, 47 All 280, 23 A.L.J. 14, 26 Cr.L.J. 554. A statement made by a witness to the police-officer in the course of an investigation under this chapter and recorded under sec 161 cannot be treated as first information under sec 154—Sultan v. Wellbourne, 3 Rang 577, 26 Cr.L.J. 1532. The first information is the information given out immediately after the occurrence and reported to the Police and not the information which has been elicited in the course of the investigation. The first information is the basis upon which an investigation under this chapter commences. It is erroneously thought that the information on which an investigation is commenced is not the first information of the offence, and that when in the course of investigation something has been elicited which shows that an offence has been committed a first information can be recorded. This is certainly not what the law contemplates. In nearly every trial it is important that it should be known to the judicial officer what were the facts given out immediately after the occurrence and reported to the police, and the object of a first information is to render him so acquainted—Bhut Nath, 7 C.W.N. 345 (347); Peary Mohan v. Weston, 16 C.W.N. 145 (177), 13 Cr.L.J. 65, 13 I.C. 721; Autor Singh, 17 C.W.N. 1213, 14 Cr.L.J. 642, 21 I.C. 882. The first information is the basis of the case, and whether it be true or false, it at any rate usually represents what was intended by the informant to be the case set up by him at the time. All Criminal Courts should bear in mind the importance of examining, when there appears to be any necessity to do so, the first information of an offence reduced to writing in accordance with this section. In view of the notorious tendency in this country to improve upon the original statement of facts to strengthen the case as it proceeds and sometimes to add to the persons originally named as the offenders, it is of great importance to know what was said first—C. P. Cr. Cir., Part II, No. 9.

At the same time it should be noted that any sort of information which is given first in point of time is not necessarily a "first information." The conditions of a first information are two-fold: first, it must be an information, and secondly, it must relate to a cognizable offence on the face of it and not merely in the light of subsequent events. Thus, a person at first made a statement to the Sub-Inspector of police that "a certain woman named S. had left her house yesterday night, with ornaments on her person." Next day, the informant made another statement that "S. was searched but could not be found." The Sub-Inspector then began to investigate. Next day, the informant made a statement to the Sub-Inspector that "as S. had not yet returned, I suspect that M. and L. had taken her somewhere, and she might have been killed by them for her ornaments." Held that, it was this third statement which was really the "first information" under this section, because it was this statement and not the two previous ones which related to the commission of a cognizable offence—Moni Mohan, 58 Cal. 1312, 35 C.W.N. 623 (627, 628), 33 Cr.L.J. 138, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 745, 1931 Cr.C. 1009. Although the third statement was made at a time when the police-officer had already begun investigation, still it was not an investigation into an offence within the meaning of sec. 162, as no offence was stated before the third statement was made. Therefore, neither the third statement nor the two previous ones are excluded from evidence under sec. 162—Moni Mohan, supra.

It cannot be accepted as a proposition of law that because a person of the party of the accused goes first to the police station and says that some of the complainant's party has committed an offence, the real complaint against the accused must be kept off the record save on terms under sec. 162, Cr. P. C. It is a question of fact whether a statement made to a police-officer in the course of an investigation in such cases, comes under sec. 162, or is made by way of complaint to commence an investigation under sec. 154—Osman Gani, 31 Cr.L.J. 771, 125 I.C. 111, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 130, 1930 Cr.C. 130. A counter information cannot come within sec. 162, Cr. P. C.—Azimaddy, 28 Cr.L.J. 99 (102), 44 C.L.J. 253, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 17, 54 Cal. 237, 99 I.C. 227.

Where one night the accused killed his wife by hitting her on the head with a grinding stone, went to the house of one of his neighbours and caused grievous hurt to him with the stone and then went to the house of his sister's husband whom he killed with the stone in the course of an altercation and three separate first information reports were lodged with the police regarding these three incidents, the references in the first information to grievous hurt on one are clearly inadmissible in a trial for the murder of two other people—Afsaruddi Nesaraddi, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 32 (33), 67 C.L.J. 580, 42 C.W.N. 1235, 40 Cr.L.J. 290, 179 I.C. 910.

Where the first information was recorded by a police-officer some hours after he had begun investigation of the case, but there was no previous information recorded and reduced to writing by him, the report falls under this section—Dargahi, 52 Cal. 499, 26 Cr.L.J. 1213, 88 I.C. 733, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 831. But a statement recorded several days after the commencement of the investigation, and after there has been some development, is not only not the first information but has very little or no value at all as the original story, because it can be made to fit into the case as then developed—Kampu Kuki, 11 C.W.N. 554, 5 Cr.L.J. 86; Peary Mohan v. Weston, 16 C.W.N. 145 (177), 13 Cr.L.J. 65. Even when an information is given orally under sec. 154, Cr. P. C., and a Police Officer does not reduce it to writing, he is doing what he ought not to do and has acted in an irregular way. But it is going too far to say that while investigating the truth or otherwise of the information, he is not carrying on an investigation within the meaning of Chap XIV of the Cr. P. Code. He obviously is, and if he is, sec. 162, Cr. P. C., applies to the statements made by persons examined by him. Where, therefore, a chowkidar arrived at the thanah and reported the occurrence to the Sub-Inspector of Police who did not record the statement of the chowkidar in writing but recorded the statement of another person, who arrived at the thanah later on, as the first information report, held that the information given by the chowkidar was the first information report in the case and that the Sessions Judge was wrong in allowing the later statement to go to the jury—Sahedali Mirdha v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 1067 (1068), 171 I.C. 269, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 309, I.L.R. (1937) 2 Cal. 308, 10 R.C. 258.

An information given to a village Magistrate which it was his bounden duty to pass on to a Police Station House officer who recorded it, must be considered as having been given to the latter and recorded as first information under this section, and cannot be regarded as a statement recorded during the course of an investigation under sec. 162—Venkatarayudu, 28 Mad. 565. Where a person who was assaulted sent a telegram to the Police complaining of the offence, and the Police Sub-Inspector turned upon the spot and recorded a statement from the complainant, held that the telegram was not a first information as it was not reduced to writing on an oral statement nor a writing given to the police signed by the person making the statement. It was the statement subsequently recorded by the Police Sub-Inspector that was the first information—Chidambaram, 55 M.L.J. 231, 29 Cr.L.J. 717 (718), A.I.R. 1928 Mad 791, 110 I.C. 461; Anandayya, A.I.R. 1915 Mad. 312, 25 I.C. 630, 15 Cr.L.J. 622; Kachi Hazam v. Seraj Khan, 1935 Cr.C. 628, 156 I.C. 400, 36 Cr.L.J. 919, A.I.R. 1935 Cal 403, 39 C.W.N. 403; for contra see Chanan Singh, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 413, 35 P.L.R. 363, 1934 Cr.C. 640, 36 Cr.L.J. 97, 152 I.C. 229, 15 Lah 814. This section is not intended to apply to a telephone message—Meherals, 32 Cr.L.J. 543, 130 I.C. 378, A.I.R. 1931 Sind 13. But see Banta Singh, 31 Cr.L.J. 444, 122 I.C. 491, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 457.

The words "relating to" do not mean that the information must give details of all the elements of the offence; there need not be complete or satisfactory proof of the offence given at the time; it is sufficient if the information indicates that an offence has been committed—Moni Mohan, supra

See Notes 500A and 502B.

481. Evidentiary value:—The first information recorded by the police is of considerable value at the trial, because it shows on what materials the investigation commenced and what was the story then told—Kampu Kuki, 11 C.W.N. 554, 6 Cr.L.J. 86. In every trial it is important that it should be known to the judicial officer what are the facts given out immediately after the occurrence and reported to the police, and the object of the first information is to render him so acquainted. For that purpose the diary in which the first information was recorded as well as the memorandum, if any, made by the police of what the informant said, is admissible in evidence—Bhutnath, 7 C.W.N. 345 (348).

Where there was delay in giving information to the police, the evidence for the prosecution has to be carefully scrutinized—Bishen Singh, 27 Cr.L.J. 903, 96 I.C. 215, 8 L.L.J. 296, A.I.R. 1926 Lah 496, 27 P.L.R. 484. After all, delay in making a report to the police is only a suspicious circumstance which puts the Court on its guard and cannot by itself be held to be a reason for rejecting evidence which is otherwise fully entitled to credit—Radha Kishen, 40 Cr.L.J. 261 (263), 179 I.C. 880, A.I.R. 1938 Lah 714

It is a misdirection to ask the jury to accept the statement in the First Information in preference to the evidence in the case—Asfar Sheikh, 15 C.W.N. 198. The inconsistency of the first information with the theory on which the prosecution is based, is a very weak feature of the case depending entirely upon circumstantial evidence—Nazir, 9 C.W.N. 474.

But although the First Information is a document of considerable importance which is in practice always and very rightly produced and proved in criminal trials, yet it is not a piece of substantive evidence and can be used only as a previous statement admissible to corroborate or contradict a statement made by the informant subsequently in Court—Choghatta, 27 Cr.L.J. 121 (Lah.); Autor Singh, 17 C.W.N. 1213, 14 Cr.L.J. 642; Sankaralinga, 53 Mad 590, 58 M.L.J. 397, 31 Cr.L.J. 712; Chittar, 47 All. 280, 23 A.L.J. 14, 26 Cr.L.J. 554; Ibrahim, 8 Lah 605, 28 Cr.L.J. 983 (985); Imarat, 31 Cr.L.J. 7, 120 I.C. 199, A.I.R. 1929 All 916; Harji, 45 I.C. 273, 4 P.R. 1918 (Cr.), 19 Cr.L.J. 513, 134 P.L.R. 1918; Thakar Singh, 29 Cr.L.J. 277, 107 I.C. 761; Dharam Singh, 29 Cr.L.J. 343, 108 I.C. 162, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 507; Sheo Karan, 29 Cr.L.J. 734, 110 I.C. 590, A.I.R. 1928 Lah 923; Asfar Sheikh, 15 C.W.N. 198; Kapur Singh, 31 Cr.L.J. 475, 123 I.C. 120, 31 P.L.R. 83, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 450; Gajadhar, 7 Luck. 552, 33 Cr.L.J. 381 (382), 137 I.C. 79, 9 O.W.N. 32, 1932 Cr.C. 162, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 99; Emp. v. Nga Hiang, 112 I.C. 466, A.I.R. 1928 Rang 295, 29 Cr.L.J. 1042, 6 Rang. 481; Nga

Tun Hlaing, 35 Cr.L.J. 808, 148 I.C. 876, A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 60, 1934 Cr.C. 377; Md. Ibrahim, 30 Cr.L.J. 38, 112 I.C. 902, A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 43, Ind. Rul. 1929 Nag. 10; Waris Khan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 209 (211), 1940 O.W.N. 177. Statements made in these reports are admissible under sec. 155, Ev. Act, to impeach the credit of a witness who made them or under sec. 157, Ev. Act, to corroborate the testimony of the witnesses who made them if the reports were made about the time when the fact took place or before any authority legally competent to investigate the fact. It may be that there are other sections of the Evidence Act under which these statements may in certain circumstances become relevant, but there can be no doubt that they are not substantive evidence in the case and the Courts should be clear about the relevancy of the statements before they use them—Ram Naresh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 All. 242 (244), 40 Cr.L.J. 359, 1939 A.L.J. 107, 181 I.C. 646, I.L.R. 1939 All. 377, 1939 A.Cr.C. 36, 1939 A.W.R. (H.C.) 190, 11 R.A. 597. It cannot be used to contradict other witnesses who are unanimous on a particular point. It is inadmissible for the purpose of proving that the facts stated therein are correct. It is never per se the statement of the case for the prosecution, and the absence of any accused's name in it is not by itself a sufficient proof of his innocence—Gajadhar, supra.

The first information report, unless the man who made it dies, is not admissible evidence of any fact which is contained in it: it merely proves that this was the original story which set the police in motion—The King v. Maung Po Thi, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 282 (283), 176 I.C. 683, 39 Cr.L.J. 771.

As the First Information Report can only be used by the prosecution for the purpose of corroborating in the witness-box the person who supplied the information contained in the document, it follows that if the informant himself can only speak from hearsay, the report cannot be used to corroborate such inadmissible evidence of the witness—Sajan Singh, 6 Lah. 437, 26 Cr.L.J. 1489.

The mere fact that in the First Information Report the names of the witnesses, who ultimately support the prosecution, are not given, is not a matter which would throw suspicion upon the story for the prosecution—Chandu, 29 Cr.L.J. 378, 108 I.C. 370, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 657. Where all the prosecution witnesses were disbelieved because none of them was mentioned in the first information report and because most of them were not independent and made some statements which were contrary to what was stated before the Committing Magistrate or the Police, none of these factors can always be held to be sufficient to totally discard the evidence of witnesses though they are sufficient to raise a suspicion against the truthfulness of the witnesses and to lead the trying Judge to scrutinize the evidence with caution. If oral evidence of witnesses is corroborated by medical or other reliable evidence, there is no reason why it should not be believed even though the witnesses were not named in the first information report or are not totally independent—Dildar Khan v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 330 (331), 173 I.C. 339, 1938 O.W.N. 184.

Use of the information:—The First Information Report is usually put in by the prosecution which in any ordinary case has a duty to put it in. But, however important First Information Reports may be, they do not prove themselves and have to be tendered under one or other of the provisions of the Evidence Act. The usual course is for the prosecution to call the informant and for the First Information to be tendered as corroboration under sec. 157, but it could also be tendered in a proper case under sec. 32 (1), as a declaration as to the cause of the informant's death, or as part of the informant's conduct (of the res gestæ under sec. 8). Theoretically the defence can prove the information to impeach the informant's credit under sec. 155 or to contradict him under sec. 145—Azimaddy, 28 Cr.L.J. 99 (102), 44 C.L.J. 253, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 17, 51 Cal. 237, 99 I.C. 227; Mahla Singh, 32 Cr.L.J. 522 (521), 139 I.C. 410, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 38, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 282, 32 P.L.R. 259, 1931 Cr.C. 102; Gajjan Singh, 33 Cr.L.J. 183, 135 I.C. 668, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 103, 1931 Cr.C. 167, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 124.

The prosecution is bound by practice to produce in Court the First Information Report made to the Police but it is not bound to refrain from leading evidence that the report is not accurate. To hold that the prosecution is tied down tightly to the words of the First Information Report would recognise the recording officer as possessing an authority which in no way belongs to him and would be dangerous—Raja, 25 Cr L J. 465, 77 I C. 817, A I R. 1921 Lah. 591. But the presumption is that a first information report represents the actual information given to the police and taken down by them, and if the prosecution wish to imply that the record of the information made by the police is garbled, it should give evidence to that effect—Sheoprasad v. Emp., 39 Cr L J. 917 (1922), 177 I C. 605, 1938 N L J. 250, A I R. 1938 Nag. 394, 1 I R. 1938 Nag. 442.

When the accused lodges the First Information, the confessional statements contained therein are inadmissible in evidence unless they come within the purview of sec. 27 of the Evidence Act. The whole first information is, however, not rendered inadmissible—Supdt. and Remtr. of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. Lalit Mohan, 25 C.W.N. 788, 49 Cal. 167, 20 Cr L J. 562, 62 I C. 578, A I R. 1922 Cal 342. The principle in 25 C.W.N. 788 is not applicable in a case where there are no parts of the first information report which can be extracted from the rest and said to be relevant in themselves and admissible as not being incriminatory. Where the first information report forms a single connected story and no part of it has any meaning or significance except in relation to the whole, it would be quite wrong to extract fragments from it in which the accused does not make any self-incriminating statement—Kommoju Brahman, A I R. 1940 Pat 163 (167), 1939 P.W.N. 915. See also Subedar in Note 480.

Where the victim died before the matter came before the Court, the first information lodged by her was not admissible in evidence as such. It is, however, admissible under sec. 32 (1) of the Evidence Act as it is the statement of a person (since deceased) relating to the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in her death—Kapur Singh, 31 Cr L J. 475, 123 I C. 120, 31 P.L.R. 83, A I R. 1930 Lah. 450.

The deceased, being stabbed, was conveyed to the hospital when he made a statement to a Magistrate containing a bare recital of the occurrence. Immediately afterwards the Sub-Inspector recorded a more detailed statement of the deceased. The first information received by the Police was by means of a telephonic message from the hospital. Evidently, therefore, the statement made by the deceased to the Sub-Inspector was not a first information but came within the purview of sec. 32 of the Indian Evidence Act—Banta Singh, 31 Cr L J. 414, 122 I C. 491, A I R. 1930 Lah. 457.

"Officer in charge of a police station":—As to the powers of superior police officers under this section, see sec. 551. In the absence of the Sub-Inspector or Head constable, a constable left in charge of a Police station cannot accept any complaint or prepare and submit the first information report of any crime reported to him, unless the Local Government shall have given him powers under sec. 4 (p).

The information which is recorded in the mofussil by the Assistant Sub-Inspector of Police cannot be treated as the First Information Report because he is not the Officer-in-charge of the Police Station in fact or within the meaning of the expression as defined in sec. 4, Cr. P. C.—Momin Talukdar v. Emp., 30 Cr L J. 803, 117 I C. 601, A I R. 1928 Cal. 771, Ind Rul 1929 Cal 553.

482. "Shall be reduced to writing":—The object of a first information being to show what was the manner in which the occurrence was related when the case was first started, it should always be carefully and accurately recorded—Pearry Mohan v. Weston, 16 C.W.N. 145 (177), 13 Cr L J. 65, 13 I C. 721. The first information must be recorded at once, and it is not proper to wait until it is certain that an offence has been committed; see Bhutnath, 7 C.W.N. 345; Kamru Kuli, 11 C.W.N. 554. See also Sahedali Mirdha v. Emp., 38 Cr L J. 1067, 171 I C. 269, A I R. 1937 Cal 309, 1 I R. (1937) 2 Cal 308, 10 R C 258. If the information is given orally, it must be recorded in plain and simple language, as nearly as possible in the informant's own words. The use of technical or legal expressions or high flown language or of lengthy and involved sentences is forbidden—Ben. Pol. Code, p. 372. It is of the utmost importance in recording the first information that the actual words of the complainant should be used and not an Urdu translation of them. The recorder should take down the complaint as it is made and not merely his own impression of what the complainant meant to say—Reg. and Ord., N. W. P., p. 268.

The conditions as to writing are merely procedural. If there is an information relating to the commission of a cognizable offence, it falls under this section and becomes admissible in evidence as such, even though the police-officer may have neglected to record it in accordance with law—Mani Mohan, 58 Cal. 1312, 35 C.W.N. 623 (628), 33 Cr.L.J. 138, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 745, 1931 Cr.C. 1009. It is a very serious thing for a police-officer to record in the first report facts which are not true, and it is still more serious for him to attempt to support the first report by evidence which is not true—Mahomed Khabar, 35 Cr.L.J. 736 (740), 148 I.C. 672, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 6, 1934 Cr.C. 91.

Where the Sub-Inspector failed to follow the express provision of this section in omitting to make any entry of the information in the Station Diary, the failure will have an important bearing if the real date of the report be in question. It is, however, not an illegality vitiating the trial—Hafiz Muhammad, 32 Cr.L.J. 638, 131 I.C. 17, A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 150, 12 P.L.T. 393, 1931 Cr.C. 390.

Power to question the informant:—If the information whether given orally or presented in writing, be not complete in itself, the Police officer should elicit by interrogation such further information as may be necessary—Beng. Pol. Code, p. 372. See also C. P. Police Manual, p. 147.

483. "Shall be signed":—The informant's statement when complete should be read over to him and he must sign it. The report should show that this has been done. In "heinous cases" the statement should be read over to the informant in the presence of one or more respectable and uninterested witnesses, who should also be asked to sign it—Beng. Pol. Code, p. 372.

Procedure in the case of written informations:—If the information be tendered in writing, it will be endorsed with the date of presentation, and the person tendering should be required to sign it (if he has not already done so). If the written information relates to facts with which the person tendering it is acquainted, and which he is able and willing to state orally, the mere incident that a written report is presented does not make it unnecessary to take down the information from the reporter's own lips. If the person who brings the written information knows nothing of the facts to which it refers, he should be required to state the circumstances under which he brought it—C. P. Police Manual, p. 147.

Proof of First Information Report:—Where the first information report was not proved by examining the scribe who wrote it, that was a formal objection and not one that should be advanced on behalf of the prosecution whose document it was. The defence should not be shut out from using the document because the prosecution did not formally prove it—Sheoprasad v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 917 (922), 177 I.C. 605, 1938 N.L.J. 250, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 391, I.L.R. 1938 Nag. 442.

Diary:—The substance of the information shall be entered in a book, which is called the Station or General Diary, in which are recorded the substance of the information, the names of the complainants and of persons arrested, offences charged, property taken into possession and witnesses examined. See sec. 44 of the Police Act (V of 1851). This Diary is different from the Special Diary (or Case Diary) mentioned in sec. 172.

If the first information is given in writing, omission to make an entry in the Station Diary is not an illegality which would vitiate the trial. The omission would have an important bearing if the date of the report was in question—Hafiz Muhammad, 12 P.L.T. 393, 32 Cr.L.J. 638 (639), 131 I.C. 17, A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 150, 1931 Cr.C. 390.

483A. Copy:—The first report is a very valuable document and the accused is entitled to know what was said in that report to connect him with the offence, so that he may be in a position to protect his interests by cross-examining the prosecution witnesses with reference to additions and alterations in the story which might subsequently be made in evidence. Where, therefore, the accused has been challaned before the Magistrate who has assumed jurisdiction by passing an order under sec. 344, Cr. P. C., but has not yet recorded evidence, he is in error in refusing to grant copies to the accused of the first report. The accused is affected by the order under sec. 344, Cr. P. C., and if the first report forms part of the record of the Magistrate, the accused is entitled to a copy thereof under sec. 548, Cr. P. C. Even if it be assumed that the first report does not form part of the Magistrate's record until such time as it is tendered in evidence and that it is discretionary with the Magistrate to grant or refuse to grant a copy of the first report until it is exhibited, it is an unwise and improper exercise of discretion by the Magistrate to refuse to grant a copy—Bherumal Khanchand v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Sind 303, 171 I.C. 993

483B. Court-fee:—Any petition, application, charge or information respecting any offence when presented, made or laid to or before a Police-officer, or to or before the Heads of Villages or the Village Police in the territories respectively subject to the Governors in Council of Madras and Bombay, is not chargeable with any court-fee. Vide sec. 19, cl (xvi) of the Court-fees Act, 1870 (VII of 1870).

484. Punishment:—As to punishment for giving false information to the Police, see secs. 182, 203, 211, I. P. C. Even if the information is not reduced to writing under this section, the person giving the false information may be convicted for preferring a false charge under sec. 211, I. P. C.—Mallappa, 27 Mad. 127.

A police-officer refusing to enter in the Diary a report made to him concerning the commission of an offence, and making instead an entry totally different from the information given, is punishable under sec. 177, I. P. C.—Md Ismail Khan, 20 All 151; he does not render himself liable for damages if he does not perform the duty—89 IC 945, 49 M.L.J. 450

As to punishment for refusal by the person giving information to sign the statement made by him, see sec. 180, I. P. C.

155. (1) When information is given to an officer in charge of a police-station of the commission, within the limits of such station, of a non-cognizable offence, he shall enter in a book to be kept as aforesaid the substance of such information and refer the informant to the Magistrate.

Information in non-cognizable cases.

(2) No police-officer shall investigate a non-cognizable case without the order of a Magistrate of the first or second class having power to try such case or commit the same for trial, or of a Presidency Magistrate.

Investigation into non-cognizable cases.

(3) Any police-officer receiving such order may exercise the same powers in respect of the investigation (except the power to arrest without warrant) as an officer in charge of a police-station may exercise in a cognizable case.

484A. Scope:—This section applies to the Police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay; see Nilmadhab, 15 Cal 595; Istam Babaji, 21 Bom. 495

485. Investigation into non-cognizable cases:—Under this section, a police-officer cannot investigate a non-cognizable case and cannot submit a report with reference to it, without the order of a Magistrate. If he receives information of a non-cognizable offence, he should enter the substance of it in the diary and refer the informant to a Magistrate. If a Police-officer of his own motion, as where he has seen the alleged offence committed, makes a formal report or complaint in respect of a non-cognizable offence, it will amount to a complaint within the meaning of sec. 4 (b), for there is no provision by which he can in such a case make a Police report—Sada, 26 Bom. 150 (F.B.). Magistrates mentioned in sec. 190 are entitled to take cognizance of non-cognizable offences upon a report made in writing by a Police-officer without examining the officer upon oath—Public Prosecutor v. Ratnavelu Chetty, 96 I.C. 983, 49 Mad 525, A.I.R. 1926 Mad 865, 27 Cr.L.J. 1031, 1927 M.W.N. 43, 25 M.L.W. 248, 52 M.L.J. 210 (F.B.); Ghulam Hossain, 82 I.C. 753, 1 Lah. Cas. 16, 25 Cr.L.J. 1361, 6 Lah.L.J. 606, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 237; Shankar Lal, 28 Cr.L.J. 821, 104 I.C. 437, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 702, 9 Lah. 280, 20 P.L.R. 469. But in Feroja v. Aminuddin, 16 C.W.N. 1049 (1061), 13 Cr.L.J. 691, 16 I.C. 499 the examination on oath was held to be necessary.

A police-officer is not competent to make an investigation into a non-cognizable offence, but the investigation of a non-cognizable offence would not be illegal, if it is made during the investigation of a cognizable offence—Shivaswami, 51 Bom. 498, 29 Bom.L.R. 742, 28 Cr.L.J. 939, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 440. Irregularities, if any, during the course of preliminary investigation might affect the weight to be attached to the evidence of the complainant, and the witnesses called by him. They would not vitiate the proceedings—Abdulla Khan, 34 Cr.L.J. 256 (259), 141 I.C. 879, Ind. Rul. 1933 Sind 79, 1933 Cr.C. 569, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 188. See also Hafiz Muhammad, 32 Cr.L.J. 638 (640), 131 I.C. 17, A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 150, 12 P.L.T. 393, 1931 Cr.C. 390. Even though a case of non-cognizable offence was wrongly investigated under Chap. XIV and sent up by the Police, there seems to be no obstacle to its being tried by the Magistrate—D. D. Dawson v. The King, 40 Cr.L.J. 799, 183 I.C. 497, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 273.

A police-officer who has been ordered by a Magistrate to investigate a non-cognizable offence, cannot legally delegate the duty of making the investigation to a chief constable—Kalidas, Ratanlal 488.

It is incumbent upon a police-officer, who investigates a non-cognizable case under the orders of a Magistrate, to keep the diary, for which provision is made in sec. 172—Hira Lal, 1918 P.R. 16, 1918 P.L.R. 63, 19 Cr.L.J. 517.

After the investigation is over, it is duty of the Police to submit a report to the Magistrate under sec. 173. Where information was given to the Police of the commission of a non-cognizable offence, and the Magistrate ordered the Police to investigate the case and report, and the Police without submitting any report instituted proceedings against the informants under sec. 211 of the I. P. Code for giving false information, and the accused were convicted, it was held that the conviction was illegal; the police should not be allowed to prosecute without submitting the report of the original case to the Magistrate and without having that case disposed of by the Magistrate—Appa Ragho, 17 Bom.L.R. 69, 16 Cr.L.J. 161, 27 I.C. 545. Where immediately after a non-cognizable case had been committed the police sent a report to the Magistrate and asked for a warrant to be issued under sec. 161, I. P. C., and on the same day the Magistrate ordered that a case under sec. 161, I. P. C., may be instituted against the accused, held that the police did not commit any breach of the provisions of this section. Even if there was any irregularity, it did not vitiate the trial—Bhuneswari, 8 O.W.N. 503, 32 Cr.L.J. 860 (862), 132 I.C. 234, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 172, Ind. Rul. 1931 Oudh 250, 1931 Cr.C. 444.

486. Magistrate's power to direct investigation:—In Jankidas, 12 Bom. 161, it is laid down that this section is conversant only with the powers of police-officers, but it confers no power or authority on Magistrates to direct a local investigation by the Police or to call for a Police report; Magistrates can do so only under sec. 202 after taking cognizance of the case. But this view is quite unintelligible and renders sub-section (2) meaningless. In Bishwanath, 8 Bom.L.R. 589, 4 Cr.L.J. 183, it has been correctly held that a Magistrate has jurisdiction under sub-section (2) of this section to refer a matter to the police for investigation and report, even without a complaint, and without examining the complainant. So also in In re Asadulla, 6 M.L.T. 259, 4 I.C. 1043, 11 Cr.L.J. 159, the Magistrate was held competent to order an investigation without first taking cognizance of the offence under sec. 190.

The District Magistrate acting under clause 2 of this section can order investigation into a case under sec. 194A, I. P. C., although such offence needs for the trial the previous complaint by the Local Government or some officer empowered by the Governor-General in Council in this behalf under sec. 196, Cr. P. C.—General Relief Association, 33 Cr.L.J. 678, 138 I.C. 751, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 581, 33 P.L.R. 824, 1932 Cr.C. 809, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 534.

156. (1) Any officer in charge of a police-station may, without the order of a Magistrate, investigate any cognizable case which a Court having jurisdiction over the local area within the limits of such station would have power to inquire into or try under the provisions of Chapter XV relating to the place of inquiry or trial.

(2) No proceeding of a police officer in any such case shall at any stage be called in question on the ground that the case was one which such officer was not empowered under this section to investigate.

(3) Any Magistrate empowered under section 190 may order such an investigation as above mentioned.

487. Scope:—The reference to Chap XV in this section does not limit the application of this section to offences only, but the investigation may extend to cases within the scope of section 55—Bhajan, 1893 A.W.N. 124

If the third clause of sec. 156 had been intended to provide an alternative procedure to that laid down in sections 200 et seq., it would have found a place in Chap XVI and not in Chap XIV which deals with the procedure and powers of the Police in cases in which information of an offence is given to a police-officer—Arula Kotiah, 12 Cr.L.J. 463, 11 I.C. 999, 19 M.L.T. 120, 1911 M.W.N. 74

An Inspector of the C I D has power to investigate into cases to which this section applies his local area being the entire province—King-Emp. v Nilkanta, 35 Mad 247 (272). See also Muthukumaraswami, 35 Mad 397.

The wording of sec. 156 (3) is wide and the utility of the section would be much diminished if that section were held to apply to only those cases in which a Magistrate takes cognizance on his own knowledge or suspicion—Ghulam Nabi, 27 S.L.R. 67, 1933 Cr.C. 334, 34 Cr.L.J. 763, 144 I.C. 409, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 136, Ind Rul 1933 Sind 185.

This section only empowers the Magistrate to direct investigation, and a Court of Session has no power to do so—Ali, 1910 P.R. 11

An officer in charge of a police station has power to investigate a matter taking it to be a cognizable case although the charges that are ultimately laid are under non-cognizable sections—M I Mamsa v Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Rang 206 (208), 38 Cr.L.J. 983, 170 I.C. 870, 10 R.R. 111.

Where a girl has been taken away from her husband's place in M and subsequently found in D, the Sub-Inspector at D has jurisdiction to investigate the case by virtue of sec. 156 (1) read with sec. 181 (4), Cr. P. C.—Kharaiti, A.I.R. 1933 All. 663, 34 Cr.L.J. 1215, 146 I.C. 199, 1933 A.L.J. 923, 1933 Cr.L.J. 1145, 20 A.I.C.R. 439

If there is a delay in the investigation by the police, it is the duty of the committing Magistrate, and failing him, of the Sessions Judge, to inquire fully into the circumstances of the delay to consider its bearing on the prosecution story—Majesty, 2 Bom.L.R. 1092.

Sub-section (3) of this section does not empower a Magistrate, after he has taken cognizance of a case, to order a police investigation under sec. 156 and to direct the police to submit a report. Section 156 (3) only empowers the Magistrate to order a police inquiry in a case where the Magistrate does not himself issue process at once. When a Magistrate takes cognizance of a complaint under sec. 200, and refers the case to the police for inquiry under sec. 202, it is for him to pass the necessary order on the police report either under sec. 203 or under sec. 204. He cannot direct the police, if they find the case to be established, to submit a charge-sheet. In other words, the Magistrate, after he has acted under Ch. XVI cannot proceed under Ch. XIV—Isaf Nasya, 54 Cal. 303, 102 I.C. 545, A.I.R. 1928 Cal 24, 28 Cr.L.J. 577. A similar view is taken in Nur Mahomed, 53 Bom. 339, 117 I.C. 329, 31 Bom.L.R. 84, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 72, 30 Cr.L.J. 781 and Ulfat Khan, 29 Cr.L.J. 374, 108 I.C. 333, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 359. The Cr. P. C., does not contemplate that when the Magistrate has received a formal complaint he need not follow the procedure set out in sec. 200, Cr. P. C., but can straightway send it to the police under sec. 156 (3), Cr. P. C., and then upon issue of B summary, make a complaint of a false charge—Radhakrishin G. Keswani v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 449, 180 I.C. 436, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 78. But the Patna, Madras and Lahore High Courts are of opinion that if a Magistrate, on taking cognizance of an offence, direct the police to investigate under sec. 202, the police can exercise their general power of investigation and arrest—Bhola Bhagat, 2 Pat. 379, 72 I.C. 375, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 547, 24 Cr.L.J. 375, 4 P.L.T. 521 (see this case cited in Note 670 under sec. 202); Raghunath, 33 Cr.L.J. 349, 136 I.C. 842, 12 P.L.T. 937, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 72, 1932 Cr.C. 136; Ghulam Nabi, 27 S.L.R. 67, 1933 Cr.C. 334 (336); 34 Cr.L.J. 763, 144 I.C. 409, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 136, Ind. Rul. 1933 Sind 185; Gopal v. Alagirisami, 54 Mad. 598, 131 I.C. 176, 33 M.L.W. 460, 1931 M.W.N. 368, 60 M.L.J. 520, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 770, 1931 Cr.C. 1026, Ind. Rul. 1931 Mad. 512, 32 Cr.L.J. 690; and can submit a charge-sheet and send up the case for trial—Rashid Ahmad, 33 P.L.R. 840, 33 Cr.L.J. 737, 139 I.C. 139, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 579, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 561, 14 Lah. 194, 1932 Cr.C. 807 (809); Ghulam Nabi, supra.

Discussing the rulings mentioned above and overruling Ghulam Nabi, supra, the Full Bench of the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court has laid down that it is not competent to the Police when they have been directed by the Magistrate to enquire into a complaint of an offence of which he has taken cognizance, in effect to ignore the Magistrate's direction and to start proceedings of their own. To hold otherwise would be to ignore the purpose and effect of sec. 202, Cr. P. C., and merely to invite a conflict of jurisdictions between the Police and the Magistrate which in the public interest should be avoided. Section 202, Cr. P. C., refers not only to an enquiry but also to an investigation; and sec. 202 (2) confers upon a person other than a Magistrate or a Police Officer all powers conferred upon a Police Officer in charge of a Police Station except the powers of arrest without warrant. Surely this implies that a Police Officer to whom a complaint has been referred for investigation has the power to arrest without warrant under sec. 54, Cr. P. C., and all the powers which may be exercised by a Police Officer in the course of an investigation. The scheme of sec. 202, Cr. P. C., appears to be, that when a complaint is sent to the Police for investigation and report, they are to investigate in precisely the same manner and to arrest in precisely the same way as they would have done if their powers had been first invoked by a first report under sec. 154, Cr. P. C., there being only this difference, that in the one case the Police embody the result of their investigation to the Magistrate in a report which the Magistrate proceeds to consider under sec. 203, Cr. P. C., while in the other case the Police embody the result of their investigation in what is called a challan or charge-sheet not occurring in the section, the accused person, in any case, if arrested by the Police, being produced before the Magistrate in the ordinary way—Bhika Moti, 39 Cr.L.J. 681, 175 I.C. 899, 11 R.S. 13, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 113 (F.B.).

After a Magistrate issued process he has no power to make a reference to the Police under clause (3) of this section—Vijayaraghavachari, 30 Cr.L.J. 326, 114 I.C. 365, A.I.R. 1928 Mad 1268, Ind. Rul. 1929 Mad. 285, following Arula Kotiah, 11 I.C. 999, (1911) 2 M.W.N. 74, 10 M.L.T. 120, 12 Cr.L.J. 463.

The mere fact that a private complaint is filed in a Court and the Magistrate takes cognizance of the private complaint, does not and cannot deter the police from enquiring into the offences which have been committed and which come to their knowledge not from the complainant party but on information which they secure in the course of their duty from other persons—Vijayaraghavachari, supra.

157. (1) If, from information received or otherwise, an officer in charge of a police-station has reason to suspect the commission of an offence which he is empowered under section 156 to investigate, he shall forthwith send a report of the same to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of such offence upon a police-report, and shall proceed in person, or shall depute one of his subordinate officers not being below such rank as the Provincial Government may by general or special order prescribe in this behalf to proceed to the spot, to investigate the facts and circumstances of the case and, if necessary, to take measures for the discovery and arrest of the offender :

Provided as follows :—

(a) when any information as to the commission of any such offence is given against any person by name and the case is not of a serious nature, the officer in charge of a police-station need not proceed in person or depute a subordinate officer to make an investigation on the spot;

(b) if it appear to the officer in charge of a police-station that there is no sufficient ground for entering on an investigation, he shall not investigate the case.

(2) In each of the cases mentioned in clauses (a) and (b) of the proviso to sub-section (1), the officer in charge of the police-station shall state in his said report his reasons for not fully complying with the requirements of that sub-section, and in the case mentioned in clause (b) such officer shall also forthwith notify to the informant, if any, in such manner as may be prescribed by the Provincial Government, the fact that he will not investigate the case or cause it to be investigated.

Change:—The italicised words have been added by sec. 32 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923

"And, if necessary, to take measures".—These words have been substituted for the words "and to take such measures as may be necessary."

Under the old law the taking of measures necessary for the discovery and arrest of the offender was incumbent on the police-officer; under the present law, the police-circumstances of the delay to consider its bearing on the prosecution story—Majesty, 2 Bom L.R. 1092.

Sub-section (3) of this section does not empower a Magistrate, after he has taken cognizance of a case, to order a police investigation under sec. 156 and to direct the police to submit a report. Section 156 (3) only empowers the Magistrate to order a police inquiry in a case where the Magistrate does not himself issue process at once. When a Magistrate takes cognizance of a complaint under sec. 200, and refers the case to the police for inquiry under sec. 202, it is for him to pass the necessary order on the police report either under sec. 203 or under sec. 204. He cannot direct the police, if they find the case to be established, to submit a charge-sheet. In other words, the Magistrate, after he has acted under Ch. XVI cannot proceed under Ch. XIV—Isaf Nasya, 54 Cal. 303, 102 I.C. 545, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 24, 28 Cr.L.J. 577. A similar view is taken in Nur Mahomed, 53 Bom 339, 117 I.C. 329, 31 Bom L.R. 84, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 72, 30 Cr.L.J. 781 and Ulfat Khan, 29 Cr.L.J. 374, 108 I.C. 333, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 359. The Cr. P. C. does not contemplate that when the Magistrate has received a formal complaint he need not follow the procedure set out in sec. 200, Cr. P. C., but can straightway send it to the police under sec. 156 (3), Cr. P. C., and then upon issue of B summary, make a complaint of a false charge—Radhakrishin G. Keswani v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 449, 180 I.C. 436, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 78. But the Patna, Madras and Lahore High Courts are of opinion that if a Magistrate, on taking cognizance of an offence, direct the police to investigate under sec. 202, the police can exercise their general power of investigation and arrest—Bhola Bhagat, 2 Pat. 379, 72 I.C. 375, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 547, 24 Cr.L.J. 375, 4 P.L.T. 521 (see this case cited in Note 670 under sec. 202); Raghunath, 33 Cr.L.J. 349, 136 I.C. 842, 12 P.L.T. 937, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 72, 1932 Cr.C. 136; Ghulam Nabi, 27 S.L.R. 67, 1933 Cr.C. 334 (336); 34 Cr.L.J. 763, 144 I.C. 409, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 136, Ind. Rul. 1931 Mad. 512, 32 Cr.L.J. 690; and can submit a charge-sheet and send up the case for trial—Rashid Ahmad, 33 P.L.R. 840, 33 Cr.L.J. 737, 139 I.C. 139, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 579, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 561, 14 Lah. 194, 1932 Cr.C. 807 (809); Ghulam Nabi, supra.

Discussing the rulings mentioned above and overruling Ghulam Nabi, supra, the Full Bench of the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court has laid down that it is not competent to the Police when they have been directed by the Magistrate to enquire into a complaint of an offence of which he has taken cognizance, in effect to ignore the Magistrate's direction and to start proceedings of their own. To hold otherwise would be to ignore the purpose and effect of sec. 202, Cr. P. C., and merely to invite a conflict of jurisdictions between the Police and the Magistrate which in the public interest should be avoided. Section 202, Cr. P. C., refers not only to an enquiry but also to an investigation: and sec. 202 (2) confers upon a person other than a Magistrate or a Police Officer all powers conferred upon a Police Officer in charge of a Police Station except the powers of arrest without warrant. Surely this implies that a Police Officer to whom a complaint has been referred for investigation has the power to arrest without warrant under sec. 54, Cr. P. C., and all the powers which may be exercised by a Police Officer in the course of an investigation. The scheme of sec. 202, Cr. P. C., appears to be, that when a complaint is sent to the Police for investigation and report, they are to investigate in precisely the same manner and to arrest in precisely the same way as they would have done if their powers had been first invoked by a first report under sec. 154, Cr. P. C., there being only this difference, that in the one case the Police embody the result of their investigation to the Magistrate in a report which the Magistrate proceeds to consider under sec. 203, Cr. P. C., while in the other case the Police embody the result of their investigation in what is called a challan or charge-sheet not occurring in the section, the accused person, in any case, if arrested by the Police, being produced before the Magistrate in the ordinary way—Bhika Moti, 39 Cr.L.J. 631, 175 I.C. 899, 11 R.S. 13, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 113 (F.B.).

158. (1) Every report sent to a Magistrate under section 157 shall, if the Provincial Government so directs, be submitted through such superior officer of police as the Provincial Government, by general or special order, appoint in that behalf.

(2) Such superior officer may give such instructions to the officer in charge of the Police station as he thinks fit, and shall, after recording such instructions on such report, transmit the same without delay to the Magistrate.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

159. Such Magistrate, on receiving such report, may direct an investigation or, if he thinks fit, at once proceed, or depute any Magistrate subordinate to him to proceed, to hold a preliminary inquiry into, or otherwise to dispose of, the case in manner provided in this Code.

490. Magistrate's power to hold investigation or inquiry:—An inquiry can be made under this section only on a police report submitted within the terms of section 157, i.e., on a preliminary report made before the police investigation or inquiry; but if the report is submitted after investigation, the Magistrate is not empowered to act under this section—Mouli v. Nourangi, 4 CWN 351 (352); Sarba Mahton, 17 CWN, 824 (825). See also Emp v Abdul Rahman, 32 All 30.

The inquiry which a Magistrate is competent to hold under this section is a preliminary inquiry. Therefore, where a report of the commission of an offence has been made by the police after full inquiry into the truth of the information given to them as to the commission of the offence, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to make any further inquiry into the same offence—In re Kandhaya Lal, 1899 A W.N. 87

An inquiry under this section can be made only on the submission of a police report, if, however, a complaint is made to the Magistrate, he is bound to proceed under sec 200—Loke Nath v Sanyasi, 30 Cal 923, 7 CWN. 525. On receipt of the report of the preliminary enquiry under this section the Magistrate should proceed to deal with the case in the same way as he would have dealt with it on receipt of a report from a police officer. He has no jurisdiction to pass an order under sec 203, Cr P. C., in such a case—Ibid. Distinguishing this case it was held that the complaint can be dismissed under sec 203, Cr P C—Arula Kotiah, 12 Cr L J. 463, 11 IC. 499, 10 M.L.T. 120, 1911 M.W.N. 74

Where a case comes before a first class Magistrate under the provisions of secs 157 and 159, he can depute a Sub-Deputy Magistrate to hold an investigation or a preliminary inquiry. The latter can also, under sec 164 (1), record a statement of a witness made before him in the course of the police investigation—Harendra, 40 C.L.J. 313, 26 Cr L J 307 (308), 84 IC. 451, A.I.R 1925 Cal. 161.

The expression "preliminary inquiry" in this section appears to be used in a different sense from its use in section 288, where it refers to inquiries under Ch. XVIII, prior to commitment to the Sessions, which are held after the police investigation is complete, after the charge-sheet is drawn up, and after the accused is forwarded to custody under sec 170 to the Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the Pedda, 45 Mad. 230 (233). The number of investigation is not limited by when one has been completed another may be begun on fresh information received—Mohinder, 33 Cr.L.J. 97, 135 I.C. 209, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 103, 1932 Cr.C. 123, 33 P.L.R. 891, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah 81, following Divakar v. Ramamurthi, 47 I.C. 273, 35 M.L.J. 127, 19 Cr.L.J. 901.

The mere fact that the enquiry was not held by a particular officer as suggested by the Magistrate, does not make the submission of the charge sheet on the part of the investigating Police, contrary to the provisions of the Cr. P. Code—Osman v. Haripada, 37 Cr.L.J. 139, 159 I.C. 660, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 731, 62 Cal. 469, 1935 Cr.C. 1144.

160. Any police-officer making an investigation under this

Police officer's power to require attendance of witnesses

Chapter may, by order in writing, require the attendance before himself of any person being within the limits of his own or any adjoining station, who, from the information given or otherwise, appears to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case; and such person shall attend as so required.

492. Order in writing:—The order to attend under this section must be in writing. A person required orally to appear before a police officer as a witness cannot be convicted under section 174, I.P.C., for disobedience of such order—In re Veerasamy, 1 Weir 86; Tukaram, 48 I.C. 688, 20 Cr.L.J. 48. So also, where a Police Inspector sent a constable to bring two persons for inquiring of them about an offence, and the order was not in writing, the persons need not accompany the constable. If the persons accompanied the constable, they could not be said to have been in lawful custody of the constable, and any person inducing those persons not to accompany the constable could not be held guilty of rescuing them from lawful custody—Purshotam, Ratanlal 850.

The absence of an order in writing as required by this section is no doubt an irregularity. It would certainly justify the failure or refusal of the suspects to obey the order, but it can have no effect when the irregularity is waived by them—Dinanath Ganpat Rai, A.I.R. 1940 Nag 186 (189), I.L.R. 1940 Nag 232.

493. "Require the attendance":—An officer in charge of a police station may require the attendance of persons whose evidence is necessary, and the persons summoned are bound to obey the order; but in no case can be police compel a witness by force to attend before him—Tarinee, 7 W.R. 3; Purshotam, Ratanlal 850. A police officer has no power to arrest or to detain even for a single moment any person whose evidence is required for the purpose of investigation—Tarinee, 7 W.R. 3.

Security bond to appear:—There is no provision in this Code authorising a police-officer to take security bond for the production of any person before the police; and the Magistrate has, therefore, no power to alter it and impose fresh conditions under it—In re Chandra Sekhar, 11 Cal. 77. But see Kanshi Ram, 1913 P.R. 22, 14 Cr.L.J. 631, cited under secs. 497 and 499.

494. Who may be required to attend:—Accused:—This section applies only to the case of persons who appear to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case, i.e., witnesses or possible witnesses only; an order under this section cannot be made requiring the attendance of an accused person, with a view to his answering the charge made against him. The intention of the Legislature seems to have been only to provide a facility for obtaining evidence and not for procuring the attendance of the accused, who may be arrested at any time if necessary—Saminatha, 7 Mad. 274; Ratan, 4 Bom.L.R. 644; Nga Tha, 4 Rang 72, 27 Cr.L.J. 881. Therefore, where the accused person refused to obey an order under this section, and was, therefore, taken into custody by the police, it was held that the Police was guilty of wrongful confinement, although the police was justified in arresting without warrant upon the original charge made against the accused—Lakshimigadu, 2 Weir 121.

This section aims at securing the attendance of persons who would supply the necessary information in regard to the commission of the offence, and who would be examined as witnesses in the enquiry or trial to be held in regard to the said offence. It admits of no reasonable doubt therefore that this section has reference to the persons to be examined as witnesses in the trial or enquiry to be held after the completion of the investigation. As an accused cannot be examined as a witness either for or against himself, he cannot be included in the class of persons referred to in the section—Gola v. Emp., A.I.R. 1929 Nag 17 (20), 24 N.L.R. 158, 114 I.C. 273, 30 Cr.L.J. 258, 12 A.I.Cr.R. 177 (F.B.). But the police officers are fully authorized to require the personal attendance of the suspects during the investigation—Dinanath Ganpat Rai, A.I.R. 1940 Nag 186 (189), I.L.B. 1940 Nag. 232.

Woman :—It is an unusual course for the Police to take a number of women away from their village to the police-station on the pretext that they wished to examine them. The examination should be properly conducted at the women's own houses—Haladhar, 9 C.W.N. 199 (201), 2 Cr.L.J. 51.

"Shall attend":—If a person fails to attend before a police officer making an investigation under this chapter, he is liable to punishment under section 174, I. P. C.—Jogendra, 24 Cal 320, 1 C.W.N. 154. Mere refusal to accept a notice issued under this section does not constitute an offence under sec 173, I. P. C.—Bahadura, 27 Cr.L.J. 284, 92 I.C. 460, 24 A.L.J. 215, A.I.R. 1926 All. 304, following Sahdeo, 46 I.C. 522, 40 All 577, 16 A.L.J. 453, 19 Cr.L.J. 746.

495. Magistrate's power to interfere or issue warrant:—A Magistrate has no power to issue a warrant for the arrest and production of a person in order that such person may give evidence before the police during an investigation under this chapter—Jogendra, 24 Cal 320, 1 C.W.N. 154. He cannot interfere with the exercise of discretion given to a police officer to summon witnesses, though he might offer his suggestion or advise the police officer as to a particular course of action—In re Sankalchand, Ratanlal 133.

161. (1) Any police-officer making an investigation under this Chapter or any police-officer not below such rank as the Provincial Government may, by general or special order, prescribe in this behalf, acting on the requisition of such officer, may examine orally any person supposed to be acquainted with the facts and circumstances of the case

Examination of witnesses by police

(2) Such person shall be bound to answer all questions relating to such case put to him by such officer, other than questions the answers to which would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge or to a penalty or forfeiture.

Change:—The italicised words have been added by sec. 33 of the Criminal Procedure-Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923). This amendment is similar to that made in section 157 (1).

The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937..

Scope:—The provisions of this section should not be utilised in any but "heinous cases." Heinous cases include cases triable exclusively by a Court of Session and those cases in which Special Diaries are submitted through the Magistrate either to the Commissioner only or both to the Commissioner and to the Deputy Inspector-General or Inspector-General of Police—Beng. Pol. Code, p. 432.

A headman cannot examine witnesses on oath in the course of an inquiry in a criminal case. The statement made to him can be used in the manner provided for in secs. 145 and 147 of the Indian Evidence Act—Mi Choke, 34 Cr.L.J. 781, 144 I.C. 369, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 119, 1933 Cr.C. 644. It is not evident that the inquest report comes under this section—Rajeswari, 37 C.W.N. 732 (734), A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 851, 1933 Cr.C. 1478

496. Examination of accused before arrest:—When a police officer has evidence before him, upon which he is bound to arrest a person, he should not preliminary to his arrest, obtain a statement from that person professedly under this section and reduce it to writing—Jadub Das, 27 Cal. 295 (299, 302).

497. Statements of witnesses:—Any person:—This section empowers certain Police Officers to examine orally "any person" supposed to be acquainted with the facts and the circumstances of the case, and requires such person to answer such questions subject to certain limitations. The marginal note to the section shows that it refers to "examination of witnesses by Police." It would appear that "any person" in this section refers to a witness and not to the person who is accused of the offence. It is quite another matter, if the person who made a statement to the Police in the course of an investigation was not then accused of the offence under investigation but was called as a witness. The object of this section is to obtain evidence to be produced at the trial. Any incriminating statement made by an accused person at an inquiry held under this section would be excluded at the trial under sec. 25 of the Evidence Act, as having been made to a Police Officer, and as such of no material use at the trial—Umur Duraz Munshi v. Emp., 26 Cr.L.J. 778 (780), 86 I.C. 410, A.I.R. 1925 Sind 237. See also Q.-Emp. v. Jadab Das, 27 Cal. 295, 4 C.W.N. 129 and Gola v. Emp., A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 17 (20), 24 N.L.R. 158, 114 I.C. 273, 30 Cr.L.J. 258, 12 A.I. Cr.R. 177 (F.B.). See also Note 501A

Not privileged under sec 172:—Where a police-officer making an investigation under this section took statements from the persons who were afterwards called as witnesses, the accused person would be entitled to call for and inspect such documents and cross-examine the witnesses thereon, as such statements would not amount to a portion of the diary referred to in sec. 172—Bikas, 16 Cal. 610. A police-officer, by inserting in the special diary statements which can only have been made to him under this section, cannot protect such statements from being used in the way that the law allows, e.g., under secs 145 and 159 of the Evidence Act. Sheru Sha, 20 Cal 642. Contra—Mannu, 19 All. 390. But under the amended section 162, these statements, whether included in the diary or not, can be used only under the circumstances mentioned in sec. 162.

See Notes 501 and 502C.

Statements not the property of Police:—Depositions of witnesses or confessions taken at a police investigation are not any more the property of the police than the property of prisoners, and there is no prohibition against any person present at the time when depositions are being taken or confessions made, to take down in writing what either a prisoner or a witness says (though, of course, the police cannot allow copies of them to be formally taken). A pleader for the accused can use the statement so taken down for the benefit of his client—In re Kristo Lal, 10 Cal. 256 (262, 263).

498. Recording of statements:—Statements made by a witness to a police-officer under this section during an investigation may be reduced to writing. But it is not obligatory on the Police officer to record any statement made to him. He may do so only if he likes—Uttamchand, 11 B.H.C.R. 120.

It was held that the statements of witnesses should not be recorded in the Special Diary mentioned in sec. 172—Dadan Gazi, 33 Cal. 1023, 10 C.W.N. 890. But it does not now matter whether these statements are recorded in the Special Diary or not, their use being controlled solely by sec. 162 (Woodroffe, p. 178). Cf. the words "whether in a Police diary or otherwise" occurring in sec. 162. See Mafizaddi, 31 C.W.N. 910, 45 C.L.J. 561; Sadhu, 32 C.W.N. 280.

It is not necessary that the statements of witnesses recorded under this section should be in the form of alternative questions and answers. It is enough if the statement so recorded is substantially an answer to the questions put to the witnesses—Bhagwantia, 15 All 11; Abdur Rahman, 1896 P.R. 7.

The statements need not be signed by the witnesses; but it is not illegal for a police-officer to obtain the signature of the witnesses to the statements, though he cannot compel them to sign—Bhagwantia, 15 All. 11.

499. Privileges of witnesses:—A statement made by a witness in answer to a question put to him by a police-officer in the course of an investigation under this section is privileged, and cannot be made the foundation of a charge of defamation—Govinda, 16 Mad. 235 (238); Ramaswami Mudaliar, 47 M.L.W. 136, 1938 M.W.N. 217, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 810, nor can he be made liable in an action for damages for any words spoken during such investigation—Methuram v. Jagannath, 28 Cal. 794; Fakir Mahomed v. Fakir Mahomed Nanji, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 44, 30 S.L.R. 43, 6 R.S. 236, 168 I.C. 643.

Witness not bound to speak the truth—Under the Code of 1882 a witness was bound to answer truly all questions put to him under this section; but the effect of the omission of the word "truly" from the Code of 1898 has been to do away with the legal obligation to speak the truth—Sankarlinga, 23 Mad. 544 (546); Nga Pyn, 10 Bur.L.T. 259, 18 Cr.L.J. 844 (846). Therefore, witnesses cannot be prosecuted for giving false evidence under this section—Nga Po, 9 Bur.L.T. 203, 18 Cr.L.J. 98. The Select Committee (1898) observed:—"It seems to us unfair that a man should be liable to be convicted of giving the false evidence on the strength or by the aid of a statement supposed to have been given to a police-officer, but which is not given on oath, which he has not signed, and which he has had no opportunity of verifying; such statement may be hurriedly taken down as rough notes; the police-officer is not trained in taking evidence, and the notes are often fairer out by another officer. They bear no resemblance to depositions and ought to have no weight as such attached to them. The provisions of sections 202 and 203 of the Penal Code appear to us to afford a sufficient safeguard against the false information."

This change in the law supersedes the following cases decided under the Code of 1882 and earlier Codes—10 Cal 405; 8 Bom 216; 11 Bom 659; 15 All 11, 1896 P.R. 7.

Since a person making a statement under this section cannot be said to "give information" within the meaning of sec 182, I.P.C., he cannot be prosecuted under that section for giving false information if the statement made by him be false—Mangu, 1914 P.L.R. 227, 15 Cr.L.J. 650, 25 I.C. 978, 35 P.W.R. 1914 (Cr.), 227 P.L.R. 1914; Emp v. Nga Aung Po, 2 Cr.L.J. 474, U.B.R. (1905) Penal Code 13; Sultan v. Wellbourne, 26 Cr.L.J. 1532, 90 I.C. 316, 3 Rang 577, 4 Bur.L.J. 261, A.I.R. 1925 Rang 364; Maung Bo Ni, A.I.R. 1935 Rang 97; nor under section 211, I.P.C.—Chinna, 31 Mad 506; Kodangi, 33 Cr.L.J. 173, 135 I.C. 590, 34 M.L.W. 858, 1931 M.W.N. 1138, 61 M.L.J. 860, A.I.R. 1932 Mad 24, 1932 Cr.C. 4, Ind. Rul 1932 Mad. 171.

500. Refusal to answer questions:—Under this section a person answering questions put by a police-officer is not bound to answer truly. Therefore, a refusal to answer such questions is not punishable under sec 179, I.P.C.—Sankarlinga, 23 Mad 544 (546); Gul Hassan, 1908 P.R. 27; Mawzanagyi, 8 Rang 511, 32 Cr.L.J. 201 (202); Mahmad, 6 S.L.R. 277, 14 Cr.L.J. 302.

Incriminating questions—Under sub-section (2), a witness is not bound to answer any question put to him by a police-officer, the answer to which would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge. Therefore, a person examined under this section by the police with respect to an offence with which he may himself be charged and convicted is not bound to speak the truth, and in such a case a conviction for giving false evidence would be illegal—Usuphkan, Ratanlal 619.

162. (1) No statement made by any person to a police-officer in the course of an investigation under this Chapter shall, if taken down in writing, be signed by the person making it, nor shall such writing be used as evidence : Provided that, when any witness is called for the prosecution whose statement has been taken down in writing as aforesaid, the Court shall, on the request of the accused, refer to such writing and may then, if the Court thinks it expedient in the interests of justice, direct that the accused be furnished with a copy thereof : and such statement may be used to impeach the credit of such witness in the manner provided by the Indian Evidence Act, 1872.

Statements to police not to be signed or admitted in evidence.

162. (1) No statement made by any person to a police-officer in the course of an investigation under this Chapter shall, if reduced into writing, be signed by the person making it; nor shall any such statement or any record thereof, whether in a police diary or otherwise, or any part of such statement or record, be used for any purpose (save as hereinafter provided) at any inquiry or trial in respect of any offence under investigation at the time when such statement was made :

Statements to police not to be signed; use of such statements in evidence.

Provided that, when any witness is called for the prosecution in such inquiry or trial whose statement has been reduced into writing as aforesaid, the Court shall, on the request of the accused, refer to such writing and * * * direct that the accused be furnished with a copy thereof, in order that any part of such statement, if duly proved, may be used to contradict such witness in the manner provided by section 145 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. When any part of such statement is so used, any part thereof may also be used in the re-examination of such witness, but for the purpose only of explaining any matter referred to in his cross-examination :

Provided, further, that if the Court is of opinion that any part of any such statement is not relevant to the subject matter of the inquiry or trial, or that its disclosure to the accused is not essential in the interests of justice, and is inexpedient in the public interests, it shall record such opinion (but not the reasons therefor) and shall exclude such part from the copy of the statement furnished to the accused.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to apply to any statement falling within the provisions of section 32, clause (1), of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872.

Change:—Sub-section (1) with its provisos has been thoroughly redrafted by sec. 34 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act XVIII of 1923.

Legislative history of the section and reasons for the change:—“The amendment of section 162 has been discussed at great length by the Committee. It has been the subject of amendment before, and of constant difficulty in the Courts. We, therefore, propose to recast the section, and we think that a note as to its previous history will be instructive.

“Under the original Code of 1861 (section 145), a Police-officer could examine potential witnesses and reduce their statements to writing, but the writing was not to be part of the record or used as evidence. The Code of 1872 maintained the above provisions, merely adding (section 119) that no person when examined by the police should be bound to answer incriminating questions. The only material change made by the Code of 1882 (section 162) was that, instead of the provision that the statement when so reduced to writing should not be used as evidence, it was provided that no statement made by a witness if reduced to writing should be used as evidence against the accused, thus making it clear that the provision in question was intended for the benefit of the accused.

“The new section did not lay down in terms that the accused might not use the written record of a witness's statement for the purpose of his defence, and indeed it rather suggested that he was entitled to do so. Accordingly cases occurred in which the accused demanded to see the statements which the police had taken down, in order that he might use, for the purpose of his defence, anything that appeared therein to his advantage, and the Calcutta High Court ruled that he was entitled to do so. The Allahabad High Court, on the other hand, held that the writings in effect formed part of the police-diary and were, therefore, privileged from inspection, and thus was the position which stood to be dealt with when the Amending Act of 1898 was under consideration. There was evidently a good deal to be said on both sides as will appear from the report of the Select Committee (1898) on the Bill which is quoted in extenso below.—

“The question involved (namely, whether the accused is entitled to inspect statements taken down by the police under section 161) is full of difficulty. In the first place, it is essential in the interests of public justice that the source of police information should be kept secret. If the names of informers or detectives and the nature of their information be disclosed, the detection of crime would be seriously crippled. In the second place, it is unfair to a witness that his evidence should be discredited on the strength of an alleged statement made to a policeman, which he may have had no opportunity of verifying or correcting. Such statements must necessarily be often taken down hurriedly and may be incorrectly copied out. They are not taken down as depositions or with regard to the rules of evidence, but merely to aid the police in the course of their investigation. But in the third place, it may be most important for the accused

162. (1) No statement made by any person to a police-officer in the course of an investigation under this Chapter shall, if taken down in writing, be signed by the person making it, nor shall such writing be used as evidence: Provided that, when any witness is called for the prosecution whose statement has been taken down in writing as aforesaid, the Court shall, on the request of the accused, refer to such writing and may then, if the Court thinks it expedient in the interests of justice, direct that the accused be furnished with a copy thereof: and such statement may be used to impeach the credit of such witness in the manner provided by the Indian Evidence Act, 1872.

162. Provided that, when any witness is called for the prosecution in such inquiry or trial whose statement has been reduced into writing as aforesaid, the Court shall, on the request of the accused, refer to such writing and * * * direct that the accused be furnished with a copy thereof, in order that any part of such statement, if duly proved, may be used to contradict such witness in the manner provided by section 145 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. When any part of such statement is so used, any part thereof may also be used in the re-examination of such witness, but for the purpose only of explaining any matter referred to in his cross-examination:

It has been the subject of amendment before, and of constant difficulty in the Courts. There was evidently a good deal to be said on both sides as will appear from the report of the Select Committee (1898) on the Bill which is quoted in extenso below —

“The question involved (namely, whether the accused is entitled to inspect statements taken down by the police under section 161) is full of difficulty. In the first place, it is essential in the interests of public justice that the source of police information should be kept secret. If the names of informers or detectives and the nature of their information be disclosed, the detection of crime would be seriously crippled. In the second place, it is unfair to a witness that his evidence should be discredited on a policeman, which he may have taken down. Such statements must necessarily be incorrectly copied out. They are not taken down as depositions or with regard to the rules of evidence, but merely to aid the police in the course of their investigation. But in the third place, it may be most important for the accused to show that a witness called for the prosecution is telling a story substantially different from that which he told when first questioned by the police. We have endeavoured to reconcile these conflicting interests by reverting to the language of the Codes of 1861 and 1872, and adding a proviso compelling the Court, on the application of the accused, to refer to such statements, and then empowering it in its discretion to allow him to have copies of them. We then provide for the mode in which these statements are to be used. It is clear that a witness ought not to have his credit impeached on the strength of a statement alleged to have been made to a policeman, unless and until it is shown that he has made that statement.'

"The result was not altogether a happy one. It will be noticed that the section deals mainly with the writing and enacts that it shall not be used in evidence, with a proviso that the Court may in its discretion direct the accused to be furnished with a copy of it—presumably only in order that the accused may know that there is something in the writing which may help his defence—and goes on to say that the statement (i.e., what the witness said to the police officer) may be used in the ordinary course to impeach the credit of the witness, obviously implying that for this purpose it must be duly proved.

"It seems clear that all that the amendment of 1898 intended to effect was to make it clear that the accused had no right to call for or see the record of any statements taken down by the police under section 161, unless the Court thought that in the interests of justice he should be allowed to do so. It did not purport to deal with and has left untouched, the further question whether or not a statement made by a witness under section 161, as apart from the written record of the statement, might be used by the prosecution for the purpose of corroborating one of their witnesses under section 157 of the Evidence Act, and this is at all events one of the principal difficulties with which we have to deal now.

"The re-draft of the section which we propose will make it clear that the statements taken under section 161 (and not merely the written records of such statements) are not to be used in any way or for any purposes except as allowed by the proviso. Having regard to the fact that the making of such statements is compulsory under section 161, and to the way in which, and the circumstances under which, they are usually recorded, we do not think that they are of any corroborative value where the witness merely repeats the same statement in Court, and that they ought not, therefore, to be allowed to be used for the purpose of corroboration under section 157 of the Evidence Act. If the really material fact to the prosecution is that a statement was made to the police on a particular date or at a particular place, this fact will, of course, still be provable in the ordinary course, and it will be open to the Courts or to a jury to make any proper deduction from this fact and the action which was taken on it. The amendment will also, we think, make it clear that if the accused wishes to rely on anything in the previous statement of a witness to the police, of which he has been allowed by the Court to have a copy, he will have to prove it in the ordinary way. If the witness admits this in cross-examination, it will, of course, be sufficient; if he denies the contradiction and the police-officer who took it down is called by the prosecution, the previous statement of the witness on the point may be proved by him; if he is not called by the prosecution, the Court would not doubt itself in most cases call him, or if the accused is calling evidence in support of his defence, it may be worth his while to call the Police-officer himself. But it is clear that unless the previous contradictory statement is proved in some way in accordance with law, it ought not to deprecate the witness's statement on oath. It will be observed that under our amendment, if any part of the previous statement of the witness is used for the purpose of cross-examination by the accused, any other part of it may be used by the prosecution within the proper limits of re-examination. This is, we think, the only way in which the previous statement ought to be allowed to be used by the prosecution"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916.

See Bilari Mahton, 10 Pat 107, 12 P.L.T. 798, 32 Cr.L.J. 797 (800 802), where the distinction between the old section and the new has been elaborately pointed out.

Applicability:—In the Calcutta Police Act (IV of 1866) there is no section corresponding to sec 162, or sec 172, Cr. P. C., which does not apply to the Calcutta Police—Pancharan Mukherjee v Emp., 30 Cr.L.J. 577, 116 I.C. 160, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 257, 33 C.W.N. 203, Ind. Rul 1929 Cal 448. The Code does not apply to the police in the town of Calcutta unless expressly made applicable to them, and there has been no notification making this section so applicable. See sec 1, sub-sec. (2) of the Code—Makhan Lal Dutta, (1939) 2 Cal 429 (431)

This section does not apply to the police in the town of Bombay. The admissibility of a statement made before a Police officer of the Bombay City Police has to be decided with reference to sec 63 of the City of Bombay Police Act (which is identical with the old section 162)—Wahiduddin, 54 Bom. 528, 31 Cr.L.J. 1003 (114), A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 158, 32 Bom.L.R. 327, 126 I.C. 333

500A. Object and Scope of section:—The purpose of this section is to amend for the purpose of criminal trials certain sections in the Evidence Act which states what evidence is admissible and inadmissible in certain circumstances—Sajjad Mirza v. Emp., 45 C.L.J. 199 (201), A.I.R. 1927 Cal 372. The purpose of the section is to protect accused persons from being prejudiced by statements made to police officers who by reason of the fact that an investigation is known to be on foot at the time the statement is made, may be in a position to influence the maker of it and, on the other hand, to protect accused persons from the prejudice at the hands of persons who in the knowledge that an investigation has already started, are prepared to tell untruths—Aftab Mohd Khan, A.I.R. 1940 All 291 (299), 1940 A.L.J. 206, 41 Cr.L.J. 647, 188 I.C. 649.

This section generally prohibits the use of any statement made to a police-officer as evidence of the matter of the charge. It was intended to recognize the danger of placing implicit confidence to a record more or less imperfectly made by a police-officer who would not necessarily be competent to make an exactly correct record of the statement of a witness with due regard to the provisions of the law of evidence and who might not be entirely free from an inclination to take the statement as being somewhat more definite and precise in a particular direction than the witness had intended it to be—Isab Mandal, 28 Cal 348 (351, 352)

The ban of sec. 162 applies only to statements made to a police-officer while he is making an investigation under Chap XIV. If the investigation contemplated by that Chapter is finished, then this section cannot be invoked to prohibit any statement made to a police-officer at some time subsequent to the investigation. If, on the other hand, statements made to police-officers when preparing a map or holding an identification parade are statements made in the course of an investigation under Chap XIV, then they fall within the scope of the prohibition embodied in sec 162—Nga Than, 4 Rang 72, 5 Bur.L.J. 30, 27 Cr.L.J. 881

It was with the object of guarding against a true case being spoilt by an unscrupulous Investigating Police Officer that the provisions of this section were enacted. The Judge should conform to these provisions when the Investigating Police Officer is allowed to be cross-examined by the defence—Debendra, 35 Cr.L.J. 904, 149 I.C. 130, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 458, 1935 Cr.C. 663

In the course of an investigation:—The first information report (sec 154) against an accused is not a statement within the contemplation of sec 162, in as much as it is not made in the course of an investigation. Again, sec 154 requires it to be signed, whereas statements under sec 162 are forbidden to be signed, even when recorded in writing—Azimaddy, 54 Cal 237, 44 C.L.J. 253, 28 Cr.L.J. 99 (101). Where a person who was assaulted sent a telegram to the Police, and the Police Inspector went to the place and recorded a statement from the complainant, held that this statement did not fall under sec. 162, as it was not made to a police officer in the course of an investigation.

The Inspector went to the place not to make investigation and collect evidence but to see whether his suspicion that an offence has been committed was justified—Chidambaram, 55 M.L.J. 231, 29 Cr.L.J. 717 (718). Statements taken by a C. I. D. Officer in a preliminary inquiry conducted by him against a public officer before the Government sanctioned the prosecution of the latter officer, were not statements falling under this section because they were not made during the course of an investigation; there was no investigation but only a departmental inquiry—Jehangir, 29 Bom.L.R. 996, 28 Cr.L.J. 1012 (1014). Where an informant made two statements to the police to the effect that "a woman had gone away from her house with ornaments and that she could not be found", and then the police-officer went to investigate, and on the next day the informant made a third statement that "the woman had not yet returned and that she must have been detained by her companions or killed by them for her ornaments", held that though the third statement was made to the police in the course of an investigation, still it was not an investigation into an offence, because no offence had been mentioned before the third statement was made; the police had only begun a general investigation. The statement did not fall under this section and was not excluded from evidence—Moni Mohan, 58 Cal. 1312, 35 C.W.N. 623 (631), 33 Cr.L.J. 138. The words "in the course of" in the context of this section import that the statement must be made as a step in a pending investigation to be used in that investigation. The words "in the course of" do not refer merely to that period of time which elapses between the beginning and the end of the investigation. An investigation starts when the first step towards investigation is taken by the police. Where, therefore, a report is made quite independently of, and in no relation to, any pending investigation and not designed to promote a pending investigation in any way but to start one having no reference at all to the investigation which has in fact begun, it is not possible to say that it is made "in the course of" the investigation of the case—Aftab Mohd. Khan, A.I.R. 1940 All. 291 (300), 41 Cr.L.J. 647, 188 I.C. 649, 1940 A.L.J. 206. See Notes 480 and 502B.

Statements made to a police-officer in the course of an investigation under sec. 174, even though it is conducted in the presence of two or more respectable men are nonetheless statements made to a police officer "in the course of an investigation" under this Chapter, within the meaning of sec. 162—In re Muruthamuthu Kudumban, 50 Mad 750, 52 M.L.J. 601, 28 Cr.L.J. 463 (464).

This section may be thus explained: The first paragraph provides that no statement made to the police in the course of an investigation shall be admissible at the inquiry or trial. In consequence, no witness may be asked what he said to the Police during the investigation, nor may any Police-officer be asked what a witness said to him during the investigation, nor may any by-stander be questioned as to what he heard another person say to the Police-officer during the investigation. The second paragraph (proviso) lessens the rigidity of the first paragraph to a certain extent. In consequence of this paragraph, when a witness for the prosecution is being examined, if an accused has reason to believe that the statement which the witness is making in Court differs from the statement which he made to the Police, then the accused or his advocate may ask the Court to refer to the record of any statement made by the witness to the police, and if it be found that there is any variation between the two statements, the defence are entitled to a copy of the record of the statements made to the Police. That copy must then be proved, and the witness may be cross-examined on that statement under sec. 145, Evidence Act, and his attention must be drawn to the particular points in which his statement in Court differs from the record of his statement to the police—Bana Singh, 6 Rang 137, 29 Cr.L.J. 701 (702).

The provisions of this section are applicable to the trial of a summons case as well as to the trial of a warrant case—Dinanath Sahay v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 174, 40 Cr.L.J. 509, 17 Pat. 622, 20 P.L.T. 70, 1939 P.W.N. 136, 180 I.C. 845, 5 B.R. 501, 11 R.P. 545.

501. Statement:—A statement made by a witness to the Police that he knew nothing about the occurrence, or a statement that he did not say anything to the police about the occurrence is not a 'statement' within the meaning of sec. 162; otherwise the absence of a statement would be equivalent to a statement—Aseruddin, 53 Cal. 980, A.I.R. 1927 Cal 257, 100 I.C. 353, 28 Cr L.J. 273 (274). But it is doubtful if such a statement would not be a statement under sec. 161—Ibid. See also Mahomed Adam Chochan, 38 Cr L.J. 327, 167 I.C. 43, 9 R.B. 274, 38 Bom L.R. 1185, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 60.

The 'statement' contemplated by sec. 162 is not a complete statement recording every word uttered by the witness; it may be a mere memorandum of what the witness had said to the police-officer; such a statement is available for the purpose of contradicting the witness—Mafizuddin, 31 C.W.N. 940, 28 Cr L.J. 805 (806); Hamid Khan, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 4, 1933 Cr C. 63, 140 I.C. 825, 28 N.L.R. 291, 34 Cr L.J. 127 (129); Bansidhar, 53 All. 458, 32 Cr L.J. 562 (563), 130 I.C. 625, 1931 A.L.J. 157, A.I.R. 1931 All. 262, 1931 Cr C. 422, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 289; Vishwanath, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 249, 1936 Cr C. 1040. The fact that statements made during police investigation were recorded in the diary kept under sec. 172, Cr P. C., would not take them out of the operation of the proviso to sec. 162, Cr P. C. Once a statement made by a witness to a Police Officer is reduced to writing, no matter where, it becomes a statement recorded under sec. 161, Cr P. C.—Mobarak Ali Shaikh, 40 Cr L.J. 386, 180 I.C. 516, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 252, 68 C.L.J. 397, following Mafizuddin, supra and Sadhu Shaikh, 32 C.W.N. 280, 109 I.C. 355, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 260, 29 Cr L.J. 531. See also Notes 497 and 502C.

A statement can be made by other means than by words. Therefore, the gesture of the accused (which is to all intents and purposes a statement) in pointing out to the Police where the revolver was, is inadmissible in evidence since sec. 162 must be taken as overriding sec. 27 of the Indian Evidence Act—Nag Kyaing, 27 Cr L.J. 658, 94 I.C. 706, 3 Rang. 656, A.I.R. 1926 Rang. 112. But see Notes in para 501A in this connection. See also Notes given below under head "Identification"

Joint statement:—A joint statement does not come within the provisions of this section. It is a little difficult to say what a joint statement means. If it means that more than one statement is contained in one document or that a number of statements have been recorded seriatim there is no objection to the defence being allowed to see and use the statement of the particular witness in spite of the fact that it is included in a record along with the statements of other persons. If, on the other hand, a joint statement means that the stories told by a number of witnesses have been, so to speak, boiled down by the police-officer into a statement of his own, which is a kind of abstract of the statements made by the several witnesses, the defence has no right to use such a statement—Karimuddin, 33 Cr L.J. 725, 139 I.C. 245, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 375, 36 C.W.N. 106, 1932 Cr C. 318, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 592, following Banta Singh, 122 I.C. 491, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 457, Ind. Rul. 1930 Lah. 363, 31 Cr L.J. 444; Salik, A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 201 (203), 1937 O.W.N. 63, 38 Cr L.J. 165, 9 R.O. 295, 166 I.C. 259, 1936 O.L.R. 734. Where the police officer recorded in police diary the statements of 2 or 3 persons jointly at one place, those statements cannot be legally used as statements of any particular prosecution witness for the purpose of contradicting that witness for the simple reason that it is not known how much of any particular joint statement was the individual statement of any particular prosecution witness and how much was not his individual statement—Salik, supra. Where what was recorded was not a statement in the ordinary sense, but an abstract of statements made by several witnesses which the Police Officer had boiled down into a statement of his own, the defence would not be entitled to use it in the manner provided by sec. 162, Cr P. C. Where, therefore, the diaries purported to be kept under sec. 172, Cr P. C., do not contain any statement by any witness but are only brief records of what the Investigating Officer saw when he arrived at the spot, and of information which he ascertained as a result of questioning several people, the rule enunciated in Karimuddin, supra, applies and the Judge is right in disallowing the questions which the defence pleader desired to put with reference to them—Mobarak Ali Shaikh, 40 Cr L.J. 386, 180 I.C. 516, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 252, 68 C.L.J. 397, 11 R.C. 693.

List of stolen articles:—A list of stolen articles, which is supplied to the investigating police-officer during the course of investigation, is a statement in writing made to a police-officer within the meaning of this section and is inadmissible in evidence—Fulbash, A.I.R. 1929 Cal 448, 120 I.C. 458, 1929 Cr.C. 71, 31 Cr.L.J. 127; Mohsena Khatun v. Emp., 43 C.W.N. 893 (895), A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 610. See also Kalia, 26 Cr.L.J. 579, 85 I.C. 723, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 959. This view was followed by the Lahore High Court in Sucha Singh, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 488, 1932 Cr.C. 626. The same High Court, however, took a different view in Amrit Lal, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 987 (990), 1933 Cr.C. 1503, following the view of the Oudh Chief Court which is mentioned below.

Where a list was prepared before the investigation actually began it is not a statement made to a police-officer during the course of investigation. A list of this kind may be regarded as an addition to the first report and this section has no application—Autar, 31 Cr.L.J. 1017, 126 I.C. 498, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 74, 1931 Cr.C. 130, 7 O.W.N. 456, Ind. Rul. 1930 Oudh 370; Narain, 32 Cr.L.J. 630, 131 I.C. 72, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 83, 8 O.W.N. 31, 1931 Cr.C. 211, Ind. Rul. 1931 Oudh 184.

Inquest report:—It is not evident that the inquest report comes under sec. 161, Cr. P. C., but, in any view, the defence is entitled to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses on the basis of the same—Rajeswari, 37 C.W.N. 732 (734), A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 861, 1933 Cr.C. 1478. The statements of witnesses incorporated in the inquest report can be made use of under sec. 162, Cr. P. C.—Banta Singh, 31 Cr.L.J. 444, 122 I.C. 471, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 457; Hans Raj, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 341 (344), 16 Lah. 345, 37 P.L.R. 605, 1936 Cr.C. 264, 161 I.C. 900, 37 Cr.L.J. 501. See also Note 543.

As for the right to obtain copies see the rulings given below in para 543.

Map:—The person who makes the map ought not to put upon it anything more than what he sees himself. Particulars derived from witnesses examined on the spot should not be noted on the body of the map, but on a separate sheet of paper annexed to the map as an index thereto, the spots being marked A, B, C, D, etc.—Abinash, 81 I.C. 651, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 1029, 26 Cr.L.J. 350, 28 C.W.N. 995 (997), 52 Cal. 172; Mafizal Peada, 29 C.W.N. 812 (815), 89 I.C. 242, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 909, 26 Cr.L.J. 1298; Lalji Rai, 37 Cr.L.J. 235 (239), 160 I.C. 181, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 11, 1936 Cr.C. 6, 16 P.L.T. 730. The statements which are included in the map not from his personal knowledge but from what he heard from other people at the time of the investigation are inadmissible under sec. 162, Cr. P. C., and is hearsay evidence—Bhagirath, 30 C.W.N. 142, 92 I.C. 174, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 550, 27 Cr.L.J. 222. See also Kalia, 26 Cr.L.J. 579, 85 I.C. 723, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 959.

Where the notes in the index embody statements regarding things said to have happened at the various points referred to, such notes are not properly to be put before the jury and where the index contains such objectionable material, the better course is to have a fresh index prepared with the objectionable material eliminated—Mayadhar Pathal, 40 Cr.L.J. 625 (628), 181 I.C. 1001, 20 P.L.T. 420, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 577 (580), 1939 P.W.N. 300, 18 Pat. 450.

Identification:—The statement, express or implied, which a person must have made by way of identifying the accused at the thanah, is hit by the provisions of this section—Krishna Chandra, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 311, 39 C.W.N. 488, 36 Cr.L.J. 1470, 62 Cal. 918, 158 I.C. 813, 1933 Cr.C. 462. But where the Police Sub-Inspector arrested two accused in the village on the identification of a witness who was allowed to say in Court "I identified the two accused before the Daroga Babu from among 20 men of the village," held that there it was not a statement of the witness which was admitted but the fact that he identified the two accused before the police officer in the village and that the evidence was rightly admitted in the circumstances of the case—Lala Lalung v. Emp. A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 176, 40 Cr.L.J. 210, 179 I.C. 612, 42 C.W.N. 620, 68 Cr.L.J. 103, distinguishing Krishna Chandra, supra. In a later case where during the course of the investigation the investigating officer held a test identification parade at which two children, prosecution witnesses Nos. 1 and 2, picked out the Petitioner from a number of other persons, Khundkar, J, observed: "Apart from other objections of a general nature to the practice of permitting test identifications to be conducted by police officers, we have no doubt that in the facts of the present case the identification of the Petitioner by prosecution witnesses Nos 1 and 2 before the investigating officer amounted to statements which are rendered inadmissible by the provisions of sec. 162 of the Code—Krishna Kahar v Emp, 41 Cr.L.J 405, 187 I.C. 129, 43 C.W.N. 1117 (1119), (1939) 2 Cal 569, AIR 1940 Cal 182, following Krishna Chandra, supra, Hirendra Nath Saha, 40 C.L.J 313 (317) and Keramat Mandal, 42 C.L.J. 524. The case of Lala Lalung, supra, was not discussed in this case. The latest decision on this point is the case of Bhola Nath Dome v Emp, 43 C.W.N. 1180. In this case, which was one of rape, a prosecution witness was allowed to say that she had identified the accused before the Daroga and the Judge used it as a fact which would go to show that she was speaking the truth. The statement was held to have been admitted in contravention of the provisions of sec. 162, Cr P C, even though it was made in answer to a question asked in cross-examination. For contra see Ramadhan Brahmin v. Emp, 29 Cr.L.J. 963 (965), 112 I.C. 51, A.I.R. 1929 Nag 36.

Davis, J C, in this connection, observed "The most recent case of the Calcutta High Court in ILR (1939) 2 Cal 569 (i.e., Krishna Kahar v. Emp, supra) which states generally the principle that evidence of identification tests made during the course of the investigation by the police at which witnesses point out accused persons is inadmissible as statements express or implied, does not discuss the question as to whether a tracker could not say in Court that he recognized on a certain day at a certain place, certain tracks, and that the tracks were of a particular person if he knew him already or of a person at the scene of the crime if he did not know him already. Nor does that case discuss whether a mashir could not say that he recognized the accused in Court as standing seventh or eighth in the line at an identification test, and that the tracks seventh or eighth in a line of tracks were made by the accused in Court because he saw him make them or why a mashirnama could not be referred to by a mashir to refresh his memory or why it should not be made in the ordinary way even with statements made by witnesses if these statements are only admitted at the request of the accused under sec. 162. Identification tests may be most valuable checking upon the evidence of identification given by witnesses in Court and should, in our opinion, not be discontinued"—Mor Mahomed v Emp, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 168 (171).

Where during the investigation one of the witnesses accompanied the investigation officer to certain places which she pointed out to him, held that the statements that were made by the witness to the police officer and the fact of pointing out the places to him ought to have been kept back from the jury, as such facts were not brought in evidence on behalf of the defence as provided by sec 162, Cr. P. C.—Keramat Mandal, 42 C.L.J. 524 (526). Evidence as to the pointing out of the house as such is not admissible in evidence as conduct of the accused—Dhumaan Hiranand v. Emp, AIR. 1937 Sind 251 (254), 31 SLR 494, 171 I.C. 737, following Hira Gobar, AIR. 1919 Bom 162, 52 I.C 601, 20 Cr.L.J 681, 21 Bom.L.R. 724. See also Keramat Mandal, supra. See also Notes given above under the heading "Statement".

Conduct:—Generally this section shuts out statements written or oral, express or implied, made by witnesses to the police during the course of the investigation; but care must be taken not to press this argument too far, to shut out evidence, not of what a witness said but also of what a witness saw or did. Conduct must be distinguished from speech—Mor Mahomed v. Emp, AIR. 1940 Sind 168 (170).

This section is always difficult to apply, but it seems that it would be going beyond the immediate intention of this section to lay down that a police-officer in charge of an investigation is not to be at liberty to explain his conduct by making such a statement as this that "at the time I did so and so I had received no information to such and such an effect." If that were to be laid down on the ground that inferentially it has reference to the statement of a witness before the police, not only would this section in its intention be much exceeded but it would be practically impossible to do justice at all—Tota Meah, A.I.R. 1929 Cal 298, 30 Cr.L.J. 1015, 56 Cal. 1106, 119 I.C. 139. This section does not prevent a police-officer from explaining his conduct by making a statement that he received no information to a certain effect during the investigation—Mohan Lall, 32 Cr.L.J. 682, 131 I.C. 276, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 177, Ind. Rul. 1931 404, 1931 Cr.C. 297. But where the Sub-Inspector of Police was asked in examination-in-chief whether he examined during the course of the investigation any witness on behalf of the accused and he said that he examined two witnesses and both of them stated that they were not present at the occurrence, in anticipation of the evidence which might be given by those persons as defence witnesses, held that it was in direct contravention of this section and it was not justified by any other provision of law which made evidence contradicting possible evidence of a possible witness admissible against the accused—Bhagirath, 30 C.W.N. 142.

The accused has no right to insist upon a Police witness referring to his diary to elicit information which is privileged. The contents of the diary are not at the disposal of the defence and cannot be used except strictly in accordance with the provisions of secs. 162 and 172, Cr. P. C. The latter section shows that witness may refresh his memory by reference to them but such use is at the discretion of the witness and the Judge, whose duty it is to ensure that the privilege attaching to them by Statute is strictly enforced—Mohinder Singh, 31 Cr.L.J. 97 (105), 135 I.C. 209, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 81, A.I.R. 1932 Lah 103, 1932 Cr.C. 123, 33 P.L.R. 891. The accused is not entitled to see the police diary, but when the statement of a prosecution witness has been reduced into writing in police diary, the accused is entitled to ask the Court to refer to it and is entitled to a copy of it—Sulaiman, 6 Rang. 672, 30 Cr.L.J. 538, 115 I.C. 899, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 87, Ind. Rul. 1929 Rang 31.

Oral statement:—The language of the old section was: "nor shall such writing be used as evidence." And so a distinction was drawn between an oral statement and a written statement, and it was laid down that only written statements were excluded from evidence, but the admission of oral statements was not forbidden—Nalakanta, 14 I.C. 849, 22 M.L.J. 490, 1912 M.W.N. 207, 35 Mad. 247, 13 Cr.L.J. 305; Muthu Kumarasami, 33 Mad. 397, 13 Cr.L.J. 352. The amended section uses the words "nor shall any such statement or any record thereof be used." That is, the language of the present section is much wider than that of the old section, and excludes any statement (oral as well as written) from being used for any purpose. And the expression "if reduced into writing" is intended only to qualify the verb "shall be signed" and is not a clause descriptive of the word "statement"—Thimmappa v. Thimmappa, 51 Mad. 967, 29 Cr.L.J. 1098 (1101), 112 I.C. 682, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 1028, 55 M.L.J. 351, 28 M.L.W. 314 (F.B.), overruling In re Venkatasubbiah, 48 Mad. 640; oral statements no less than written statements come within the purview of sec. 162, Cr. P. C.—Koganti Appayya, 40 Cr.L.J. 108 (109), 178 I.C. 616, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 893, 1938 M.W.N. 825, 48 M.L.W. 322. This is also the view of the Rangoon High Court—Nga Tha, 4 Rang. 72, 27 Cr.L.J. 881, 5 Bur.L.J. 30 (F.B.). See also Bahadur Singh, 7 Lah. 261, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 367, 27 Cr.L.J. 803 (805); Azimaddy, 54 Cal. 237, 28 Cr.L.J. 99 (102), 44 C.L.J. 253; Hari, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 145 (173).

So far as statements not reduced to writing are concerned, there is no reason why statements made to a police officer in the course of an investigation should not, if relevant under the Evidence Act, be used at a trial for an offence not under investigation when they were made, provided that they are not held privileged by the provisions of sec. 123 and 121, Evidence Act—Baij Nath v. Muhammad Din, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 359 (360).

Reduced into writing:—The statements should be made at the time the witnesses are examined, which, of course, is exactly what the law intends. The prevalent practice of writing up these statements at the end of the day from memory or with the aid of rough notes is objectionable, although, of course, there is no harm in that being done as well, provided the original statements are preserved and produced at the time of trial—Vishwanath, A.I.R. 1936 Nag 249, 1936 Cr.C. 1040. See also Zahid Beg v. Emp., 1937 A.L.J. 1253, 1937 A.W.R. 1099.

Where the prosecution case was that the Fouzdar had deliberately tampered with the statements of witnesses, that he had been actuated by a desire to save accused from any prosecution, and in furtherance of that desire, had not recorded correctly the statements made to him by the persons whom he was examining, it was essentially a matter for the jury to consider whether that was the correct view of the matter or not. The Judge should not tell the jury in the most emphatic terms that the conduct of the Fouzdar had been rather surprising and antagonistic to the prosecution case and therefore it was not safe to place much reliance on the statements taken down by him—Mahomed Adam Chohan, 38 Cr.L.J. 327 (329), 167 I.C. 43, 9 R.B. 274, 38 Bom.L.R. 1186, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 60.

Record:—The word "record" as used in sec. 162, Cr. P. C., means the record of a statement of a witness taken under sec. 161, Cr. P. C.—Hari, 36 Cr.L.J. 1161 (1189), 157 I.C. 697, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 145, 28 S.L.R. 397, 1935 Cr.C. 753.

The distinction between a statement and a record thereof is a distinction between the oral statement and the written record in the diary of that oral statement—Sheo Dayal, A.I.R. 1933 All. 535 (539), 55 All. 689, 147 I.C. 15, 1933 Cr.C. 870.

Correctness of the record:—There is an initial presumption of accuracy in the case of official records, but in the case of the statements of witnesses recorded in police diaries the burden of rebutting it is not very heavy. Where the witness is a respectable educated man and quite disinterested and the difference between what he did say and what he is recorded as saying is very slight and could easily have been due to a misunderstanding by the police officer recording the statement, his denial of the accuracy of the statement attributed to him by the police officer may be accepted as correct—Radha Kishen, A.I.R. 1938 Lah 714 (717), 40 Cr.L.J. 261, 179 I.C. 880.

The Judge should not advise the jury to treat all kinds of statements to the police as of one level of unreliability. If it is the prosecution case that the Sub-Inspector's notes in any particular instance are unreliable, that should be brought out in the course of the evidence of the particular officer or it may appear on the face of the notes themselves—Yusuf Mia v. Emp., A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 579 (582), 1938 P.W.N. 727, 5 B.R. 185, 20 P.L.T. 51, 178 I.C. 934, 40 Cr.L.J. 147.

See also Mahomed Adam Chohan, quoted in Note 915 (34).

Statement must not be signed:—Statements of witnesses taken in the course of police investigation must not be signed; even if they are signed contrary to the provisions of this section, they do not thereby become statements taken under sec. 154 and do not become admissible as first information. The police by violating the provisions of sec. 162 and thus committing an illegality, cannot make inadmissible statements admissible—In re Narayana Menon, A.I.R. 1925 Mad 106, 25 Cr.L.J. 401. No signed statement should be taken from a witness by the Police during investigation—Bhupal Chandra v. Emp., 44 C.W.N. 451 (453). Where the police-officer during the investigation of an offence obtains the signature of certain witnesses to statements made by them and reduced into writing, in contravention of the section, the evidence of such witnesses given at the trial must be rejected. It is not a mere irregularity, curable by sec. 537, but a grave illegality. The policy underlying this section seems to be that witnesses at the trial should be free to make any statement in favour of the accused which they should wish to make, unhampered by anything which they might have said or might have been made to say to the police. The result of the witnesses' signature having been obtained on their statements would be to tie them down to those statements or to give them the impression that they are not free to make a different statement—Bhureshwari, 8 O.W.N. 593, 32 Cr.L.J. 860 (862), 6 Luck. 668, 132 I.C. 234, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 172, 1931 Cr.C. 444, Ind. Rul. 1931 Oudh 250; Saminullah, 1938 O.W.N. 1048, 1938 O.A. 797, 1938 A.W.R. (C.C.) 83, 1938 A Cr.C. 123, 1938 O.L.R. 473, 178 I.C. 254, 40 Cr.L.J. 19; Waris Khan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 209 (210), 1940 O.W.N. 177. There is no doubt that this is an irregularity which must be taken into account with other elements, if such there be, of objection to the satisfactory character of a trial. It would not by itself be a ground sufficient for quashing a conviction—Muhammad Panah, 35 Cr.L.J. 1170 (1174), 150 I.C. 917, A.I.R. 1931 Sind 78, 1934 Cr.C. 732. A statement made by an accused person to the police which is not in the nature of a confession, is not inadmissible in evidence—Sikander, 1918 P.R. 36, 20 Cr.L.J. 83; Jogwa Dhanuk, 5 Pat. 63, 27 Cr.L.J. 484; Nga Tha, 4 Rang. 72, 27 Cr.L.J. 881, 96 I.C. 145, A.I.R. 1926 Rang. 116, 5 Bur.L.J. 30; Sheobalak, 29 Cr.L.J. 400 (Nag.). But the Madras and Bombay High Courts are of opinion that the words "any person" include a person who subsequently becomes the accused—Kalesha, 62 M.L.J. 71, 33 Cr.L.J. 132 (135); Syamo, 55 Mad 903, 62 M.L.J. 742, 33 Cr.L.J. 418 (420) (F.B.); Issuf Mahomed, 55 Bom. 435, 32 Cr.L.J. 1077, 133 I.C. 748, 33 Bom.L.R. 305, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 311, 1931 Cr.C. 567; Sheikh Kalisha, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 779, 1931 M.W.N. 715, 34 M.L.W. 388, 1931 Cr.C. 1035. This is also the view of the Oudh Chief Court—Kanhaiya Lal v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 491 (497), 168 I.C. 58, 9 R.O. 432, 1937 O.L.R. 202, 197 A.Cr.C. 80, 1937 O.W.N. 505, A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 331.

The moment the suspected person comes into the hands of the police-officer his movements are restricted and he is no longer at liberty. When such a condition is reached it is nothing less than being in custody of police. This section does not come into operation to exclude the statements made by him before his formal arrest—Rego, 34 Cr.L.J. 505 (512), 143 I.C. 17, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 136, Ind. Rul. 1933 Nag. 153, 1933 Cr.C. 610, 29 N.L.R. 251.

The Legislature did not intend to modify sec. 27 of the Indian Evidence Act, by anything provided in sec. 162, Cr. P. C.—*Emp. v. A contrary view was taken by the Rangoon High Court in Emp. v. Nag Kyaing, 27 Cr.L.J. 658, 94 I.C. 706, 3 Rang. 656, A.I.R. 1926 Rang. 112, where it was held that this section must be taken as overruling sec. 27 of the Indian Evidence Act.

The evidence of the Police that the accused gave a false name and said that he did not know the place of occurrence, should be excluded under sec. 162, Cr. P. C. The statements are also not admissible under sec. 8 of the Indian Evidence Act as explanatory of the accused's conduct—Krishna Iyer, A.I.R. 1935 Mad 479 (482), 1935 M.W.N. 82, 36 Cr.L.J. 1107, 157 I.C. 297, 1935 Cr.C. 742.

It is certainly never intended that an accused person when being examined by the Court for the purpose of explaining anything in evidence against him should be confronted with the statement which he made to the police for the purpose of being discredited on account of any contradiction—Bhagwan Das, A.I.R. 1935 All. 717 (719), 1935 A.L.J. 385, 155 I.C. 560, 36 Cr.L.J. 773

Section 162, Cr. P. C., applies to an accused person and a statement made to an Excise officer in the course of an investigation under the Bengal Excise Act (V of 1909, B.C.) comes within the provisions of sec 162, Cr. P. C., and, as such, is inadmissible in evidence—Jogendra, 40 C.W.N. 29, 36 Cr.L.J. 1366, 158 I.C. 385, 63 Cal. 419, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 621, 1935 Cr.C. 1044. See also Issuf Mahomed, 32 Cr.L.J. 1077, 133 I.C. 748, 33 Bom.L.R. 305, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 311, 35 Bom. 435, Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 396, 1931 Cr.C. 567. But see Emp. v. Kangali, 41 Cal. 601, where it has been laid that the law does not say that all statements made to the police by the accused are inadmissible but it excludes only confession made to them. The general rule is subject to that which admits statements leading to discovery, whether such statements amount to a confession or not. Statements exculpating himself and put forward by way of his defence are also admissible notwithstanding that by other evidence it may be shown that such statements are inconsistent with truth. In fact a useful test as to admissibility of statements made to the police is to ascertain the purpose to which they are put by the prosecution. If the prosecution rely on the statements of the accused to the police as being true then they may, and probably in many cases will, be found to amount to confessions. If, on the other hand, the statements of the accused are relied on not because of their truth but because of their falsity, they are admissible. They are in such cases brought forward to show what the defence of the accused is, and that, as the defence is untrue, this is a circumstance tending to prove the guilt of the accused.

It is submitted that Kangali's case was not decided with reference to the provisions of sec. 162, Cr. P. C., on the basis of which decision was arrived at in Jogendra's case.

See also Shewakram Issardas v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 661, 182 I.C. 464, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 130 and Pritam Hariomal v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Sind 185 (189), 40 Cr.L.J. 882, 184 I.C. 145, 1939 Kar. 449.

Thus the majority of the High Courts have held that sec 162, Cr. P. C., has no application to statement made by a person who at the time it is tendered in evidence is an accused person: the minority have held that there is no such limitation. After giving a full consideration to all the reported decisions their Lordships of the Privy Council have come to the conclusion that the words of sec 162, Cr. P. C., lead to the conclusion that the statement is not admissible even when made by the person ultimately accused. In this connection Lord Atkin observed "It is said that to give sec. 162 of the Code the construction contended for would be to repeal sec 27 of the Evidence Act for a statement giving rise to a discovery could not then be proved. It is obvious that the two sections can, in some circumstances, stand together. Section 162 is confined to statements made to a Police Officer in course of an investigation. Section 25 covers a confession made to a Police Officer before any investigation has begun or otherwise not in the course of an investigation. Section 27 seems to be intended to be a proviso to sec. 26 which includes any statement made by a person whilst in custody of the Police and appears to apply to such statements to whomsoever made e.g., to a fellow prisoner, a doctor or a visitor. Such statements are not covered by sec 162. Whether to give to sec. 162 the plain meaning of the words is to leave the statement still inadmissible even though a discovery of fact is made such as is contemplated by sec. 27, it does not seem necessary to decide. In the present case the declarant was not in the custody of the Police, and no alleged discovery, was made in consequence of his statement. The words of sec. 162 are in their Lordships' view plainly wide enough to exclude any confession made to a Police Officer in course of investigation whether a discovery is made or not. They may, therefore, pro tanto repeal the provisions of the section which would otherwise apply. If they do not presumably, it would be on the ground that sec. 27 of the Evidence Act is a "special law within the meaning of sec. 1 (2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and that sec. 162 is not a specific provision to the contrary. Their Lordships express no opinion on this topic for whatever be the right view it is necessary to give to sec. 162 the full meaning indicated. It only remains to add that any difficulties to which either the prosecution or the defence may be exposed by the construction now placed on sec. 162 can in nearly every case be avoided by securing that statements and confessions are recorded under sec. 164. In view of their Lordships' decision that the alleged statement was inadmissible by reason of sec. 162, the appellant's contention that it was inadmissible as a confession under sec. 25 of the Evidence Act becomes unnecessary"—Pakala Narayana Swami v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 361, 180 I.C. 1, 43 C.W.N. 473, A.I.R. 1939 P.C. 47, 1939 M.W.N. 185, 1939 O.W.N. 282, 20 P.L.T. 265, 49 M.L.W. 349, 1939 O.L.R. 134, 1939 A.L.J. 298, 18 Pat. 234, 66 I.A. 66, 1939 P.W.N. 205, 20 P.L.T. 265, 69 C.L.J. 273, 41 P.L.R. 272, 5 B.R. 449, 41 Bom L.R. 428, 11 R.P.C. 166, 1 I.R. 1939 Kar. 123 (P.C.), 1939 A.W.R. Ganpat Rai*, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 186 (189), 1 I.R. 1940 Nag. 232. In the absence of a definite pronouncement of the Judicial Committee to the contrary, it is permissible to admit proof of a statement made by an accused person to an investigating officer in the special circumstances provided for in sec. 27 of the Evidence Act—Emp. v. Mayadhar Pothal, 40 Cr.L.J. 625, 181 I.C. 1001, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 577, 1939 P.W.N. 300, 18 Pat. 450, 20 P.L.T. 420. Section 162, Cr. P. C., does not shut out statements which are admissible under sec. 27, Evidence Act. This settled rule has not been abrogated by the abovementioned decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council—Subbiah Tevar, 41 Cr.L.J. 41, 184 I.C. 593, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 856 (857), 1 I.R. 1939 Mad. 947, 1939 M.Cr.C. 133, 50 M.L.W. 318, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 455, 1939 M.W.N. 1000; Kapa Moranna, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 840, 1939 M.Cr.C. 126, 1939 M.W.N. 877, 50 M.L.W. 423, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 635, 41 Cr.L.J. 573. The terms of this section, as amended by Act XVIII of 1923, do not alter the provisions of sec. 27 of the Evidence Act. The provisions of sec. 27 of the Evidence Act are quite independent of this section and the amendment of this section made in 1923 was not intended to abrogate or impair the effect of sec. 27 of the Evidence Act—Motilal v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 158 (161), 185 I.C. 310, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 66 (68), 1939 N.L.J. 585, following Gola v. Emp., 21 N.L.R. 158, 114 I.C. 273, A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 17, 30 Cr.L.J. 258, Ind. Rul. 1929 Nag. 49 (F.B.). Considering the rulings quoted above the majority of the Full Bench of the Lahore High Court have gone to the length of holding that sec. 27, Evidence Act, is pro tanto repealed by sec. 162, Cr. P. C., and evidence of information, whether it amounts to a confession or not, which relates to the fact discovered in consequence of such information must not now be considered admissible in evidence—Hakam Khuda Yar v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 129 (133), 41 Cr.L.J. 591, 188 I.C. 498 (F.B.). This is also the view of the Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court in Baldeo v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 All. 263, 1940 A.L.J. 241, 41 Cr.L.J. 627, 188 I.C. 562, where Collister, J., observes "It seems to me that if (as I have attempted to do) we carefully examine the language of sec. 162, Cr. P. C., if we consider the express reference to sec. 145 and sec. 32 (1), Evidence Act, and the analogy of sec. 157 of that Act, to whose provisions there is no reference in sec. 162, Cr. P. C., and if we attach due significance to the omission of the Legislature to re-introduce in the present Act the saving proviso in respect to sec. 27, Evidence Act, the logically inescapable conclusion is that sec. 162, Cr. P. C., contains provisions plainly and directly, and therefore specifically, affecting sec. 27, Evidence Act, quoad statements made under that section by an accused person to a police-officer in the course of an investigation. In other words, there is a "specific provision to the contrary" within the meaning of sec. 1 (2), Cr. P. C." The effect of this Full Bench decision is to overrule the case of Faujdar v. Emp., A.I.R. 1933 All. 440, 1933 Cr.C. 746, 144 I.C. 1021, 55 All. 463, 1933 A.L.J. 1518, where a contrary view was taken.

A complaint made by the accused at a police station against the complainant that he stabbed him in self-defence is not inadmissible against the accused on a charge to attempt to murder the complainant either because it is a statement under sec. 162, Cr P C., or because it is a confession made to a Police Officer—Guruswami Tevan, 40 Cr.L.J. 922, 184 I.C. 336, 12 R.M. 435, 1939 M.W.N. 513, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 780.

The better and truer test of the admissibility of the statements made by the accused to the Police is whether the statement is incriminating in itself or exculpatory. If the statement is incriminating in itself, an accused will not desire to put it in evidence, if it is exculpatory in itself, but may by relation to the other evidence be made an incriminating statement, then there is much to be said for the argument that it is admissible in evidence, because the accused's use of that statement as an exculpatory statement may well be permitted to prevail to his advantage over the use by the prosecution of that statement as an incriminating statement—Pritam Hariomal v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 882 (886), 184 I.C. 145, I.L.R. 1939 Kar. 449, 12 R.S. 90, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 185. This decision was arrived at before the decision of the Privy Council in Pakala Narayana Swami v. Emp., supra and does not seem to be good law.

Where the Police arrested the accused, took them to the house of the headman and left them there to make a statement to the headman which he recorded in writing and the headman was allowed to give oral evidence of this statement which was also placed on the record though not marked as an exhibit, held that the practice was a discreditable and deplorable one—Nga Ba Kyaing, A.I.R. 1936 Rang 131 (133), 37 Cr.L.J. 531, 162 I.C. 6, 1936 Cr.C. 219.

Where the Judge placed before the jury the statements of accused contained in police papers examined by him, for the purpose of corroboration or otherwise of the retracted confessional statements of accused used as evidence in the case, held that the reference to the statements to the police as mentioned by the Judge in his charge to the jury, was in direct contravention of the provisions contained in sec. 162, Cr. P C., and such reference was not permissible under the law—Kashim Ali v. Emp., A.I.R. 1934 Cal 651 (653), 36 Cr.L.J. 70, 152, I.C. 234, 1934 Cr.C. 933, 38 C.W.N. 586.

Statement of approver :—This section covers a statement made by an approver to the police before he was tendered pardon. But even if it does not, such a statement can be used to corroborate or contradict the approver as a previous statement of a witness under the ordinary provisions of the Evidence Act—Hazara, 9 Lah. 389, 29 Cr.L.J. 348 (349). Where an accused person makes a statement to the police during investigation and he is about to give evidence in favour of the prosecution under sec. 337, against the other accused, the latter are entitled, under the proviso, to copies of that statement—Manmohan, 9 Pat 577, 11 P.L.T. 754, 31 Cr.L.J. 1123 (1125), A.I.R. 1930 Pat 510.

502. Use of statement :—See the first proviso. Under sec. 162, as amended by the Amendment Act XVIII of 1923, statements made by any person to Police-officer in the course of an investigation under Ch. XIV shall not be used for any purpose except to contradict a witness at the request of the accused in the manner provided in the first proviso of the section—Gahur Howladar, 30 C.W.N. 503, 27 Cr.L.J. 641.

Under the old section the police-officer who recorded the statement could use it to refresh his memory—Mannu, 19 All. 390; Zakir Husain, 21 All. 159; Sitaram, 11 Bom. 657; Narayan Raghunath, 32 Bom. 111 (119) (F.B.), Jijibhai, 22 Bom. 596; Roghuni, 9 Cal. 455. (Contra—Dadan Gazi, 33 Cal. 1023). Under the present law, such use is not permitted.

A statement made by a witness to the police can be used only by the accused, and that also only to contradict the witness; it cannot be used by the prosecution to corroborate the statements of its own witnesses before the Court—Jijibhai, 22 Bom. 596; Kumaramuthu, 25 M.L.T. 379, 20 Cr.L.J. 354; Jhari Gope, 8 Pat. 279, 118 I.C. 130, 10 P.L.T. 460, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 268, 1929 Cr.C. 21, Ind. Section 157 of the Evidence Act lays down that in order to corroborate the testimony of a witness, any former statement made by such witness relating to the same fact is admissible in evidence; but this general rule is controlled by the special provision of sec. 162, Cr. P. Code—Rakha, supra.

The prosecution cannot put in evidence the statements of a prosecution witness before the police for the purpose of contradicting his evidence in Court which is unfavourable to the prosecution—Gahur, supra. Such a statement cannot be used as substantive evidence forming the basis of a conviction—Ausan Singh, 33 Cr.L.J. 566, 38 I.C. 159, 9 O.W.N. 437, Ind. Rul. 1932 Oudh 291, 1932 Cr.C. 526, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 247. But where the Public Prosecutor, in cross-examining certain prosecution witnesses who were declared hostile, asked them questions in the form: "Did you not say to the Police such and such a thing?" "Did you not make such and such a statement to the Police or something like that?" and the answer was always in the negative, held that the position created does not constitute an actual infringement of this section, as it is designed to keep out evidence which is not of a free and of a fair nature, but may have been induced by some form of police duress and that it is stretching the principle a very long way to say that the trial and conviction of certain persons must be vitiated because an unsuccessful attempt made by a Government Prosecutor anxious to put his whole case before the Court, so to speak, fringes on a technical breach of this rule—Delbar Mondal, 40 C.W.N. 733, 165 I.C. 31, 37 Cr.L.J. 1117, 9 R.C. 362. Where the Judge admitted into evidence two statements made by the complainant to the police but, when dealing with the second statement, he pointed out that it could only be used for the contradiction of the prosecution witness and for no other purpose and he himself acted in strict accordance with that direction to the jury and made no reference to it in elucidating the prosecution case, it cannot be said that the so-called admission of the statement amounted to the reception of inadmissible evidence—Sk. Idris v. Emp., 43 C.W.N. 782.

No oral statement made by any person to a police officer in the course of an investigation under this Chapter and no record of any such oral statement can be used for the purpose of contradicting a defence witness—Ganga, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 60, 4 Luck. 726, 6 O.W.N. 1056, 1930 Cr.C. 156, 31 Cr.L.J. 689, 124 I.C. 444. See also Bhagirathi, 30 C.W.N. 142. The proviso deals only with the case of witnesses called for the prosecution, whose statements have been taken down in writing as aforesaid. And it allows the accused, upon his request, to have access to a copy of the recorded statement, and thereupon to use it for one purpose only, viz., to break down the evidence of the prosecution witnesses already standing against him. On the face of it, the proviso does not cover the case of a witness for the defence whose statements may have been recorded by a policeman, nor allows the prosecution to impeach the credit of such a witness by examining him upon any statement he may have made to the police—Narayan, 32 Bom.L.R. 111; Vithu, 26 Bom.L.R. 965, 26 Cr.L.J. 223 (224), 83 I.C. 1007, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 510. Where, therefore, after a defence witness, who proved a main plank in the defence case, was examined, the Judge recalled a Police Officer who was a prosecution witness and allowed him to give evidence after consulting his case diary to the effect that no such statement had been made to him during investigation by the defence witness, held that no such use of a statement made to a Police Officer during investigation was warranted by the provisions of sec. 162, Cr. P.

Code. As the evidence was used to demolish the most important portion of the defence case, it must also be held that its admission prejudiced the accused to such an extent that the verdict of the jury cannot be upheld—Ebrahim Mondal v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 665, 182, I.C. 405, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 330, 43 C.W.N. 784, 12 R.C. 61. Such statement cannot be used for corroborating the defence witness—Nyibuddin, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 589 (593), 14 P.L.T. 543.

A witness summoned by the Court at the suggestion of the defence cannot be contradicted with his statements before the police; in as much as the proviso to this section is inapplicable to such a case—Guruditta, 28 Cr.L.J. 828, 104 I.C. 444, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 713. Whether the statement is signed or not, it cannot be used by any party to contradict any one but a prosecution witness. Therefore neither the prosecution nor the defence can contradict a Court witness with reference to his statement before the police—Bhupal Chandra v. Emp., 44 C.W.N. 451 (453).

This section does not prevent the prosecution, after a witness has made a statement, from asking him simply whether he made that statement to the police, or when a witness has made a statement in his deposition, from asking the Sub-Inspector whether in fact the witness had made that statement to him. In doing this, there is no use of the statement recorded by the police during their investigation; the witnesses or the Sub-Inspector are merely asked as to a certain fact—Gulji Mian, 4 Pat. 204, 27 Cr.L.J. 524 (526), 93 I.C. 988, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 450. With due deference it is submitted that this view of law is of doubtful authority. There is, however, nothing in this section to prevent the question being put whether the witness made any statement to the police or he was questioned by the police—Mohan Banjari, supra. But the Bombay High Court is of opinion that if the Sub-Inspector is asked as to whether an accused or a witness had said so and so to him during investigation, it amounts to a use of the statement. If the Sub-Inspector answers, 'yes' he is clearly using the statement; if he answers 'no' he is still using the statement to show that it omitted something material—Issuf Mahomed, 55 Bom. 435, 33 Bom.L.R. 305, 32 Cr.L.J. 1077 (1079). This seems to be the better view.

Under this section statements made to a police-officer are prohibited from being used for any purpose save as provided in the section; and there is no provision for allowing the Judge to use such statements for confronting the witnesses with them. To use the statements for this purpose is to contravene the provisions of this section. The power conferred on the Judge under sec. 165, Evidence Act, cannot be exercised for the purpose of introducing evidence in contravention of the law. The last para of sec. 2 of the Evidence Act leaves the provisions of Cr.P.C., unaffected—Keramat, 27 Cr.L.J. 277, 92 I.C. 453, 42 C.L.J. 528, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 320; Rahjaddi, 35 C.W.N. 317, 58 Cal. 1009, 132 I.C. 159, 32 Cr.L.J. 841, 1931 Cr.C. 253, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 189.

It is illegal for a Magistrate to use as evidence against the accused the statements made by prosecution witnesses before the police by comparing them with their depositions, and, as a result of that comparison, to convict him—Laxman, 9 Bom.L.R. 895, 6 Cr.L.J. 224; Narayan, 32 Bom. 111 (118) (F.B.); Ausan, 9 O.W.N. 437, 33 Cr.L.J. 566 (567); Bahawala, 1886 P.R. 17. See also Raghunathmal v. Patiram, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 394, 172 I.C. 177. Where in the course of a trial, the Magistrate allowed some of the accused to use statements made before the police by the prosecution witnesses, for contradicting those witnesses, without bringing those statements on the record, and the Magistrate referred to those statements to see if the names of the accused were mentioned therein, and convicted those of the accused whose names were mentioned by two or more witnesses before the police, held that the procedure was irregular; but the irregularity was curable by sec. 537, if there had been no failure of justice—Nurmahomed, 54 Bom. 934, 32 Bom.L.R. 1279, 32 Cr.L.J. 239 (240). See also Deo Lal, 34 Cr.L.J. 918, 145 I.C. 426, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 440, 14 P.L.T. 396, 1933 Cr.C. 974.

Section 157 of the Evidence Act lays down that in order to corroborate the testimony of a witness, any former statement made by such witness relating to the same fact is admissible in evidence; but this general rule is controlled by the special provision of sec. 162, Cr. P. Code—Rakha, supra.

The prosecution cannot put in evidence the statements of a prosecution witness before the police for the purpose of contradicting his evidence in Court which is unfavourable to the prosecution—Gahur, supra. Such a statement cannot be used as substantive evidence forming the basis of a conviction—Ausan Singh, 33 Cr.L.J. 566, 38 I.C. 159, 9 O.W.N. 437, Ind. Rul. 1932 Oudh 291, 1932 Cr.C. 526, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 247. But where the Public Prosecutor, in cross-examining certain prosecution witnesses who were declared hostile, asked them questions in the form: "Did you not say to the Police such and such a thing?" "Did you not make such and such a statement to the Police or something like that?" and the answer was always in the negative, held that the position created does not constitute an actual infringement of this section, as it is designed to keep out evidence which is not of a free and of a fair nature, but may have been induced by some form of police duress and that it is stretching the principle a very long way to say that the trial and conviction of certain persons must be vitiated because an unsuccessful attempt made by a Government Prosecutor anxious to put his whole case before the Court, so to speak, fringes on a technical breach of this rule—Delbar Mondal, 40 C.W.N. 733, 165 I.C. 31, 37 Cr.L.J. 1117, 9 R.C. 362. Where the Judge admitted into evidence two statements made by the complainant to the police but, when dealing with the second statement, he pointed out that it could only be used for the contradiction of the prosecution witness and for no other purpose and he himself acted in strict accordance with that direction to the jury and made no reference to it in elucidating the prosecution case, it cannot be said that the so-called admission of the statement amounted to the reception of inadmissible evidence—Sk. Idris v. Emp., 43 C.W.N. 782.

No oral statement made by any person to a police officer in the course of an investigation under this Chapter and no record of any such oral statement can be used for the purpose of contradicting a defence witness—Ganga, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 60, 4 Luck 726, 6 O.W.N. 1056, 1930 Cr.C. 156, 31 Cr.L.J. 689, 124 I.C. 444. See also Bhagirathi, 30 C.W.N. 142. The proviso deals only with the case of witnesses called for the prosecution, whose statements have been taken down in writing as aforesaid. And it allows the accused, upon his request, to have access to a copy of the recorded statement, and thereupon to use it for one purpose only, viz., to break down the evidence of the prosecution witnesses already standing against him. On the face of it, the proviso does not cover the case of a witness for the defence whose statements may have been recorded by a policeman, nor allows the prosecution to impeach the credit of such a witness by examining him upon any statement he may have made to the police—Narayan, 32 Bom.L.R. 111; Vithu, 26 Bom.L.R. 965, 26 Cr.L.J. 223 (224), 83 I.C. 1007, A.I.R. 1924 Bom 510. Where, therefore, after a defence witness, who proved a main plank in the defence case, was examined, the Judge recalled a Police Officer who was a prosecution witness and allowed him to give evidence after consulting his case diary to the effect that no such statement had been made to him during investigation by the defence witness, held that no such use of a statement made to a Police Officer during investigation was warranted by the provisions of sec. 162, Cr. P.

Code. As the evidence was used to demolish the most important portion of the defence case, it must also be held that its admission prejudiced the accused to such an extent that the verdict of the jury cannot be upheld—Ebrahim Mondal v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 665, 182, I.C. 405, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 330, 43 C.W.N. 781, 12 R.C. 61. Such statement cannot be used for corroborating the defence witness—Nijbuddin, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 589 (593), 14 P.L.T. 543.

A witness summoned by the Court at the suggestion of the defence cannot be contradicted with his statements before the police; in as much as the proviso to this section is inapplicable to such a case—Guruditta, 28 Cr.L.J. 828, 104 I.C. 444, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 713. Whether the statement is signed or not, it cannot be used by any party to contradict any one but a prosecution witness. Therefore neither the prosecution nor the defence can contradict a Court witness with reference to his statement before the police—Bhupal Chandra v. Emp., 44 C.W.N. 451 (453).

This section does not prevent the prosecution, after a witness has made a statement, from asking him simply whether he made that statement to the police, or when a witness has made a statement in his deposition, from asking the Sub-Inspector whether in fact the witness had made that statement to him. In doing this, there is no use of the statement recorded by the police during their investigation; the witnesses or the Sub-Inspector are merely asked as to a certain fact—Guhi Mian, 4 Pat. 204, 27 Cr.L.J. 524 (526), 93 I.C. 988, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 450. With due deference it is submitted that this view of law is of doubtful authority. There is, however, nothing in this section to prevent the question being put whether the witness made any statement to the police or he was questioned by the police—Mohan Banjari, supra. But the Bombay High Court is of opinion that if the Sub-Inspector is asked as to whether an accused or a witness had said so and so to him during investigation, it amounts to a use of the statement. If the Sub-Inspector answer, 'yes' he is clearly using the statement; if he answers 'no' he is still using the statement to show that it omitted something material—Issuf Mahomed, 55 Bom. 435, 33 Bom.L.R. 305, 32 Cr.L.J. 1077 (1079). This seems to be the better view.

Under this section statements made to a police-officer are prohibited from being used for any purpose save as provided in the section; and there is no provision for allowing the Judge to use such statements for confronting the witnesses with them. To use the statements for this purpose is to contravene the provisions of this section. The power conferred on the Judge under sec. 165, Evidence Act, cannot be exercised for the purpose of introducing evidence in contravention of the law. The last para of sec. 2 of the Evidence Act leaves the provisions of Cr. P. C., unaffected—Keramati, 27 Cr.L.J. 277, 92 I.C. 453, 42 C.L.J. 528, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 320; Rahjaddi, 35 C.W.N. 317, 58 Cal. 1009, 132 I.C. 159, 32 Cr.L.J. 841, 1931 Cr.C. 253, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 189.

It is illegal for a Magistrate to use as evidence against the accused the statements made by prosecution witnesses before the police by comparing them with their depositions, and, as a result of that comparison, to convict him—Laxman, 9 Bom.L.R. 895, 6 Cr.L.J. 224; Narayan, 32 Bom. 111 (118) (F.B.); Ausan, 9 O.W.N. 437, 33 Cr.L.J. 566 (567); Bahawala, 1886 P.R. 17. See also Raghubhmal v. Patiram, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 394, 172 I.C. 177. Where in the course of a trial, the Magistrate allowed some of the accused to use statements made before the police by the prosecution witnesses, for contradicting those witnesses, without bringing those statements on the record, and the Magistrate referred to those statements to see if the names of the accused were mentioned therein, and convicted those of the accused whose names were mentioned by two or more witnesses before the police, held that the procedure was irregular; but the irregularity was curable by sec. 537, if there had been no failure of justice—Nurmahomed, 54 Bom. 934, 32 Bom.L.R. 1279, 32 Cr.L.J. 239 (240). See also Deo Lal, 34 Cr.L.J. 918, 145 I.C. 426, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 440, 14 P.L.T. 396, 1933 Cr.C. 974.

A witness was examined in the Court of the committing Magistrate and was not cross-examined with reference to his statements before the police. He died and his evidence was put in before the Court of Sessions; defence prayed for cross-examining the Sub-Inspector in the Court of Sessions with reference to the statements made by that witness before him. The prayer was rightly disallowed as sec. 162 did not apply to such a case—Azimuddy, 31 C.W.N. 410, 54 Cal. 237, 38 Cr.L.J. 99, 99 I.C. 227, 44 C.L.J. 253, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 17. A statement made to the police is not admissible in evidence, although the person who made the statement is dead at the time of the trial—Sunder Lal v. Emp., 40 P.L.R. 421.

According to the recently amended provisions of sec. 162, statements of witnesses recorded by the investigating officer can only be used to assist the accused in particular by showing that a witness who in Court deposes to certain facts has at an earlier stage made statements to the police which are contradictory to the testimony which he gives in Court. They cannot be used in cross-examining the witnesses at large for the purpose of showing that the statements did not corroborate or assist the story as put forward in the first information report—Badri Chowdhuri, 6 P.L.T. 620, 27 Cr.L.J. 362 (365), 92 I.C. 874, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 20.

The statement of a prosecution witness that he mentioned the fact of his recognition of the accused to the investigating officer in the course of investigation is undoubtedly a statement which this section has the effect of excluding—Nitai Koley v. Emp., (1939) 1 Cal. 337.

502A. 'Police Officer':—An excise officer cannot be regarded as a Police officer for the purposes of sec. 162, Cr. P. C. A statement made to him can, therefore, be used for the purpose of contradicting even a defence witness under the provisions of sec. 155 of the Indian Evidence Act—Keratali, 35 Cr.L.J. 1178, 150 I.C. 980, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 616. Without considering the view adopted in this case it has been laid down by the same High Court that it was intended that in making an investigation under the Bengal Excise Act (V of 1909 B.C.), the Excise Sub-Inspector should have the status of a police-officer and, therefore, a statement made to him in the course of an investigation would also be inadmissible under the provisions of sec. 162—Jogendra, 40 C.W.N. 29, 36 Cr.L.J. 1366, 158 I.C. 385, 63 Cal. 419, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 621, 1935 Cr.C. 1044. But the Bengal Excise Act does not give a Custom Officer any powers of investigation and, therefore, a statement made to him does not fall within the mischief of sec. 162 Cr. P. C., and is admissible in evidence—Ghulam Dastgir Khan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 623, 12 R.C. 244, 41 Cr.L.J. 40, 184 I.C. 581.

502B. 'In the course of an investigation under this Chapter':—The Police when investigating a case under the preventive sections of the Cr. P. C., are not acting under this section. Moreover the inquiry under Chap. VIII of the Cr. P. C., is not an enquiry into an offence, and, therefore, this section cannot be used to shut out statements given to the Police by persons who are afterwards called as witnesses—Hari Singh, 34 Cr.L.J. 951, 145 I.C. 379, 1933 M.W.N. 720, 38 M.L.W. 393, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 688, 65 M.L.J. 478, 1933 Cr.C. 1244, 56 Mad. 987. The investigation under this section refers to the commission of either a cognizable or a non-cognizable offence which was under investigation at a time when such statement was made. The investigation made with respect to proceedings under Chap. VIII does not fall within the investigation relating to offences under Chap. XIV, Cr. P. C., and, therefore, this section does not apply to the statement taken in the investigation, if any, made under sec. 51 (1) (b), Bombay District Police Act (Bom. 4 of 1890). An accused can have the benefit of the proviso only if the magisterial inquiry is to establish his guilt or innocence of the offence which was the subject of the investigation and not when the offence investigated is not the factum probandum at the trial but only evidence to establish it—Barjari Framji Bharucha, 33 Cr.L.J. 797, 139 I.C. 628, 34 Bom.L.R. 258, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 195, 1932 Cr.C. 200, Ind. Rul. 1932 Bom. 521.

A police investigation begins with the proceedings taken under sec. 154, Cr. P. C., that is the recording of the complaint, and the power to record such a complaint rests in an officer in charge of a police station. Therefore the statements made by the complainant to constables before lodging information under sec. 154 do not come within the prohibition of this section—Mazarali, 34 Cr.L.J. 870 (873), 144 I.C. 895, 35 Bom.L.R. 474, A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 266, 1933 Cr.C. 678, 57 Bom. 400. See also Moni Mohan, 35 C.W.N. 623 (631), 58 Cal. 1312, 33 Cr.L.J. 138, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 745, 1931 Cr.C. 1009. In a case which rose up in the mind of a Police Officer from very shadowy beginnings, the investigation must be held to start from the moment when he formed the opinion that these were grounds for investigating a crime—Sit Ro Saw v. Emp., 37 Cr.L.J. 1137 (1138), 165 I.C. 319, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 455, 1936 Cr.C. 851, 9 R.Rang. 201. But where a girl was taken away from her husband's place to a different district where a constable took her to the thanah and made a report after which her statement was taken down by the Sub-Inspector, Held that the girl's statement was inadmissible in evidence; in as much as the Sub-Inspector could have investigated the case there and it could hardly be denied that in recording the statement of the girl and the statement of the constable the Sub-Inspector was proceeding to collect evidence—Kharaiti, 34 Cr.L.J. 1215, 146 I.C. 199, 1933 A.L.J. 923, A.I.R. 1933 All. 665, 1933 Cr.L.J. 1145, 20 A.I.Cr.R. 439.

Statements made to a C I D. officer must be deemed to be statements made in the course of investigations by him—Koganti Appayya, 40 Cr.L.J. 108 (109), 178 I.C. 616, 1938 M.W.N. 825, 48 M.L.W. 322, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 983.

Statements of witnesses made in a departmental inquiry, which was not held under Chap. XIV, Cr. P. C., do not come within the purview of sec. 162 or 172, Cr. P. C. They are also not privileged under sections 123, 124 or 125 of the Indian Evidence Act. The accused are entitled to cross-examine the witnesses under sec. 153 of the Indian Evidence Act on the statements made by them at the departmental enquiry. The Court can cause production of these statements under sec. 94, Cr. P. C., at any stage of the proceedings—Muhammad Rahim, 36 Cr.L.J. 581, 154 I.C. 762, A.I.R. 1935 Sind. 13, 1935 Cr.C. 124 (F.B.), following Harbans, 16 C.W.N. 431, 13 Cr.L.J. 445, 15 I.C. 101. When the defence called for these statements and they were thereupon produced and inspected and were mostly used for cross-examining witnesses, the prosecution can insist on their admission as evidence in the case under sec. 163 of the Indian Evidence Act—Government of Bengal v. Santiram Mondal, 32 Cr.L.J. 10, 127 I.C. 657, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 370, 58 Cal. 96, 1930 Cr.C. 634, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 865. 502C. 'Whether in a police diary or otherwise':—What is intended to be recorded under sec. 172, Cr. P. C., is what the Sub-Inspector did—the places where he went, the people he visited, what he saw, etc. No statement can be said to be recorded under that section and so would be a privileged one. It is quite clear now that there is no distinction between a statement recorded under sec. 162, Cr. P. C., and a statement recorded under sec. 172, Cr. P. C., if a police-officer purports to record a statement under the latter section. The object of amending the section is that the police should no longer claim any privilege in respect of any statement on the ground that it is a statement recorded under sec. 172. It is quite immaterial whether the statement is labelled as recorded under sec. 172, Cr. P. C. It is also immaterial whether the statement as recorded is the actual record of the words used by the witness. It is sufficient even if the statement is recorded in the form of a memorandum of what the witness had said to the police officer; it is available for the purpose of contradicting the witness. It is not necessary in order that an accused person may be allowed under sec. 162 to contradict the witness that the statement must contain the very words used by the witness—Mafizaddi, 28 Cr.L.J. 805, 104 I.C. 245, 31 C.W.N. 940, 45 C.L.J. 561, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 644. It is immaterial whether the statements are in extenso or are in the form of compressed memoranda and whether they are recorded in the third person or in the first person, provided they are such statements as can be utilized to contradict a witness with his statement in Court in the manner provided by sec. 145, Evidence Act. It is just as possible to contradict a witness on a memorandum as it is on a full statement and it is generally immaterial for the purpose of contradiction whether or not the statement is in the actual words of the witness. It would be absurd to hold that a police officer by the simple expedient of inserting in his diary a statement of a witness in an oblique or abridged form could protect such statement from being used in the way the law allows—Hari, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 145 (175). See also Jadunandan, 2 Luck. 605, 28 Cr.L.J. 802 (801), 104 I.C. 242, 4 O.W.N. 699, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 321; Bansidhar, 53 All. 458, 32 Cr.L.J. 562 (563); Hamid Khan, 28 N.L.R. 291, 34 Cr.L.J. 127 (129). It matters not whether the statement was made orally or was reduced to writing or whether in extenso or in an abridged form it is set out in a Special Diary under sec. 172, or in any other document, or whether it is proposed to adduce oral evidence of the contents of the statement—Nga Lun Thuang, 35 Cr.L.J. 1487 (1489), 158 I.C. 784, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 370, 13 Rang. 570, 1935 Cr.C. 1088 (F.B.). As to the value of a compressed memoranda see the observations of Agarwala, J. quoted below in Note 503 (d).

502D. 'In respect of any offence under investigation at the time':—

In the course of an investigation of a dacoity case a person made a statement to the Police which was taken down in writing. He was subsequently murdered and the Police officer was also murdered a few days later. In the trial for the murder of the person who made the statement, the statement was put in by the prosecution. Held that it was obvious that the inquiry or trial, in which it was sought to use those records as evidence, was not under investigation at the time when those statements were made, that sec. 162, Cr. P. C., had no application to the case and that statements were admissible under sec. 32 (2) of the Indian Evidence Act—Abdul Aziz, 34 Cr.L.J. 109, 140 I.C. 578, A.I.R. 1932 All. 442, 1932 A.L.J. 301, 1932 Cr.C. 562, Ind. Rul. 1933 All. 16. But when the statement has not been made in the course of investigating the offence in respect of which the trial is held, neither the main part of sec. 162 nor the proviso has any application. Such a statement is as good evidence as a statement made to any other person—Kovuru Subbajja v. Peta Veeraya, 34 Cr.L.J. 137, 141 I.C. 276, 1932 M.W.N. 1074, 36 M.L.W. 759, Ind. Rul. 1933 Mad. 102, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 65, 56 Mad. 154, 1933 Cr.C. 81, 63 M.L.J. 794. The prohibition in sec. 162, Cr. P. C., against the use of statements made to the Police relates only to the use of them at an enquiry or trial in respect of any offence under investigation at the time when such statement was used. That section does not forbid an accused person to contradict a witness by a previous statement made to the Police in an investigation not made in respect of the offence for which the accused is being tried. So far as statements not reduced to writing are concerned there is no reason why statements made to a Police Officer in the course of an investigation should not, if relevant under the Evidence Act, be used at a trial for an offence not under investigation when they were made, provided that they are not held privileged by the provisions of sec. 123 or 124 of the Evidence Act. But the record of a statement heard by a Police Officer in exercise of the power conferred by sec. 161, Cr. P. C., and recorded either in the diary or separately in the course of investigation proceedings, is an unpublished official record relating to an affair of state, evidence derived from which cannot be produced in a case to which the first proviso to sec. 162, Cr. P. C., is not applicable except with the permission of the officer at the head of the Police Department. If the accused has succeeded in having the original record of the statement produced, notwithstanding objections raised under secs 123, 124 or 125 of the Evidence Act, and the Police Officer has referred to it to refresh his memory under sec. 159, Evidence Act, the provision of sec. 145, Evidence Act will apply. It is not a public document, a copy of which must be given on demand under the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act—Baij Nath v. Mohammad Din, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 359, 17 Lah. 472, 1936 Cr.C. 300, 38 P.L.R. 1040, 166 I.C. 501.

This section lays down that a statement made by a witness to the Police in the course of an investigation into an offence cannot be used against him at an inquiry or trial of the same offence; but there is nothing in this section to prevent the statement being used against him in a trial of a different offence for which he himself is prosecuted (e.g., offences under secs 192, 193, 211, I P. C.), which offence was not under investigation at the time when the statement was made—Jogesh v. Surendra, 35 C.W.N. 838 (840), 1931 Cr.C. 837, 33 Cr.L.J. 60, 134 I.C. 1265, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 637, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 49. The use of the statement of the accused, in a complaint subsequently made by him under sec. 211, I. P. C., as of that made by any other person who made a statement during the investigation, is governed by the provisions of the Evidence Act. Sec. 162, Cr. P. C., has no application in that case at all—Shivlal v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 68, 20 N.L.J. 280, 172 I.C. 156, 10 R.N. 169, A.I.R. 1938 Naf. 110. But, in a case in which the police investigated a case of theft and lodged a complaint under sec. 182, I. P. C., against the informant, the Patna High Court held that he was entitled to get copies of statements of the prosecution witnesses recorded during the aforesaid investigation, under the provisions of sec. 162, Cr. P. C.—Dinanath Sahay v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 174, 40 Cr.L.J. 509, 17 Pat. 622, 20 P.L.T. 70, 1939 P.W.N. 136, 180 I.C. 845, 5 B.R. 501, 11 R.P. 515. This section does not prohibit the use of statements, made by any person to a police-officer in the course of an investigation under Chap. XIV, in proceedings under sec. 476 of the Code in cases where the alleged offence which is under consideration in the proceedings under sec. 476 was not under investigation at the time when the statements were made—U. Htin Gyaw, 28 Cr.L.J. 433 (437), 5 Rang. 26, 101 I.C. 465, 6 Bur.L.J. 32, A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 113.

Where the police refused to challan the accused after investigation and the accused was summoned on a complaint, the provisions of sec. 162, Cr. P. C., apply and the accused can get copies of the statements of the prosecution witnesses to contradict them—Hari Gore, 28 Cr.L.J. 14, 99 I.C. 46, 9 N.L.J. 167, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 14. But see Jagannath, A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 23 (24), quoted under Note 503 (a).

503. First Proviso:—The first proviso to this section makes an exception in favour of the accused but it is an exception most jealously circumscribed under the proviso itself. "Any part of such statement" which has been reduced to writing may in certain limited circumstances be used to contradict the witness who made it. The limitations are strict: (1) only the statement of a prosecution witness can be used, and (2) only if it has been reduced to writing; (3) only a part of the statement recorded can be used; (4) such part must be duly proved; (5) it must be a contradiction of the evidence of the witness in Court; (6) it must be used as provided in section 145 of the Evidence Act, that is, it can be used only after the attention of the witness has been drawn to it or to those parts of it which it is intended to use for the purpose of contradiction—Badri, 27 Cr.L.J. 362 (368), 6 P.L.T. 620, 92 I.C. 874, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 20. See also Mahomed Adam Chohan, 38 Cr.L.J. 327, 167 I.C. 43, 9 R.B. 274, 38 Bom.L.R. 1186, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 60.

(a) Right of accused to get copy of statement:—Under the first proviso as it stood before the present amendment, the words 'may if the Court thinks it expedient' (see the old section cited parallel) show that the accused was not entitled, as a matter of right, to obtain access to a copy of the written statement. His right to obtain such copy was left to the discretion of the Court—Narayan, 32 Bom. 111; Nasiruddin, 16 All. 207 (208). The accused could get a copy only if the Court thought it expedient in the interests of justice to furnish him with such copy—Dadan Gazi, 23 Cal. 1023; In re Thiruvengada, 26 M.L.J. 182, 15 Cr.L.J. 289.

Under the present law, the words "shall direct" would seem to give the accused a right to obtain the copies. See Venkatasubbiah, 48 Mad. 640, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 579, 85 I.C. 209, 48 M.L.J. 195, 26 Cr.L.J. 721; Nga Lun, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 370 (372), 36 Cr.L.J. 1487, 13 Rang. 570, 158 I.C. 784, 1935 Cr.C. 1088 (F.B.); Vishwanath, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 249, 1936 Cr.C. 1040. (But such right has again been curtailed by the second proviso). Under the amended section 162, it is obligatory on the part of a Judge to give the accused copies of the statements recorded under sec. 161, subject only to the exclusion of irrelevant matters which the public interest requires should not be disclosed—Madari Sikdar, 54 Cal. 307, 28 Cr.L.J. 582. The language of this section is mandatory, and a Court has no power to refuse the application for copies. The fact that the police had not recorded the statements of the prosecution witnesses in full but had only made a memorandum of them is not a sufficient reason for refusing copies. Omission to supply copies is an illegality sufficient to vitiate the proceedings—Bansidhar, 53 All 458, 32 Cr.L.J. 562 (563), A.I.R. 1931 All. 262, 1931 A.L.J. 157, 130 I.C. 625, 1931 Cr.C. 422; Hari Gore, 28 Cr.L.J. 14, 99 I.C. 46, 9 N.L.R. 167, A.I.R. 1927 Nag 14; Chedi, 28 Cr.L.J. 597, 102 I.C. 773, 8 P.L.T. 613, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 325; Vishwanath, A.I.R. 1936 Nag 249, 1936 Cr.C. 1040. The Legislature has given a statutory right to the accused to insist upon his being supplied with the copies of the police statements so that he may be able to show by means of cross-examination that the witnesses are making statements in Court which are directly contradictory to what they stated before the police, and the Courts should be careful to see that the trial of an accused is conducted in the manner so carefully laid down by the Code. The provisions of sec 537, Cr. P. C., cannot be called into aid by the prosecution because unless the statements of the witnesses before the police have been furnished to the accused or have been seen by the Court itself, the High Court is unable to say that the accused has not been prejudiced. Where there is a violation of the plain directions in the statute as to the mode in which the trial of the accused should be conducted the High Court is bound to assume prejudice to the accused—Dinanath Sahay v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 174 (176), 40 Cr.L.J. 509, 17 Pat. 622, 20 P.L.T. 70, 1939 P.W.N. 136, 180 I.C. 845, 5 B.R. 501, 11 R.P. 545. Where counsel for the defence has been deprived of his proper opportunity of effectively cross-examining witnesses called for the prosecution, it is impossible to say that this has not occasioned a failure of justice. It is a failure of justice to deprive an accused of his legal rights, i.e., of defending himself effectively—Muzaffar Khan v. The Crown; I.L.R. 1939 Lah 509 (512). The Rangoon High Court took a different view. Where the Judge did not provide the copies of the whole of the statements of the witnesses which were desired by the accused's pleader, did not record his opinion for excluding parts of those statements and did not postpone the cross-examination of the witnesses until the copies had been supplied, held that the errors committed were at the most irregularities falling within the purview of sec 537, Cr. P. C.—Nga U Khine, 36 Cr.L.J. 665 (669), 155 I.C. 66, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 98, 13 Rang 1, 1935 Cr.C. 307. But see Sulaiman Mohamed Bholat, 30 Cr.L.J. 538, A.I.R. 1929 Rang 87, 115 I.C. 899, 6 Rang. 672. This is also the view of the Bombay High Court and the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court—Nur Mahomed, A.I.R. 1930 Bom 595, 129 I.C. 156, 54 Bom. 934; Hari, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 145 (178), 36 Cr.L.J. 1161, 157 I.C. 697, 28 S.L.R. 397, 1935 Cr.C. 753. See also Abdullah Khan, 34 Cr.L.J. 256, 141 I.C. 879, Ind Rul. 1933 Sind 79, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 188, 1933 Cr.C. 569; Hafiz Muhammad, 32 Cr.L.J. 638, 131 I.C. 17, A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 150, 12 P.L.T. 393, 1931 Cr.C. 390. See also Mahadeo v. The King, 40 C.W.N. 1164 (P.C.).

This section does not authorise the Court to look into the statement in the police diaries for the purpose of finding out whether it is contradictory to the statement made in Court or not, before granting the application for copies. The accused has the right to get the copies and examine the statement for himself to find out whether there are no contradictions—Jhari Gope, 8 Pat 279, 30 Cr.L.J. 858 (860), 118 I.C. 130, 10 P.L.T. 460, A.I.R. 1929 Pat 268, 1929 Cr.C. 21, Ind Rul. 1929 Pat. 482; Usman, 21 S.L.R. 239, 31 Cr.L.J. 592 (593), 123 I.C. 689, A.I.R. 1930 Sind 153; Murtiza Khan, 1934 Cr.C. 569, A.I.R.-1934 Nag 138; Nek Ram, 32 Cr.L.J. 370 (371), 129 I.C. 267, Ind Rul. 1931 All 139, A.I.R. 1931 All. 273, 1931 Cr.C. 337.

The stage in an inquiry or trial at which an accused person is entitled to ask for a copy of a statement made by a prosecution witness to the police in the course of the investigation, is the stage when the witness is called for the prosecution; that is, when he is under cross-examination and has already made a statement which the accused wishes to contradict by proof of his former statement to the police. Consequently, the accused is not entitled to the copies before cross-examination is opened at all—In re Peramasami, 22 M.L.W. 784, 27 Cr.L.J. 100, 91 I.C. 532, A.I.R.-1926 Mad. 183; Shaikh

Usman, 52 Bom 195, 29 Bom.L.R. 1581, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 23, 29 Cr.L.J. 221 (223). The accused may apply for a copy of the statement of a witness to the police at any time after he has been called, that is, at any time after the witness has entered the witness-box and while he is giving evidence—Nga U Khine, 36 Cr.L.J. 665 (668), 155 I.C. 66, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 98, 13 Rang. 1, 1935 Cr.C. 307. The question whether the right time to apply for copies is when a witness enters the box or when his evidence-in-chief is concluded was left undecided in Babarali, 30 Cr.L.J. 580 (582), 116 I.C. 167, A.I.R. 1929 Cal 182, 49 C.L.J. 197, 56 Cal 840, Ind. Rul. 1929 Cal 455. In Ahmadur Rahman v. Emp., 44 C.W.N. 340 (343) it has, however, been laid down that where a statement made by a prosecution witness has been recorded under sec. 162, Cr. P. C., the accused is entitled to demand that a copy of it should be furnished to him, only when the witness is in the witness-box to give his evidence against the accused and is sought to be cross-examined under sec. 145 of the Indian Evidence Act. In a case triable exclusively by the Court of Session the accused can get copies in the Court of the committing Magistrate before he finished the inquiry or in the Court of Sessions during the trial—Babarali, supra. See also Dadan Gazi, 33 Cal 1023. The accused is entitled as of right, to obtain a copy, not when the witness has been examined, but as soon as he is "called" for the prosecution. There is a difference of opinion on the point of time, i.e., whether copies should be granted when a witness is cited or when he is actually produced in the witness-box; but, at any rate, the law is clear that copies of statement should be granted before the examination commences provided that an application thereof has been made in time—Murtiza Khan, 1934 Cr.C. 569, 35 Cr.L.J. 1213, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 138; Hari Gore, 28 Cr.L.J. 14, 99 I.C. 46, 9 N.L.J. 167, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 24. It is not till the evidence-in-chief of a witness is given that a pleader or advocate can decide what material he will use for cross-examination, and it follows that he is by no means bound to declare his witnesses beforehand, but that, on the other hand, he exercises an undoubted right when he makes his application for the statements made before the police in respect of each separate witness as the need arises—Brahmayya v. The King, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 442 (444), 40 Cr.L.J. 265, 179 I.C. 783. This section does not authorise the granting of copies after the evidence of the witnesses has closed, and there is no use to which such statements can then be put—Suraj Bali, 36 Cr.L.J. 65 (66), 56 All. 750, 152 I.C. 249, A.I.R. 1934 All. 340, 1934 Cr.C. 418. This section entitles the accused to a copy of the statement made by a witness to the police in order that it might be used for contradicting the statement made by the witness in Court. But where the witness was discharged without being examined or cross-examined, so that he made no statement in Court, the accused is not entitled to get a copy of that witness's statement to the police—Wajid Ali, 7 Pat. 153, 30 Cr.L.J. 273 (275), 114 I.C. 220, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 34, Ind. Rul. 1929 Pat. 140, 10 P.L.T. 297. It is only at the time of cross-examination and when the cross-examination has laid the foundation for the suggestion that the evidence given by the witness in Court, is contradicted by his statement recorded under section 161, that the accused is entitled to ask the Judge to refer to the writing and grant him copies. Sec. 162 does not impose a duty upon the Judge of granting a copy of the statement recorded under sec. 161 before cross-examination has been opened—Madari Sikdar, 102 I.C. 550, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 514, 28 Cr.L.J. 582, 54 Cal 307. The same High Court did not accept it as a possible interpretation of this section—Babarali, supra. But the abovementioned principles of law enunciated in Madari Sikdar's case has been quoted with approval in the recent case of Ahmadur Rahman v. Emp., 44 C.W.N. 340 (343). The Court is not competent to direct that the accused be furnished with a copy of the statement unless it contains something which constitutes a contradiction of a statement made by the witness in his deposition at such inquiry or trial. These two circumstances must co-exist before an accused is entitled under this proviso to such copy—Saadat Ali, 6 Pat. 329, 28 Cr.L.J. 709 (714), 103 I.C. 597, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 243, 8 P.L.T. 780. The Patna High Court has, however, held in another case that the accused is entitled to a copy as soon as the witness is produced in Court, and there is nothing in this section which requires that the cross-examination must be opened before the accused is entitled to a copy—Ram

Gulan, 29 Cr.L.J. 297 (298), 107 I.C. 817, 9 P.L.T. 92, 7 Pat. 205, A.I.R. 1928 Pat 215 (dissenting from 22 M.L.W. 784, 54 Cal. 307 and 6 Pat. 329). The Allahabad High Court takes the same view in Tahal Saithwar, 53 All. 94, 32 Cr.L.J. 578 (579), 130 I.C. 696, A.I.R. 1931 All 34, 1931 Cr.C. 207, 1931 A.L.J. 10, 53 All. 94, Ind Rul. 1931 All. 312, dissenting from Madari Sikdar, supra.

Section 162, Cr. P. C., does not require the Court to satisfy itself before granting a copy to the accused that a certain contradiction exists. Subject to the provisions of the second proviso regarding any part of the statement, the Court must grant the copy and it is for the accused's counsel to examine it after it is granted to discover whatever contradictions may exist—Dastagir, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 822, 1937 M.W.N. 730, 46 M.L.W. 323, 171 I.C. 962, I.L.R. 1938 Mad 180, (1937) 2 M.L.J. 402, 1937 M.Cr.C. 267, following Jhari Gope v. Emp, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 268, 1929 Cr.C. 21, 118 I.C. 130, 30 Cr.L.J. 858, 8 Pat. 270, 10 P.L.T. 460 and Nga Lun Thuang, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 370, 1935 Cr.C. 1088, 158 I.C. 784, 36 Cr.L.J. 1487, 13 Rang. 570 (F.B.). See also Public Prosecutor, Madras v. Vedi, A.I.R. 1930 Mad 185, 1930 Cr.C. 185, 122 I.C. 463, 31 Cr.L.J. 414, 1929 M.W.N. 885; Dinanath Sahay v. Emp, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 174, 40 Cr.L.J. 509, 17 Pat. 622, 20 P.L.T. 70, 1939 P.W.N. 136, 180 I.C. 845 and the rulings quoted in the previous paragraph.

The cross-examination of the witness must be adjourned until the necessary copy has been given. This is essential, for it would defeat the object of granting a copy of the statement to the accused if he were to be provided with a copy only when cross-examination of the witness had been completed, or almost completed. It will rarely be necessary to exclude any part of the witness's statement to the police under the second proviso to sec. 162, and, therefore, the difficulty that such postponement of cross-examination might cause delay in the trial can usually be obviated by having copies of the police statements in readiness at commencement of the trial, or it would be a sufficient compliance with the law to allow the defence pleader to see the original statement of the witness to the police and to cross-examine thereon while the copy is being prepared—Nga U Khine, 36 Cr.L.J. 665 (668), 155 I.C. 66, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 93, 13 Rang. 1, 1935 Cr.C. 307, following Saadat Khan, 28 Cr.L.J. 709, 6 Pat. 329, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 243, 103 I.C. 597. See also Babarali, 116 I.C. 167, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 182, 30 Cr.L.J. 580, 56 Cal. 840, 49 C.L.J. 197. The above principles of law were also held to be applicable to an inquiry preliminary to commitment to the Court of Session—Saadat Khan, supra.

In practice there need be no difficulty in complying with the statute even in a summons case; although it is true that the accused is ordinarily called upon in a summons case immediately to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses as soon as the statement-in-chief of each witness has been recorded; but that procedure is subject to the provisions of sec. 162, Cr. P. C., and assumes that at that time the accused had been provided with the statutory materials which are his undoubted right to possess in order to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses. In such cases it will be convenient and consistent with the requirements of the Code that the witnesses for the prosecution are examined-in-chief on one day and then a very short adjournment is given to the accused during which he can be provided with the copies of the statements of those witnesses who have been examined by the police—Dinanath Sahay v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 174 (177), 40 Cr.L.J. 509, 17 Pat. 622, 20 P.L.T. 70, 1939 P.W.N. 136, 180 I.C. 845.

If the notes of statements of witnesses are in existence, they must be traceable, or at any rate some serious effort should be made to find them, and satisfactory reasons given for their non-discovery. A mere statement by a witness that it will not be possible to trace them is not enough, in the absence of evidence to show what efforts were made to do so. It is for the Court to decide whether they are really traceable or not, and not for a witness. His opinion about the matter is irrelevant—Vishwanath, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 249, 1936 Cr.C. 1040.

Where the accused was furnished with materially inaccurate copies of the statements of a prosecution witness recorded in the police diary, and on discovering the mistake he applied to have that witness recalled for the purpose of re-cross-examination in order generally to impeach his credit, held that the accused was entitled to do so—Sadananda v. Ramasray, 21 Cr.L.J. 289 (Pat.).

Statements in the police diary are ordinarily privileged and cannot be given to outsiders except under sec. 162, Cr. P. C., and that is limited to the case of an accused who is being tried for an offence under investigation at the time when the statement was made. Therefore, the copies of the statement of witnesses recorded in the police diary of another case arising out of the same incident can be rightly refused—Jagannath, A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 23 (24); Baij Nath v. Muhammad Din, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 339 (361). The record of a statement heard by a police officer in exercise of the power conferred by this section and recorded either in the diary or separately in the course of investigation proceedings, is an unpublished official record relating to an affair of State evidence from which cannot be produced in a case to which the first proviso to this section is not applicable except with the permission of the officer at the head of the Police Department (sec. 123, Evidence Act)—Baij Nath v. Muhammad Din, supra. See also last paragraph of Note 502B.

(b) 'On the request of the accused':—It is clear from the provision of this section that the Judge (or Magistrate) has no authority to look at the police papers unless requested to do so by the accused—Nga U Khine, 36 Cr.L.J. 665 (667), 155 I.C. 66, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 98, 13 Rang. 1, 1935 Cr.C. 307. This view of law was held to be incorrect by the Full Bench of the same High Court in Emp. v. Nga Lun Thaing, 36 Cr.L.J. 1487 (1489), 158 I.C. 784, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 370, 13 Rang. 570, 1935 Cr.C. 1088 (F.B.), where Page, C.J., also laid down "There is no legal obligation imposed upon either the Public Prosecutor or the Court to advise the accused to request the Court to refer to the statement of any witness to the Police under sec. 162, but it must be borne in mind that it is the duty of the Public Prosecutor and any other official who may be conducting a prosecution to prosecute, not to persecute the accused, and that responsibility rests upon him not to allow the Court or jury to place reliance unwillingly upon the evidence of a witness who to his knowledge made a contradictory statement to the Police in the course of the preliminary investigation, and in such circumstances he ought to inform the Court that it might be expedient that the accused should be made aware that he would be entitled to be supplied with a copy of the witness's statement to the police if he made a request to the Court in that behalf. Further, there is nothing in sec. 162 which prevents the Court, if in its discretion it elects to do so, from informing the accused of his right, for the purpose of contradicting the evidence of the witness, to request the Court to refer to the previous statement of the witness to the police and to supply the accused with a copy thereof as provided in the section; or, if the accused makes a request to the Court in that behalf, to prevent the Court from pointing out to the accused, if it chose to do so, any passages in the statement which may appear to be material for the purpose in hand. On the other hand, merely because the Court thinks it well to inform the accused of his rights under the section, it does not follow that it would be prudent for the accused in every case to ask for a copy of the statement, and it is for the accused, and not for the Court, to decide whether the accused should exercise the right given to him under sec. 162." See also Nga San Ba, 37 Cr.L.J. 414, 161 I.C. 14, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 75; 1936 Cr.C. 80.

The procedure prescribed by sec. 162 must be strictly followed. A Court is not justified in admitting a statement made by a person to a police officer, unless the accused or his pleader asks the Court to refer to such record. Section 162 is in this point explicit—Nga Po, 4 Rang. 356, 27 Cr.L.J. 1371, 98 I.C. 491, A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 80. See also Note 502, eighth paragraph.

An oral request by the accused is sufficient. This section does not require any written application. Nor should the Magistrate ask the accused any reason for the request, for every Magistrate ought to know that when a statement is required by the accused, it must be required for the purpose of contradicting a witness—Ghassoo, 1930 A.L.J. 606, 31 Cr.L.J. 555 (556), 123 I.C. 685, A.I.R. 1930 All 737.

Section 162, Cr. P. C., entitles an accused person to request a trial Court to refer to a statement previously made by a prosecution witness to a police officer during investigation. The Court when so requested is bound to refer to such statement and is bound to provide a copy of it unless of opinion that it is irrelevant. The onus of moving the Court rests upon the accused, but it is obvious that the accused may not know what a witness has stated to the police and, therefore, may not use his privilege when it might assist him. A Judge is clearly at liberty to adopt a course at his own instance, which he is bound to do if requested by the accused, and a trial Court should refer to previous statements of witnesses, even if not requested by the accused, and if such reference reveals any point materially in favour of the accused, it should not be disregarded but the Court should give a copy to the accused of its own motion in order to prevent a failure of justice—Sultan Mir, A.I.R. 1937 Pesh. 10, 166 I.C. 876, 38 Cr.L.J. 347, 1937 Pesh.L.J. 10, 9 R.Pesh. 75.

(c) 'If duly proved':—The words 'if duly proved' in this proviso clearly show that the record of the statement cannot be admitted in evidence straightway, but that the officer before whom the statement was made, should ordinarily be examined as to any alleged statement or omitted statement that is relied upon by the accused for the purpose of contradicting the witness—Vithu, 26 Bom.L.R. 965, 26 Cr.L.J. 223 (224), 83 I.C. 1007, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 510. There is no presumption as to the genuineness of the statements of witnesses entered in the police diaries, and unless they are duly proved, they cannot be used to contradict the evidence given in Court—Labh Singh, 26 Cr.L.J. 1153 (1154), 6 Lah. 24, 88 I.C. 513, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 357; Rahijaddi, 58 Cal. 1009, 35 C.W.N. 317 (319), 32 Cr.L.J. 841, 132 I.C. 159, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 189, 1931 Cr.C. 253, Ind Rul. 1931 Cal 543; Emp. v Ibrahim, 28 Cr.L.J. 983 (986), 105 I.C. 807, 8 Lah. 605, 28 P.L.R. 649, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 17. In every case when a witness is confronted with a portion of his police statement which he repudiates, the Police Officer recording his statement should be questioned specifically with regard to that portion of the statement. The practice of merely asking the Police Officer perfunctorily whether a particular document represents the witness's statement as a whole cannot but be condemned—Jwan Das Milwa Ram, 41 Cr.L.J. 174 (175), 185 I.C. 380, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 521, I.L.R. 1939 Lah. 305. Where the Magistrate referred in his judgment to the statements of some of the witnesses made to the police, which had not been proved, and he also took into consideration the statements made by persons who were not examined at all at the trial either by the prosecution or by the defence, the procedure was irregular, but this irregularity was not a ground of reversal of the conviction—Devi Das, 31 Cr.L.J. 343 (345), 10 Lah. 794, 31 P.L.R. 742, 122 I.C. 93, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 318. Those parts of the statement to the police which are used in cross-examination to contradict the witness must be proved and brought on the record. This can ordinarily be done by the admission of the witness that he made the statement, or by an examination of the police-officer who recorded it. If the latter course is necessary, in order to avoid delay, there can be no objection to allowing cross-examination subject to subsequent proof of the statements—Nga U Khine, 36 Cr.L.J. 665 (668), 155 I.C. 66, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 98, 13 Rang. 1, 1935 Cr.C. 307 following Madari Sikdar, 102 I.C. 550, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 514, 28 Cr.L.J. 582, 54 Cal. 307; Shivlal v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 68, 20 N.L.J. 280, 172 I.C. 156, 10 R.N. 169, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 110. See also Mahomed Adam Chohan, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 60, 167 I.C. 43, 38 Bom.L.R. 1186, 9 R.B. 274, 38 Cr.L.J. 327. Formal proof prior to the cross examination is, therefore, unnecessary. If the statement, if not admitted, is subsequently not proved, the evidence based on it must of course be disregarded. This principle applies whether the provisions of sec. 162, Cr. P. C., are applicable to the statement sought to be proved or not—Shivlal v. Emp., supra.

What is done in Behar and Bengal is that after the attention of the prosecution witnesses has been drawn to the contradictory statements made by them before the police, the investigating police officer is asked whether those witnesses did or did not make the particular statements before him. The answer given by the police-officer (which is always checked with reference to what is written in the diaries) is considered quite sufficient to contradict the witness, and neither the original record nor the copy of it furnished to the accused is ever proved or admitted in evidence. This practice which has prevailed for a long time and which has its own advantages should not be disturbed—Bihari Mahton, 32 Cr L J 797 (800), 131 I C 801, 10 Pat. 107, A I R. 1931 Pat. 152, Ind. Rul. 1931 Pat. 241, 1931 Cr.C. 392, 12 P.L.T. 798. The correctness of this practice seems to have been questioned in more than one decision of the Lahore High Court.

It is only what is written in the police diaries that can be used under sec 145 of the Evidence Act to contradict the witness, and what the Sub-Inspector of Police stated that a witness said or did not say, is inadmissible. The way to prove those portions of the written statement of a witness, which has been specifically put to him in order to contradict him, is for the accused to mark the passage or passages in the copy from the police diaries given to him and then to ask the writer of the statement to say that it is a true copy—Dharam Singh, 29 Cr L J. 343 (345), 108 I C. 162, A I R. 1928 Lah. 507 following Bahadur Singh, 95 I C. 467, 7 Lah. 264, 8 Lah L J. 174, A I R. 1926 Lah. 367, 27 Cr L J. 803, 27 P.L.R. 379 and Labh Singh, 88 I.C. 513, 6 Lah. 24, A I R. 1925 Lah. 357, 26 Cr L J 1153. See also Emp. v. Ibrahim, 28 Cr L J. 983 (986), 105 I.C. 807, 8 Lah. 605, 28 P.L.R. 649, A I R 1928 Lah. 17.

This view of law seems to have been accepted by the Calcutta High Court. In Jasimuddin, 35 C.W.N. 164 (168), 32 Cr L.J. 1245 (1248), 134 I.C. 763, A I R. 1931 Cal. 622, 1931 Cr.C. 806, Ind. Rul 1931 Cal. 875, Ghose, J. observed: "If, however, it is desired to clinch the matter before the Sessions Judge and the Jury and to show in an affirmative manner that the witnesses for the prosecution cannot be relied upon, it is obviously the duty of the defence to prove through the investigating police officer when he is in the witness-box the record of the statements made to the police by the witnesses for the prosecution during the stage of investigation. For that purpose it is necessary to get on the record a true copy of what is known as the Case Diary and there are well-known ways of proving the document and of getting the document on the record" Dissenting from the view expressed in Bihari Mahton's case the Patna High Court adopted this view of the Calcutta High Court in Najibuddin, A I R. 1933 Pat. 589 (595), 14 P.L.T. 543, 1933 Cr.C. 1350, 147 I.C. 142. Commenting on the non-compliance with this procedure, Dunkley, J., of the Rangoon High Court observed: "As soon as a defence pleader asked a witness a question concerning his statement to the police, it was the bounden duty of the learned Sessions Judge to ask the pleader whether he wished to have a copy of that witness's statement to the police supplied to him, or not. If the pleader did not desire a copy of the statement, then all questions concerning the witness's statement to the investigating officer should have been disallowed. If he did desire a copy of the statement, it should have been supplied, and should then have been proved, used for the purpose of cross-examining the witness and brought on the record in the proper way"—Nga Tha Aye, A I R. 1935 Rang. 299 (301), 36 Cr L.J. 1380, 158 I.C. 441, 1935 Cr.C. 995.

Under this section the statement of a witness in evidence can only be contradicted by his alleged statement to the police on two conditions, one is that the application for contradiction is made by the accused and the other is that the statement of the police should be proved by a certified copy of the diary—W. K Wesley v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 4 (6), 178 I.C. 183, A I R. 1938 All. 571 (573), 1938 A.W.R. (H.C.) 505, 1938 A Cr.C. 90, 1938 A.L.R. 827.

Where the witnesses were alleging that they had not made the statements alleged and that such statements as they had made had been wilfully altered by the Fouzdar, it is more than ever necessary that the actual written statements should be put in—Mahomed Adam Chohan, A I R. 1937 Bom. 60, 38 Bom.L.R. 1185, 167 I.C. 43, 38 Cr.L.J. 327 (329), 9 R.B. 274

Dissenting from the view expressed in Bihari Mahton's case the Patna High Court adopted this view of the Calcutta High Court in Najibuddin, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 589 (595), 14 P.L.T. 513, 1933 Cr.C. 1350, 147 I.C. 142. Under this section the statement of a witness in evidence can only be contradicted by his alleged statement to the police on two conditions, one is that the application for contradiction is made by the accused and the other is that the statement of the police should be proved by a certified copy of the diary—W. K. Wesley v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 4 (6), 178 I.C. 183, A.I.R. 1938 All. 571 (573), 1938 A.W.R. (H.C.) 505, 1938 A.Cr.C. 90, 1938 A.L.R. 827.

Where the witnesses were alleging that they had not made the statements alleged and that such statements as they had made had been wilfully altered by the Fouzdar, it is more than ever necessary that the actual written statements should be put in—Mahomed Adam Chohan, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 60, 38 Bom.L.R. 1185, 167 I.C. 43, 38 Cr.L.J. 327 (329), 9 R.B. 274.

In actual practice the written record of the witness's statement is generally put to him on an undertaking of the prosecution to call the investigating officer to prove the statement, because it is inconvenient to prove each statement separately. So that the general practice is to call the investigating officer at a later stage of the trial and he proves the written statements which have been put to the witnesses—Mahomed Adam Chohan, supra.

(d) 'Contradict':—To construe this section as meaning that while any part of the statement of a witness to the police may be used to contradict him, yet if the contradiction consists in this that a statement made at the trial was not made in any part of the statement to the police, such a contradiction cannot be proved, seems to be an artificial construction and cannot be adopted. There is nothing in the language of this section which would lead to such a conclusion—Iltaf Khan, 5 Pat. 346, 7 P.L.T. 634, 27 Cr.L.J. 796 (799), 95 I.C. 396, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 362, dissenting from the obiter dictum of Macpherson, J., in Badri, 27 Cr.L.J. 362 (369), 92 I.C. 874, 6 P.L.T. 620, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 20. If it is correct to say that there is nothing in the section to prevent the police officers from being questioned about the statements made by a witness, there cannot be any difficulty in proving omissions by asking the investigating officer whether such statements had been made before him or not without exhibiting the whole of the statement in writing—Bihari Mahlon, 32 Cr.L.J. 797 (803), 131 I.C. 801, 10 Pat. 107, A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 152, Ind. Rul. 1931 Pat. 241, 1931 Cr.C. 392, 12 P.L.T. 798. This view of law has been modified by the same High Court in Najibuddin, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 589 (593), 14 P.L.T. 543, 1933 Cr.C. 1350, 147 I.C. 142, where Agarwala, J. observed: "It has long been accepted that a statement to an investigating officer has been 'reduced into writing' even when the officer has not recorded the statement in full, but has merely noted the gist of what was stated to him. The value of such a note for the purpose of contradicting testimony given on oath at a subsequent trial varies with the nature of the testimony and of the officer's note. Ordinarily such a note contains such excerpts from the statement as appear to the officer, at the time, to be important. Further investigation and subsequent developments may, and often do, show that points of great materiality have been omitted. When, therefore, the only record of a witness's statement to the investigating officer is a brief note, it follows that omissions from that note are of practically no value for the purpose of proving that the witness did not state to the officer matters to which he deposes at the trial. As I have already said the value of the officer's note necessarily varies, and, for the purpose of deciding what weight should be given to an omission from the police record, it appears to me to be essential to see what exactly was recorded and therefore the written note should be duly proved as required by the proviso." Entries of statements in the diary are notoriously very condensed and the omission of some detail in the note of a statement is not always a sure indication that such detail was absent from the statement; and certainly a Court should never use such an absence as a contradiction without taking evidence to prove that no such thing was stated—Deo Lal, 34 Cr.L.J. 948, 145 I.C. 426, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 440, 14 P.L.T. 396, 1933 Cr.C. 974.

All omissions are not contradictions. It must be left to the Court in each particular case to decide whether the omission proved amounts to a contradiction or not. Obviously there may be omissions in the previous statement which make it inconsistent with and, therefore, contradictory to the evidence given by the witness in Court—Mohinder, 33 Cr.L.J. 97 (105), 33 P.L.R. 891, 135 I.C. 209, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 81, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 103, 1932 Cr.C. 123, following Hazara, 29 Cr.L.J. 348 (349), 108 I.C. 167, 9 Lah. 389, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 257. But whether a discrepancy or omission is effective to contradict a witness in any particular case depends on the nature of the fact in question as well as the fullness with which the statement has been recorded. An omission may amount to contradiction if the matter omitted was one which the witness would have been expected to mention and the Sub-Inspector to make a note of it in the ordinary course. Every detail is not expected to be noted, but the names of accused persons are among the most important of such matters which any Sub-Inspector who knows his work would not fail to take down from the lips of the witness—Yusuf Mia v. Emp., A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 579 (582), 1938 P.W.N. 727, 5 B.R. 185, 20 P.L.T. 51, 178 I.C. 934, 40 Cr.L.J. 147 See also Note 915 (18).

Contradiction means the setting of one statement against another and not the setting up of a statement against nothing at all. Sec. 162, Cr. P. C., does not, therefore, permit the use of statements to the police for the purpose of proving omissions. An omission in a vital point is, however, significant and ought to be provable in favour of the accused, although most of the omissions in a statement of the kind which is recorded in the police diary are of no significance whatever—Sakhawat v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 50 (53), 38 Cr.L.J. 330, 167 I.C. 61, 19 N.L.J. 320, I.L.R. 1937 Nag. 277, not following Mrs M. F. Rego v. Emp., A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 136, 1933 Cr.C. 610, 143 I.C. 17, 34 Cr.L.J. 505, 29 N.L.R. 251.

The Madras High Court has taken a different view on this point and has held that a statement made by a witness to the police in an investigation under sec. 162, Cr. P. C., cannot be filed, or exhibited, or, in short, used when the witness is under examination in order to show that while giving evidence the witness has made assertions which he did not make when he was examined by the police. It cannot be used unless an omission from a statement under sec. 162 can be said to be a contradiction of a statement made in the witness-box. It is not permissible to use such statements in order to show "development" of the prosecution case; it is only permissible to use them to prove contradiction—Ponnusami, 34 Cr.L.J. 582, 143 I.C. 424, 1933 M.W.N. 90, 37 M.L.W. 441, 64 M.L.J. 519, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 372, 56 Mad. 475, Ind. Rul. 1933 Mad. 299, 1933 Cr.C. 555.

It is a misdirection to tell the jury "under the law, no evidence can be given before you by the prosecution as to what these witnesses told the police, but the fact remains that the defence which is entitled to bring to your notice any contradiction between the statements there made and the statements made now, has not placed before you any contradictory statement as regards the account of occurrence"—Ram Lal, 36 Cr.L.J. 135 (136), 152 I.C. 681, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 717, 1934 Cr.C. 1102. But see Sanmon Tiwari v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 102, 165 I.C. 761, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 581, 1936 Cr.C. 952, 3 B.R. 78, 9 R.P. 211.

Effect of contradiction:—The statements to the police are not evidence in themselves. Where they contradict with the evidence of the witnesses given by them in Court, the question for the jury is not whether the statements in Court or the statements to the Police are true. The true question is whether the inconsistency in the statements does not make the evidence in Court unreliable—Tajali Mian v. Emp., 28 Cr.L.J. 843 (845), 104 I.C. 459, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 31, 9 P.L.T. 57, 7 Pat. 50. It is a misdirection of the Court to tell the jury that they can convict on a statement to the police because a statement to the police of a prosecution witness is not evidence. Sec. 162, Cr. P. C., says that the statement to the police may be used to contradict a witness in the manner provided by sec. 145, Evidence Act. It does not lay down that the effect of the contradiction is to entirely discredit the witness. Nor is such a result stated in sec. 145, Evidence Act. Not only would it be open to the jury to treat the omission as entirely discrediting the witness but it would also be open to the jury to treat the omission as discrediting only the portion of the evidence which was omitted in the statement—Samuel John v. Emp., A.I.R. 1935 All. 935, 1935 A.W.R. 1071, 1935 A.L.J. 1079, 1935 Cr.C. 1181, 160 I.C. 162, 1936 A.I.R. 59. In this connection Holmwood and Sharfuddin, JJ., observed: "The learned Judge nowhere gives his own finding on the truth or falsity of each witness's statement. He relies entirely on the differences in what they say in Court and what they said or are alleged not to have said before the police. We must point out that it is exceedingly dangerous to appeal from evidence judicially recorded under the sanction of cross-examination to alleged statements made to the police, which are not judicially recorded. It is the Judge's duty to make up his mind, while the witness is before him, whether he is a witness of truth or falsehood and it is only when the Judge sees any reason to distrust his evidence that omissions in a police record can become of any importance"—Jung Rai v. King-Emp, 19 C.W.N. 217 (218), 28 I.C. 649. See also Ausan Singh in Note 502.

(e) 'In the manner provided by sec. 145 of the Indian Evidence Act':

The provisions of sec. 145, Evidence Act, must be strictly complied with. The proper procedure would be to ask the witness whether he made such and such statement before the police officer. If the witness answers in the affirmative, the previous statement need not be proved. If, however, the witness denies having made the previous statement, or states that he does not remember having made any such statement, the cross-examiner must read out to the witness the relevant portions of the record which are alleged to be contradictory to his statement in Court and give him an opportunity to reconcile the same if he can. It is only when the cross-examiner has done so that the record of the previous statement becomes admissible in evidence for the purpose of contradicting the witness and can be proved in any manner permitted by law—Gopi Chand, 31 Cr.L.J. 1071 (1074), 126 I.C. 573, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 491, 11 Lah. 460; Mohinder Singh, 33 Cr.L.J. 97 (104), 33 P.L.R. 891, 135 I.C. 209, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 81, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 103, 1932 Cr.C. 123; Najibuddin, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 589 (594), 14 P.L.T. 543, 1933 Cr.C. 1350, 147 I.C. 142; Suraj Bati, 36 Cr.L.J. 65 (66), 152 I.C. 249, A.I.R. 1934 All. 340, 1934 Cr.C. 418; Raghuraj, 36 Cr.L.J. 188, 152 I.C. 873, A.I.R. 1934 All. 956, 1934 Cr.C. 1258; Ibrahim, 28 Cr.L.J. 983 (986), 105 I.C. 807, 8 Lah. 605, 28 P.L.R. 649, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 17; Sulla, 35 Cr.L.J. 843 at p. 846 (Oudh); Nga U Khine, 36 Cr.L.J. 665 (668), 13 Rang. 1, 155 I.C. 66, 1933 Cr.C. 307, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 98; Salik, 9 R.O. 295, A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 201 (203), 1937 O.W.N. 63, 38 Cr.L.J. 165, 166 I.C. 259, 1936 O.L.R. 734. There is no duty cast upon counsel who wishes to cross-examine a witness by putting to him a previous statement first to prove that statement. Sec. 145 of the Indian Evidence Act has to be read with sec. 162, Cr. P. C., and quite clearly indicates that the attention of a witness is to be called to the previous statement before the writing can be proved. If the witness admits the previous statement, or explains any discrepancy or contradiction, it obviously makes it unnecessary for the statement—thereafter to be proved. On the other hand, if the statement still requires to be proved that can be done later by calling the person before whom the statement was made. The proposition that an illiterate person is immune from the process of law with regard to contradiction by a previous statement has no authority in law, and would nullify almost completely the provisions of sec. 153, Indian Evidence Act, if it were so, as the majority of witnesses in criminal cases in this province are illiterate. It makes not the slightest difference whether the witness is literate or illiterate; attention can be drawn to any portion of a previous statement by reading the statement to the witness; he does not require to read it himself—Muzaffar Khan v. The Crown, I.L.R. 1939 Lah. 509 (511). The defence should not be allowed to prove the writing before the attention of the witness is drawn to those parts of the writing which are to be used for the purpose of contradicting her. Where the defence rely on the omission of statements by her, defence should read out the whole of her statements to her and point out to her that the statements in question are not contained in it. The intention is that the witness should be given an opportunity of explaining how it was that those portions were omitted—Samuel John v. Emp, A.I.R. 1935 All. 935 (937), 1935 A.W.R. 1071, 1935 A.L.J. 1079, 1935 Cr.C. 1181, 160 I.C. 162, 1936 A.L.R. 59.

Where the trial Judge asked the investigating Police Officer to verify as true copies of the statements recorded by him in the special Police diary and he bodily used those statements for the purpose of contradicting the statements made on oath by the prosecution witnesses without first giving each witness an opportunity of admitting or denying the correctness of the statement recorded by the investigating Police Officer in the special Police diary of the case, the procedure was entirely illegal and all those true copies of statements recorded by the Police Officer in his diary and exhibited in the case were entirely inadmissible in evidence—Salik, supra. In every case when a witness is confronted with a portion of his police statement which he repudiates, the police officer recording his statement should be questioned specifically with regard to that portion of the statement. The practice of merely asking the police officer perfunctorily whether a particular document represents the witness's statement as a whole cannot but be condemned. Whenever a witness denies having made a previous statement it is the obvious duty of the Judge to apply his mind to the question whether he is satisfied that the denial is to be rejected—Jwan Das Milwa Ram, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 521 (522), I.L.R. 1939 Lah. 305.

Re-examination:—It is desirable that when an investigating police officer is being cross-examined as to previous statement made to him by the witness for the prosecution the Court should have the police diary before it and see whether negative answer of the officer really gives a picture of what the witness in fact stated. If not, the fact should be borne in mind and the Court should watch whether the matter is cleared up in re-examination. It is therefore the duty of the Public Prosecutor to see that the negative answer from an investigating officer in respect of the statement of a witness does not create a wrong impression of what the witness stated before the police. He must in these cases bring about other statements to explain the matter referred to in cross-examination. If the Public Prosecutor fails to do so, it is the duty of the Court in fairness to the case and to the witness to bring about facts which will clear up the negative answer. This will be legitimate use of the police diary and one of the modes of taking aid from it in the trial—Yusuf Mia v. Emp., A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 579 (585), 1939 P.W.N. 727, 5 B.R. 185, 20 P.L.T. 51, 178 I.C. 934, 40 Cr.L.J. 147, 178 I.C. 934.

504. Second proviso:—For reasons of the addition of this proviso, see the Legislative Assembly Debates, February 14, 1923, pages 2224-2243.

The Court can refuse to grant copies only if the requirements of the second proviso are satisfied; namely, if the Court is of opinion that any part of the statement is irrelevant, or that its disclosure is not essential in the interests of justice, and is inexpedient in the public interests. The application for copies should not be rejected on the mere ground that it might help the defence or that possibly there was no contradiction—Chedi Prasad, 8 P.L.T. 613, 28 Cr.L.J. 597, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 325.

Under the second proviso to the section, the Judge (or Magistrate) should exclude from the copy supplied any part of the statement which in his opinion satisfies one or other of the conditions, viz., (1) that it is irrelevant, or (2) that its disclosure to the accused is both unessential in the interests of justice and inexpedient in the public interest. It should be noticed that there are only two separate and distinct conditions under which a part of the statement can be excluded, and not three. To justify exclusion under the second conclusion mentioned above the two circumstances mentioned therein must exist together in conjunction. If he excludes any part of the statement, the Judge (or Magistrate) must record the opinion on which he bases such exclusion, but not his reasons for the opinion—Nga U Khine, 36 Cr.L.J. 665 (668), 155 I.C. 66, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 98, 13 Rang. 1, 1935 Cr.C. 307. This proviso shows that in all cases a copy of the statement in the diary must be granted. It is only certain portions of that statement which may be excluded in the discretion of the Court. Those portions are portions which are inexpedient in the public interest—Nek Ram, 32 Cr.L.J. 370 (371), 129 I.C. 267, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 139, A.I.R. 1931 All. 273, 1931 Cr.C. 337; Emp. v. Bansidhar, A.I.R. 1931 All. 262, 1931 A.L.J. 157, 130 I.C. 625, 1931 Cr.C. 422, 32 Cr.L.J. 562, 53 All. 458. See also Notes in para 503 (a).

504A. Effect of reception of evidence in contravention of this section:—It cannot be seriously contended that admission of inadmissible evidence is fatal to the trial. It must always be a question whether prejudice has been caused, and if not, whether the materials left are sufficient within the meaning of sec. 167 of the Evidence Act—Nitai Koley v. Emp., (1939) 1 Cal. 337; Harendra v. Emp., 40 C.L.J. 313 (318).

There is nothing at all in this section or in the nature of the subject matter dealt with by the section to warrant the belief that the smallest breach of the section is to be regarded as entirely vitiating any trial. Apart from question of real prejudice it does not seem that it is of any avail in revision for a petitioner merely to show that out of the numerous questions and answers put in the course of the trial one or more of them is contrary to this section—Sajjad Mirza v. Emp., 45 C.L.J. 199 (201), A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 372.

163. (1) No police-officer or other person in authority shall offer to make, or cause to be offered or made, any such inducement, threat or promise as is mentioned in the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, section 24.

No inducement to be offered.

(2) But no police-officer or other person shall prevent, by any caution or otherwise, any person from making in the course of any investigation under this Chapter any statement which he may be disposed to make of his own free will.

506. Person in authority:—This term must not be used in any restricted sense, so as to mean only a person who has control over the prosecution of the accused, but would include a person who had authority to interfere with the matter; and any concern or interest in it would be sufficient to give him that authority—Navroji, 9 B.H.C.R. 358.

The following are persons in authority:—Honorary Magistrate—Ramdhun, 1 W.R. 24; a Magistrate or Sessions Judge recording a confession—Asghar, 2 All. 260; Uzeer, 10 Cal. 775; Village Magistrate—Thandraya, 26 Mad. 38; Umrai, 31 Cr.L.J. 680, 124 I.C. 427, 6 O.W.N. 947; Police Patel—Rama, 3 Bom. 12; Fakira, 40 Bom. 220; Panchayatdar—Ganesh, 50 Cal. 127, 74 I.C. 264, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 458; Nazir, 9 C.W.N. 474, 2 Cr.L.J. 255; President of a Panchayet—Aushi Bibi, 20 C.W.N. 512, 33 I.C. 828; Jesha Bewa, 11 C.W.N. 904, 6 Cr.L.J. 154; (but see In re Mulamayandi, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 230, 25 Cr.L.J. 269, 45 M.L.J. 845); Prosecutor—Asutosh, 26 C.W.N. 54, 23 Cr.L.J. 573; Smith, 19 Cr.L.J. 189 (Mad.); even the wife or relations of the prosecutor in some cases—Smith, supra; headman of a village—Nga Kya, 8 Bur.L.T. 39, 15 Cr.L.J. 681, 26 I.C. 129, 8 L.B.R. 94; Zemundar investigating a crime—Dabud, 4 S.L.R. 209, 12 Cr.L.J. 119; a travelling auditor of a Railway Company is a person in authority as regards one of its booking clerks—Navroji, 9 B.H.C.R. 358; a Ziladar serving under a big estate—Taule, 30 Cr.L.J. 829, 117 I.C. 737, 6 O.W.N. 309, A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 272, 5 Luck. 91, Ind Rul. 1929 Oudh 385; a Ziladar and Honorary Magistrate—Hashmat Khan, 36 Cr.L.J. 211 (215), 152 I.C. 998, 1934 Cr.C. 643, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 417, 7 R.L. 348, 37 P.L.R. 25, 15 Lah. 856; a superior officer (i.e. the investigating Postal Officer)—Bhagabaticharan Patra, 34 Cr.L.J. 1187, 145 I.C. 962, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 644, 60 Cal. 719, 1933 Cr.C. 1054, 6 R.C. 175.

A prominent and influential resident of the village is not a person in authority—Public Prosecutor v. Venkatamma, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 748, 56 Mad. 63, 64 M.L.J. 153, 1932 Cr.C. 923, 36 M.L.W. 798, 33 Cr.L.J. 814, 139 I.C. 725, 1932 M.W.N. 461. So also members of the panchayat—Emp. v. Mohan Lal, 4 All. 46.

507. Inducement, threat or promise:—Compare sec. 24 of the Evidence Act.

"All oppression and trickery in regard to obtaining confession are to be avoided by the police under pain of the severest penalties, and the practice of employing private individuals to worm out confession from accused persons is strictly prohibited. Nothing so clearly shows want of detective tact, talent and resource and of patent industry in a police-officer as the resort to foul means to obtain confession. The most ignorant and clumsy can make out a case if he can torture the culprit till he tells all about it. True detective talent and sagacity manifest themselves in patient and unrelenting industry in weaving round the culprit such a network of undoubted facts and damning circumstances gathered from a variety of sources that he cannot escape"—Mad Pol. Man, p. 95.

A confession which is the direct outcome of the confessing accused being given to understand that if he confessed there was a reasonable prospect of his receiving a pardon, is irrelevant under section 24 of the Evidence Act. It cannot be used either against the person making the confession or against his co-accused. But where after making such a confession, the accused again makes a statement under sec 364 during the trial, in which after stating that he has now no hope of obtaining a pardon he affirms the confession previously made, such statement is relevant, and may be used against himself—Tara, 45 All 633 (639), 21 A.L.J. 585, 24 Cr.L.J. 785.

Instances of inducement, threat, etc.—"I will get you released if you speak the truth"—Dhurum Dutt, 8 WR 13; Hayat, 1882 P.R. 8; Kalpershad v. Fatehchand, 9 W.R. 16; "if you speak the truth, we would speak to the constable and arrange"—Thandraya, 26 Mad 38; "You had better tell the truth"—Uzeer, 10 Cal. 775; "You had better pay the money than go to jail and it would be better for you to tell the truth"—Navroji, 9 B.H.C.R. 358; "Tell me what you know about it; if you will not, I can do nothing for you, and I will send for the constable"—Mukherji, U.B.R. (1897-1901) 147; 'If you confess the truth, nothing will happen to you'—Luckoo, 5 N.W.P. H.C.R. 86, 'If you confess to the Magistrate, you will get off'—Ramdhan, 1 W.R. 24; 'Tell me what happened and I will take steps to get you off'—Rama, 3 Bom 12; 'It is of no use to deny it, for there are the man and the boy who will swear that they saw you do it'—Mukherji, U.B.R. (1897-1901) 147 "It would be better if you tell the truth"—Hashmat Khan, 36 Cr.L.J. 211, 152 I.C. 998, 1934 Cr.C. 643, A.I.R. 1934 Lah 417, 7 R.L. 348, 37 P.L.R. 25, 15 Lah 856.

Where a Zildar took the accused, a boy aged 16 years, to the Police and told him "You are a minor. You will be let off if you tell the truth before the Police just as you have done in our presence" and the Magistrate, before he recorded his confession, told him that he was not to allow any inducement to operate upon the mind in making the confession, such inducement would operate to defeat the confession made under sec 164, Cr. P. C., as it was not likely that the effect of the inducement had thereby been fully removed—Faiz Ahmad v Emp, 38 Cr.L.J. 27, 165 I.C. 880, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 855, 1936 Cr.C. 879, 9 R.L. 313.

What are not inducements, etc.—Exhortation to speak the truth—Gulab, 1894 P.R. 9; Jesha Bewa, 11 C.W.N. 804; holding out hopes of divine forgiveness—5 M.L.J. 29 (Journal); threatening ex-communication from caste for life—Ibid; "I know the whole thing"—Rango, 3 Bom.L.R. 404; "Take care, we know more than you think we know"; these words amount only to caution and not to a threat—Ibid.

The Committing Magistrate should take immediate steps to have the accused examined by a competent doctor when the accused retracted confession alleging that it was not voluntary but was extorted from him by gross torture by the police as a result of which he sustained a dislocated shoulder and two broken fingers—Gurdit Singh v. Emp, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 66, 41 P.L.R. 290, 181 I.C. 924, I.L.R. 1939 Lah. 216.

Sub-section (2):—There is a grave discrepancy between sec. 163 and sec. 164, Cr. P. C. Under sec. 163, Police Officers and other persons, which would include Magistrates, are prohibited from restraining accused persons from making a confession by coercion or otherwise where he is disposed to make a confession of his own free will. Under sec. 164, cl (3) a Magistrate is ordered to explain to the person making a confession that he is not bound to make a confession and that if he does so it may be used in evidence against him. It seems to be desirable that this discrepancy in the sections should be removed by the Legislature—Muhammad Bux v. Emp., 35 Cr.L.J. 1328 (1329), 151 I.C. 311, 1934 Cr.C. 828, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 103, 7 R.S. 50.

164. (1) Any Presidency Magistrate, any Magistrate of the first class and any Magistrate of the 2nd class specially empowered in this behalf by the Provincial Government may, if he is not a police-officer, record any statement or confession made to him in the course of an investigation under this Chapter or at any time afterwards before the commencement of the inquiry or trial.

(2) Such statements shall be recorded in such of the manners hereinafter prescribed for recording evidence as is, in his opinion, best fitted for the circumstances of the case. Such confessions shall be recorded and signed in the manner provided in section 364, and such statements or confessions shall then be forwarded to the Magistrate by whom the case is to be inquired into or tried.

(3) A Magistrate shall, before recording any such confession, explain to the person making it that he is not bound to make a confession and that if he does so it may be used as evidence against him, and no Magistrate shall record any such confession unless upon questioning the person making it, he has reason to believe that it was made voluntarily; and, when he records any confession, he shall make a memorandum at the foot of such record to the following effect :—

"I have explained to (name) that he is not bound to make a confession and that, if he does so, any confession he may make may be used as evidence against him and I believe that this confession was voluntarily made. It was taken in my presence and hearing, and was read over to the person making it and admitted by him to be correct, and it contains a full and true account of the statement made by him.

Magistrate.

Explanation.—It is not necessary that the Magistrate receiving and recording a confession of statement should be a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case.

Change:—The italicised words in sub-section (1) have been substituted for "Every Magistrate," and the italicised words in sub-section (3) have been added, by section 35 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923). The reasons have been thus stated :

"We think that confessions and statements should not be recorded under the section by third class Magistrates at all, or by second class Magistrate unless specially empowered. We consider that a statutory obligation should be laid on a Magistrate acting under the section to warn an accused person about to make a confession that the same may be used against him, and we think that the certificate prescribed by sub-section (3) should record the fact that the warning had been given"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922).

The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937,

509. Scope of section:—This section under the old law did not apply to the police in the town of Calcutta. Therefore it did not apply to a statement made by a person in custody to a Magistrate in Calcutta in the course of an investigation made by the Police in the town of Calcutta—Nilmadhab, 15 Cal 595 Nor did this section apply to the town of Bombay—Visram Babaji, 21 Bom 495

The present section has been made applicable to confessions recorded in Presidency towns, by reason of the reference to Presidency Magistrates at the beginning of the section. But it should be noted that even inspite of this amendment, the application of this section to Presidency towns is extremely limited. Sub-section (2) (a) of sec 1 of this Code expressly lays down that nothing contained in this Code, in the absence of any specific provision to the contrary, shall apply to the police in the town of Calcutta (or Bombay). The only sections in Chap XIV which are applicable to the Police of Calcutta (or Bombay) are sec 155 and sec 156 (3); and sec. 164 so far as Presidency towns are concerned applies only to confessions recorded under those two sections. That is, section 164 applies to confessions made in the course of investigations held by the Calcutta Police only where the police investigation is either an investigation in a non-cognizable case held under the orders of a Presidency Magistrate as contemplated by sec. 155, or is an investigation into a cognizable case held under the orders of a Presidency Magistrate as contemplated by section 156 (3)—Panch Kari, 52 Cal. 67, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 587, 86 I.C. 414, 29 C.W.N. 300, 26 Cr.L.J. 782. The Patna High Court, however, does not accept this narrow interpretation, and holds that a Presidency Magistrate is empowered to record a confession in Calcutta during a police investigation there in any case. The Amendment has been made in 1923 to allow a Presidency Magistrate to record a confession in Calcutta in the course of a police investigation; otherwise, the amendment is altogether meaningless. Section 1 bars the application of the Code to the Police; it does not bar the application of the Code to a Magistrate not being a police-officer—Nilmadhab, 96 I.C. 509, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 279, 5 Pat 171, 27 Cr.L.J. 957. Where an investigation is held outside Calcutta, and a Presidency Magistrate records a confession in Calcutta, this section undoubtedly applies—Nilmadhab, supra

This section applies only to statements recorded in investigations under Ch. XIV—Shafi Ahmed, 49 Bom 642 (652).

Where an incomplete chalan was put into Court by the Police and, after three witnesses had been examined, the Court took the statement of the accused under sec. 342, Cr. P. C., and, on his admission and plea of guilty, committed him inspite of the fact that some weeks later he had retracted, the High Court deprecated the attempt made by the Police to get over the mandatory provisions of law contained in sec. 164, Cr. P. C., and drew an inference that the confessional statement had been improperly induced from the mere fact that the Police did not have the confession recorded under sec. 164, Cr. P. C., but took an incomplete chalan into Court—Sullah v. Emp., 29 Cr.L.J. 697, 110 I.C. 329, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 724, 29 P.L.R. 388, 10 Lah.L.J. 311. But where there was no incomplete chalan and, although the accused had admittedly come from Police custody that day, he was before the Court for a considerable period and overwhelming evidence for the prosecution was recorded against him before his statement was taken, one cannot say that there is any cogent inference that his confession was in any way improperly induced. It was more likely to have been due to the fact that he had the intelligence to see that he had been caught red-handed and that the evidence which had been given against him in his presence was overwhelming—Molar v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 81, 178 I.C. 572, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 731.

It is a question whether a confession under this section can be recorded by the Magistrate after the case has been sent up to him for enquiry. There is also no law which authorizes the Magistrate to return the challan after he has taken cognizance of the case and fixed a date for its hearing. Where there were indications that the police took back the challan as a pretext to enable the Magistrate to record the statement of the accused under this section, it apparently being realized by the prosecuting

164. (1) Any Presidency Magistrate, any Magistrate of the first class and any Magistrate of the 2nd class specially empowered in this behalf by the Provincial Government may, if he is not a police-officer, record any statement or confession made to him in the course of an investigation under this Chapter or at any time afterwards before the commencement of the inquiry or trial.

(2) Such statements shall be recorded in such of the manners hereinafter prescribed for recording evidence as is, in his opinion, best fitted for the circumstances of the case. Such confessions shall be recorded and signed in the manner provided in section 364, and such statements or confessions shall then be forwarded to the Magistrate by whom the case is to be inquired into or tried.

(3) A Magistrate shall, before recording any such confession, explain to the person making it that he is not bound to make a confession and that if he does so it may be used as evidence against him, and no Magistrate shall record any such confession unless upon questioning the person making it, he has reason to believe that it was made voluntarily; and, when he records any confession, he shall make a memorandum at the foot of such record to the following effect :—

It was taken in my presence and hearing, and was read over to the person making it and admitted by him to be correct, and it contains a full and true account of the statement made by him.

Therefore it did not apply to a statement made by a person in custody to a Magistrate in Calcutta in the course of an investigation made by the Police in the town of Calcutta—Nilmadhab, 15 Cal 595. The present section has been made applicable to confessions recorded in Presidency towns, by reason of the reference to Presidency Magistrates at the beginning of the section. But their Lordships of the Privy Council do not say that an admission of incriminating facts made by an accused person to a Magistrate under sec. 164, Cr. P. C., or a statement made to the Court during the course of the trial is not admissible in evidence for what it is worth against the person who makes it under secs. 18 to 21, Evidence Act—Allahwarayo Daryakhan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Sind 53 (55), I.L.R. 1939 Kar. 800. See also Abdul Rahim v. King-Emp., 41 C.L.J. 474 and Ghulam Muhammad Khan v. Emp., 86 I.C. 814 (Pat.).

510. Who can record statement or confession:—The power to record statements and confessions under this section is given to Magistrates not being police-officers. Magistrates who are also police-officers (e.g., patels in Bombay) are not competent to record statements or confessions—Bhimu, 17 Bom. 485. So also, police-officers having magisterial powers have no power to record statements—Hurribole, 1 Cal. 207. Where a Tahsildar, having powers of a Magistrate and being invested by the Local Government with power to take cognizance of offences upon complaint or police-report, was conducting an inquiry on a complaint received, held that he must be deemed to have been doing so as a Magistrate and not as a police-officer—Gulabu, 35 All. 260, 11 A.L.J. 286.

A third class Magistrate has no power to record a statement under sec. 164. A statement so recorded by him is not evidence in a stage of judicial proceedings, and if it is considered afterwards before a Magistrate having jurisdiction and holding a preliminary inquiry, it will not furnish an alternative charge of giving false evidence in a judicial proceeding—Shettappa, 14 Bom.L.R. 753, 13 Cr.L.J. 709. A dying declaration need not be recorded by a Magistrate having powers to record statements under this section—Rahman, 32 Cr.L.J. 1118, 134 I.C. 117, 33 P.L.R. 8, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 14, 1932 Cr.R. 24, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 885; Chandgi, 120 I.C. 274, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 60, 31 Cr.L.J. 79. An Honorary Magistrate, who is a member of an independent Bench with third class powers, cannot record a confession or statement—Nur Singh, 29 Cal. 483. The ruling in Ghinua, 3 P.L.J. 291, 19 Cr.L.J. 135, in which it was held that an Honorary Magistrate of the third class not empowered to sit singly had nevertheless power to record a confession, is rendered obsolete by the present amendment.

Where a case comes before a first class Magistrate under secs. 157 and 159, he can depute a Sub-Deputy Magistrate to hold an investigation or a preliminary inquiry. The latter can, under the provisions of this section, record a statement of a witness made before him in the course of the police investigation, and therefore, this is admissible as a statement made in the course of an investigation—Harendra, 40 C.L.J. 313, 26 Cr.L.J. 307 (308).

A Magistrate who directs the police investigation is not incompetent to record a statement or confession under this section. On the other hand, it is the duty of the Magistrate who directs a police investigation or holds a preliminary inquiry under this Code to record statements under sec. 164; it is his duty to see that the accused confesses voluntarily, and to record his confession truly—Maisri, 5 S.L.R. 31, 12 Cr.L.J. 489, 12 I.C. 209. Where there are several accused in a case, one of whom is absconding, a Magistrate who commences the inquiry into the case of the present accused is not debarred from recording the confession of the absconding accused when arrested—Mohinder, 33 P.L.R. 891, 33 Cr.L.J. 97 (102), 135 I.C. 209, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 103, 1932 Cr.C. 123, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 81.

A confession or statement may be recorded by a Magistrate who afterwards conducts the preliminary inquiry or trial—Barindra, 37 Cal. 467, 14 C.W.N. 1114, 7 I.C. 359, 11 Cr.L.J. 453. A confession made to a Magistrate and recorded under this section is not inadmissible if the Magistrate thought proper, or if it so happened that he was the only Magistrate, to take the case and commit it to the Sessions Court—Lal Sheikh, 3 C.W.N. 387. The decision in Anuntram, 5 Cal. 954 is no longer good law.

511. "May record":—The language of this section leaves it optional to the Magistrate to record the confession or not as he thinks fit. He is not bound to record it even he be clearly of opinion that the person is willing to make a perfectly voluntary confession. If an accused person makes a confession during a police investigation, or before the commencement of the inquiry or trial, then it is open to a Magistrate of any of the classes specified in that section to record the confession, and if he does so, he is bound to record it in the manner laid down in the section. The mere reference to sec. 91, Evidence Act, contained in sec. 533, Cr. P. C., cannot be taken to imply that a Magistrate hearing an oral confession made by an accused person in the course of an investigation is bound to record the confession in the manner laid down in this section. The language of the section is "may record" not "shall record"—Sidheswar Nath, 36 Cr.L.J. 45, 152 I.C. 174, 1934 A.L.J. 178, A.I.R. 1934 All 351, 1934 Cr.C. 421; Feroz, 1918 P.R. 11; Maruti, 21 Bom.L.R. 1065, 21 Cr.L.J. 65, 54 I.C. 465, A.I.R. 1920 Bom 322 (Per Hayward, J., Shah, J., contra); Tangudupalli, 45 Mad. 230, 42 M.L.J. 37, 23 Cr.L.J. 680. See also Nga Thein Maung, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 350 (352), 37 Cr.L.J. 920, 164 I.C. 162, 1936 Cr.C. 703, 9 R.R. 64. For contra see Gulabu, 19 I.C. 307, 35 All. 260, 14 Cr.L.J. 211, 11 A.L.J. 286; Nathu, 118 I.C. 46, A.I.R. 1929 All. 855, 30 Cr.L.J. 867, Ind. Rul. 1929 All 814.

It is not obligatory on a Magistrate holding an investigation or preliminary inquiry under sec. 159, Cr. P. C., to record in writing a confession made to him by an accused person and such confession may be proved by the oral testimony of the Magistrate—Pedda, 69 I.C. 264, A.I.R. 1932 Mad 40, 45 Mad. 230, 23 Cr.L.J. 680, 14 M.L.W. 542, 1921 M.W.N. 779, 30 M.L.T. 107, 42 M.L.J. 37. A confession or an incriminating statement made in the presence of a Magistrate by an accused person while in police custody, who is not produced before the Magistrate with a view to record his confession, can be proved by oral testimony of the Magistrate when it has not been reduced to writing—Jag Raj, 129 I.C. 289, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 534, 32 Cr.L.J. 290, 1930 Cr.C. 682, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 177; see also Itwari, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 432 (436), 10 O.W.N. 923, 1933 Cr.C. 1317, 147 I.C. 113. But it is not at all fair to avoid the precautions laid down in secs. 164 and 364, Cr. P. C., and endeavour to prove oral confessions made to Magistrates some of whom had no power to record a confession at all. It may be legal—a matter which is somewhat doubtful—but no weight ought to be attached to confession so obtained—Lal Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Lah 707 (708), 164 I.C. 373, 1936 Cr.C. 736, 37 Cr.L.J. 910, 38 P.L.R. 881.

Where during the investigation of a criminal case a Magistrate is associated with the investigating officer, and in the presence of such Magistrate the accused points out places alleged to be connected with the crime and make admissions which do not lead to the discovery of any fact and the Magistrate does not record the admissions in accordance with the provisions of sec. 164, Cr. P. C., but makes a memorandum of the conduct and admissions of the accused, the oral evidence of the Magistrate is admissible to prove the admissions of the accused and the Magistrate can refresh his memory when under examination by referring to the memorandum under sec. 157 of the Indian Evidence Act. The fact that the Magistrate is empowered to record the confession of an accused person under sec. 164, Cr. P. C., would not affect the question of the admissibility of such evidence—Abdulla, 34 Cr.L.J. 1025, 145 I.C. 467, 34 P.L.R. 612, A.I.R. 1933 Lah 716, 14 Lah 290, 1933 Cr.C. 902 (F.B.); Mangal Singh, 36 Cr.L.J. 287 (289), 153 I.C. 121, 35 P.L.R. 349. For contra see Baghel Singh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1929 Lah 794, 31 Cr.L.J. 269, 1929 Cr.C. 426, 121 I.C. 497. The same weight cannot ordinarily be attached to such an oral confession as to one formally recorded with all necessary precautions under sec. 164, Cr. P. C. Confessions intended to be admitted in evidence against persons accused of criminal offences, should ordinarily be recorded with all the precautions and in the manner prescribed by sec. 164, Cr. P. C. If this salutary provision of the law is ignored in favour of an oral confession, the trial Court will be entitled to presume, unless satisfied to the contrary, that the reason for adopting the oral method is that the accused has declined to commit himself to a written confession of the nature contemplated by sec. 164. The result will be that in cases in which it is sought to rely on such an oral confession which has been subsequently

But their Lordships of the Privy Council do not say that an admission of incriminating facts made by an accused person to a Magistrate under sec. 164, Cr. P. If an accused person makes a confession during a police investigation, or before the commencement of the inquiry or trial, then it is open to a Magistrate of any of the classes specified in that section to record the confession, and if he does so, he is bound to record it in the manner laid down in the section. The mere reference to sec. 91, Evidence Act, contained in sec. 533, Cr. P. C., cannot be taken to imply that a Magistrate hearing an oral confession made by an accused person in the course of an investigation is bound to record the confession in the manner laid down in this section. The language of the section is "may record" not "shall record"—Sidheswar Nath, 36 Cr.L.J. 45, 152 I.C. 174, 1934 A.L.J. 178, A.I.R. 1934 All 351, 1934 Cr.C. 421; Feroz, 1918 P.R. 11; Maruti, 21 Bom.L.R. 1065, 21 Cr.L.J. 65, 54 I.C. 465, A.I.R. 1920 Bom 322 (Per Hayward, J, Shah, J, contra); Tangudupalli, 45 Mad. 230, 42 M.L.J. 37, 23 Cr.L.J. 680. See also Nga Thein Maung, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 350 (352), 37 Cr.L.J. 920, 164 I.C. 162, 1936 Cr.C. 703, 9 R.R. 64. For contra see Gulabu, 19 I.C. 307, 35 All. 260, 14 Cr.L.J. 211, 11 A.L.J. 286; Nathu, 118 I.C. 46, A.I.R. 1929 All. 855, 30 Cr.L.J. 867, Ind. Rul. 1929 All 814.

It is not obligatory on a Magistrate holding an investigation or preliminary inquiry under sec. 159, Cr. P. C., to record in writing a confession made to him by an accused person and such confession may be proved by the oral testimony of the Magistrate—Pedda, 69 I.C. 264, A.I.R. 1932 Mad 40, 45 Mad. 230, 23 Cr.L.J. 680, 14 M.L.W. 542, 1921 M.W.N. 779, 30 M.L.T. 107, 42 M.L.J. 37. A confession or an incriminating statement made in the presence of a Magistrate by an accused person while in police custody, who is not produced before the Magistrate with a view to record his confession, can be proved by oral testimony of the Magistrate when it has not been reduced to writing—Jag Raj, 129 I.C. 289, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 534, 32 Cr.L.J. 290, 1930 Cr.C. 682, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah 177; see also Itwan, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 432 (436), 10 O.W.N. 923, 1933 Cr.C. 1317, 147 I.C. 113. But it is not at all fair to avoid the precautions laid down in secs 164 and 364, Cr. P. C., and endeavour to prove oral confessions made to Magistrates some of whom had no power to record a confession at all. It may be legal—a matter which is somewhat doubtful—but no weight ought to be attached to confession so obtained—Lal Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Lah 707 (708), 164 I.C. 373, 1936 Cr.C. 736, 37 Cr.L.J. 940, 38 P.L.R. 881.

Where during the investigation of a criminal case a Magistrate is associated with the investigating officer, and in the presence of such Magistrate the accused points out places alleged to be connected with the crime and make admissions which do not lead to the discovery of any fact and the Magistrate does not record the admissions in accordance with the provisions of sec 164, Cr. P. C., but makes a memorandum of the conduct and admissions of the accused, the oral evidence of the Magistrate is admissible to prove the admissions of the accused and the Magistrate can refresh his memory when under examination by referring to the memorandum under sec. 157 of the Indian Evidence Act. The fact that the Magistrate is empowered to record the confession of an accused person under sec 164, Cr. P. C., would not affect the question of the admissibility of such evidence—Abdulla, 34 Cr.L.J. 1025, 145 I.C. 467, 34 P.L.R. 612, A.I.R. 1933 Lah 716, 14 Lah. 290, 1933 Cr.C. 902 (F.B.); Mangal Singh, 36 Cr.L.J. 287 (289), 153 I.C. 121, 35 P.L.R. 349. For contra see Baghel Singh v. Emp, A.I.R. 1929 Lah 794, 31 Cr.L.J. 269, 1929 Cr.C. 426, 121 I.C. 497. The same weight cannot ordinarily be attached to such an oral confession as to one formally recorded with all necessary precautions under sec 164, Cr. P. C. Confessions intended to be admitted in evidence against persons accused of criminal offences, should ordinarily be recorded with all the precautions and in the manner prescribed by sec. 164, Cr. P. C. If this salutary provision of the law is ignored in favour of an oral confession, the trial Court will be entitled to presume, unless satisfied to the contrary, that the reason for adopting the oral method is that the accused has declined to commit himself to a written confession of the nature contemplated by sec. 164. The result will be that in cases in which it is sought to rely on such an oral confession which has been subsequently retracted very little weight will be given to the oral confession unless there is independent evidence to corroborate the confession in such a way as to establish beyond doubt that the confession is a true statement which really connects the accused with the crime—Karam Singh, 37 Cr.L.J. 231 (232), 160 I.C. 111, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 8, 16 Lah. 454, 37 P.L.R. 745, 1936 Cr.C. 1. See also Lal Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 707 (708), 164 I.C. 373, 1936 Cr.C. 736, 37 Cr.L.J. 940, 38 P.L.R. 881.

The Calcutta High Court took a different view of law and held that the statement of the accused, whether it amounted to confession or not, should be recorded by the Magistrate as provided in sec. 164, Cr. P. C., and that the Magistrate's evidence regarding the unrecorded statement is inadmissible—Legal Remembrancer v. Lalit Mohan, 25 C.W.N. 788 (793), 22 Cr.L.J. 562, 49 Cal. 167, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 342, 62 I.C. 578, following Rajani, 8 C.W.N. 22 and Amiruddin, 45 Cal. 557 (564), 22 C.W.N. 213 and not following Bhairab, 2 C.W.N. 702 (715).

There is thus a conflict of judicial opinion on this point. In a very recent case, after reviewing the rulings of the different High Courts, their Lordships of the Privy Council has held that it can hardly be doubted that a Magistrate would not be obliged to record any confession made to him if, for example, it were that of a self-accusing madman or for any other reason the Magistrate thought it to be incredible or useless for the purpose of justice. Whether a Magistrate records any confession, is a matter of duty and discretion and not of obligation. On the matter of constructions secs 164 and 364 must be looked at and construed together, and it would be an unnatural construction to hold that any other procedure was permitted than that which is laid down with such minute particularity in the sections themselves. Sec. 164 is a section conferring powers on Magistrates and delimiting them. Therefore, a confessional statement not recorded in accordance with the procedure laid down in those sections is inadmissible in evidence and cannot be proved orally by the Magistrate or by the production of the memorandum made by him. Where matter can be made of record and therefore admissible as such, there are the strongest reasons of policy for supposing that the Legislature designed that it should be made available in that form and no other. Sec. 533, Cr. P. C., cannot cure this defect—Nazir Ahmad v. Emp., 40 C.W.N. 1221, 64 C.L.J. 445, 17 Lah. 629, 163 I.C. 881, 38 Bom.L.R. 987, 1936 O.W.N. 505, 1936 M.W.N. 745, 1936 O.L.R. 437, A.I.R. 1936 P.C. 253, 1936 A.L.R. 747, 63 I.A. 372, 9 R.P.C. 57, 1936 A.L.J. 895, 37 Cr.L.J. 897, 17 P.L.T. 594, 1936 Cr.C. 752, 71 M.L.J. 476, 44 M.L.W. 583, 19 N.L.J. 214, 39 P.L.R. 43 (P.C.); Nahru v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 642 (643), I.L.R. 1937 Nag. 268, 9 R.N. 281, 168 I.C. 962, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 220. See also Akbar Badr Din v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 907 (914), 40 P.L.R. 890, 177 I.C. 617, 11 R.L. 339, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 594; Ram Naresh v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 559 (563), 181 I.C. 646, A.I.R. 1939 All. 242, 1939 A.L.J. 107, I.L.R. 1939 All. 377; Harilal v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 433 (435), 187 I.C. 203, 1940 N.L.J. 286; Dinanath Ganpat Rai, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 186 (190), I.L.R. 1940 Nag. 232. From Nazir Ahmad's Case what is now clear is that in cases where a Magistrate has made no attempt to comply with the requirements of secs. 164 and 364, Cr. P. C., in recording the confession of an accused person, such a confession is not admissible in evidence. Where such an attempt has been made, but there is a formal defect in the procedure thereof, then it will become curable under sec. 533, Cr. P. C. Where, therefore, on being produced before a Magistrate for remand, the accused was asked whether he had anything to say and he replied, "I committed the offence, and I have nothing to say against a remand being granted", and the Magistrate made a note of it on the back of the application for remand without making any attempt to comply with the requirements of secs. 164 and 364, Cr. P. C., the confession was held inadmissible in evidence—Saw Min, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 219, 1939 R.L.R. 97, 40 Cr.L.J. 691, 182 I.C. 705, 12 R.R. 25. But a confession made by the accused to the Magistrate, though not recorded after observing the formalities prescribed by this section, can properly be admitted in evidence if the Magistrate was not investigating the case or any of the facts connected with the case—Nannamuthu Kannappan, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 138, 1939 M.W.N. 1132, 50 M.L.W. 784, 1939 M.Cr.C. 276, 41 Cr.L.J. 322, 186 I.C. 479.

The extra-judicial confession to a Magistrate must be wholly excluded in view of the Privy Council ruling in Nazir Ahmad v. Emp., supra; Ibrahim v. Emp., 38 Cr L J. 583 (585), 39 P.L.R. 419, 168 I.C. 745, 9 R.L. 669, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 208, I.L.R. 1937 Lah. 794. Though an extra-judicial confession to any ordinary person (other than a police officer) can be proved, such a confession cannot be proved at all if made to a Magistrate, unless the provisions of sec. 164, Cr. P. C., have been complied with; it will not help for a Magistrate to say that he did not intend to act under the provisions of sec. 164, Cr. P. C.—Kommonju Brahman, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 163 (169), 1939 P.W.N. 915, 41 Cr.L.J. 533, 188 I.C. 57, 19 Pat. 301.

This section must be strictly construed. The section enacts that the Magistrate must "record" any statement or confession "Recording" means, and must mean, writing down the confession. It does not mean merely filing it. Further it is to be noted that one of the essential rules is that the Magistrate should draw the attention of the confessing accused to the fact that there are no police present while the confession is being recorded, the reason being that there may be less risk that the confession is made under the influence of the police. If the confession is written down when the accused is under the control of the police and then handed to the Magistrate the reason for insisting upon this precaution is destroyed. The law enacts that a confession should be recorded by a Magistrate himself. When an accused is making an oral confession it is much easier for the Magistrate who records it to make up his mind whether that confession is voluntary or not. The written confession is inadmissible in evidence—Ram Baran, 34 Cr L J. 574 (575), 143 I.C. 318, A.I.R. 1933 All 356, 1933 A.L.J. 479, Ind Rul 1933 All 221, 55 All 426, 1933 Cr.C. 629.

512. Statement or Confession:—The word 'statement' means the statement of a witness and does not mean the statement of an accused person. This section does not provide for recording any statement of an accused person other than a confession, the reason is that the section relates to a stage of the case, viz., the Police-investigation stage, at which statements of the accused which are other than voluntary confessions and which are to be elicited by his examination are not intended to be obtained from him—Bhairab, 2 C.W.N. 702. In other words, this section provides for the recording of two classes of things, viz., (1) the statement of a person who appears before the Magistrate as a witness, and (2) the confession of a person accused of an offence—Malka, 2 Bom. 643; Andal, 5 S.L.R. 174, 13 Cr L J. 33. The Punjab Chief Court has however held that the distinction that is made in this section is between statements that are confessions and statements that are not; and not between persons by whom statements of either character are made; and this distinction is made merely to prescribe the different modes of recording (sub-sec 2); and that it is nowhere expressed or implied in this section that the statement of an accused person cannot be recorded unless it is a confession—Lalu, 1893 P.R. 2. The Calcutta High Court also has recently laid down that the word 'statement' is not limited to a statement made by a witness; a statement made by an accused and not amounting to a confession, is a statement within the meaning of this section—Abdul Rahim, 88 I.C. 1055, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 926, 41 C.L.J. 474, 26 Cr L J. 1279. See also Legal Remembrancer v. Lalit Mohan, 49 Cal. 167, 25 C.W.N. 788 (dissenting from 2 C.W.N. 702 above) where it is laid down that under this section there can be no distinction between a statement made by an accused and a confession made by him, and that a statement made by an accused that he had committed a murder must be recorded as provided by this section. The Patna High Court is also of opinion that this section contemplates a statement made by an accused person before a Magistrate, which is not a confession but is wholly of an exculpatory nature—Golam Md., 4 Pat. 327, 6 P.L.T. 593, 26 Cr L J. 878. The statement is certainly evidence of conduct—Lalu Dusadh, 29 Cr L J. 106 (111), 106 I.C. 698, 6 Pat. 747, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 162, 9 A.I.Cr.R. 379. It is clearly not the function of the Magistrate, when he is to record statements under this section, to reduce to writing what the persons placed before him say only if they make statements which the police expect them to make and otherwise to make no note of anything which they say—Nazir, 34 Cr.L.J. 489 (493), 143 I.C. 67, 1932 A.L.J. 1125, A.I.R. 1933 All. 31, 55 All. 91, Ind. Rul. 1933 All. 170, 1933 Cr.C. 42.

In recording a statement under sec. 164, Cr. P. C., a Magistrate is empowered to administer to the deponent an oath or solemn affirmation and the statement so recorded can form the subject of an alternative charge under the perjury sections of the Indian Penal Code. So on a person being offered a pardon under sec. 337, Cr. P. C., and, on his acceptance of that pardon, being placed before a Magistrate in order that his statement may be recorded, that Magistrate has the power to administer an oath or solemn affirmation to him—Parmanand, 34 Cr.L.J. 469, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 321, 1933 Cr.C. 564, 142 I.C. 776, 14 Lah. 507, 34 P.L.R. 421; Amar Singh, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 796 (799), 40 Cr.L.J. 513, 181 I.C. 509, 40 P.L.R. 758, I.L.R. 1939 Lah. 38.

512A. Statement of a witness:—A statement made by a witness under sec. 164, Cr. P. C., can be used for the purpose of cross-examining him and discrediting his evidence in the Sessions Court. The statement is, however, not substantive evidence—Harnam, A.I.R. 1935 Bom. 26, 36 Bom.L.R. 1117; Karuppana Pillai, 28 Cr.L.J. 279, 100 I.C. 359, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 1112. A statement made under this section behind the back of the accused cannot be properly used as evidence against him. The only object in recording such statement is to obtain a hold over the witness—Puttu, 27 I.C. 195, 17 O.C. 363, 16 Cr.L.J. 132, 1 O.L.J. 753; Manni, 32 Cr.L.J. 48, 127 I.C. 878; 7 O.W.N. 736, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 406, Ind. Rul. 1930 Oudh 494, 6 Luck. 210, 1930 Cr.C. 946. A statement of a witness obtained under this section always raises a suspicion that it has not been voluntarily made. The section is not intended to enable the Police to obtain a statement from some person and as it were to put a seal on that statement by sending in that person to a Magistrate practically under custody, to be examined before the judicial inquiry or trial, and, therefore, compromised in his evidence when judicial proceedings are regularly taken—Manu Chik, 39 Cr.L.J. 635 (639), 175 I.C. 716, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 290, following Jadub Das, 27 Cal. 295 (300), 4 C.W.N. 129.

It is hardly desirable that witnesses should be pinned down by statements under sec. 164, Cr. P. Code. The Sessions Judge should not admit them under sec. 288, Cr. P. C., without making proper enquiry. The very fact that such statements are recorded under sec. 164 leads to a presumption on the showing of the prosecution itself that the witnesses are weak. At the same time sec. 164 is not confined to confessions of the accused. If then the Police take the risk, and their action is not outside the law, it is difficult to see how the Courts can prevent or discourage their so doing—Jehangir Ardeshir Cama, 28 Cr.L.J. 1012 (1015), 106 I.C. 100, 29 Bom.L.R. 996, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 501, 8 A.L.Cr.R. 324.

A statement by a witness recorded by a Magistrate under this section is admissible in evidence to corroborate the statement made by that witness before the committing Magistrate from which the witness resiled in Sessions Court—Velliah Kone, 45 Mad. 766; Manarali, 60 Cal. 1339, 147 I.C. 1203, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 124, 37 C.W.N. 1066 (1068), 58 C.L.J. 66, 1934 Cr.C. 169, 35 Cr.L.J. 567; Mathura Tewari, 8 Pat. 625, 120 I.C. 37, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 343, 1929 Cr.C. 155, 30 Cr.L.J. 1136, 10 P.L.T. 177, Ind. Rul. 1929 Pat. 677; Emp. v. Lalji Rai, 37 Cr.L.J. 235 (238), 160 I.C. 181, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 11, 1936 Cr.C. 6, 16 P.L.T. 730. See Note 898. The provision contained in sec. 145 of the Indian Evidence Act relates to cross-examination as to previous statements in writing, but does not militate in any way against such previous statements being used by way of corroboration of statements put in under sec. 288, Cr. P. C., which are substantive evidence in the case before the Court of Sessions. The statements under sec. 164, Cr. P. C., are admissible in evidence although they were not put in strictly under sec. 145 of the Indian Evidence Act—Manarali, supra. But see Mahomed Khan, 32 Cr.L.J. 172 (173), 128 I.C. 673, A.I.R. 1930 Sind 308, 1930 Cr.C. 1145, Ind. Rul. 1931 Sind 1.

It is not necessary to call the Magistrate to prove that the witnesses to be cross-examined are the persons who made statements which were recorded under sec. 164, Cr. P. Code. The records of such statements are presumed to be genuine (see sec. 80 Evidence Act) and the fact that the person who made a statement under sec. 164, Cr. P. C., is the person in Court can be proved by the Police Officer who had the statement recorded—Sadulla v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 864, 177 I.C. 32, 40 P.L.R. 752, 11 R.L. 276, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 477.

Approver:—Once the approver has accepted a tender of pardon he stands on the same footing as any other witness with the exception that he is liable to forfeit his tender of pardon if he does not comply with the conditions on which the tender was made. There is no legal bar to his examination like any other witness under this section—Emp. v. Hussaina, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 868, 1933 Cr.C. 1113, 146 I.C. 461, 35 Cr.L.J. 111, following Emp. v. Parmanand, 34 Cr.L.J. 469, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 321, 1933 Cr.C. 564, Ind. Rul. 1933 Lah. 303, 34 P.L.R. 421, 14 Lah. 507 and A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 90, and dissenting from Emp. v. Nga Bo Gyi, A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 286, 89 I.C. 708, 26 Cr.L.J. 1936, 3 Rang. 224. See also Amar Singh, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 796 (799), 40 P.L.R. 758 and Horilal v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 433 (436, 437), 187 I.C. 203, 1940 N.L.J. 286 in Note 963A.

Confessions made by the approvers are not substantive evidence, but may be used only for the purpose of contradicting or corroborating their depositions in Court—Nitai Chandra Jana v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 852 (864), 170 I.C. 201, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 433, 10 R.C. 98 (S.B.).

Copy:—An accused is undoubtedly entitled to inspect statements of prosecution witnesses recorded under this section. Such statements can be used by the prosecution for the purpose of corroborating the witness. They can likewise be used by the defence for the purpose of contradicting such witness. A Magistrate should direct copies of the statements under this section to be given to the accused on payment by them of the usual fees and in any case should allow the Advocate for the defence to inspect those statements—Bashir-ud-Din, 33 Cr.L.J. 752, 139 I.C. 330, A.I.R. 1932 All. 327, 1932 Cr.C. 306, Ind. Rul. 1932 All. 554; Ghulam Nabi, 30 Cr.L.J. 760, 117 I.C. 377, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 429, Ind. Rul. 1929 Lah. 649, Hari Chand, 32 Cr.L.J. 253, 129 I.C. 193, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 59, 1931 Cr.C. 139, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 129, where it was also held that the proposition, that a statement recorded by a Magistrate under sec. 164, Cr. P. C., could not be seen by the accused until after the witness concerned had been examined-in-chief, could not be accepted. There can be no doubt that these statements are public documents within the meaning of sec. 74, Evidence Act. That being so, the accused is entitled to copies of these documents, even when the Magistrate has not recorded evidence—Bherumal Khanchand v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Sind. 303, 171 I.C. 993.

It is plain from the provisions of sec. 164 (2), Cr. P. C., that a record of a statement made under that section forms part of the proceedings before the Court at the subsequent trial. It is an elementary principle of natural justice which needs no authority that an accused person shall have free access at any time during the trial to all records which are before the Court. The Judge should not decline to allow the pleaders for the defence to see the records of statements under sec. 164, Cr. P. C., or to cross-examine the witnesses thereon—Brahmayya v. The King, 40 Cr.L.J. 265 (268), 179 I.C. 783, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 442.

513. At what stage can confession be recorded:—A statement or confession must be recorded in the course of an investigation under this chapter or at any time afterwards, but before the commencement of the inquiry or trial. Therefore, where the Magistrate recorded confessions before he took cognizance of the case and before the examination of the prosecution witnesses began, it was held that the confessions were duly recorded under this section—Barindra, 37 Cal. 467. This section refers to a confession or statement recorded during an inquiry before the Police and not during an inquiry by the Magistrate. Therefore, where during an inquiry under section 202, the Magistrate recorded a statement made by a person against whom the complaint was filed, it was held that the statement did not fall under this section.

Such a statement was not admissible against the accused without further proof—Sat Naram, 32 Cal 1085 (1089). A confession can be recorded only when, in the course of a police enquiry under Chap. XIV, it is discovered that a certain person who has been definitely charged with a certain particular offence is willing to make an incriminating statement in respect of that offence. Where no police investigation was pending against the accused and he was produced on the allegation that he was in the habit of committing forgeries and was willing to make a statement to that effect, without even a written complaint, his confession cannot be legally recorded for the purpose of discovering from it grounds for subsequently bringing a specific charge of forgery in respect of a particular document—Sheo Prasad, 36 Cr.L.J. 927, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 416, 1935 O.W.N. 722, 156 I.C. 231; Hari Krishna, 36 Cr.L.J. 1007 (1011), A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 477, 156 I.C. 819, 1935 O.W.N. 781, 1935 O.L.R. 441. A Magistrate should not record a confession under this section after the case has been sent up to him for enquiry, although the challan was taken back as incomplete—Pahlwan, 31 Cr.L.J. 533, 123 I.C. 540, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 454. Where the Magistrate commenced an enquiry against one accused, and then an absconding accused was arrested and his confession recorded, but the prosecution asked for an adjournment to carry on an investigation (by the police) into the truth of the confession, whereupon the Magistrate thought it proper to have the inquiry carried on by another Magistrate, and the proceedings were taken de novo by another Magistrate who committed the accused for trial, held that though the confession was recorded after the inquiry was commenced in respect of another accused, still so far as the confessing accused was concerned, it was recorded before any inquiry was commenced into his case; moreover, it was recorded at a time when investigation had not ceased, because further investigation was necessary (by the police) into the truth of the confession. The confession was therefore properly recorded—Mihinder, 33 P.L.R. 891, 33 Cr.L.J. 97 (101, 102).

514. Procedure:—A Magistrate should not, before recording a confession, look into a police report to see what the accused had stated to the police—Jogjiban, 13 C.W.N. 861, 10 Cr.L.J. 125.

The Magistrate should not hold out any inducement. Where after the prisoner had made a new confessional statement, he was told by the Magistrate that if he stated all that he knew, he would then be examined as an approver and witness, it was held that the conduct of the Magistrate was highly improper—In re Kosa Govindan, 2 Weir 137. See also Tara, 45 All. 633 cited under sec. 163. But unless this inducement was actually held out to the accused by the Magistrate or by some person in authority, the mere fact that the accused was under an impression that if he confessed he would be made an approver, would not make the confession bad. The mere thought in the mind of the accused would not affect the admissibility of the confession—Nilmadhab, 5 Pat. 171, 27 Cr.L.J. 957.

The Magistrate must not put any question to the accused tending to incriminate him—In re Rayappan, 2 Weir 136.

The Government rules, salutary as they are, are intended for the guidance of Magistrates but they have not the effect of law and the mere omission of compliance in any particular respect is not per se sufficient to rule out the confession, if there has been no breach of the provision of this section, which lays down the law on the subject and if there are grounds sufficient to satisfy the Court and to induce it to believe that the confession is voluntary—Nikbar, 34 Cr.L.J. 838 (840), 144 I.C. 769, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 299, 10 O.W.N. 642, 1933 Cr.C. 669. But see Daulat Ram, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 315 (318), 8 Luck 518, 35 Cr.L.J. 10, 146 I.C. 465, 1933 Cr.C. 698, 10 O.W.N. 466. See also Note 517.

A statement cannot be said to be properly recorded under this section if a police-officer is present at the time and is allowed to put questions to the accused—Indarsain, 21 Cr.L.J. 418 (Lah.); Jogjiban, 12 C.W.N. 861, 10 Cr.L.J. 125. "It is not proper to allow the police-officer who brought the prisoner to be present while the confession is being recorded by a Muharrir and to suggest questions to be put to the confessing prisoner"—Cal. G. R. & C. O., page 8; Ramanand, 1885 A.W.N. 221.

There is no warrant or justification for the intervention of a third party (e.g. police-officer or another Magistrate) as the questioner, directly or indirectly, of a confessing prisoner—Jogiban, supra.

The Magistrate should not hand over the accused to the investigating officer who was in attendance outside his room and record his confession after he had been with the police officer for a few minutes. A confession taken by a Magistrate in jail with a police officer in the next room and subsequently retracted, could not acted upon unless supported by very good corroboration—Indra, 32 Cr.L.J. 818, 132 I.C. 185, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 408, Ind Rul 1931 Lah 537, 1931 Cr.C. 648, following Sheikh Sohali, 5 I.C. 773, 11 C.L.J. 723, 11 Cr.L.J. 247.

Confessions should be recorded in open Court in the day time. It is improper to record the confession at 9 P.M. on a winter night within the thana compound. If the Court is then closed owing to holidays, some other place should be selected—Ranbir, 33 P.L.R. 241, 33 Cr.L.J. 242 (250); Jahana, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 98 (99), 38 P.L.R. 791, 166 I.C. 1003, 38 Cr.L.J. 338; Amar Singh, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 746, 39 P.L.R. 453, 173 I.C. 105; Kishan Chand Kewal Ram, 39 Cr.L.J. 448 (451), 174 I.C. 449, 10 R.Pesh. 64, A.I.R. 1938 Pesh. 5. A Magistrate acts improperly in recording the confession at a late hour in night (viz., at 11-30 P.M.) after the accused had been subjected to interrogation by a police-officer for 3 or 4 hours, and had broken down under the continued questioning—Pramatha, 30 C.L.J. 503, 21 Cr.L.J. 266. But, of course, the fact of the confession being recorded late at night, is by itself not a sufficient proof against its voluntariness—Abdul Salim, 49 Cal. 573 (598). The Patna, Lahore and Rangoon High Courts hold that the Code does not contain any provision that the confession must be recorded in open Court; and therefore a Magistrate does not act illegally if he brings the accused to his house and records the confession there—Nilmadhab, 5 Pat. 171, 27 Cr.L.J. 957; Ghulam, 36 Cr.L.J. 683, 155 I.C. 265, 35 P.L.R. 746, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 675, 1934 Cr.C. 1001; Maung Tha Ka Do, 37 Cr.L.J. 280 (282), 160 I.C. 292, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 491, 1935 Cr.C. 1266.

If the confession is a lengthy one, and cannot be finished in one day, the Magistrate is competent to record the confession piece-meal from day to day. But in such a case the Magistrate should not, during the period of confession, return the accused to the custody of the police at night—Nilmadhab, 5 Pat. 171, 27 Cr.L.J. 957. See Panchkauri in Note 516.

Power to administer oath—The person making a statement under this section is a witness within the meaning of sec. 5 of the Oaths Act, and therefore one to whom oath might be administered, and a charge of perjury can be framed under sec. 193, I. P. C., against the person making a false statement on oath under this section—Alagu, 16 Mad. 421 (423); Tasaddak, 1908 A.W.N. 73; Suppu Tevan, 29 Mad. 89 (90); Parmanand, 142 I.C. 776, Ind Rul 1933 Lah. 303, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 321, 34 P.L.R. 421, 1933 Cr.C. 564, 14 Lah. 507, 34 Cr.L.J. 469, Abdul Gam, 32 Cr.L.J. 985, 133 I.C. 55, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 763, 1931 Cr.C. 1067, Ind. 515. Retracted confession:—It cannot be laid down as an inflexible rule that a confession made and subsequently retracted by a prisoner, cannot be accepted as evidence of his guilt without independent corroborative evidence. The weight to be attached to such a confession must depend on the circumstances under which the confession was originally made and the circumstances under which it was retracted including the reasons given by the prisoner for its retraction. It is unsafe for a Court to rely on and act on a confession which has been retracted unless after a consideration of the whole of the evidence in the case, the Court is in a position to come to the unhesitating conclusion that the confession is true, that is to say, usually

The Court is entitled to read and look at a confession although it is retracted but it should not give the same credence to it that it should have done if it had not been retracted—Emp. v. Bhawani, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 561 (566), 39 C.W.N. 334, 62 Cal. 433 (S.B.). See also Purnendu Sekher Guha, 63 C.L.J. 232. An accused person can lawfully be convicted on his own confession even when it has later been retracted if the Court is satisfied of its truth—Nga Po Aung, 38 Cr.L.J. 948 (949), 170 I.C. 645, 10 R.R. 101, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 264. As a rule of prudence a retracted confession should not be the basis of a conviction unless it is substantially corroborated by independent evidence. The object for looking for corroboration is to find out how far the confession is true and whether it can be acted upon for the purposes of a conviction. The best test is whether the story as set forth in the confession is consistent, natural and plausible—Manu Chik, 39 Cr.L.J. 635 (637), 175 I.C. 716, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 290. If a confession is made and is not withdrawn, that may furnish the strongest possible evidence of guilt of an accused, because unless there is something to raise a different inference what a man says about his own actions and his own intentions, must be even more potent evidence against him than what others may say as to that man's intentions. Therefore, normally a confession of guilt is the most conclusive evidence which one can have. But if that confession is "retracted", to use the word which has almost become a word of art, then it is certainly desirable, if not absolutely necessary, that there should be some corroboration of what the accused has said about himself even in respect of his own actions. But an accused person cannot get rid of a statement merely by saying that he retracts it. He cannot get rid of it by saying that he withdraws it—Purnananda Das Gupta v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 65 (74), 68 C.L.J. 206, 179 I.C. 506, I.L.R. (1939) 1 Cal. 1, 40 Cr.L.J. 199. It is now well settled that a confession, though retracted, is admissible against the person making it, provided that the Court is satisfied that it was voluntarily made—Maroti Jago v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 230, 1940 N.L.J. 210, 188 I.C. 146, 41 Cr.L.J. 553.

When a conviction is sought to be based on the confession of a co-accused together with corroborative evidence, there is no rule that such corroborative evidence cannot be used unless it is sufficient, if believed, itself to support a conviction. It is a rule of prudence, if not of law, that against a co-accused a confession can carry no weight unless it is substantially corroborated by good evidence from other sources—Sadasibo, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 35 (38), 1938 P.W.N. 754, 19 P.L.T. 801, 178 I.C. 103, 39 Cr.L.J. 997, 18 Pat. 82. A conviction on the confession of a co-accused alone would be bad in law—Lalit Mohan, 38 Cal. 559 (588), 10 I.C. 582, 12 Cr.L.J. 286, 15 C.W.N. 593; Nitai Chandra v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 433 (445), 38 Cr.L.J. 852, 170 I.C. 201, 10 R.C. 98. When the substantive evidence is not sufficient to establish a prima facie case against the accused, it is not permissible to use the confession of a co-accused under sec. 30, Evidence Act, as if it were itself substantive evidence, which it is not. If there is relevant evidence bearing on the accused's complicity in a particular crime the confession of a co-accused may be taken into consideration to lend assurance to

it. It can in no case be used to fill up the gap in the prosecution evidence—Maroti Jago v. Emp., supra.

A confession cannot be used against the co-accused where it is of an exculpatory nature and subsequently retracted—Ramsidh Rai, 39 Cr.L.J. 725 (727), 176 I.C. 530, 11 R.P. 79, 4 B.R. 724, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 352; *Bhadeswar Sardar v. (N.S.) 851; Abdul v. King-Emp., 41 C.L.J. 474 (478); Abdul Jalil Khan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1930 All. 746; C. E. Emp., 120 I.C. 210, 31 Cr.L.J. 15, 13 A.I.Cr.R. 157, 1929 Cr.C. 673, A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 350; Kunja Subudhi v. Emp., 116 I.C. 770, 8 Pat. 289, 10 P.L.T. 549, 30 Cr.L.J. 675, 1929 Cr.C. 62, 13 A.I.Cr.R. 143, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 275; Wahid Bux v. Emp., 120 I.C. 81, 1929 Cr.C. 678, 30 Cr.L.J. 1121, A.I.R. 1929 Sind. 250; Diwan Dhimar v. Emp., 91 I.C. 1002, 9 N.L.J. 80, 27 Cr.L.J. 186, A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 229. The law does not go so far as to require that the confession should claim for its maker the leading part in the crime—Sadasiba, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 35 (37), 1938 P.W.N. 754, 19 P.L.T. 801, 178 I.C. 130, 39 Cr.L.J. 997, 18 Pat. 82. But it can be admitted against its maker—Abdul v. King-Emp., supra; Ghulam Muhammad Khan v. Emp., 86 I.C. 814 (Pat.); Diwan Dhimar v. Emp., supra.

The evidence of an accomplice cannot corroborate a retracted confession—Ramani, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 146, 1933 Cr.C. 223, 143 I.C. 797, 34 Cr.L.J. 638. See also Latafat, 33 C.W.N. 58 (60).

One confession cannot corroborate another confession—Takanath, 10 C.W.N. xvi.

Evidence brought in under sec. 283, Cr. P. C., cannot be accepted as proper corroboration of a confession made to a Magistrate and retracted at the Sessions trial—Jadub Das, 27 Cal. 295 (307), 4 C.W.N. 129.

A retracted confession can be used to contradict the approver who turns hostile, but it is not substantive evidence and cannot be used to contradict the co-accused's confession—Baliram Singh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 295 (300), 1939 N.L.J. 442, 184 I.C. 274.

In cases where the sole evidence against the accused is that of a retracted confession, if such a confession is relied on, it must be relied on as a whole and not only in part—Durjan v. Emp., 31 Cr.L.J. 300, 121 I.C. 550, A.I.R. 1930 All. 192, 1930 Cr.C. 84. Where there is no other evidence to show affirmatively that any portion of the exculpatory element in the confession is false, the Court must accept or reject the confession as a whole and cannot accept only the inculpatory element while rejecting the exculpatory element as inherently incredible—Balmakund v. Emp., 52 All. 1011, 129 I.C. 258, A.I.R. 1931 All. 1, 1931 Cr.C. 1, 32 Cr.L.J. 362, 1930 A.L.J. 1481, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 130, L.R. 12 All. 33 (Cr.) (F.B.); Sher Gul v. Emp., 36 Cr.L.J. 966, 156 I.C. 529, 7 R.L. 918, 37 P.L.R. 492, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 671, 1935 Cr.C. 1001; Kala Mohammad Akbar v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 150, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 534 (535), 185 I.C. 274. The confession made by an accused person is a document which should be taken into consideration with the utmost possible care. It is not right for the Court to put reliance on a portion of the statement made by the accused person which would implicate him in the commission of a crime and to disregard another portion simply because it would go against the prosecution story—Abdul Subhan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 All. 46 (51), 1939 A.L.J. 966, 41 Cr.L.J. 258, 186 I.C. 192. See also Jadeo v. Emp., 38 I.C. 740, 18 Cr.L.J. 356, 15 A.L.J. 15. This would evidently show that where there is evidence to show that any portion of the exculpatory statement is inherently improbable, the Court is at liberty to reject that portion of the statement which appears to it to be so improbable and to act only upon that part of the statement which is inculpatory—Ghulam Nabi v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 185, 179 I.C. 237, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 850, 40 P.L.R. 265. See also Nihal Singh v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 576, 183 I.C. 326, A.I. 1940 Lah. 157 (158), 42 P.L.R. 1; Deeyam Chinnayya, 41 Cr.L.J. 461 (462), 187 I.C. 481, 1940 M.W.N. 169. Where there is no other evidence then the confession unless the confession is corroborated by credible independent evidence. A retracted confession should carry practically no weight as against a person other than its maker—Biswar, 26 C.W.N. 1010 (1014), 24 Cr.L.J. 145, 71 I.C. 497, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 217. See also Krishna, 34 Cr.L.J. 896, 145 I.C. 133, 35 Bom.L.R. 371, A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 23, 1933 Cr.C. 653; Ghirrao, 34 Cr.L.J. 1009 (1013), 145 I.C. 470, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 265, 1933 Cr.C. 592, 10 O.W.N. 1108; Housabai, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 553 (556), 34 Bom.L.R. 1240, 1932 Cr.C. 785, 140 I.C. 740, 56 Bom. 542, 34 Cr.L.J. 73; Iltwar, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 432, 10 O.W.N. 923, 1933 Cr.C. 1317, 147 I.C. 113; Jahanjiri, 35 Cr.L.J. 1180 (1204), A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 230, 150 I.C. 1056; Nahnun, 35 Cr.L.J. 1390, 151 I.C. 716, 36 P.L.R. 2, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 716, 1934 Cr.C. 1025; Shyam Lal, 36 Cr.L.J. 1086. See also Manji, A.I.R. 1936 All. 388, Kalijiban, 37 Cr.L.J. 775, 163 I.C. 41, 63 C.L.J. 232, 1936 Cr.C. 532, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 316 (319), 63 Cal. 1053 and Emp. v. Gostho Sardar, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 407 (408), 1936 Cr.C. 670, 165 I.C. 438, 37 Cr.L.J. 1149. See also Ramelu, 39 P.L.R. 815. The Court is entitled to read and look at a confession although it is retracted but it should not give the same credence to it that it should have done if it had not been retracted—Emp. v. Bhawan, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 561 (566), 39 C.W.N. 334, 62 Cal. 433 (S.B.). See also Purnendu Sekher Guha, 63 C.L.J. 232. An accused person can lawfully be convicted on his own confession even when it has later been retracted if the Court is satisfied of its truth—Nga Po Aung, 38 Cr.L.J. 948 (949), 170 I.C. 645, 10 R.R. 101, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 264. As a rule of prudence a retracted confession should not be the basis of a conviction unless it is substantially corroborated by independent evidence. The object for looking for corroboration is to find out how far the confession is true and whether it can be acted upon for the purposes of a conviction. The best test is whether the story as set forth in the confession is consistent, natural and plausible—Manu Chik, 39 Cr.L.J. 635 (637), 175 I.C. 716, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 290. If a confession is made and is not withdrawn, that may furnish the strongest possible evidence of guilt of an accused, because unless there is something to raise a different inference what a man says about his own actions and his own intentions, must be even more potent evidence against him than what others may say as to that man's intentions. Therefore, normally a confession of guilt is the most conclusive evidence which one can have. But if that confession is "retracted", to use the word which has almost become a word of art, then it is certainly desirable, if not absolutely necessary, that there should be some corroboration of what the accused has said about himself even in respect of his own actions. But an accused person cannot get rid of a statement merely by saying that he retracts it. He cannot get rid of it by saying that he withdraws it—Purnananda Das Gupta v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 65 (74), 68 C.L.J. 206, 179 I.C. 506, I.L.R. (1939) 1 Cal. 1, 40 Cr.L.J. 199. It is now well settled that a confession, though retracted, is admissible against the person making it, provided that the Court is satisfied that it was voluntarily made—Maroti Jago v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 230, 1940 N.L.J. 210, 188 I.C. 146, 41 Cr.L.J. 553.

When a conviction is sought to be based on the confession of a co-accused together with corroborative evidence, there is no rule that such corroborative evidence cannot be used unless it is sufficient, if believed, itself to support a conviction. It is a rule of prudence, if not of law, that against a co-accused a confession can carry no weight unless it is substantially corroborated by good evidence from other sources—Sadasibo, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 35 (38), 1938 P.W.N. 754, 19 P.L.T. 801, 178 I.C. 103, 39 Cr.L.J. 997, 18 Pat. 82. A conviction on the confession of a co-accused alone would be bad in law—Lalit Mohan, 38 Cal. 559 (588), 10 I.C. 582, 12 Cr.L.J. 286, 15 C.W.N. 593; Nitai Chandra v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 433 (445), 38 Cr.L.J. 852, 170 I.C. 201, 10 R.C. 98. When the substantive evidence is not sufficient to establish a prima facie case against the accused, it is not permissible to use the confession of a co-accused under sec. 30, Evidence Act, as if it were itself substantive evidence, which it is not. If there is relevant evidence bearing on the accused's complicity in a particular crime the confession of a co-accused may be taken into consideration to lend assurance to

it. It can in no case be used to fill up the gap in the prosecution evidence—Maroti Jago v. Emp., supra.

A confession cannot be used against the co-accused where it is of an exculpatory nature and subsequently retracted—Ramsidh Rai, 39 Cr.L.J. 725 (727), 176 I.C. 530, 11 R.P. 79, 4 B.R. 724, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 352; Bhadreswar Sardar v. Emp., 29 Cr.L.J. 527 (528), 109 I.C. 351, 47 C.L.J. 526, 32 C.W.N. 731, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 416, 10 A.I.Cr.R. 219, following Gauraj, 2 All. 444 (446), 4 Ind. Jur. 581, 1 Ind. Dec. (NS) 851; Abdul v. Emp., 116 I.C. 770, 8 Pat. 289, 10 P.L.T. 549, 30 Cr.L.J. 675, 1929 Cr.C. 62, 13 A.I.Cr.R. 143, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 275; *Wahid Bux v. The law does not go so far as to require that the confession should claim for its maker the leading part in the crime—Sadasibo, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 35 (37), 1938 P.W.N. 754, 19 P.L.T. 801, 178 I.C. 130, 39 Cr.L.J. 997, 18 Pat. 82. But it can be admitted against its maker—Abdul v. King-Emp., supra; Ghulam Muhammad Khan v. Emp., 86 I.C. 814 (Pat.); Dewan Dhimar v. Emp., supra.

The evidence of an accomplice cannot corroborate a retracted confession—Ramani, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 146, 1933 Cr.C. 223, 143 I.C. 797, 34 Cr.L.J. 638. See also Latafat, 33 C.W.N. 58 (60).

One confession cannot corroborate another confession—Takanath, 10 C.W.N. xvi.

Evidence brought in under sec 288, Cr P C, cannot be accepted as proper corroboration of a confession made to a Magistrate and retracted at the Sessions trial—Jadub Das, 27 Cal. 295 (307), 4 C.W.N. 129.

A retracted confession can be used to contradict the approver who turns hostile, but it is not substantive evidence and cannot be used to contradict the co-accused's confession—Baliram Singh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 295 (300), 1939 N.L.J. 442, 184 I.C. 274.

In cases where the sole evidence against the accused is that of a retracted confession, if such a confession is relied on, it must be relied on as a whole and not only in part—Durjan v. Emp., 31 Cr.L.J. 300, 121 I.C. 550, A.I.R. 1930 All. 192, 1930 Cr.C. 84. Where there is no other evidence to show affirmatively that any portion of the exculpatory element in the confession is false, the Court must accept or reject the confession as a whole and cannot accept only the inculpatory element while rejecting the exculpatory element as inherently incredible—Balmakund v. Emp., 52 All. 1011, 129 I.C. 258, A.I.R. 1931 All. 1, 1931 Cr.C. 1, 32 Cr.L.J. 362, 1930 A.L.J. 1481, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 130, L.R. 12 All. 33 (Cr.) (F.B.); Sher Gul v. Emp., 36 Cr.L.J. 966, 156 I.C. 529, 7 R.L. 918, 37 P.L.R. 492, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 671, 1935 Cr.C. 1001; Kala Mohammad Akbar v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 150, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 534 (535), 185 I.C. 274. The confession made by an accused person is a document which should be taken into consideration with the utmost possible care. It is not right for the Court to put reliance on a portion of the statement made by the accused person which would implicate him in the commission of a crime and to disregard another portion simply because it would go against the prosecution story—Abdul Subhan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 All. 46 (51), 1939 A.L.J. 966, 41 Cr.L.J. 258, 186 I.C. 192. See also Jadeo v. Emp., 38 I.C. 740, 18 Cr.L.J. 356, 15 A.L.J. 15. Thus would evidently show that where there is evidence to show that any portion of the exculpatory statement is inherently improbable, the Court is at liberty to reject that portion of the statement which appears to it to be so improbable and to act only upon that part of the statement which is inculpatory—Ghulam Nabi v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 185, 179 I.C. 237, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 850, 40 P.L.R. 265. See also Nihal Singh v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 576, 188 I.C. 326, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 157 (158), 42 P.L.R. 1; Deyyam Chinnayya, 41 Cr.L.J. 461 (462), 187 I.C. 481, 1940 M.W.N. 169. Where there is no other evidence then the confession is to be rejected or accepted as a whole; when there is other evidence whereby the truth or falsity of a part of the confession could be tested, the Court will test the truth or falsity of the confession by that other evidence and will use its discretion and will accept that part of the confession which it believes to be true and reject that part which it believes to be false. Where, however, there is no other evidence as to certain facts to which the accused in his confession testifies and which are in his favour the Court will accept those facts as true if it accepts the confession and draw from them the proper inferences in favour of the accused—Noukar Mouldino v. Emp, 38 Cr.L.J. 968 (971), 170 I.C. 827, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 312, 10 R.S. 73. By evidence is meant not only direct evidence but circumstantial evidence. A Judge must not leave out of his consideration when considering the truth or falsity of a confession or its parts, those probabilities and those presumptions which may properly arise from the other evidence on record, regard being had to the common course of natural events and human conduct to which sec. 114, Evidence Act refers—Jado Rahim v. Emp, 40 Cr.L.J. 93, 178 I.C. 520, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 202. The Patna High Court has gone further and held that there is no justification for a rule of law that in the absence of other evidence the whole of a given confession must be accepted as a statement of truth in its entirety. It is true that if an accused person makes a confession, the whole of that confession must be placed before the Court and is receivable in evidence. But there is no rule of law which compels belief in the statement of a witness. The Court, if it comes to the conclusion that the statement in its essential particulars is true, is entirely entitled to disregard the statements which it may hold in the circumstances not to be true—Itwa Munda, 39 Cr.L.J. 554 (556), 175 I.C. 300, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 258, 4 B.R. 568, 10 R.P. 605, 19 P.L.T. 476 (F.B.); Jate Uraon, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 541 (545), 41 Cr.L.J. 472 (476), 6 B.R. 503, 187 I.C. 586, 1540 P.W.N. 446. A Court is not bound in law to accept a confession as a whole. If the Court is satisfied that part of a confession is true and part is false, it can accept such portion as it finds to be true and reject the false portion—Jate Uraon, supra.

A retracted confession can be acted upon if it is voluntarily made and is corroborated by other evidence. When the voluntary confession of a prisoner is corroborated by the confession of another prisoner, and the two confessions are strongly corroborated by the mass of evidence which has been recorded in the case, the confession of the former prisoner, even though subsequently retracted, can be made the basis of his conviction—Nilmadhab, 5 Pat. 171, 27 Cr.L.J. 957. A retracted confession cannot be given any weight, unless it is well corroborated in material particulars by reliable evidence—Ramani, 3 Pat. 872 (879), A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 191, 26 Cr.L.J. 314; Shambhu, 54 All. 350, 33 Cr.L.J. 201 (205); Pharho, 26 S.L.R. 302, 34 Cr.L.J. 147 (149). But in some other cases it has been laid down that retracted confession, if proved to have been voluntarily made, can be considered along with the other evidence of the case. No binding rule can be laid down such as that a retracted confession must be supported by independent reliable evidence corroborating it in material particulars. The Court should treat the value of a retracted confession as a matter of prudence rather than of law—Gharya, 19 Bom. 728; Gangia, 23 Bom. 316; Raman, 21 Mad. 83; Jawan, 1914 P.R. 30; Indra Chandra, 2 C.W.N. 637; Manna Lal, 27 O.C. 40, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 1, 25 Cr.L.J. 49. It is not illegal to base a conviction upon the uncorroborated confession of an accused person (subsequently retracted) provided that the Court is satisfied that the confession was voluntary and is true in fact—Jawan, 1914 P.R. 30, 15 Cr.L.J. 626. If a Judge believes that a confession, though subsequently withdrawn, contains a true account of the prisoner's crime, the Judge is bound to act, so far as the prisoner is concerned, on the confession which he believed to be true—Kehri, 29 All. 434; Maiku, 20 All. 133. The weight to be given to such a confession depends upon the circumstances under which it was generally made and the circumstances under which it was retracted, including the reasons given by the prisoner for his retraction—Sajad Husain, 1903 P.R. 16; Raman, 21 Mad. 83; Manna Lal, 27 O.C. 40, 25 Cr.L.J. 49. Thus, where a confession was made under circumstances that indicate that it was made voluntarily and was true, and though it has been retracted, the reasons given by the accused for retraction are so absurd as to deserve no consideration whatever, the confession must be admitted in evidence—Arunachela, 55 Mad 717, 33 Cr L.J. 586 (587). But where a confession was made under police coercion and subsequently withdrawn, it is certainly inadmissible in evidence—Motijan, 6 C.W.N 380; Sriam, 2 A.L.J. 100, 2 Cr L.J. 59.

Where a confession is retracted, it is the duty of the Court that is called to act upon it, especially in a case of murder, to enquire into all the material points and surrounding circumstances and satisfy itself that the confession cannot but be true—Durgaya, 3 Bom.L.R. 441.

The fact that the confessions were retracted and that when they were made, some Policemen were interested in the investigation of the case, is a good ground for not relying upon the confessions specially when the confessions do not agree in material details—Ramel Singh v. Emp., 39 Cr L.J. 290 (292), 173 IC 315, AIR. 1938 Lah. 101, 39 P.L.R. 815, 10 RL 431.

Where in the course of the investigation of an offence, a witness makes a statement of a confessional nature which is recorded by the Magistrate under this section as a statement and not as a confession, and subsequently in the course of preliminary inquiry before the committing Magistrate he retracts that statement, it is admissible in evidence against that witness on a prosecution for perjury—Maddala Ramanujamma, 39 Mad. 977.

No doubt extra-judicial confession to the doctor cannot carry the same weight as a confession duly recorded under this section, but it is admissible under sec. 21, Evidence Act—Kommoju Brahman, AIR. 1940 Pat. 163 (170), 1939 P.W.N 915.

516. Sub-section (2)—Mode of recording:—The confession is to be recorded in the manner provided by sec 364, i.e., in the form of questions and answers. The Magistrate is bound to record every question that he asks. It is of great importance that this provision of the law should be obeyed, otherwise it may be impossible to tell how far a witness voluntarily deposes to a matter, and how far it was extracted from him by questioning even in the nature of cross-examination. If the confession is not recorded in this manner, the record is defective—Hasan Ali, 23 A.L.J. 719, 26 Cr.L.J. 1209. The Magistrate should not put a series of questions. Such procedure is ordinarily to be deprecated. The confessing person should be left to narrate his story as a whole without any unnecessary interference and allowed to give all the details that he remembers and wishes to describe—Ghena, 33 Cr.L.J. 414, 137 IC. 95, 33 P.L.R. 16, AIR. 1932 Lah. 180, 1932 CrC 179, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 294. In some other cases it is held that if a confession is recorded not in the form of questions and answers, as required by section 364, but in a narrative form, the defect is not a fatal one, and the confession is admissible in evidence, provided that the accused is not prejudiced by the irregularity. Section 533 would cure the defect—Fekoo, 14 Cal 539; Munahi, 8 Cal. 616; Khudiram, 9 C.L.J. 55; Deo Dat, 45 All. 166, 20 A.L.J. 915; Hasan Ali, supra.

A confession cannot be excluded from evidence as irrelevant merely because all the provisions of this section were not carefully complied with—Khtali, AIR. 1933 Oudh 404 (410), 10 O.W.N 937, 1933 CrC 1277, 146 IC. 905, 35 Cr L.J. 192; Amrit Lal, AIR. 1933 Lah. 987 (989), 1933 CrC 1503. For contra see Allah Dad, 33 Cr L.J. 377, 137 IC 57, 33 P.L.R. 25, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 281. Non-compliance with the provisions of this section can only be cured if the error or errors committed by the Magistrate in recording the confession has or have not injured the accused as to his defence on the merits—Daulat Ram, AIR. 1933 Oudh 315 (318), 8 Luck. 518, 35 Cr L.J. 10, 146 IC 465, 1933 CrC 698, 10 O.W.N 466; Naubat, AIR. 1935 All. 653, 1935 CrC. 653.

Where, however, the confession was not recorded in the manner prescribed in section 364, but there was only a gist of the confession in a narrative form, and where it moreover appeared that the confession was not voluntary, it was held to be inadmissible in evidence—Garib Hari, 30 C.W.N. 454, 27 Cr.L.J. 621; Ramsakhia, 33 Cr.L.J. 447 (449), 153 I.C. 922, 15 P.L.T. 586, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 651, 1934-Cr.C. 1322. See Note 1037 under sec. 364.

In Panchkari, 52 Cal. 67 (96), A.I.R. 1925 Cal 587, 86 I.C. 414, 26 Cr.L.J. 782, 29 C.W.N. 300, the piecemeal recording of confessions, when the accused was in the interval in police custody, was deprecated. See Nilmadhab in Note 514.

Language of record :—See Note 1038 under sec. 364.

Signature :—The object of requiring the signature of an accused person to the record of his confession is probably to furnish a strong test as to whether the confession was voluntary and free, and to afford him a locus penitentiae, before the completion of the record, of indicating that the confession was not voluntary or was made under improper influence—Bai Ratan, 10 B.H.C.R. 166. The signature is taken as a voucher of the authenticity of the statement and not as an admission of its correctness—Khudiram, 9 C.L.J. 55.

If the confession is not signed by the accused, parol evidence may be given, under sec. 533 of the terms of the confession, and those terms, if and when proved, may be admitted and used as evidence in the case, if the defect (non-signature) is such that it has not affected the merits of the defence—Raghu, 23 Bom. 221. So also, if the accused subsequently signed the confession without objection as soon as the non-signature was noticed, the defect would be cured by sec. 533 by the evidence of the Magistrate as to the authenticity of the statement—Khudiram, 9 C.L.J. 55. Where the Magistrate, through an oversight, did not take the signature of the accused, the confession can be admitted in evidence if the Magistrate has been examined and from his evidence it appears that the accused did make the confession and did so voluntarily—Ba Yin, 7 Rang. 759, 31 Cr.L.J. 297 (299). Where the accused informed the Magistrate that he was illiterate and, accordingly, his thumb impression was taken on the record of his confession but the accused signed his own signature in the Sessions Judge's Court, the confession can be admitted in evidence when the recording Magistrate gives evidence to prove it—Arajaddm Molla, 40 C.W.N. 872 (875).

If the accused is able to write, his thumb-impression will not be sufficient—Sadananda, 32 Cal. 550.

The Magistrate must sign the record of confession as well as the memorandum—Lal Shaikh, 3 C.W.N. 387.

Forwarded to the Magistrate :—A Magistrate, who records a confession under this section, should avoid handing over the document after completion to the police in charge of the prisoner, but should forward it as required by sub-sec. (2) of this section direct to the Magistrate by whom the case is to be enquired into or tried. But where it is handed over to the police and there was no suggestion that it was tampered with in transit, it was held that there was substantial compliance with the provisions of this section—Hans Raj, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 341 (343), 16 Lah. 345, 37 P.L.R. 605, 37 Cr.L.J. 504, 161 I.C. 900, 1936 Cr.C. 264.

Under this sub-section statements or confessions recorded shall be forwarded to the Magistrate by whom the case is to be tried or inquired into. Where the statement after being recorded was returned either to the witness, or, more probably, to the pleader, the procedure was wholly illegal—Mohamed Cassim v. Thumby Sahib, A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 33 (34), 41 Cr.L.J. 392, 187 I.C. 77.

See also Note 1040 under sec. 364

517. Sub-section (3)—Confession must be voluntary:—A confession, in order to be admissible in evidence, must be made voluntarily and without pressure—Gulabu, 35 All. 260, 11 A.L.J. 286; Pisari, 2 Weir 137. No statement should be recorded under this section unless the person making it, is a free agent and voluntarily agrees to have his statement taken down—Hira Lal, 1918 P.R. 16, 19 Cr.L.J. 517. A Magistrate acting under this section must question the accused in order to be affirmatively satisfied of the voluntariness of the confession, and in case of doubt he ought not to record it or give the certificate—Basvanta, 25 Bom. 168; Neki, 25 Cr.L.J. 116 (Lah.); Kesho Singh, 20 O.C. 136, 18 Cr.L.J. 742 (746). The Magistrate should ascertain whether the confessional statement is made voluntarily, at the beginning of the statement and not at the end—Rayappan, 2 Weir 136. A Magistrate should not proceed to record a confession, unless he first has reason to believe that the person is about to make it voluntarily, and he should therefore begin by enquiring into the point whether the confession is voluntarily made. Where a Magistrate recorded a confession of an accused without first satisfying himself as to its being voluntary, and then at the end of it put one comprehensive question as to the nature of the confession, it was held that he had not complied with the provisions of this section—Appa, 1 Bom.L.R. 357; Kandhai, 1 O.L.J. 407, 15 Cr.L.J. 633. But the omission to comply with the requisites of the Criminal Rules of Practice would not vitiate a confession provided sec. 164, Cr. P. C., is complied with—Dasi Viraya, 39 Cr.L.J. 585 (587), 175 I.C. 422, 47 M.L.W. 161, 1938 M.W.N. 90, 10 R.M. 775, A.I.R. 1938 Mad 490, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 289; Panchcowri, 52 Cal. 67 (92), A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 587, 86 I.C. 414, 26 Cr.L.J. 782, 29 C.W.N. 300; Public Prosecutor v. Sarabu Chennayya, 33 Mad 413. See also Nikbar and Daulat Ram in Note 514. In Putin Tanti, 40 Cal 873 (876), 15 Cr.L.J. 25, 22 I.C. 169, it was held that the fact that the Magistrate instead of asking the accused about the voluntary nature of the confession at the commencement of the confessional statement asked him at the end, was merely a defect of form which did not alter the character of the confession.

It is not desirable that the accused should be sent to jail custody and removed from police influence before they are placed before Magistrate for the recording of their confessions. It is also very necessary in the interests, both of the accused and of the prosecution, that the accused after their confessions have been recorded, should not be sent back to the police custody and that at the time when confessions are recorded they should be assured that they need be under no fear of going back into the custody of the police—Bhagwan Din, 35 Cr.L.J. 915 (917), 149 I.C. 195, 11 O.W.N. 444, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 151, 1934 Cr.C. 495. See also Abdul Sattar, 37 Cr.L.J. 493, 161 I.C. 793, 38 P.L.R. 1, 1936 Cr.C. 248, A.I.R. 1936 Lah 278 (279), 17 Lah 460; Narayan Singh, 17 Lah 419, A.I.R. 1936 Lah 357, 37 Cr.L.J. 567, 162 I.C. 379, 1936 Cr.C. 298, A.I.R. 1937 Lah 98 (99), 38 P.L.R. 791, 166 I.C. 1003, 38 Cr.L.J. 338, 9 R.L. 458 and Kishan Chand Kewal Ram v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 448 (451), 174 I.C. 449, 10 R.Pesh 64, A.I.R. 1938 Pash. 5. The confessing accused must invariably be sent to the judicial lock-up as soon as possible after confession and on no account be returned to Police custody. If the Police thereafter require the accused for any particular purpose, the instructions lay down clearly that the Police must put in an application stating the purpose for which the accused are required and for that purpose they may be handed over to the Police: there certainly ought to be an interval between the taking of the confession and the handing over of the accused to the Police for any subsequent purpose. Where the accused were handed back to the Police, the Court must look very carefully at the confessions and the surrounding circumstances in order to satisfy itself that the confessions were in fact voluntary—Surat Singh Buta Singh v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 475 (477), 174 I.C. 804, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 292, 40 P.L.R. 214, I.L.R. (1937) 18 Lah. 740, 10 R.L. 600.

It is not enough for a Magistrate recording the confession of an accused to give him a warning, but it is essential that he should put questions to satisfy himself that the confession was in fact voluntary and the question with its answer must be recorded. It is not enough that the Magistrate was satisfied as to the confession being voluntary, but the Courts before whom the confession is used must have materials on which they can be satisfied that the confession was in fact voluntary. The Magistrate should fill up column 7 of the form for recording confession, which is a column for recording a brief statement of the Magistrate's reason for believing that the statement was voluntarily made—Ramsidh Rai, 39 Cr.L.J. 725 (729), 176 I.C. 530, 1939 P.W.N. 559, 11 R.P. 79, 4 B.R. 724, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 352, following Bakshan v. Emp., 16 Lah. 912, 161 I.C. 339,

A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 247, 1936 Cr.C. 205, 37 Cr.L.J. 432, 37 P.L.R. 869, 8 R.L. 721. The provisions of sec. 164 (3) are mandatory. The Magistrate must act strictly in accordance with the provisions of sec. 164, or not at all. One of the provisions says that no Magistrate shall record any such confession unless, upon questioning the person making it, he has reason to believe that it was made voluntarily. Therefore, the Magistrate must ask the accused questions designed to ascertain and to satisfy himself whether the confession is being made voluntarily or not. It would be going too far to say that the questions must be in any special form, for sec. 164 does not prescribe that; but clearly there must be some question or questions designed to reveal whether the statement is being made voluntarily. To ask a question which can only test the accused's memory of the previous warning is not a compliance with the provisions of this section. The question or questions, whatever the form, must be designed to show whether the accused is making the statement voluntarily—Kommoju Brahman, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 163 (168), 1939 P.W.N. 915, 41 Cr.L.J. 533, 188 I.C. 57, 19 Pat. 301.

Where a confession made on one day was continued the next day, and the Magistrate did not question the accused again, and there was nothing to satisfy himself that the confession made on the second day was voluntary, the part of the confession so made was inadmissible—Panchkari, 52 Cal. 67 (86), A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 587, 86 I.C. 414, 26 Cr.L.J. 789, 29 C.W.N. 300.

"It is not desirable that Magistrates should act with deliberation in examining persons brought before them for the purpose of making confession and should, as far as possible, satisfy themselves that the confession is voluntary—and this not merely from the declaration of the accused, but from an attentive observation of his demeanour"—Cal. G. R. & C. O., page 9. Magistrates recording confessions should pay particular attention to paras 852, 853 and 853A of the Manual of Government Orders, Vol. I, S. VI, Judicial (Criminal) Department.

It is the duty of a Magistrate when a person is brought before him under this section whether as an accused or as a proposed witness, to see that the statement made by the person is voluntary. One simple method of securing this, apart from the questions given on the printed form, is to see that the person is left alone and is given half an hour or so to collect his mind before his statement is taken down—Jahangiri Lal, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 230 (244), 150 I.C. 1056, 35 Cr.L.J. 1180.

A confession cannot be held inadmissible merely because it has been retracted or because of allegations as to its having been induced in the absence of evidence to support them—Ibrahim v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 583 (586), 39 P.L.R. 419, 168 I.C. 745, 9 R.L. 669, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 208, following Pratap Singh v. Emp., 6 Lah. 415, 93 I.C. 978, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 605, 27 Cr.L.J. 514. When a confession made by the accused is alleged by him to have been obtained by ill-treatment or other improper inducements, the Court should carefully inquire into the truth of such allegations—Reg v. Kashi Nath, 8 B.H.C.R. 126; and if the Court sees any ground of exclusion mentioned in sec. 24, Evidence Act (inducement, threat, promise), it may reject the confession, though at the time of record it appeared to be a voluntary confession—Umar, 1187 P.R. 51; Dewan Kahar, 4 P.L.T. 186. Hope for a pardon alone would not render a confession inadmissible—Amrit Lal, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 987 (989), 1933 Cr.C. 1503; Nanak Chand, 32 Cr.L.J. 1036, 133 I.C. 545, 32 P.L.R. 792, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 73, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 785. But the Court cannot, merely on surmise or conjecture, hold that the confession was produced by inducement, threat or promise. There must be in a confession itself or in the evidence or in the surrounding circumstances something to justify the inference that the confession was really not a voluntary one—Dewan Kahar, 4 P.L.T. 186, 24 Cr.L.J. 497, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 13. The excuse of torture by the police is used so often without any justification time and again that it has become very difficult for any Court to pay serious attention to it and indeed no Court should pay any attention to it unless it is supported by evidence—Purnananda Das Gupta v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 65 (74), 68 C.L.J. 206, 179 I.C. 506, I.L.R. (1939) 1 Cal. 1, 40 Cr.L.J. 199. But when there is an entire absence of spontaneity in a confession, it is clearly a reluctant statement and the Court cannot be satisfied that the confession was made without inducement of some kind being offered by the police. (Per Henderson, J.). If the circumstances are such as to raise a strong suspicion in the mind of the Judge that the confession has been induced by threats or promises of the nature described in sec. 24 of the Evidence Act, then the confession is irrelevant. It is not necessary for the defence to establish conclusively that there was such inducement or threat. It is sufficient if the circumstances afford reasonable grounds for believing that there was such an inducement or threat (per Sen, J.)—Mohsena Khatun, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 610, 43 C.W.N. 893, 40 Cr L.J. 880, 184 I.C. 222.

When confessions are alleged to be not voluntary statements but were extorted from the accused by gross torture by the Police, the Magistrate should take immediate steps to have the accused examined by a competent doctor—Gurdit Singh v. Emp., 40 Cr L.J. 614 (616), 181 I.C. 924, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 66, 41 P.L.R. 290

When it appeared that an accused person was illegally placed in solitary confinement for about a fortnight, that the police had access to him, that pressure was brought to bear upon him through his father, mother and brother, that the desirability of a confession was pressed upon him by the District Magistrate as a means of saving himself and his relatives from threatened pains and penalties, that his father was illegally detained in hajut for a long time without any charge, that he (accused) then made a confession which was recorded without legal precautions and in the immediate presence of a police officer who put incriminating questions to the accused and helped in amplifying the confession, held that such confession was not voluntary and was not admissible in evidence—Jogjiban, 13 C.W.N. 861, 10 Cr L.J. 125. The confession of an accused with fetters on and policemen on either side of him cannot be accepted as free from the influence of the police and must, therefore, be discarded—Haider v. Emp., 39 P.L.R. 663.

When it is found that the man who makes a confession has been kept in police custody in defiance of the rules on the point for a number of days, the Court is entitled to ask the prosecution to explain why the irregularities were committed—Abdul Subhan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 All. 46 (51), 1939 A.L.J. 966.

Warning to be given to accused:—Under the present Amendment, the Magistrate should not only question the accused about the voluntariness of the confession, but should also warn him that he is not bound to make any confession, and that if he makes any, it will be used as evidence against him. This amendment overrules Uzeer, 10 Cal 775

The exact words of warning, which must be given to a person making a statement in the nature of a confession, are not very material, provided the Magistrate explains, and the person making the statement clearly understands, that he need not make a confession—Bawa Singh, 26 Cr L.J. 1458, 89 I.C. 1026, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 448, 7 Lah L.J. 250. See also Majhi, 28 Cr L.J. 807 (809), 101 I.C. 247, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 682; Prag, 32 Cr L.J. 97 (103), 128 I.C. 215, 7 O.W.N. 909, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 449, Ind. Rul. 1931 Oudh 23, 6 Luck 335, 1930 Cr C 1013. Where the Magistrate did not write down the warnings which he gave to the accused in Bengali but the prosecution actually put the Magistrate into the witness box and gave evidence as to the actual warnings which he gave to the accused, the confession cannot be excluded from evidence—Arajauddin Molla, 40 C.W.N. 872 (875). See also Karrevadu v. Emp., 1937 M.W.N. 562

Unless it is proved that the Magistrate explained to him that he need not make any confession and that it might be used against him, the confession is not admissible in evidence—Bahawala, 6 Lah. 183, 26 Cr L.J. 1238. See also Daulat Ram, 8 Luck. 518, 146 I.C. 465, 10 O.W.N. 466, 1933 Cr C 698. But the Madras High Court holds that if the confession is made voluntarily, the mere fact that the caution was not given does not make the confession inadmissible. Sec. 164 (3) does not pretend to override sec. 29, Evidence Act. Though sec. 164 makes it imperative that the accused person should be cautioned, sec. 29, Evidence Act says that his statement is not inadmissible in evidence merely because the caution has not been given. On a question of the admissibility of a particular piece of evidence, it is the Evidence Act that has to be looked to, and not sec 164, Cr. P. Code—Vellamoonji, 55 Mad 711, 33 Cr.L.J. 526 (527), 137 I.C. 863, A.I.R. 1932 Mad 431, 62 M.L.J. 559, 35 M.L.W. 542, 1932 M.W.N. 449, Ind Rul. 1932 Mad. 459, 1932 Cr.C. 412. But the question is, not whether the omission to give the warning invalidates the confession as being one not recorded in the manner prescribed by law, but whether the omission to give such a warning does not raise a strong suspicion that the confession was not voluntary, a suspicion so strong that when taken in connection with other circumstances it would amount to a fairly strong probability that the confession was the result of an inducement held out to the effect that the accused would be taken as an approver—Govindu Subbaramayya, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 321 (324), 1937 M.W.N. 178, 1937 M.Cr.C. 81, (1937) 1 M.L.J. 750, 45 M.L.W. 93, 169 I.C. 372, 38 Cr.L.J. 753. Where the Magistrate said to the accused that he should think over the matter and state what really happened as otherwise the statement would be used against him, it did not satisfy the rule in sub-sec. (3) of this section—Perumal Kundumban, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 562 (563), 1940 M.W.N. 358, 51 M.L.W. 535, 1940 M.Cr.C. 90. See also Mohammad Ali, 35 Cr.L.J. 385 (389), 147 I.C. 300, 1933 A.L.J. 1551 (F.B.). Where the Magistrate omitted from his certificate that the accused had been told that he need not make a confession but made it quite clear in his evidence that he did inform the accused of the fact, the confession was held to be admissible in evidence—Drummond, 34 Cr.L.J. 712, 144 I.C. 296, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 311, 1933 Cr.C. 545, Ind. Rul. 1933 Lah. 434, 34 P.L.R. 702. For contra see Housabai Bala, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 553, 34 Bom.L.R. 1240, 1932 Cr.C. 785, 140 I.C. 740, 56 Bom. 542, 34 Cr.L.J. 73, distinguishing Rama, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 327, 120 I.C. 350. Where the details as to the length of time during which and the places where the accused had been in the custody of the police had not been filled in, the confession was held admissible—Rama, supra. See also Abdul Gani, 32 Cr.L.J. 985, 133 I.C. 55, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 763, Ind Rul. 1931 Lah. 727, 1931 Cr.C. 1067. See Note 519.

Where it appeared that the accused thought that he was confessing before a Police-officer and not before a Magistrate, held that the Magistrate did not give proper warning to the accused and the confession was inadmissible—Prag, 6 Luck. 335, 32 Cr.L.J. 97 (99). See also Panchkari, 52 Cal. 67, 29 C.W.N. 300 (310). But where the accused was not unaware of the fact that he was confessing before a Magistrate, the omission of the Magistrate to inform the accused that he was a Magistrate was not an illegality—Mohinder, 33 P.L.R. 891, 33 Cr.L.J. 97 (102).

Where the Magistrate has violated the provisions of sec. 164 (3), Cr. P. C., a retracted confession is inadmissible in evidence—Ragunandan Prasad v. Emp., 1937 O.W.N. 296, 1937 A.Cr.C. 59.

Questions to be put to accused:—The Magistrate must question the accused with a view to discover whether he confesses voluntarily, and this question must be in pursuance of a real endeavour to find out the object of it. This requirement cannot be satisfied by putting a few formal questions—Panchkari, 52 Cal. 67, 86 I.C. 414, A.I.R. 1925 Cal 587, 29 C.W.N. 300 (308), 26 Cr.L.J. 782; Thein Maung, 4 Cr.L.J. 198; Sardar Mfiya, 38 Cr.L.J. 987 (988), 20 N.L.J. 128, 170 I.C. 868, I.L.R. 1937 Nag. 417, 10 R.N. 83, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 257. A mere direction by the Magistrate to the accused to make the statement voluntarily is not sufficient; the Magistrate must put questions to the accused to find out whether he is making the statement voluntarily. The questions put to the accused must be directed to eliciting facts which will enable the Magistrate to judge of the voluntary character of the confession. This cannot be done by merely repeating some set formulae or by merely asking the accused whether his confession is voluntary—Panchkari, supra; Shambhu, 51 All 350, 33 Cr.L.J. 201 (204), 135 I.C. 838, A.I.R. 1932 All. 228, 1932 Cr.C. 226, 1932 A.L.J. 162, Ind. Rul. 1932 All 102. No express form of question is prescribed, and the extent to which the accused should be questioned largely depends on the particular facts of each case. It is impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule on the subject. The Magistrate must satisfy himself and take steps to ascertain that the confession was a voluntary one—Thibu, 4 P.L.T. 279, 21 Cr.L.J. 649. The Magistrate shall hear the confession first, without making any record, and shall then put questions to ascertain whether the confession is voluntary, and then if he has reason to believe that it is voluntary, he may record the confession, following the provisions of sec 364. The questioning of the accused before recording a confession is a matter of substance and not of mere form, and if it has been omitted, the omission is a fatal one and cannot be cured by any evidence under sec. 533—Ranbir, 33 P.L.R. 241, 33 Cr.L.J. 242 (250); Ananda v. Parbati, 3 L.B.R. 173; Shew Sin, 3 L.B.R. 213, 4 Cr.L.J. 385; Farid, 2 Lah. 325 (328), 65 I.C. 613, 5 P.W.R. 1922 (Cr.), 23 Cr.L.J. 149, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 237; Prag, 6 Luck. 335, 32 Cr.L.J. 97 (100, 103); Housabai, 56 Bom. 542, 34 Cr.L.J. 73, 1932 Cr.C. 785 (787). The fact that the Magistrate was satisfied from observation that the accused was making the confession voluntarily, does not dispense with the necessity of questioning the accused. Observation is not same thing as questioning—Ranbir, 33 P.L.R. 241, 33 Cr.L.J. 242 (250); Ram Sarup, 33 P.L.R. 917, 33 Cr.L.J. 847 (848). Telling and questioning are different things—Farid, supra; Sardar Miya, supra. But a confession is not inadmissible, because the Magistrate did not ask the accused in so many words whether it was voluntary. All that is required is that the Magistrate should satisfy himself that the confession is voluntary—Arajaddin Molla, 40 C.W.N. 872 (876).

Under sec. 164 (3), Cr. P. C., a Magistrate is required before recording a confession to question the person making it in order to satisfy himself that it was made voluntarily. Where the Magistrate failed to observe this important provision of the Code intended to safeguard the voluntary character of the confession and neither the record nor the Magistrate's deposition gave the Court the necessary materials for dealing with the accused's allegations that he was tutored to make the confession and that he confessed at the instance of various Police Officers on the understanding that he would be made an approver, the Court could not rely on such confession—Ram Babu Jadav v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 302 (306), 173 I.C. 418, 4 B.R. 266, 10 R.P. 402, 18 P.L.T. 964, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 60.

Where the only warning which the Magistrate gave to the accused was that he asked the accused whether he was willing to make a confession, and that if he made a confession it would be used as evidence against him, but he did not put questions to the accused to find out whether the reply which the accused was about to give was a voluntary one, held that there was no compliance with the requirements of law for recording a confession—Garib Hari, 30 C.W.N. 454, 27 Cr.L.J. 621; Panchkari, supra. No Magistrate shall record any confession, unless upon questioning the person making it, he has reason to believe that it was made voluntarily. It is not sufficient to make use of such stock phrase as 'I am a Magistrate; if you want to make any statement of your own accord, you may do so; do not make any statement which you have been tutored by others to make'. What is meant by the Code is that the Magistrate should ask the accused some such question as "Why are you confessing? Are you sorry for your crime or is it that some one has told you that you will gain something by a confession?" and refuse to proceed with the recording of the confession until he has had a satisfactory answer to his question—per Roe, J., in Ragho, 18 Cr.L.J. 721 (Pat.). Where a Magistrate questioned the accused person thus: "It appears that you have committed murder and absconded by escaping from custody; you have now come; what have you to say?" held that the question was extremely improper—Pisari, 2 Weir 137.

The Magistrate should pay particular attention to the question, as to why the confession is made, and how the confession came to be made. If nothing but the usual formal questions are put to the accused, he may be easily instructed by any police officer what answers to give to them. Any intelligent Magistrate should be able to ascertain the questions to be put to the confessing accused without having such questions actually suggested to him—Patey Singh, 1931 A.L.J. 1000, 32 Cr.L.J. 1052 (1058). It is important to ascertain, why the accused made the confession, the circumstances under which the question of confession first arose, how the accused expressed his willingness to make a confession before the Magistrate—Nasir, 1932 A.L.J. 1125, 1933 Cr.C. 42.

In order to ascertain whether the confession is voluntary, the Magistrate is bound to question the accused closely as to his motive in making a confession, and if he fails to do so, he has no jurisdiction to motives, though as a rule of prudence it is better that he should do so—Ragho, 18 Cr.L.J. 721 (Pat). But in another case of the same High Court, as well as by the Calcutta High Court, it has been held that it is not necessary for the Magistrate to question the accused as to his motives, though as a rule of prudence it is better that he should do so—Dewan Bahar, 4 P.L.T. 186, 24 Cr.L.J. 497; Panchkari, 52 Cal. 67, 29 C.W.N. 300 (310), 26 Cr.L.J. 728.

It would be going much too far to say that a Magistrate cannot and should not ask a single question of the confessant. He would be justified in putting questions to clear up any matter which is ambiguous on the face of the statement, but he is wholly unjustified in extracting, by questions from the deponent, any facts which the deponent has not spoken to in his Court. Everything must depend on the nature of the questioning and the object of it, and the mere fact that an answer was elicited by a question, does not make the proceedings improper or the statement inadmissible as a confession—Hasan Ali, 23 A.L.J. 719, 26 Cr.L.J. 1209 (1211). It is desirable that the Magistrate in recording the confession should put various questions to the accused to enable him to decide whether the confession is a voluntary one or not; but there is nothing in law which lays down that a Magistrate cannot satisfy himself as to the voluntariness of the confession by putting a single question to the accused—Dewan Kahar, 4 P.L.T. 186, 24 Cr.L.J. 497. The Magistrate should question the accused in order to eliminate any real ambiguity in the statement, or give him a chance of making his statement intelligible. But he has no right whatever to cross-examine the accused or to endeavour to get particular statements out of him; nor is it a part of his duty to question the accused in detail on matters already within his (Magistrate's) knowledge, and endeavour or reconcile the statement of the accused with that of another—Abdul Jalil, 1930 A.L.J. 1105, 32 Cr.L.J. 152 (155) (All); Kesho Singh, 20 O.C. 136, 18 Cr.L.J. 742 (747); Hasan Ali, supra; Sheo Prasad, 36 Cr.L.J. 927 (930), A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 416, 156 I.C. 231, 1935 O.W.N. 722; Pahlwan, 31 Cr.L.J. 533, 123 I.C. 540, A.I.R. 1930 Lah 454. That the Magistrate, who recorded the confession, asked the accused to make a detailed statement does not make the statement resulting from that question any the less voluntary. It is a misuse of words to suggest that such a question could be construed as a threat—Gian Chand v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 879, 170 I.C. 5, 18 Lah 481, 10 R.L. 101, 39 P.L.R. 834, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 399.

The questions put by the Magistrate to ascertain that the confession is voluntary, and the accused's answer thereto, need not be recorded. Provided the Magistrate satisfies himself by putting questions and hearing answers that the prisoner is making a voluntary confession, it is unnecessary for him to record the questions and answers—Ranbir, 33 P.L.R. 241, 33 Cr.L.J. 242 (250). The omission to record the questions and answers may be cured by sec. 533—Ibid. Where, although the actual questions and answers put by the Magistrate to the confessing accused were not recorded, the Magistrate gave evidence as is permitted under sec. 533, Cr. P. C., and he satisfied the Court that questions had been asked and that the usual precautions had been taken by him, secs. 164 and 533 taken together make it clear that confessions are admissible in evidence. The Privy Council ruling, Nazir Ahmad v. Emp., 17 Lah. 629, did not consider the effect of sec. 533, Cr. P. C., and their Lordships themselves said that they expressed no opinion on the question of the operation or scope of sec. 533, Cr. P. C., as it had no bearing on the case which was then under discussion before them. It is not possible to lay down the particular questions in each particular case which ought to be put, but the Magistrate and the High Court have to be satisfied that the confession was in fact voluntary—Mohammad Din Mehar Din v. Emp., A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 200, 18 Lah. 658, 174 I.C. 881, 39 Cr.L.J. 488, 40 P.L.R. 401. But see contra—Prag, 6 Luck. 335, 32 Cr.L.J. 97 (100); Patey Singh, 1931 A.L.J. 1000, 32 Cr.L.J. 1052 (1058); Shambhu, 54 All. 350, 33 Cr.L.J. 201 (204).

Where there is a certificate in accordance with the provisions of sec. 164, cl. (3), it may be fairly presumed that the Magistrate did his best to assure himself that the statements were voluntary, and if he has felt any suspicion he would have placed it upon record—Public Prosecutor v. Polasanapalle Nagaraju, 32 Cr.L.J. 262, 129 I.C. 229, 1930 M.W.N. 550, 59 M.L.J. 114, 32 M.L.W. 285, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 42, Ind. Rul. 1931 Mad. 229; Majhi, 28 Cr.L.J. 807 (809), 104 I.C. 247, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 682.

In the case of a confession duly recorded under sec. 164, Cr. P. C., the presumption is that the confession was freely made. The burden of showing that a confession recorded under this section is inadmissible lies upon the accused—Pharko, A.I.R. 1932 Sind 201 (2037), 26 S.L.R. 302, 1932 Cr.C. 810, 141 I.C. 392. A contrary view was taken by the Oudh Chief Court in Daulat Ram, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 315 (318), 10 O.W.N. 466, 1933 Cr.C. 698, 8 Luck. 518, 146 I.C. 465, 35 Cr.L.J. 10, where it was held "There is a duty cast upon the prosecution to prove affirmatively the voluntary nature of the confession which is sought to be used by the prosecution against the accused."

The Judge cannot leave it to the jury to decide whether a confessional statement is voluntary or not. It is not open to the jury to reject the statement or accept the same in evidence. The Judge is required to decide the question of admissibility of the statement on a decision come to by him that it is voluntary or not; after the Judge's decision on the question of admissibility of the confessional statement depending on its voluntariness, has been given which was binding on the jury as a decision on a question of law, the Judge is required to ask the jury to say whether the confessional statement if it is held to be voluntary is true or not, upon the materials placed before the Court, and so to give their verdict on the question of fact whether the statement is true or not—Kashim Ali, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 650 (652); Nayeb, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 636, 38 C.W.N. 659, 61 Cal. 399; Baldeo, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 187, 1933 Cr.C. 233, 142 I.C. 639, 34 Cr.L.J. 369. The Court of Session or the High Court cannot merely accept the ipse dixit of the Deputy Magistrate recording the confession as to its being voluntary. The genuineness and truth of the confession and the fact of its being voluntarily made are matters which are within the exclusive province of the Court of Sessions and of the High Court; and neither the Court of Sessions nor the High Court can blindly accept the ready made opinions of the recording Magistrate on these points without having before it materials from which it could arrive at an independent opinion on these crucial questions on which the fate of the accused hangs—Prag, 32 Cr.L.J. 97 (100), 128 I.C. 215, 7 O.W.N. 909, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 449, Ind. Rul. 1931 Oudh 23, 6 Luck. 335, 1930 Cr.C. 1013.

518. Police custody:—A confession obtained after the accused had been in custody for some time, is always open to grave suspicion—Gobardhan, 9 All. 528; Motijan, 6 C.W.N. 380. Where the man who makes a confession has been kept in Police custody in defiance of the rules on the point for a number of days, the Court is entitled to ask the prosecution to explain why the irregularities were committed—Abdul Subhan v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 258 (263), 186 I.C. 192, A.I.R. 1940 All. 46, 1939 A.L.J. 966. When a Magistrate records the confession of a person who has been in police custody, he should ascertain and record the period during which the accused had been in custody to satisfy himself whether the confession is voluntary or not—Narayan, 25 Bom. 543, 3 Bom.L.R. 122. If a prisoner wishes to make a voluntary statement, the police must produce him at once before a Magistrate and let him do it, whatever be its character. Delay in producing before the Magistrate any prisoner who wishes to have his confession recorded, affects the value of the confession, and such confession cannot safely be regarded as voluntary—Panchkari, 52 Cal. 67, 29 C.W.N. 300 (312), A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 587, 86 I.C. 414, 26 Cr.L.J. 782. But where an accused was actually produced before the Magistrate as soon as he was arrested, and was produced before him the next day for recording the confession, held that the confession should not be ignored on the ground that the Magistrate did not ask him how long he was in Police custody—Drwan Kakar, 4 P.L.T. 186, 24 Cr.L.J. 497.

The fact and duration of Police custody has a material bearing on the question whether a confession is voluntary or not—Jogjiban, 13 C.W.N. 861, 10 Cr.L.J. 125. Where the accused was in the custody of the police for 3 days without any special order of a Magistrate, and after the confession he was again remanded to police custody instead of being sent to the jail lock-up, and the Magistrate who recorded the confession did not remove the fear of police from the mind of the accused, held that the confession was not voluntary—Pancham, 10 O.W.N. 348, 1933 Cr.C. 379. The Punjab Chief Court holds that even if the accused is in the custody of a police officer when he makes the confession, yet the confession being made before a Magistrate is excluded from being given in evidence by anything contained in sec. 25, Evidence Act, when proved by the evidence of the Magistrate—Feroz, 1918 P.R. 11, 19 Cr.L.J. 651 (following Sher Singh, 1881 P.R. 21).

Illegal or improper detention by the police has always been held as vitiating a confession, and has in some cases been held to lead to a presumption that there was ill-treatment—Panchkari, supra. The circumstances under which a confession is made must always be scrutinised with great care and caution and in all cases the period of the detention of the accused in police custody before a confession is made is always an important fact to be carefully considered. But illegal detention does not necessarily vitiate a confession. It is a fact to be carefully considered in every case—Dhaman Hiranand v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Sind 251 (253), 31 S.L.R. 494, 171 I.C. 737.

A prisoner in police custody who was brought before a Magistrate to have his confession recorded, did not cease to be in police custody merely because at the time of recording the confession there was no police officer in the room, when it was found that a police officer was waiting outside the room where the confession was being recorded—Lakshmya, Ratanlal 855 (856).

Not only in the case of accused, but also in the case of witnesses, who had been in police custody, the Magistrate, before recording their evidence, should have some assurance from them that they had attended voluntarily and were making statements to him voluntarily—Bhut Nath, 7 C.W.N. 345 (349).

See also Note 517.

519. Memorandum:—The memorandum is required only in the case of confessions made by the accused. A statement of a witness need not be appended by a memorandum that such statement was made voluntarily—Jadub, 27 Cal. 295 (300).

A confession without a memorandum that it is voluntarily made is bad in law and cannot be admitted in evidence—Daji, 6 Bom. 288; Shivya, 1 Bom. 219; Radhe Halvi, 7 C.W.N. 220; and the want of a memorandum can be cured, if at all, only by the Sessions Judge taking evidence during the trial by calling upon the Magistrate to depose that the accused had made the statement—Noshai, 5 Cal. 958; Anga Valayan, 22 Mad. 15.

If the memorandum omitted to state that the confession was voluntarily made, it was held that the Magistrate omitted to observe a most important provision of this section, and the confession was, therefore, not admissible in evidence—Kottubadi Narasingha, 2 Weir 140; Bharab, 2 C.W.N. 702 (717); but in some recent cases it has been said that the defect would be cured by sec. 533 if the Magistrate afterwards deposed that he believed that the confession was voluntarily made—Deo Dal, 45 All. 166, 20 A.L.J. 915, 24 Cr.L.J. 6; Jog Raj, 32 Cr.L.J. 290, 129 I.C. 289, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 534, 1930 Cr.C. 682, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 177; Ramai, 3 Pat. 872 (877), 84 I.C. 458, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 191, 26 Cr.L.J. 314; Maksud, 2 P.L.T. 773, 22 Cr.L.J. 200, 60 I.C. 56. Where the Magistrate does not comply with one of the requirements of this section, namely, that a confession shall not be recorded unless upon questioning the person making it, the Magistrate has reason to believe that it was made voluntarily, this defect cannot be cured under sec. 533, Cr. P. C., because the confession cannot be said to have been duly made, viz., in accordance with law. The record of the confession cannot, therefore, be admitted in evidence under sec. 80, Evidence Act,

The consequence of non-compliance with those provisions is that the record of the confession cannot be admitted in evidence under sec. 80, Evidence Act, without further proof. The admissibility of evidence is governed by the Evidence Act and under sec. 21 of that Act an oral confession by an accused person is relevant, subject to the provisions of secs. 24 to 29. The confession must, however, be proved by the testimony of the Magistrate who heard it. If he did not record it at all he would obviously have to rely on his memory alone. If he did record it, but not in accordance with law and consequently the record is rendered inadmissible under sec. 80, he can still use it to refresh his memory when in the witness-box. The adverse party can then call upon him to produce the document and cross-examine him thereupon. If the confession was read out to the accused and was admitted by him to be correct and was also signed by him, it can, perhaps, be regarded as a confession in writing and can be proved by the prosecution under sec. 21, Evidence Act—Bhakhshan, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 247 (249), 16 Lah. 912, 37 P.L.R. 869, 37 Cr.L.J. 432, 161 I.C. 399, 1936 Cr.C. 205. See also Rampuri v. Emp., 1937 M.W.N. 1325; Nonkar Mouldedino v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 968 (970), 170 I.C. 827, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 212, 31 S.L.R. 460, 10 R.S. 93. This view of law has been considerably shaken, if not overruled, by the decision of the Privy Council in Nazir Ahmad v. Emp., cited in Note 511. When a confession has been reduced to writing but sec. 164, Cr. P. C., has not been fully complied with, sec. 533, Cr. P. C., becomes in terms a "special provision" referred to in sec. 1 (2), Cr. P. C., and prevents the confession being ruled out as entirely incapable of proof—Nga Thern Maung, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 350 (352). Where the Magistrate has made a memorandum that the confession was voluntarily made, it may be presumed that it is a correct record of a voluntary confession. Nevertheless, if it is found that the confession was procured by any inducement, threat or promise, it must be treated as irrelevant—Dewan Kahar, 4 P.L.T. 186, 24 Cr.L.J. 497. The memorandum annexed to a record of confession is not a conclusive evidence of the fact that the confession was voluntarily made, so as to preclude the Court of Appeal from inquiring into the nature of the confession to see whether it was voluntary or not—Jogiban, 13 C.W.N. 861, 10 Cr.L.J. 125, 2 I.C. 681.

It is most advisable, although the law does not require it, that the Magistrate should record a memorandum of enquiry showing what steps he has taken to fully satisfy himself that an accused person is confessing voluntarily—Umar Din, 2 Lah. 129, 23 Cr.L.J. 388.

The memorandum need not be written by the Magistrate himself. If it is written out by a clerk and signed by the Magistrate, the requirements of this section are satisfied—Tukaram, 35 Bom.L.R. 231, 34 Cr.L.J. 280, 57 Bom. 336, A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 145, Ind. Rul. 1933 Bom. 261, 1933 Cr.C. 457 (458) (F.B.), overruling Housabai, 55 Bom. 542, 1932 Cr.C. 785 (787); Salu Mangan, 34 Cr.L.J. 808, Ind. Rul. 1933 Sind 194, 144 I.C. 661, 1933 Cr.C. 530, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 166.

Under this section as now amended, the Magistrate must explain to the accused that he is not to make any confession and that the confession may be used as evidence against him, and the memorandum also should record the fact that the explanation was given. But omission to record the fact that the accused was so warned would not make the confession inadmissible, if the Magistrate who recorded the confession was afterwards examined (sec. 533) and deposed that he gave the required warning to the accused and the accused understood it—Ramas, 3 Pat. 872 (877), 26 Cr.L.J. 314; Amina, 32 Cr.L.J. 579, 130 I.C. 641, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 196; Bawa Singh, 7 Lah.L.J. 250, 26 P.L.R. 579, 26 Cr.L.J. 1458; Khemani, 6 Lah. 58, 26 P.L.R. 346, 26 Cr.L.J. 1074; Nimadhab, 5 Pat. 171, 27 Cr.L.J. 957; Rahamat, 30 Cr.L.J. 49, 113 I.C. 65, 11 Lah.L.J. 5, Ind. Rul. 1929 Lah. 134; Bala, 35 Cr.L.J. 1382, 151 I.C. 745, 1934 Cr.C. 36, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 18. The Lahore High Court seems to have taken a different view in Farid, 65 I.C. 613, 2 Lah. 325, 5 P.W.R. 1922 (Cr.), 23 Cr.L.J. 149, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 237; Ranbir, 136 I.C. 19, 33 P.L.R. 241, 23 Cr.L.J. 242, Ind. The view of the Lahore High Court seems to have been adopted in Prag, 32 Cr.L.J. 97 (103), 128 I.C. 215, 7 O.W.N. 909, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 449, Ind. Rul. 1931 Oudh 23, 6 Luck. 335, 1930 Cr.C. 1013. But if, as a matter of fact, no such explanation was given by the Magistrate to the accused, the defect is not merely one of form but of substance, and sec. 533 cannot cure it—Partap Singh, 6 Lah. 415, 7 Lah.L.J. 482, 93 I.C. 978, 2 Lah. Cas. 72, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 605, 27 Cr.L.J. 514; Mt. Rao, 26 P.L.R. 173, 26 Cr.L.J. 1175. If questions had in fact been put, the failure to record them would be curable under sec. 537, Cr. P. C., provided that the error has not injured the accused as to his defence on the merits. If the questions were not put at all, then the confession is not duly made, and sec. 533 would not apply. Prejudice to the accused would arise in this way that if the questions had been put, he might have then pleaded ill-treatment or undue influence, and then confession would not have been recorded at all. The confession in such a case becomes inadmissible in evidence under sec. 164, Cr. P. C., and cannot also be admissible under the other provisions of the Evidence Act, secs. 21 and 29—Sardar Miya, 38 Cr.L.J. 987 (988), 20 N.L.J. 128, 170 I.C. 868, I.L.R. 1937 Nag. 417, 10 R.N. 83, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 257, following Pratap Singh, supra, Muhammad Ali, 56 All. 302, 147 I.C. 390, 1933 A.L.J. 1551, 6 R.A. 467, 35 Cr.L.J. 385, A.I.R. 1934 All. 81, 1934 Cr.C. 145 and Nazir Ahmad, quoted in Note 511. See also Daulat Ram, 8 Luck. 518, 146 I.C. 465, 10 O.W.N. 466, 1933 Cr.C. 698, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 315.

The practice of allowing defects in the formalities in recording confessions to be cured by the application of sec. 533 of the Cr. P. Code has been permitted of late years with considerable frequency in Courts in India, and any omissions on the part of Magistrates recording confessions to comply with the formalities laid down in secs. 164 and 364 of the Code have been allowed to be condoned by the evidence of the Magistrates themselves as witnesses for the prosecution. The practice, and the theory underlying it, is crystallized in a Full Bench judgment of the Allahabad High Court in Muhammad Ali v. Emp., A.I.R. 1934 All. 81, 147 I.C. 390, 1933 A.L.J. 1551, 6 R.A. 467, 35 Cr.L.J. 385, 1934 Cr.C. 145. This practice has now received a check by a very recent ruling of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Nazir Ahmed v. King-Emperor, A.I.R. 1936 P.C. 253, 163 I.C. 881, 38 Bom.L.R. 987, 1936 O.W.N. 505, 1936 M.W.N. 745, 1936 O.L.R. 437, 1936 A.L.R. 747, 63 I.A. 372, 9 R.P.C. 57, 1936 A.L.J. 895, 37 Cr.L.J. 897, 40 C.W.N. 1221, 17 P.L.T. 594, 1936 Cr.C. 752, 71 M.L.J. 476, 44 M.L.W. 583, 19 N.L.J. 214, 17 Lah. 629, 64 C.L.J. 445, 39 P.L.R. 43 (P.C.), where the practice is emphatically condemned and by implication, the decision of the Allahabad High Court overruled, as also numerous decisions to the same effect in the Lahore High Court. The evidence of the Magistrate, who recorded the confession, and the recorded confession were accordingly held inadmissible in a case where the record of the confession was not made with due care and formality and the certificate, which is required by sec. 164, Cr. P. C., was not given and the accused's signature was not taken—Nahru v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 642 (643), I.L.R. 1937 Nag. 268, 9 R.N. 281, 168 I.C. 962, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 220. The Peshawar Judicial Commissioner's Court has disagreed with the view of the Nagpur High Court, holding that omissions and irregularities in recording confessions under sec. 164, Cr. P. C., are condoned by sec. 533, Cr. P. C., provided they do not prejudice the accused. The Privy Council ruling of Nazir Ahmad v. King-Emp., according to it, does not cover a case like this—Kishan Chan Kewal Ram v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 448 (450), 174 I.C. 449, 10 R.Pesh. 64, A.I.R. 1938 Pesh. 5. The same view has also been taken by the Rangoon High Court in The King v. Saw Min, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 219 (223), 40 Cr.L.J. 691, 182 I.C. 705, 1939 R.L.R. 97 and by the Allahabad High Court in Lal Singh v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 132 (137), 178 I.C. 694, A.I.R. 1938 All. 625, 1938 A.L.J. 913, I.L.R. 1938 All. 875 where it was also observed that their Lordships of the Privy Council did not purport in any way to dissent from the Full Bench ruling in Muhammad Ali v. Emp., supra. Where the memorandum is only part of the certificate prescribed by sub-sec. (3) of sec. 164, Cr. P. C., it is impossible to construe sec. 533, Cr. P. C., so as to render it admissible to give evidence that the statement was duly recorded, i.e., that the statement was voluntarily made and represents what was said—Baliram Singh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Nag 295 (298), 1939 N.L.J. 442, 184 I.C. 274, 40 Cr.L.J. 937, distinguishing Nahru v. Emp., supra. Where the defect is of such a formal nature that it does not affect the merits of the statement made by the accused person, it is precisely to such cases that sec. 533, Cr. P. C., must apply. Failure to do that would render that section altogether nugatory—Maroti Jago v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 230 (231), 1940 N.L.J. 210, 188 I.C. 146, 41 Cr.L.J. 553. By using the provisions of sec. 533, Cr. P. C., a defect of form can be removed, but not a defect of substance. Where the Magistrate is able to say in Court that he had asked the necessary questions but had forgotten to record them, then sec. 533 would be applicable; and sec. 91, Evidence Act, will cause no difficulty since sec. 533 expressly states that it shall not do so. But where the Magistrate does not or cannot supply the defect in the written form with oral evidence, sec. 533 cannot help. Sec. 533 can be used to cure defects of form but not of substance. If no questions were actually asked, sec. 533 will not help; but if the Magistrate's evidence shows that the questions were asked, then that is merely a defect of form and sec. 533 will cure it—Kommoju Brahman, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 163 (169), 1939 P.W.N. 915, 41 Cr.L.J. 533, 188 I.C. 57, 19 Pat. 301. See also Notes 511 and 517.

If the recorded confession contains the memorandum that the Magistrate explained to the accused that he was not bound to make the confession, etc., the presumption will be that the accused was warned at the proper time, i.e., before the confession was recorded. This section does not require that this portion of the memorandum should be written before the confession commences, all that this section requires is that the warning should be given before the confession is recorded—Tukaram, 35 Bom.L.R., 234 (F.B.), 1933 Cr.C. 457 (458), 34 Cr.L.J. 555, 134 I.C. 280, 57 Bom. 336, A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 145, Ind. Rul. 1933 Bom. 261; Majhi, 28 Cr.L.J. 807, 104 I.C. 247, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 682.

An English memorandum as required by sec. 364 is not necessary in respect of a confession under this section—Fekoo, 14 Cal. 539.

A confession does not become inadmissible in evidence by reason of the fact that the memorandum is attached to the English translation of the confession, and not to the original confession of the accused in vernacular. The English translation is as much a part of the record as the original vernacular—Tukaram, supra.

Refusal to make a memorandum—Where a Magistrate who recorded the confession of an accused refused to make the memorandum on the ground that the confession did not seem to be voluntary, it was held that under sec. 533, the confession could be admitted in evidence during the trial when the Magistrate who recorded it proved that it was made voluntarily—Harbans, 8 O.C. 395B. Where the Magistrate refused to make a memorandum on the ground that the accused had been in police custody for 5 days before he was produced before him, and that there was a proposal on the part of the police to treat the accused as an approver, but there was no evidence that the proposal was communicated to the accused, it was held that this ground was not a valid ground that the Sessions Judge ought to have proceeded, in the absence of the memorandum, to take evidence under sec. 533 whether the confession was voluntarily made—Anga Valayan, 22 Mad. 15.

519A. Weight of confession:—Confessions made to a Magistrate can be divided into five classes (1) Those recorded with all the formalities prescribed by secs. 164 and 364, Cr. P. Code; (2) those imperfectly recorded but where the defect is cured by sec. 533, Cr. P. Code; (3) where the defect is not cured and the confession is proved by the testimony of the Magistrate; (4) where the Magistrate refuses to record the confession of an accused person produced before him for that purpose but hears it; (5) where the accused appears before a Magistrate of his own accord and makes an oral confession. Confessions falling under classes 1 and 2 are recorded under great precautions and should, therefore, obviously carry more weight than those falling under the remaining classes. A confession under class 3 would be less weighty; because some of the precautions prescribed by law were not observed. A confession under class 4 should have very little weight unless the Magistrate can explain to the entire satisfaction of the Court why he refused to act under secs. 164 and 364, Cr. P. C. The weight to be attached to a confession under class 5 would depend entirely on the circumstances under which it is made. It is impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule as to the amount of weight to be attached to a particular confession. This is a matter for the Court to decide in each case on consideration of the cumulative effect of the entire evidence in the case—Bakhshan, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 247 (251), 16 Lah 912, 161 I.C. 339, 1936 Cr.C. 205, 37 Cr L.J. 432, 8 R.L. 721, 37 P.L.R. 869.

As to the confessions made by the approvers, they are not substantive evidence but may be used only for the purpose of contradicting or corroborating their depositions in Court—Nitai Chandra Jana v. Emp., 38 Cr L.J. 852 (864), 170 I.C. 201, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 433, 10 R.C. 98.

Verification of confession:—Verification proceedings are not wholly illegal. A verification report cannot be ruled out on the ground that it is inadmissible in evidence when the Magistrate himself is examined as a witness in the case and speaks to the contents of the report made by him. But the statements made by the accused to the verifying Magistrate in the course of the proceedings, if they are not recorded in the manner provided in sec. 164, Cr. P. C., are, however, inadmissible—Titendra Nath, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 99 (110), 169 I.C. 977, 38 Cr.L.J. 818, 10 R.C. 69, following Amiruddin v. Emp., 45 Cal 557, 44 I.C. 321, A.I.R. 1918 Cal. 88, 19 Cr L.J. 305, 22 C.W.N. 213.

Verification proceedings held in connection with the confessions and approver's statements do not add to their value. Such proceedings cannot be regarded as corroboration and are open to criticism in other respects—Noni Gopal Gupta, 15 C.W.N. 593 (613). Such a proceeding can very rarely be adopted for any useful purpose. Its real object seems to be to add fictitious weight to a confession recorded after an accused has been for twenty-four hours in Police custody and to embarrass a judicial officer when he has to determine at the trial whether that confession which has been repudiated and denied almost immediately after it was made and on the first opportunity when the prisoners was free from all influences, real or imaginary, from the Police, was voluntarily made and whether it is a true statement of what actually took place. From this point of view the practice is very objectionable—Radhe Halwai, 7 C.W.N. 220 (224).

520. Explanation—Magistrate without jurisdiction:—The Explanation of this section lays down that a statement or confession can be recorded by a Magistrate, although he has no jurisdiction in the case. But a Magistrate not having jurisdiction can record the statement of a witness under this section, if the witness appears voluntarily before him, and is not brought before him by the police—Nuri Sheikh, 29 Cal. 483. This section will not empower a police-officer to compel a witness to go to a local Magistrate not competent to deal with the case, and to get the statement recorded—Nana, Ratanlal 468 (469); Nuri Sheikh, 29 Cal. 483. Where the police-officer has reason to believe that the witness is likely to be gained over by the accused, the proper course is to send the accused and the witness to the Magistrate having jurisdiction without delay—Nuri Sheikh, 29 Cal. 483.

165. (1) Whenever an officer in charge of a police-station, Search by police-officer or a police-officer making an investigation has reasonable grounds for believing that anything necessary for the purposes of an investigation into any offence which he is authorised to investigate may be found in any place within the limits of the police-station of which he is in charge, or to which he is attached, and that such thing cannot in his opinion be otherwise obtained without undue delay, such officer may, after recording in writing the grounds of his belief, and specifying in such writing, so far as possible, the thing for which search is to be made, search, or cause search to be made, for such thing in any place within the limits of such station.

(2) A police-officer proceeding under sub-section (1) shall, if practicable, conduct the search in person.

(3) If he is unable to conduct the search in person, and there is no other person competent to make the search present at the time, he may after recording in writing his reasons for so doing require any officer subordinate to him to make the search, and he shall deliver to such subordinate officer an order in writing specifying the place to be searched and, so far as possible, the thing for which search is to be made; and such subordinate officer may thereupon search for such thing in such place.

(4) The provisions of this Code as to search-warrants and the general provisions as to searches contained in section 102 and section 103 shall, so far as may be, apply to a search made under this section.

(5) Copies of any record made under sub-section (1) or sub-section (3) shall forthwith be sent to the nearest Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence and the owner or occupier of the place searched shall on application be furnished with a copy of the same by the Magistrate:

Provided that he shall pay for the same, unless the Magistrate for some special reasons thinks fit to furnish it free of cost.

Change:—This section has been amended by sec 36 of the Cr P C. Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) For reasons see below

521. Sub-section (1)—General research:—The old section spoke of 'any document or thing' which meant a specific document or thing which might be the subject of a summons or order under section 94; that is, it did not authorise a general search on the chance that something might be found—Bajrang Gope, 38 Cal 304; Pran Khan, 16 C.W.N 1078; Brikhbhan, 38 All 14, 13 A.L.J. 979; Diwakar v Ramamusti, 35 M.L.J. 127, 19 Cr.L.J. 901. The section speaks of a particular document or thing which is necessary to the conduct of an investigation into an offence and does not authorise a general search, e.g. for arms generally—Clarke v Brojendra Kushore, 36 Cal 433, or for stolen property generally—Bisser Misser, 41 Cal 261; nor is the requirement of this section fulfilled by framing the warrant as one for 'stolen property relevant to the case'—Pran Khan, 16 C.W.N 1078, 13 Cr.L.J 764

The provisions of this section are so strict that before entering a house the Investigating officer has to specify in writing the thing for which search is to be made and also the ground of his belief that such a thing would be found in the house which he desires to enter. A promiscuous entry into houses is not permitted to an Investigating officer simply to satisfy himself as to the truth of an allegation made by a complainant or an accused person or a witness. The word 'thing' is specifically mentioned and that would not include a configuration of a wall, or the inspection of any place inside a house for purposes of investigation—Jagannath, 29 Cr.L.J 272, 107 I.C. 688, 26

Such proceedings cannot be regarded as corroboration and are open to criticism in other respects—Noni Gopal Gupta, 15 C.W.N. 593 (613). Such a proceeding can very rarely be adopted for any useful purpose. Its real object seems to be to add fictitious weight to a confession recorded after an accused has been for twenty-four hours in Police custody and to embarrass a judicial officer when he has to determine at the trial whether that confession which has been repudiated and denied almost immediately after it was made and on the first opportunity when the prisoners was free from all influences, real or imaginary, from the Police, was voluntarily made and whether it is a true statement of what actually took place. From this point of view the practice is very objectionable—Radhe Halwai, 7 C.W.N. 220 (224).

520. Explanation—Magistrate without jurisdiction:—The Explanation of this section lays down that a statement or confession can be recorded by a Magistrate, although he has no jurisdiction in the case. But a Magistrate not having jurisdiction can record the statement of a witness under this section, if the witness appears voluntarily before him, and is not brought before him by the police—Nuri Sheikh, 29 Cal. 483. This section will not empower a police-officer to compel a witness to go to a local Magistrate not competent to deal with the case, and to get the statement recorded—Nana, Ratanlal 468 (469); Nuri Sheikh, 29 Cal. 483. Where the police-officer has reason to believe that the witness is likely to be gained over by the accused, the proper course is to send the accused and the witness to the Magistrate having jurisdiction without delay—Nuri Sheikh, 29 Cal. 483.

165. (1) Whenever an officer in charge of a police-station, Search by police-officer, or a police-officer making an investigation has reasonable grounds for believing that anything necessary for the purposes of an investigation into any offence which he is authorised to investigate may be found in any place within the limits of the police-station of which he is in charge, or to which he is attached, and that such thing cannot in his opinion be otherwise obtained without undue delay, such officer may, after recording in writing the grounds of his belief, and specifying in such writing, so far as possible, the thing for which search is to be made, search, or cause search to be made, for such thing in any place within the limits of such station.

(2) A police-officer proceeding under sub-section (1) shall, if practicable, conduct the search in person.

(3) If he is unable to conduct the search in person, and there is no other person competent to make the search present at the time, he may after recording in writing his reasons for so doing require any officer subordinate to him to make the search, and he shall deliver to such subordinate officer an order in writing specifying the place to be searched and, so far as possible, the thing for which search is to be made; and such subordinate officer may thereupon search for such thing in such place.

(4) The provisions of this Code as to search-warrants and the general provisions as to searches contained in section 102 and section 103 shall, so far as may be, apply to a search made under this section.

(5) Copies of any record made under sub-section (1) or sub-section (3) shall forthwith be sent to the nearest Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence and the owner or occupier of the place searched shall on application be furnished with a copy of the same by the Magistrate:

Provided that he shall pay for the same, unless the Magistrate for some special reasons thinks fit to furnish it free of cost.

Change:—This section has been amended by sec 36 of the Cr P. C., Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) For reasons see below.

521. Sub-section (1)—General research:—The old section spoke of 'any document or thing' which meant a specific document or thing which might be the subject of a summons or order under section 94; that is, it did not authorise a general search on the chance that something might be found—Bajrang Gope, 38 Cal 304; Pran Khan, 16 C.W.N 1078; Brikhbhan, 38 All 14, 13 A.L.J 979; Divakar v. Ramamurti, 35 M.L.J. 127, 19 Cr L.J 901. The section speaks of a particular document or thing which is necessary to the conduct of an investigation into an offence and does not authorise a general search, e.g. for arms generally—Clarke v. Brojendra Kishore, 35 Cal 433, or for stolen property generally—Bisser Misser, 41 Cal 261; nor is the requirement of this section fulfilled by framing the warrant as one for 'stolen property relevant to the case'—Pran Khan, 16 C.W.N 1078, 13 Cr L.J 764.

The provisions of this section are so strict that before entering a house the Investigating officer has to specify in writing the thing for which search is to be made and also the ground of his belief that such a thing would be found in the house which he desires to enter. A promiscuous entry into houses is not permitted to an Investigating officer simply to satisfy himself as to the truth of an allegation made by a complainant or an accused person or a witness. The word 'thing' is specifically mentioned and that would not include a configuration of a wall, or the inspection of any place inside a house for purposes of investigation—Jagannath, 29 Cr L.J. 272, 107 I.C. 688, 26

A.L.J. 410, A.I.R. 1928 All. 185. The police-officer is bound to record in writing the grounds of his belief as to the necessity for searching the house of a person and in specifying clearly the article or articles for which the search is to be made—Sohan Lal, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 305 (307), 143 I.C. 467, 1933 Cr.C. 686, 34 Cr.L.J. 568, 10 O.W.N. 678, 20 A.I.Cr.R. 285.

This has now been made clear by the present amendment, by the addition of the words "and specifying in such writing . . . to be made." "It is a vicious thing to allow a police-officer to have power to conduct a general search, without knowing what it is he is going to search for, but merely to see if he can find something incriminating in a person's house. Even the wording of the clause itself ('that such a thing cannot in his opinion be otherwise obtained without undue delay') contemplates that the man himself has some information and that he must know what it is that he is after; and it is necessary that he should record this in writing and forward the record to the Magistrate, so that it will be a check upon irresponsible searches which have frequently disfigured the police administration in various parts of the country"—Legislative Assembly Debates, 31st January 1923, p. 1754. Quoted in Maingal Singh v. Ghulam Mohammad, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 280 (282).

Thus, under the amended section it has been held that it does not authorise a search for stolen property generally, but only a search for specified stolen articles. Where a definite list of stolen articles has been given to a police-officer and he searches a house for those articles, he is making a search for specified articles, and his action is perfectly legal—Paresh v. Jogendra, 27 Cr.L.J. 1195, 97 I.C. 955, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 93.

This section is not restricted to a search for what is stolen and believed to be stolen property, but it permits a police-officer to make a search of anything necessary for the purposes of an investigation into any offence—Param Sukh, 23 A.L.J. 1037, A.I.R. 1926 All. 147, 27 Cr.L.J. 11. There is nothing wrong in the Police investigating all the books and seizing them under the provisions of sec. 165, Cr. P. C.—General Relief Association, Lahore, 33 Cr.L.J. 678, 138 I.C. 751, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 534, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 581, 33 P.L.R. 824, 1932 Cr.C. 809. See also notes under secs. 94 and 96, Cr. P. Code.

Accused house may be searched :—A police-officer is entitled to search the house of a person for specific articles even though the latter is the person accused of the crime—Paresh v. Jogendra, supra.

522. "Within the limits" :—A Station House officer has no power to make a search beyond the local limits of the own circle—Mir Sha, 8 S.L.R. 1, 16 Cr.L.J. 15; Krishna Aiyar, 24 M.L.T. 96, 20 Cr.L.J. 145. Such a search is illegal and resistance to such search is not an offence—Madho Sonar, 13 A.L.J. 691, 16 Cr.L.J. 589. But see sec. 166 (3) which now authorises a Police-officer, under certain circumstances, to make a search within the limits of another police station.

523. Who shall conduct the search :—Sub-section (2) lays down that the officer in charge of a police station or the investigating officer must "conduct the search in person." But this does not mean that the officer must himself make the search, i.e., ransack boxes, examine the room, dig up the floor or otherwise seek for the property. Nor is it necessary that all these processes should take place under his very eye. Therefore where the Inspector remained outside the house, while the actual search was being made inside by two constables, it was held that the search was not illegal. All that the section means is that the officer should go to the spot and exercise a general superintendence over the search, in contradistinction to the cases where he is unable to go to the spot and deputes a subordinate by a written order to conduct the search in his stead—Sadagopala v. Satrugna, 23 M.L.J. 415, 13 Cr.L.J. 763, 1912 M.W.N. 1111, (dissenting from 17 M.L.J. 323, 6 Cr.L.J. 105, where a search made by a constable inside the house while the Inspector was seated outside, was held to be illegal as not being conducted in person by the Inspector). Where it is necessary for the Sub-Inspector to search two houses simultaneously, and he searches one of the houses in person, while the Head Constable searches the other, the procedure is not illegal—Ujagar, 9 O.W.N. 313, 33 Cr.L.J. 492 (493), A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 249.

The Magistrate cannot conduct the search. This section speaks of a search made by a Police-officer and not by a Magistrate—Clarke v. Brojendra, 36 Cal 433, 13 C.W.N. 458, 2 I.C. 436. The Magistrate can conduct a search only under sec. 105, which section has not been made applicable here.

524. Sub-section (3)—Order in writing:—If the officer cannot himself go to the spot he can depute a subordinate, but the deputation must be by an order in writing. A constable making the search without such a written order does not lawfully exercise the power of a public servant, and resistance to such search is not an offence—Narain, 7 N.W.P. 209; Idu Mandal, 6 C.L.J. 753; Mir Sha, 8 S.L.R. 1, 16 Cr.L.J. 15; Madho Sonar, 13 A.L.J. 691. An oral order to make a general search for suspicious property is not an order lawfully issued under this section—Hiralal v. Ramdulare, A.I.R. 1935 Nag 237 (239), 160 I.C. 306.

Non-recording of reasons:—The police-officer is bound to record in writing the grounds of his belief as to the necessity for searching the house of a person and in specifying clearly the article or articles for which the search is to be made—Sohan Lal, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 305 (307), 143 I.C. 467, 1933 Cr.C. 686, 34 Cr.L.J. 568, 10 O.W.N. 678, 20 A.I.Cr.R. 285. A failure to comply with the requirements of section 165, and especially the failure to comply with the requirements of cl (1) of that section, justifies the conclusion that the police-officer was not acting in good faith within the meaning of sec. 52, I. P. C., and a person would be justified in pushing him and his constable back in order to prevent a search which was not strictly in accordance with the law—Gopi Mahto, 33 Cr.L.J. 233 (235), 136 I.C. 60, 10 Pat. 821, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 66, 13 P.L.T. 44, 1932 Cr.C. 99, Ind. Rul. 1932 Pat. 60. Where, however, the Court is satisfied that the Police-officer was conscientiously acting in the discharge of his duties according to his own lights, there is no room for drawing the inference of dishonesty from the fact that he did not comply with certain procedural portions of sections 165 and 166, Cr. P. C.—Nangu Bhagat, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 270 (271), 11 O.W.N. 485.

Where the matter is very urgent, non-recording of reasons for want of time does not vitiate the proceedings—Ujagar, 33 Cr.L.J. 492, 137 I.C. 621, 9 O.W.N. 313, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 249, Ind. Rul. 1932 Oudh 242, 1932 Cr.C. 590. See also Asandas v. Khanchand, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 240 (243), 1933 Cr.C. 800.

The provisions of sec. 165, Cr. P. C., to the effect that before making a search a police-officer should record in writing the grounds of his belief, etc., are directory and not mandatory. The criterion for determining whether the police officers were right or wrong is the state of their minds at the time of making the search—Maingal Singh v. Ghulam Mohammad, A.I.R. 1939 Lah 280 (282, 283), 184 I.C. 6, 12 R.L. 154, dissenting from Hiralal v. Ramdulare, A.I.R. 1935 Nag 237 (239), 160 I.C. 306 where it has been laid down that sec. 165, Cr. P. C., does not justify the action of the police officers when they do not conform to the procedure laid down therein.

525. Sub-section (4):—Necessity to search warrant—A subordinate police-officer may, however, without a warrant enter a house in search of a person who is charged with having committed a cognizable offence, but he is not empowered to enter a house without a search warrant in search of property—Venkatarav, 7 B.H.C.R. 50.

Witnesses to the search—Prior to the present amendment it was held that the failure to call inhabitants of the locality as witnesses to the search, did not make the search illegal, because the provision of sec. 103 did not apply to a search under this section—Sadagopala v. Satrugna 23 M.L.J. 445. This ruling is now rendered obsolete by the present sub-section (4) which makes the general provisions of searches under secs. 102 and 103 applicable to searches under this section. But it should be noticed that sub-sec. (4) is not imperative, and that the provisions of secs. 102 and 103 are made applicable only so far as may be. Therefore, the mere fact that in making a search under sec. 165, the police took two independent witnesses with them, and did not call witnesses from the locality, did not necessarily render the search illegal—Siam Lal, 28 Cr.L.J. 652, 103 I.C. 108, A.I.R. 1927 All. 516.

Damages for illegal-search:—A police-officer cannot investigate a non-cognizable case without the order of a Magistrate (sec. 155); nor can he make a search in respect of it, because he can make a search only in those cases which he can investigate. Therefore, a police-officer making a search in a non-cognizable case without being authorised by a Magistrate is liable to be sued for damages—Bahabal v. Tarak Nath, 24 Cal. 691. Where a police-officer makes a search for specific stolen property bona fide, the person whose premises are searched is not entitled to damages—Divakar v. Ramamurti, 35 M.L.J. 127, 19 Cr.L.J. 901. A police-officer not having jurisdiction over the place searched, who takes part in a search conducted by another police-officer authorised by the Code to conduct the search, cannot be said to exceed his jurisdiction and is not liable to damages as one making an illegal search—Asan v. Masilamani, 42 Mad. 446, 36 M.L.J. 252, 20 Cr.L.J. 422.

525A. Sub-section (5):—"The object of this amendment is that as soon as a search is made, an immediate report should be made to the nearest Magistrate. The second object is that the person whose house is searched should have copies of the records made under sub-secs. (1) and (3). Sub-sec. (4) as it stands enables the provisions of sec. 103 to apply, that is, the general rules relating to searches are made applicable. Under sec. 103 the occupier of the place where the search was made gets only a list of the articles taken, but what I want him to get is the reason for the search which has to be recorded in writing, which has to be sent to the Magistrate, and he gets a copy thereof." See the Legislative Assembly Debates, 31st January 1923, p. 1755. Similar amendment has been made in sec. 166 (5) and for the same reasons."

The provisions of this new sub-section, as well as of sub-sec. (5) of sec. 166, are intended as an extra safeguard to protect individuals against general or roving searches. Omission by a police-officer to send forthwith to the nearest Magistrate the copies of the record that he has prepared before undertaking the search, affects the validity of the search, and is a ground for setting aside the conviction of the accused—Lal Mia, 93 I.C. 1038, 43 C.L.J. 184, 27 Cr.L.J. 542; Gopi Mahto, 10 Pat. 821, 33 Cr.L.J. 233 (235).

An order of refusal by the Magistrate to supply copies of the record to the owner or occupier of the house searched, is subject to revision by the High Court—Churamani, 26 A.L.J. 703, 29 Cr.L.J. 663 (664), A.I.R. 1928 All. 402, 110 I.C. 215.

166. (1) An officer in charge of a police-station or a police-officer not being below the rank of sub-inspector making an investigation may require another to issue search warrant.

When officer in charge of police-station may require another to issue search warrant.

station, whether in the same or a different district, to cause a search to be made in any place, in any case in which the former officer might cause such search to be made within the limits of his own station.

(2) Such officer, on being so required, shall proceed according to the provision of section 165, and shall forward the thing found, if any, to the officer at whose request the search was made.

(3) Whenever there is reason to believe that the delay occasioned by requiring an officer in charge of another police-station to cause a search to be made under sub-section (1) might result in evidence of the commission of an offence being concealed or destroyed, it shall be lawful for an officer making an investigation under this Chapter to search, or cause to be searched, any place in the limits of another police station, in accordance with the provisions of section 165 as if such place were within the limits of his own station.

(4) Any officer conducting a search under sub-section (3) shall forthwith send notice of the search to the officer in charge of the police station within the limits of which such place is situate, and shall also send with such notice a copy of the list (if any) prepared under section 103, and shall also send to the nearest Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence, copies of the records referred to in section 165, sub-sections (1) and (3).

(5) The owner or occupier of the place searched shall, on application, be furnished with a copy of any record sent to the Magistrate under sub-section (4) :

Provided that he shall pay for the same, unless the Magistrate for some special reason thinks fit to furnish it free of cost.

Change:—This section has been amended by sec 37 of the Cr P C. Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923).

"Not being below the rank of Sub-Inspector":—We are inclined to think that the powers conferred by section 166 should not be exercised by a police-officer making an investigation who is below the rank of Sub-Inspector. We realise, however, that there may be administrative difficulties in this connection, and if such difficulties are pointed out by Local Government, we should be prepared to retain this clause unamended"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

Sub-sections (3), (4):—"These two sub-sections are proposed to be added in order to give power in certain circumstances to an officer in charge of a police station to search or cause to be searched places within the local limits of another police station"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914) See also Assan Alliar v Masilamani, 42 Mad 446

Sub-section (5):—For a similar amendment made in sec 165, see Note 525A under that section. See also the Legislative Assembly Debates, 31st January, 1923, page 1757

167. (1) Whenever any person is arrested and detained in custody and it appears that the investigation * * * cannot be completed by section 61, and there are grounds for believing that the accusation or information is well-founded, the officer in charge of the police-station or the police-officer making the investigation if he is not below the rank of Sub-Inspector shall forthwith transmit to the nearest Magistrate a copy of the entries in the diary hereinafter prescribed relating to the case, and shall at the same time forward the accused (* *) to such Magistrate.

(2) The Magistrate to whom an accused person is forwarded under this section may, whether he has or has not jurisdiction to try the case, from time to time authorise the detention of the accused in such custody as such Magistrate thinks fit, for a term not exceeding fifteen days in the whole. If he has not jurisdiction to try the case or commit it for trial, and considers further detention unnecessary, he may order the accused to be forwarded to a Magistrate having such jurisdiction:

Provided that no Magistrate of the third class, and no Magistrate of the second class not specially empowered in this behalf by the Provincial Government, shall authorise detention in the custody of the police.

(3) A Magistrate authorizing under this section detention in the custody of the police shall record his reasons for so doing.

(4) If such order is given by a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate, he shall forward a copy of his order, with his reasons for making it, to the Magistrate to whom he is immediately subordinate.

Change:—The italicised words in sub-sec. (1) and the proviso to sub-sec. (2) have been inserted by sec. 38 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. The reasons are stated below.

The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

526. Scope:—Prior to the present amendment the first three lines of this section ran thus:—"Whenever it appears that any investigation under this chapter cannot be completed," etc; i.e., this section applied only to investigation under this chapter and gave no authority to a Magistrate to remand an accused person to custody in proceedings under Chapter VIII, in order to enable the police to arrest other persons jointly accused with him—Basya, 5 Bom L.R. 27; Raghunandan, 32 Cal 80, 8 C.W.N. 779; Subbarayya, 39 Mad. 928; Rameshwar, 36 All 262. These rulings are no longer good law, because the words "under this chapter" have now been omitted by the Amendment Act of 1923. The same view has been taken by Woodroffe (Criminal Procedure, page 188).

'Not below the rank of Sub-Inspector':—In sec. 167, which confers a power to ask for a remand, we would confine the operation to investigating officers not below the rank of Sub-Inspector"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922).

This section does not apply to the Calcutta Police—Muhammad Suleman, 30 C.W.N. 985 (998) (F.B.).

527. Object of section:—Having regard to the provisions of this section and of sec. 61 and to the requirements of justice, the intention of the Legislature is that the accused person should be brought before the Magistrate competent to try or commit, with as little delay as possible—Engadu, 11 Mad. 98, 2 Weir 142. The law does not authorise a police-officer to keep an accused person in his custody for an indefinite period. Section 61 makes it clear that such person shall not be detained for more than 24 hours, in the absence of a special order of a Magistrate under sec. 167, and this section empowers the Magistrate to direct the detention of the accused for not more than 15 days in the whole. The law evidently views with disfavour the detention in the custody of the police, and such detention can be allowed only in special cases and for reasons to be stated in writing, under sub-sec. (3), and not as a matter of course whenever it may be asked for by the investigating police-officer—In re Khairati Ram.

12 Lah 635, 32 P.L.R. 493, 32 Cr.L.J. 913 (914), A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 476; Kundan Lal, 12 Lah 604, 32 P.L.R. 423, 32 Cr.L.J. 785 (788). The object of requiring an accused to be produced before a Magistrate under this section is to enable the Magistrate to see that remand is necessary and also to enable the accused to make any representation he may wish to make—Balkrishna, 12 Lah 435, 33 Cr.L.J. 180 (181).

There is nothing in sec 167, Cr. P. C., which indicates that the order either of detention or of release should be communicated through the Superintendent of Police—Muhammad Yakub v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 971 (973), 177 I.C. 867, A.I.R. 1938 All 534, 1938 A.L.J. 782

Diary:—The diary referred to in this section is the Special Diary mentioned in sec. 172

The diary should contain full and unabridged statements of persons examined by the police, so as to give the Magistrate a satisfactory and complete source of information which would enable him to decide whether or not the accused persons should be detained in custody. This section requires that copies of entries of the diary should be sent to the Magistrate; the object is to prevent the entries in the diary to be subsequently suppressed or tampered with—Mannu, 19 All. 390 (399, 405).

528. "Forward the accused to the Magistrate":—Before a Magistrate remands an accused person to police custody, the accused must be produced before him—Peary Mohan v. Weston, 16 C.W.N. 145, 13 I.C. 721, 13 Cr.L.J. 65. Where the accused is not brought before the Magistrate, it is illegal for him to remand the prisoner on the application of the police—Shera, 1867 P.R. 39

529. Sub-section (2)—Magistrate's power to order detention:—Under this section, a Magistrate, on a mere perusal of the entries in the Police diaries, may from time to time authorise the detention of the accused for a term not exceeding 15 days on the whole. Thereafter he can, under sec. 344 by a warrant, remand the accused for any term not exceeding 15 days at a time, if there is sufficient evidence to suspect that the accused has committed an offence and that further evidence may be obtained by such remand—Narendra Lal, 36 Cal 166 (171), 13 C.W.N. 43.

This section authorises the police but not a Magistrate to investigate and to keep an accused person in custody for the purposes of such investigation. A Magistrate has no such power; but if he receives information of an offence, it is open to him to make a report to the police who can then take action under sec. 167—Anand Behari, 52 All. 457, 31 Cr.L.J. 998 (999), 1930 A.L.J. 635, A.I.R. 1930 All. 259

An application for remand to police custody must be made personally by the chief Police officer present to the Chief Magisterial officer present, unless this is impossible owing to the absence of one of the officers concerned or through some other exceptional cause—Peary Mohan v. Weston, 16 C.W.N. 145, 13 Cr.L.J. 65, 13 I.C. 721.

The power under sec. 167 is given to detain the prisoners in custody while the police make the investigation, and before the inquiry; but the custody mentioned in sec. 344 is quite different and is intended for under-trial prisoners, i.e., when the inquiry or trial has begun or is about to begin—Engadu, 11 Mad. 98; Krishnaji, 23 Bom. 32 (31); Nagendra Nath, 51 Cal. 402 (412), 38 Cr.L.J. 388, 25 Cr.L.J. 732, 81 I.C. 220, A.I.R. 1924 Cal 476. Sec. 167 relates to custody by the police, while sec. 344 contemplates a remand to jail, not to police custody—Krishnaji, supra. See also Muhammad Suleman, 30 C.W.N. 985 (998), 54 Cal 218. But even under this section the Magistrate can detain the accused in 'such custody as he thinks fit', i.e., he can consider whether he should send the accused to police custody or to judicial lock-up. If the police attempts to put the accused to needless harassments or throw obstacles in the way of his taking advice from legal advisers, the accused may be sent to the judicial lock-up—Amolak, 12 Lah. 211, 32 Cr.L.J. 1022 (1923).

In this sub-section there is no special reference to police custody. What is to be regarded is the period of detention under sec. 167 (2), Cr. P. C., and not the nature of the custody. If the Magistrate, having ordered the accused to be detained for a ed under this section may, whether he has or has not jurisdiction to try the case, from time to time authorise the detention of the accused in such custody as such Magistrate thinks fit, for a term not exceeding fifteen days in the whole. If he has not jurisdiction to try the case or commit it for trial, and considers further detention unnecessary, he may order the accused to be forwarded to a Magistrate having such jurisdiction:

Provided that no Magistrate of the third class, and no Magistrate of the second class not specially empowered in this behalf by the Provincial Government, shall authorise detention in the custody of the police.

(3) A Magistrate authorizing under this section detention in the custody of the police shall record his reasons for so doing.

(4) If such order is given by a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate, he shall forward a copy of his order, with his reasons for making it, to the Magistrate to whom he is immediately subordinate.

Change:—The italicised words in sub-sec. (1) and the proviso to sub-sec. (2) have been inserted by sec. 38 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. The reasons are stated below.

The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

526. Scope:—Prior to the present amendment the first three lines of this section ran thus:—"Whenever it appears that any investigation under this chapter cannot be completed," etc; i.e., this section applied only to investigation under this chapter and gave no authority to a Magistrate to remand an accused person to custody in proceedings under Chapter VIII, in order to enable the police to arrest other persons jointly accused with him—Basya, 5 Bom L.R. 27; Raghunandan, 32 Cal. 80, 8 C.W.N. 779; Subbarayya, 39 Mad 928; Rameshwar, 36 All. 262. These rulings are no longer good law, because the words "under this chapter" have now been omitted by the Amendment Act of 1923. The same view has been taken by Woodroffe (Criminal Procedure, page 188).

'Not below the rank of Sub-Inspector':—In sec. 167, which confers a power to ask for a remand, we would confine the operation to investigating officers not below the rank of Sub-Inspector"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922).

This section does not apply to the Calcutta Police—Muhammad Suleman, 30 C.W.N. 985 (998) (F.B.).

527. Object of section:—Having regard to the provisions of this section and of sec. 61 and to the requirements of justice, the intention of the Legislature is that the accused person should be brought before the Magistrate competent to try or commit, with as little delay as possible—Engadu, 11 Mad. 98, 2 Weir 142. The law does not authorise a police-officer to keep an accused person in his custody for an indefinite period. Section 61 makes it clear that such person shall not be detained for more than 24 hours, in the absence of a special order of a Magistrate under sec. 167, and this section empowers the Magistrate to direct the detention of the accused for not more than 15 days in the whole. The law evidently views with disfavour the detention in the custody of the police, and such detention can be allowed only in special cases and for reasons to be stated in writing, under sub-sec. (3), and not as a matter of course whenever it may be asked for by the investigating police-officer—In re Khairati Ram.

12 Lah. 635, 32 P.L.R. 493, 32 Cr.L.J. 913 (914), A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 476; Kundan Lal, 12 Lah. 604, 32 P.L.R. 423, 32 Cr.L.J. 785 (788). The object of requiring an accused to be produced before a Magistrate under this section is to enable the Magistrate to see that remand is necessary and also to enable the accused to make any representation he may wish to make—Balkrishna, 12 Lah. 435, 33 Cr.L.J. 180 (181).

There is nothing in sec. 167, Cr. P. C., which indicates that the order either of detention or of release should be communicated through the Superintendent of Police—Muhammad Yakub v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 971 (973), 177 I.C. 867, A.I.R. 1938 All. 534, 1938 A.L.J. 782.

Diary:—The diary referred to in this section is the Special Diary mentioned in sec. 172.

The diary should contain full and unabridged statements of persons examined by the police, so as to give the Magistrate a satisfactory and complete source of information which would enable him to decide whether or not the accused persons should be detained in custody. This section requires that copies of entries of the diary should be sent to the Magistrate; the object is to prevent the entries in the diary to be subsequently suppressed or tampered with—Mannu, 19 All. 390 (399, 405).

528. "Forward the accused to the Magistrate":—Before a Magistrate remands an accused person to police custody, the accused must be produced before him—Peary Mohan v. Weston, 16 C.W.N. 145, 13 I.C. 721, 13 Cr.L.J. 65. Where the accused is not brought before the Magistrate, it is illegal for him to remand the prisoner on the application of the police—Shera, 1867 P.R. 39.

529. Sub-section (2)—Magistrate's power to order detention:—Under this section, a Magistrate, on a mere perusal of the entries in the Police diaries, may from time to time authorise the detention of the accused for a term not exceeding 15 days on the whole. Thereafter he can, under sec. 344 by a warrant, remand the accused for any term not exceeding 15 days at a time, if there is sufficient evidence to suspect that the accused has committed an offence and that further evidence may be obtained by such remand—Narendra Lal, 36 Cal. 166 (171), 13 C.W.N. 43.

This section authorises the police but not a Magistrate to investigate and to keep an accused person in custody for the purposes of such investigation. A Magistrate has no such power; but if he receives information of an offence, it is open to him to make a report to the police who can then take action under sec. 167—Anand Behari, 52 All. 457, 31 Cr.L.J. 998 (999), 1930 A.L.J. 635, A.I.R. 1930 All. 259.

An application for remand to police custody must be made personally by the chief Police officer present to the Chief Magisterial officer present, unless this is impossible owing to the absence of one of the officers concerned or through some other exceptional cause—Peary Mohan v. Weston, 16 C.W.N. 145, 13 Cr.L.J. 65, 13 I.C. 721.

The power under sec. 167 is given to detain the prisoners in custody while the police make the investigation, and before the inquiry; but the custody mentioned in sec. 344 is quite different and is intended for under-trial prisoners, i.e., when the inquiry or trial has begun or is about to begin—Engadu, 11 Mad. 98; Krishnaji, 23 Bom. 32 (34); Nagendra Nath, 51 Cal. 402 (412), 38 Cr.L.J. 388, 25 Cr.L.J. 732, 81 I.C. 220, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 476. Sec. 167 relates to custody by the police, while sec. 344 contemplates a remand to jail, not to police custody—Krishnaji, supra. See also Muhammad Suleman, 30 C.W.N. 985 (998), 54 Cal. 218. But even under this section the Magistrate can detain the accused in 'such custody as he thinks fit', i.e., he can consider whether he should send the accused to police custody or to judicial lock-up. If the police attempts to put the accused to needless harassments or throw obstacles in the way of his taking advice from legal advisers, the accused may be sent to the judicial lock-up—Amolak, 12 Lah. 211, 32 Cr.L.J. 1022 (1923).

In this sub-section there is no special reference to police custody. What is to be regarded is the period of detention under sec. 167 (2), Cr. P. C., and not the nature of the custody. If the Magistrate, having ordered the accused to be detained for a period of less than fifteen days, think no further detention is necessary and sends him to a Magistrate having jurisdiction under the second part of sec. 167 (2), then the Magistrate to whom the accused is sent cannot himself exercise the powers already exercised by the Magistrate under the first part of sec. 167 (2), even to the extent of ordering a remand to police custody for such time as will bring the period of detention in police custody to fifteen days. Once powers conferred by the first part of sec. 167 (2) have been exercised by a Magistrate and he has taken action under the second part of sec. 167 (2), then the powers under the first part of sec. 167 (2) have been exhausted, and cannot be revived and continued by the Magistrate having jurisdiction to whom the accused is sent under the second part of sec. 167 (2), Cr. P. C. An accused cannot a'sc be in magisterial and police custody at one and the same time, that is to say, he cannot be before a Magistrate in magisterial custody in one case under sec. 344, Cr. P. C., and before a Magistrate in police custody in another case under sec. 167, Cr. P. C.—Dhaman Hiranand v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Sind 251, 31 S.L.R. 494, 171 I.C. 737.

Under the proviso to this section newly added, the power of detention is confined to first-class Magistrates and to second-class Magistrates specially empowered. The reason is that the period of detention is just the time which is taken advantage of by inexperienced Magistrates for extorting confessions and other things. Therefore, the power of detention should be given only to experienced Magistrates.

The words "nearest Magistrate" show that the Magistrate granting a remand need not be the Magistrate having jurisdiction to try the case. This latitude is obviously left merely to provide for cases in which it may not be possible to approach such Magistrate owing to distance or other similar difficulties. But in the absence of such difficulties, it is desirable that the Magistrate having jurisdiction should be approached for purposes of remand. The practice of obtaining remands from any Magistrate at the choice of the police is objectionable—Balkrishna, 12 Lah. 435, 33 Cr.L.J. 180 (182), 32 P.L.R. 1.

530. Period of detention:—The period for which a Magistrate can authorise the detention of the accused in police custody is under this section, 15 days on the whole—Krishnaji, 23 Bom. 32 (34); Harqulal, 1902 P.R. 24; Engadu, 11 Mad. 98; Bassooram, 19 W.R. 36. In ordering further detention when there are good reasons for it, a Magistrate should invariably limit the term as much as possible to what may be necessary for the object in view—Kampu Kuki, 11 C.W.N. 554, 6 Cr.L.J. 86; Jai Singh, 8 O.W.N. 1240; Balkrishna, 12 Lah. 435, 33 Cr.L.J. 180 (182). An order of continuous detention in police custody for 14 days, and then again for a further period of 14 days, without any reasons being recorded by the Magistrate is illegal—Krishnaji, supra. After the expiry of the total period of detention allowed under this section any further remand is illegal. The Magistrate should then take proceedings under sec. 344—Balkrishna, supra; Sooba, 1931 A.L.J. 617, 32 Cr.L.J. 1045 (1047). At the expiration of the maximum period of 15 days' detention of an accused person and the additional time necessary to bring him before a Magistrate allowed under secs. 61 and 167, an accused must either be released by the Police under sec. 169, security for his appearance if and when required being taken, or the Magistrate, empowered in that behalf, must either take cognizance if he has before him a police report (which ordinarily would be a report in the form laid down in sec. 173) which, he thinks, makes out a prima facie case or he must release him—Bholanath, 28 C.W.N. 490 (492). During the period of detention, the accused is entitled to have interview with his legal advisers. His relatives should also be allowed to supply him with food and clothing—Amolak, 12 Lah. 211, 133 I.C. 288, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 13, 32 P.L.R. 935, 32 Cr.L.J. 1022; Evans, 50 Bom. 741 (745), A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 551. An approver cannot be detained in the custody of the police—Ranbir, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 480, 1931 Cr.C. 704, 32 P.L.R. 728, 135 I.C. 192, 33 Cr.L.J. 162; Khairati Ram, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 476, 32 P.L.R. 493, 132 I.C. 519, 1931 Cr.C. 700, 32 Cr.L.J. 913, 12 Lah. 635.

531. Sub-section (3)—Grounds of detention:—Where a Magistrate orders detention in police custody, he must record sufficient reasons—Krishnaji, 23 Bom.

32 (34); Balkrishna, 12 Lah. 435, AIR 1931 Lah 99, 33 Cr.L.J. 180 (182); Peary Mohan v. Weston, 16 C.W.N. 145, 13 Cr.L.J. 65, 13 IC 721; Daulat Ram, AIR 1933 Oudh 315 (319), 10 O.W.N. 466, 1933 Cr.C. 698, 8 Luck 518, 146 IC. 465, 35 Cr.L.J. 10. He need not write an elaborate order in remanding an accused person to police custody; he should briefly indicate his reasons for doing so. But if there are sufficient grounds for considering that the accused is concerned in a serious offence and further information has since been obtained during the investigation, the mere omission to record reasons for remanding him to police custody, will not render the custody illegal—Sunder Singh, 12 Lah. 16, 32 Cr.L.J. 339 (340), 31 P.L.R. 780, AIR, 1930 Lah 945. Before remanding the accused to custody or before granting a further remand after the expiry of the first, the Magistrate should study the police-diaries, in order to find whether there is any justification for granting the remand—Balkrishna, supra; Mannu, 19 All 390 (404) (FB). Before he orders the detention of an accused person, he should ascertain how long the accused had been under police surveillance or influence, and in recording the reasons for detention he should note all the information that he is able to obtain on the subject—Madar, 1885 A.W.N. 59. He should be guided by the evidence already available and the prospect of getting further evidence as regards the alleged offence—Sundar Singh, 12 Lah. 16, 32 Cr.L.J. 339 (341).

The policy of the Legislature as disclosed by the provisions of this section clearly is that the detention in Police custody should be allowed only in special cases and for such limited periods as the necessities of the case might require. Such remands are not to be granted without sufficient cause being shown for the same—Jai Singh, 33 Cr.L.J. 287 (293), 136 IC. 321, 8 O.W.N. 1240, AIR. 1932 Oudh 11, 1932 Cr.C. 43, Ind Rul 1932 Oudh 113. Remands to police custody ought not to be granted except in cases of real necessity and even then the period should be fixed with due regard to the reasonable requirements of the case. When a remand to police custody is granted under this section reasons must clearly be stated in the order as required by sub-sec. (3) of this section—Dhruv Deo, AIR 1931 Lah 200, 31 P.L.R. 693, 129 IC. 767, 1931 Cr.C. 320, 32 Cr.L.J. 464, 16 AICr.R. 94.

By requiring the Magistrate to record his reasons the law contemplates that the Magistrate should consider whether on the facts placed before him there are good grounds for allowing such detention. There must be at least something to satisfy the Magistrate that the presence of the person arrested would, during the police investigation, assist in some discovery of evidence—Kamru Kuki, 11 C.W.N. 554, 6 Cr.L.J. 86. Thus, when the accused had confessed before the Magistrate and had pointed out some of the properties stolen and was waiting to do more, but was unable to do so because the Police were by law unable without a special order to detain him, it was held that an order for detention should be made—Kamru Kuki, supra.

An accused person may be remanded if it is likely that further evidence may be obtained; but he cannot be remanded on a mere expectation that time will show his guilt or that further fact would come to light—Khuda Bakhsh v. Crown, 1872 P.R. 17; or simply for the purpose of verifying his confession recorded under sec. 164—Radhe Halwai, 7 C.W.N. 220; or merely because he is wanted by the police for the purpose of pointing out the places through which he passed on his way to commit a dacoity, or for the purpose of obtaining his identification in the village—Amir Khan, 7 C.W.N. 457.

Interview with legal advisers:—See Amolak Ram, infra and Note 966.

Supply of food and clothing:—The police should allow the legal advisers of the accused to interview him, and allow the relatives of the accused to supply him food and clothing. A person who is merely arrested on suspicion during the course of police investigation cannot be placed on a worse footing than an unconvicted criminal prisoner to whom such amenities are allowed under the Prisons Act (vide secs. 31-33, Prisons Act, 1894). The police would, of course, be fully justified in satisfying themselves that no objectionable articles are supplied. An accused person is entitled to have access to legal advice under reasonable restrictions even when he is in police custody during the course of an investigation—Amolah Ram, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 13, 12 Lah. 211, 133 I.C. 288, 32 Cr.L.J. 1022, 1932 Cr.C. 23, 32 P.L.R. 935.

168. When any subordinate police-officer has made any investigation under this Chapter, he shall report the result of such investigation to the officer in charge of police-station.

Report of investigation by subordinate police officer.

532. It was formerly held that a report made by a subordinate Police Officer under this section was not a public document within the meaning of sec. 74, Evidence Act, and an accused person was not entitled to a copy of it before trial—Arumugan, 20 Mad. 189, 7 M.L.J. 167, 2 Weir 120 (142, 144, 763). But now see sec. 173, subsection (4).

169. If, upon an investigation under this Chapter, it appears to the officer in charge of the police-station or to the police-officer making the investigation, that there is not sufficient evidence or reasonable ground of suspicion to justify the forwarding of the accused to a Magistrate, such officer shall, if such person is in custody, release him on his executing a bond, with or without sureties, as such officer may direct, to appear, if any when so required, before a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence on a police-report and to try the accused or commit him for trial.

Release of accused when evidence deficient.

Change:—The italicised words have been added by section 39 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923 "In the case of sec. 169, we agree that the power contemplated by the section should be exercisable by investigating officers and we see no reason in this case to restrict the power to officers not below the rank of Sub-Inspector With regard to section 170, however, we consider that the direct responsibility for sending up a case should rest with the officer in charge of the police-station."—Report of the Joint Committee (1922).

533. Power of Police Officer:—This section in terms applies only to the case of an accused who has never been forwarded to a Magistrate—Rahu, 43 All 186 (189). See also Hakim Ally in Note 540A This section is only employed while the case is at the stage of the investigation by the police. There is no need for the Sub-Inspector to take any steps under this section after the accused appeared before the Magistrate, for the question of their admission to bail is one for the Magistrate and not for the Sub-Inspector—Rahat Husain, A.I.R. 1933 All 582 (585), 35 Cr.L.J. 208, 146 I.C. 896, 1933 Cr.C. 926

This section does not authorise a police-officer to entertain an application for withdrawal of a complaint. Permitting a complainant to withdraw is a judicial act, the exercise of which is vested in the Magistrate under sec. 248 and 345, and the police have no authority to interfere in such matters—Anonymous, Ratanlal 91.

Re-arrest:—The admission to bail by the Police under this section is a purely provisional arrangement; and, therefore, if the Magistrate considers that the evidence does establish a prima facie case of a non-bailable offence, the accused should be re-arrested and forwarded to the Magistrate in custody—Anonymous, Ratanlal 121.

Where a person is discharged under sec. 169, Cr. P. C., and examined as a prosecution witness it is unfair to launch a prosecution against him—Chuni Lal, 34 Cr.L.J. 761, 144 I.C. 380, A.I.R. 1933 All 399, 1933 Cr.C. 682, 1933 A.L.J. 735, Ind. Rul. 1933 All 420, following Easatulla Mian, 76 I.C. 1031, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 104, 25 Cr.L.J. 311.

170. (1) If, upon an investigation under this Chapter, it appears to the officer in charge of the police-station that there is sufficient evidence or reasonable ground as aforesaid, such officer shall forward the accused under custody to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence upon a police-report and to try the accused or commit him for trial, or if the offence is bailable and the accused is able to give security, shall take security from him for his appearance before such Magistrate on a day fixed and for his attendance from day to day before such Magistrate until otherwise directed.

(2) When the officer in charge of a police-station forwards an accused person to a Magistrate or takes security for his appearance before such Magistrate under this section, he shall send to such Magistrate any weapon or other article which it may be necessary to produce before him, and shall require the complainant (if any) and so many of the persons who appear to such officer to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case as he may think necessary, to execute a bond, to appear before the Magistrate as thereby directed and prosecute or give evidence (as the case may be) in the matter of the charge against the accused.

(3) If the Court of the District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate is mentioned in the bond, such Court shall be held to include any Court to which such Magistrate may refer the case for inquiry or trial, provided reasonable notice of such reference is given to such complainant or persons.

(4) * * * * *

(5) The officer in whose presence the bond is executed shall deliver a copy thereof to one of the persons who executed it, and shall then send to the Magistrate the original with his report.

Change:—Sub-section (4) has been omitted by the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act II of 1926, for the following reasons :—Sub-section (4) provides that the day fixed under this section shall be the day whereon the accused person is to appear, if security for his appearance has been taken, or the day on which he may be expected to arrive at the Court of the Magistrate, if he is to be forwarded in custody. This provision requires, for example, that all witnesses shall be bound down to appear before the Magistrate on the date when the accused is expected to arrive at the Court if he is forwarded in custody. It has been found to be inconvenient, and, it is understood, is not frequently followed in practice"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (Gazette of India, 1925, Part V, p 214).

534. Scope:—This section applies to non-cognizable offences. The words "investigation under this Chapter" includes investigation into a non-cognizable offence held under sec. 155 (3) under the orders of a Magistrate—Raghubar Dayal, 53 All. 407, 32 Cr L.J. 465 (466), A I R 1931 All 263.

The mere fact that a private complaint is filed in a Court and the Magistrate takes cognizance of the private complaint does not and cannot deter the Police from enquiring during the course of an investigation—Amolak Ram, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 13, 12 Lah. 211, 133 I.C. 288, 32 Cr.L.J. 1022, 1932 Cr.C. 23, 32 P.L.R. 935.

169. 170. (1) If, upon an investigation under this Chapter, it appears to the officer in charge of the police-station that there is sufficient evidence or reasonable ground as aforesaid, such officer shall forward the accused under custody to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence upon a police-report and to try the accused or commit him for trial, or if the offence is bailable and the accused is able to give security, shall take security from him for his appearance before such Magistrate on a day fixed and for his attendance from day to day before such Magistrate until otherwise directed.

(2) When the officer in charge of a police-station forwards an accused person to a Magistrate or takes security for his appearance before such Magistrate under this section, he shall send to such Magistrate any weapon or other article which it may be necessary to produce before him, and shall require the complainant (if any) and so many of the persons who appear to such officer to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case as he may think necessary, to execute a bond, to appear before the Magistrate as thereby directed and prosecute or give evidence (as the case may be) in the matter of the charge against the accused.

(3) If the Court of the District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate is mentioned in the bond, such Court shall be held to include any Court to which such Magistrate may refer the case for inquiry or trial, provided reasonable notice of such reference is given to such complainant or persons

(4) * * * * *

(5) The officer in whose presence the bond is executed shall deliver a copy thereof to one of the persons who executed it, and shall then send to the Magistrate the original with his report.

Change:—Sub-section (4) has been omitted by the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act II of 1926, for the following reasons:—“Sub-section (4) provides that the day fixed under this section shall be the day whereon the accused person is to appear, if security for his appearance has been taken, or the day on which he may be expected to arrive at the Court of the Magistrate, if he is to be forwarded in custody. This provision requires, for example, that all witnesses shall be bound down to appear before the Magistrate on the date when the accused is expected to arrive at the Court if he is forwarded in custody. It has been found to be inconvenient, and, it is understood, is not frequently followed in practice”—Statement of Objects and Reasons (Gazette of India, 1925, Part V, p. 214).

534. Scope:—This section applies to non-cognizable offences. The words “investigation under this Chapter” includes investigation into a non-cognizable offence held under sec. 155 (3) under the orders of a Magistrate—Raghubar Dayal, 53 All. 407, 32 Cr L.J. 465 (466), A.I.R. 1931 All. 263.

The mere fact that a private complaint is filed in a Court and the Magistrate takes cognizance of the private complaint does not and cannot deter the Police from enquiring during the course of an investigation—Amolak Ram, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 13, 12 Lah. 211, 133 I.C. 288, 32 Cr.L.J. 1022, 1932 Cr.C. 23, 32 P.L.R. 935.

168. When any subordinate police-officer has made any investigation under this Chapter, he shall report the result of such investigation to the officer in charge of police-station.

Report of investigation by subordinate police officer.

532. It was formerly held that a report made by a subordinate Police Officer under this section was not a public document within the meaning of sec 74, Evidence Act, and an accused person was not entitled to a copy of it before trial—Arumugan, 20 Mad. 189, 7 M.L.J. 167, 2 Weir 120 (142, 144, 763). But now see sec. 173, sub-section (4).

169. If, upon an investigation under this Chapter, it appears to the officer in charge of the police-station or to the police-officer making the investigation, that there is not sufficient evidence or reasonable ground of suspicion to justify the forwarding of the accused to a Magistrate, such officer shall, if such person is in custody, release him on his executing a bond, with or without sureties, as such officer may direct, to appear, if any when so required, before a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence on a police-report and to try the accused or commit him for trial.

Release of accused when evidence deficient.

Change:—The italicised words have been added by section 39 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. "In the case of sec. 169, we agree that the power contemplated by the section should be exercisable by investigating officers and we see no reason in this case to restrict the power to officers not below the rank of Sub-Inspector. With regard to section 170, however, we consider that the direct responsibility for sending up a case should rest with the officer in charge of the police-station."—Report of the Joint Committee (1922).

533. Power of Police Officer:—This section in terms applies only to the case of an accused who has never been forwarded to a Magistrate—Rahu, 43 All 186 (189). See also Hakim Ally in Note 540A. This section is only employed while the case is at the stage of the investigation by the police. There is no need for the Sub-Inspector to take any steps under this section after the accused appeared before the Magistrate, for the question of their admission to bail is one for the Magistrate and not for the Sub-Inspector—Rahat Husain, A.I.R. 1933 All. 582 (585), 35 Cr.L.J. 208, 146 I.C. 896, 1933 Cr.C. 926.

This section does not authorise a police-officer to entertain an application for withdrawal of a complaint. Permitting a complainant to withdraw is a judicial act, the exercise of which is vested in the Magistrate under sec 248 and 345, and the police have no authority to interfere in such matters—Anonymous, Ratanlal 91.

Re-arrest:—The admission to bail by the Police under this section is a purely provisional arrangement; and, therefore, if the Magistrate considers that the evidence does establish a prima facie case of a non-bailable offence, the accused should be re-arrested and forwarded to the Magistrate in custody—Anonymous, Ratanlal 121.

Where a person is discharged under sec 169, Cr. P. C., and examined as a prosecution witness it is unfair to launch a prosecution against him—Chuni Lal, 34 Cr.L.J. 761, 144 I.C. 380, A.I.R. 1933 All 399, 1933 Cr.C. 682, 1933 A.L.J. 735, Ind. 170. (1) If, upon an investigation under this Chapter, it appears to the officer in charge of the police-station that there is sufficient evidence or reasonable ground as aforesaid, such officer shall forward the accused under custody to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence upon a police-report and to try the accused or commit him for trial, or if the offence is bailable and the accused is able to give security, shall take security from him for his appearance before such Magistrate on a day fixed and for his attendance from day to day before such Magistrate until otherwise directed.

(2) When the officer in charge of a police-station forwards an accused person to a Magistrate or takes security for his appearance before such Magistrate under this section, he shall send to such Magistrate any weapon or other article which it may be necessary to produce before him, and shall require the complainant (if any) and so many of the persons who appear to such officer to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case as he may think necessary, to execute a bond, to appear before the Magistrate as thereby directed and prosecute or give evidence (as the case may be) in the matter of the charge against the accused.

(5) The officer in whose presence the bond is executed shall deliver a copy thereof to one of the persons who executed it, and shall then send to the Magistrate the original with his report.

Change:—Sub-section (4) has been omitted by the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act II of 1926, for the following reasons :—Sub-section (4) provides that the day fixed under this section shall be the day whereon the accused person is to appear, if security for his appearance has been taken, or the day on which he may be expected to arrive at the Court of the Magistrate, if he is to be forwarded in custody. This provision requires, for example, that all witnesses shall be bound down to appear before the Magistrate on the date when the accused is expected to arrive at the Court if he is forwarded in custody. It has been found to be inconvenient, and, it is understood, is not frequently followed in practice"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (Gazette of India, 1925, Part V, p 214).

534. Scope:—This section applies to non-cognizable offences. The words "investigation under this Chapter" includes investigation into a non-cognizable offence held under sec. 155 (3) under the orders of a Magistrate—Raghubar Dayal, 53 All 407, 32 Cr L.J. 465 (466), A I R. 1931 All 263

into the offences which have been committed and which come to their knowledge not from the complainant party but on information which they secure in the course of their duty from other persons—Vijayraghavachari, 30 Cr.L.J. 326 (328), 114 I.C. 365, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 1268, Ind. Rul 1929 Mad. 285.

Sufficient evidence or reasonable ground:—It is true that in cases where definite allegations are made by aggrieved persons which they are prepared to support by positive evidence, apparently free from taint, it is generally not the function of the police to play the role of Judges and to pronounce their verdict on the truth or falsehood of those allegations. In such cases they are bound to send up the accused for trial and not to discuss the probabilities or the improbabilities of the case and come to a final decision of their own. But unfortunately in this country, as has been noticed so often, there is a tendency to implicate innocent persons along with the guilty whenever any occasion arises in that respect, and not only the Courts but the investigating officers must proceed cautiously when they are faced with that situation. To restrain them altogether from using their discretion in such cases would prove detrimental to the interests of the public and would lead to unnecessary harassment of persons who had absolutely no hand in the crime. A police officer is in the same position as a Magistrate holding inquiry in cases triable by a Court of Session and there is a string of rulings which lay down that such Magistrate has power to discharge an accused person if the evidence against him is palpably false or legally insufficient and this is in spite of the fact that the function of sifting the truth or falsehood of that evidence is within the competence of the Sessions Judge only—Jaimal Singh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 523, I.L.R. 1939 Lah. 307, 41 Cr.L.J. 146, 185 I.C. 266, 41 P.L.R. 763.

"Shall forward":—As soon as it appears to the investigating police officer that there is sufficient ground for forwarding the accused, the police officer is bound to forward the accused, and has no option but to do so—Govinda, 16 N.L.R. 9, 21 Cr.L.J. 769, 58 I.C. 449.

It is doubtful whether the discretion vested in the investigating officer by the provisions of sec. 170, Cr. P. C., can be controlled by the Superintendent of Police, or so controlled after the discretion has been exercised—Umesh v. Satish, 22 C.W.N. 69 (71), 26 Cr.L.J. 208.

Secs. 167, 170, 344:—If after the period of 15 days prescribed by sec. 167, the police wish to detain the accused in custody, they can only proceed by forwarding the accused under sec. 170 to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the case. The Magistrate can then, under sec. 344, remand the accused to custody, if there are reasonable grounds for doing so—Sooba, 1931 A.L.J. 617, 32 Cr.L.J. 1045 (1047); Balkrishna, 12 Lah. 435, 33 Cr.L.J. 180 (182).

Report not necessary:—When the investigation cannot be completed within the 15 days prescribed by sec. 167, and the accused person is consequently forwarded to a Magistrate under this section, it is not necessary that a report prescribed by sec. 173 should be forwarded at the same time. Such an implication should not be read into sec. 170. Sec. 173 contemplates a case where the investigation has been completed; but sec. 170 implies a case where the investigation is not complete, but where there is reasonable ground or suspicion to justify the forwarding of the accused to a Magistrate. If the investigation is completed, and the report has been prepared, the accused is forwarded because the case is ready for inquiry or trial; if the investigation is not complete, and the report is not ready, the accused may be forwarded on reasonable ground or suspicion, in order that the Court may remand the accused under sec. 344, if there are reasonable grounds for doing so—Sooba, supra.

535. Right of accused to copy of charge-sheet at the beginning of trial:—It was held under the old law that a Magistrate was entitled to refuse to give the accused, at the commencement of the trial, a copy of the Police charge-sheet, containing the whole of the prosecution evidence and extracts from the police diaries—Venkataratnam 19 Mad. 14; but this is no longer good law in view of the new sub-sec. (4) of sec. 173 which now entitles the accused to get a copy of the charge-sheet before trial. See Note 541 under the heading "Sub-section (4)."

Complainants and witnesses not to be required to accompany police officer.

171. No complainant or witness on his way to the Court of the Magistrate shall be required to accompany a police officer, or shall be subjected to unnecessary restraint or inconvenience, or required to give any security for his appearance other than his own bond :

Complainants and witnesses not to be subjected to restraint.

Provided that, if any complainant or witness refuses to attend or execute a bond as directed in section 170, the officer in charge of the police-station may forward him in custody to the Recusant complainant or witness may be forwarded in custody.

Magistrate who may detain him in custody until he executes such bond, or until the hearing of the case is completed.

536. Unnecessary restraint:—Where a witness was kept under police surveillance for about four days, it was held that there was no warrant in the law to keep a witness under such unnecessary restraint and that under such circumstances the evidence of the witness could not be accepted as given voluntarily.—Bajrangi Lall, 4 C W N 49 (54)

172. (1) Every police-officer making an investigation under this Chapter shall day by day enter his proceedings in the investigation in a diary, setting forth the time at which the information reached him, the time at which he began, and closed his investigation, the place or places visited by him, and a statement of the circumstances ascertained through his investigation.

(2) Any Criminal Court may send for the police-diaries of a case under inquiry or trial in such Court, and may use such diaries, not as evidence in the case, but to aid it in such inquiry or trial. Neither the accused nor his agents shall be entitled to call for such diaries, nor shall he or they be entitled to see them merely because they are referred to by the Court; but if they are used by the police-officer who made them, to refresh his memory, or if the Court uses them for the purpose of contradicting such police-officer, the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, section 161 or section 145, as the case may be, shall apply.

537. Scope:—The object of the special diaries under this section (which are commonly called 'case diaries') has been well expressed by Edge, C.J., in Mannu, 19 All 300, 1897 A W N 174. "The early stages of investigation which follows on the commission of a crime must necessarily in the vast majority of cases be left to the Police and until the honesty, the capacity, the discretion and judgment of the Police can be thoroughly trusted it is necessary for the protection of the public against criminals, for the vindication of the law and for the protection of those who are charged with having committed a criminal offence that the Magistrate or Judge before whom the case is for investigation or for trial should have the means of ascertaining what was the information, true, false or misleading, which was obtained from day to day b the police-officer who was investigating the case and what were the lines of investigation upon which the police-officer acted." Quoted with approval in Peary v. Weston, 16 C.W.N. 145 (179), 13 Cr.L.J. 65, 13 I.C. 721.

The object of sub-sec. (2) of this section is to enable the Court to direct the Police-officer who is giving his evidence, to refresh his memory from the notes made by him in the course of his investigation of the case, or to question him as to contradictions which may appear between statements so recorded and the evidence he is giving in Court. If used for the latter purpose the provisions of secs 145 and 161 of the Indian Evidence Act shall apply. The Court may also use the diaries in the course of the trial for the purpose of clearing up obscurities in the evidence or brining out relevant facts which the Court thinks are material in the interests of a fair trial. If the statements in question, however, have not been made in evidence in accordance with these statutory provision, no Court has the right to refer to them subsequently for the purpose of coming to a judicial decision upon the case which is under trial or enquiry—Mohammad v Emp., 26 Cr.L.J. 1308 (1314), 89 I.C. 252, A.I.R. 1926 Lah 54, 1 Lah. Cas 193.

This section does not deal with the recording of statements made by the witnesses. What is intended to be recorded under this section is what the Sub-Inspector did, the places where he went, the people he visited, what he saw, etc. No statement can be said to be recorded under this section so as to be a privileged one—Mafizaddi, 31 C.W.N 940, 28 Cr.L.J. 805, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 644; Hafiz Muhammad, 12 P.L.T. 393, 32 Cr.L.J. 638 (640), A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 150 This section does not provide for recording statements of witnesses. Any statements of witnesses that are recorded, in whatever form they may be recorded, are recorded under sec. 161, and the accused has the right to ask for a copy of such statements, to use them for the purpose of contradicting the witnesses for the prosecution—Sadhu Shaikh, 32 C.W.N 280 (281), 29 Cr.L.J. 581, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 260.

Entries made in a personal diary kept by a Police Officer, who did not start the investigation of a case and did not take any part in the investigation, do not fall within the purview of this section and are not, therefore, inadmissible in evidence by virtue of the provisions of this section—Kalia, 26 Cr.L.J. 579 (581), 85 I.C. 723, A.I.R. 1925 Cal 959.

The provisions of sec 172, Cr. P. C., apply to all Police Officers making an investigation. The Police Officers are required to enter proceedings in a diary from day to day—Jahangir, 35 Cr.L.J. 1180 (1208), A.I.R. 1935 Lah 230, 150 I.C. 1056.

This section does not apply to the Calcutta Police—Panchanan Mukherjee v. Emp., 30 Cr.L.J. 577, 116 I.C. 160, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 257, 33 C.W.N. 203, Ind. Rul 1929 Cal. 448.

Diary:—The diary mentioned in this section is called Special or Case Diary.

Diary to be kept properly—It is incumbent upon a Police-officer who investigates a case under this chapter to keep the diary as provided by this section, and the omission to keep the diary deprives the Court of the very valuable assistance which such diaries can give, if legitimately used—Hiralal, 1918 P.R. 16, 19 Cr.L.J. 517. The absence of the diary does not vitiate the trial—Hafiz Muhammad, 32 Cr.L.J. 638, 131 I.C. 17, A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 150, 12 P.L.T 393, 1931 Cr C 390

Supervision notes:—It is a mistake to exclude supervision notes from the Police diaries sent to the Courts. The investigation may be (and usually is) in the hands of a Sub-Inspector and the supervision is conducted by superior officers. But the Court which may use the diaries to aid it in the inquiry or trial cannot rightly be left in ignorance of the supervision which necessarily determines the course of the investigation at point after point. Supervision usually involves a fresh questioning of the principal witnesses in the course of what is still the Police investigation of the case. Their exclusion is apt to lead to a miscarriage of justice, if not also to leave a suspicion that something must be wrong with the investigation which it is not desired should become known to the Courts. The notes cannot, of course, be used as evidence, any more than can the diaries of the Investigating Officer himself; but they usually make these diaries more intelligible and more useful as aids in inquiries and trials—Manu Chik, 39 Cr.L.J. 635 (639), 175 I.C. 716, A.I.R. 1938 Pat 290

"Court may send for diaries"—A Sessions Judge should not issue a general order directing the Police diaries, in all cases committed for trial to the Court of Session and in every criminal appeal, to be transmitted to him. He is only authorised to send for the diary of a particular case actually pending before him, if he thinks it necessary in such case to peruse the diary—Mannu, 19 All 390 (415), 1897 A.W.N. 174 (F.B.)

538. Use of diary:—

Diary not an evidence in the case.—Police diaries should not be treated as evidence in the case. The Court should not take the statements contained in the diaries as the material which would help it to come to a decision of the case. Should the Court consider that any date, fact, or statement referred to in the Special Diary is or may be material, it cannot legally accept the Diary as evidence, in any sense, of such date, fact or statement, and must in law, before allowing any date, fact, or statement referred to in the Special Diary to influence its mind, have such date, fact, or statement established by legal evidence. It is the Court which is entitled to use the Special Diary for the purpose of seeking for sources and lines of enquiry and for the names of persons who may be in a position to give material evidence—Mannu, 19 All 390 (393) (F.B.); Syed Abdul Rahim v Salhu, 10 C.W.N. 600, 3 Cr.L.J. 408; Nga Lun, A.I.R. 1935 Rang 370 (373), 36 Cr.L.J. 1487, 158 I.C. 784, 13 Rang 570, 1935 Cr.C. 1088 (F.B.) See also Nga San, A.I.R. 1936 Rang 75 (76), 37 Cr.L.J. 414, 161 I.C. 14, 1936 Cr.C. 39. The Court should not make a summary of the contents of the diary and make it a part of the judgment, for that would also make the statements contained in the diary virtually a part of the evidence in the case—Nand Lal, 1894 A.W.N. 155. The use of the diary as evidence in the case either for or against the accused, is strictly forbidden by sec. 162. Even the consent or desire of the accused cannot legalise the use of the diary as evidence in the case—Manna Lal, 27 O.C. 40, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 1, 25 Cr.L.J. 49

Under sec. 172 a Court referring to such diaries is entitled to use them not as evidence in the case but to aid in such enquiry or trial. The meaning of this is that the Court may on finding some fact noted in the diary take advantage of this in order to put some necessary question to witness in the box so as to elicit in evidence the fact which has been disclosed by the diary—Deo Lal, 34 Cr.L.J. 948, 145 I.C. 426, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 440, 14 P.L.T. 396, 1933 Cr.C. 974. See also Karan Singh, 29 Cr.L.J. 76 (29), 106 I.C. 442, A.I.R. 1928 All 25, 26 A.L.J. 92 and Mohammad v. Emp., in Note 537.

The diary cannot be used as evidence of any date, fact or statement contained therein, but can be used only for the purpose of assisting the Court in the inquiry or trial, or as suggesting means of further elucidating the points which need clearing up and which are material for doing justice between Crown and the accused—Dal Singh, 44 Cal 876 (888) 39 I.C. 311, A.I.R. 1917 P.C. 25, 18 Cr.L.J. 471, 44 I.A. 137, 13 N.L.R. 100, 15 A.L.J. 475, 1 P.L.W. 661, 19 Bom L.R. 510, 21 C.W.N. 818, 26 C.L.J. 13, 6 M.L.W. 71, 22 M.L.T. 31, 1917 M.W.N. 522, 86 L.J.P. 140, 11 Bur.L.T. 54 (P.C.); Sanmon Tiwari, 38 Cr.L.J. 102, 165 I.C. 761, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 581, 1936 Cr.C. 952; Jadab, 27 Cal. 295; Mannu, 19 All. 390 (395) (F.B.); or for the purpose of seeking for sources and lines of enquiry and for the names of persons who may be in a position to give material evidence—Mannu, supra. Where, after a verdict was given by the jury, the Sessions Judge stated that he would look to the police-diaries before deciding whether he would refer the case under sec. 307, held that the Judge's action was not illegal, because he used the diary for the purpose of aiding him in the trial. The trial had not ended with the verdict, for the Judge had still to decide whether he would accept it or refer the case to the High Court—Rebati Mohan, 56 Cal 150, 32 C.W.N. 945, 30 Cr.L.J. 435 (437), A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 57.

The diary cannot be used for the purpose of testing the evidence of prosecution witnesses by reading the earlier statements of those witnesses made to the police and entered in the diary—Dal Singh, supra. It is at least equally contrary to law to make use of the Police diary for the purpose of corroborating the evidence of prosecution witnesses as given in the Court, especially having regard to sec. 162, Cr. P. Code. Therefore a Magistrate makes an improper use of police diaries when he observes in his judgment "Some discrepancies in the statements of some witnesses examined in Court have been pointed out from what they stated before the investigating officer. I have gone through the case diary. Those discrepancies are not material to facts in issue"—Sakul Ahir v. Palakdhari Ahir, 11 P.L.T. 837, 131 I.C. 535, A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 96, 1931 Cr.C. 192, 32 Cr.L.J. 735, Ind. Rul. 1931 Pat. 215; Sanmon Tiwari v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 102, 165 I.C. 761, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 581, 1936 Cr.C. 952. Such improper admission of evidence will not, in all cases, compel interference by a superior Court—Sanmon Tiwari v. Emp., supra.

The aid which a Court can receive from the entries in such a diary is usually confined to utilising the information given therein as a foundation for questions to be put to the witnesses, and in using the diary the Court should always employ very great caution—Raja Ram, 3 O.W.N. 1001, 28 Cr.L.J. 134, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 64. As observed by Knox, J., in Nasiruddin, 16 All. 207 (208): "Statements made to the police during the investigation are recorded by police-officers in the most haphazard manner. Officers conducting an investigation not unnaturally record what seems in their opinion material at that stage and omit many matters equally material, and, it may be, of supreme importance as the case develops. Besides that, in most cases they are not experts of what is and what is not evidence. The statements are recorded hurriedly in the midst of a crowd and confusion, subject to frequent interruptions and suggestions from by-standers. There is no guarantee that they do not contain much more or much less than what the witness has said." These principles should be remembered by the Court when utilizing the record of statements made by a police-officer in the course of an investigation and entered in the diary—Raja Ram, supra.

The trying Magistrate has no business whatever to look at the case diary and the appeal should be heard on the evidence adduced and the reasons advanced in the trial Court alone. The conclusion that was reached by the police-officer who made the enquiry is irrelevant for the purpose of the appellate Court's consideration, as is also the fact that persons were called as witnesses for the prosecution who were not examined by the police-officer—Raghunathmal v. Patiram, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 394 (395), 172 I.C. 177.

Use by Police-officer for refreshing memory or by the Court to contradict the Police-officer :—A Criminal Court may permit the Police-officer who made the special diary to look at it for the purpose of refreshing his memory, or may use it for the purpose of showing contradiction between the statements recorded in the diary and the evidence which the police officer is giving in Court. A special diary cannot be used to enable any witness other than the Police-officer who made it, to refresh his memory by looking at it, and it cannot be used to contradict any witness other than such Police officer—Mannu, 19 All. 390 (394, 395) (F.B.); Dal Singh, 44 Cal. 876 (889) (P.C.), 21 C.W.N. 818, 26 C.L.J. 13, 39 I.C. 311, A.I.R. 1917 P.C. 25, 18 Cr.L.J. 471, 13 N.L.R. 100, 15 A.L.J. 475, 1 P.L.W. 661, 22 M.L.T. 31, 19 Bom.L.R. 510, 6 M.L.W. 71, 1917 M.W.N. 522, 33 M.L.J. 555, 1 Bur.L.T. 54.

Before using the police-diary for the purpose of contradicting the police-officer who made it, the Court must comply with the specific enactment of sec. 145, Evidence Act, and call the attention of the Police-officer to such parts of the diary as are to be used for the purpose of contradicting him; otherwise such an use of the special diary would be illegal. Section 145, Evidence Act, does not either extend or control sec. 172, Cr. P. Code. It is only if the Court uses the diary for contradicting the police-officer that sec. 145, Evidence Act applies, and, in such case it applies for that purpose only, and not for the purpose of enabling a Court or a party to contradict any other witness or to show it or its contents to any other person—Mannu, 19 All 390 (394), 1897 A.W.N. 174 (F.B.).

The accused is not entitled to insist that a Police-officer should refer to the diary to refresh his memory—Kali Charan, 8 Cal. 154; Mohinder, 33 P.L.R. 891, 33 Cr.L.J. 97 (105), 135 I.C. 209, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 103, 1932 Cr.C. 123, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 81; nor is the Judge bound to compel the Police-officer to look at the diary to refresh his memory—Jhubboo, 8 Cal. 739. Such use is at the discretion of the Judge and of the Police-officer—Mohinder, supra. It may be within the right of the Police-officers not to refer to a diary, but the accused is entitled to the benefit of their refusal to refer to the diary and to disclose the source of their information—Deodhary Pandey, 26 Cr.L.J. 738 (739), 86 I.C. 274, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 131, 6 P.L.T. 810. But if a Sub-Inspector does not remember what certain witnesses stated at the investigation, and refuses to refresh his memory from the diaries, the Court should compel him to look into the diaries—Mohiuddin, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 829 (830).

The diary is permitted to be used for the limited purpose of contradicting the Police-officer, and not for the purpose of corroborating him—Achhaibat, 2 P.L.T. 223, 61 I.C. 230, 22 Cr.L.J. 374; Sakal v. Palakdhari, 11 P.L.T. 837, 32 Cr.L.J. 735, 131 I.C. 535. But where independently of the police diary wrongly relied upon by the Court below, there was ample legal evidence to corroborate the prosecution case and to sustain the conviction, the High Court in revision condoned the irregularity and refused to interfere—Achhaibat, supra. See also Sanmon Tiwari, 38 Cr.L.J. 102, 165 I.C. 761, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 581, 1936 Cr.C. 952, 3 B.R. 78, 9 R.P. 211 and Dal Singh, 44 Cal. 876, 39 I.C. 311, A.I.R. 1917 P.C. 25, 18 Cr.L.J. 471, 44 I.A. 137, 13 N.L.R. 100, 15 A.L.J. 475, 1 P.L.W. 661, 19 Bom.L.R. 510, 21 C.W.N. 818, 26 C.L.J. 13, 6 M.L.W. 71, 22 M.L.T. 31, 1917 M.W.N. 522, 86 L.J.P. 140, 11 Bom.L.T. 54 (P.C.). A Magistrate should not refer to any entry in a diary, which is not used by a prosecution witness to refresh his memory, as corroborative of his evidence; but an error of this kind is not a sufficient ground for interference by the High Court, when the Magistrate has found the accused guilty after considering the other evidence in the case—Cuttialikkutti, 1 L.W. 229, 15 Cr.L.J. 256.

539. Accused not entitled to see the diary:—If the diary is one of the kind described in this section neither the accused nor his agent is entitled to call for them or to see them unless and until they are used by the Police or by the Court for the purposes described in the section—Rabindra Nath Singh, 26 Cr.L.J. 297 (298), 84 I.C. 441, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 339. The Special Diary, including every entry in it, is absolutely privileged from inspection by the accused or his pleader. The reason is this: if the accused were entitled to inspect the diary, the police-officer making the investigation would omit from the diary all informations which he believed would be injurious to the prosecution. The accused person is entitled to inspect the diary only in certain cases, viz., when the diary is used by the Court for the purpose of enabling the Police-officer who made it to refresh his memory, or when the diary is used for the purpose of contradicting him—Mannu, 19 All 390 (399) (F.B.); Nga Lun, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 370 (373), 36 Cr.L.J. 1487, 158 I.C. 784, 1935 Cr.C. 1088, 13 Rang. 570 (F.B.). But even in such a case, the accused is entitled to see only the particular entry used and so much of it as in the opinion of the Court is necessary in that particular matter to the full understanding of the particular entry, and no more—Mannu, 19 All. 390 (405) (F.B.); Lachmi, 2 Pat. 74. It would be contrary to public policy to allow the accused a wholesale inspection of all the diaries relating to the investigation—Dharram Vir, 34 Cr.L.J. 464 (466), 142 I.C. 854, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 498, 1933 Cr.C. 758, 34 P.L.R. 541, Ind. Rul. 1933 Lah. 283; Mannu, 19 All. 390 (399, 405) (F.B.).

540. Contents of the diary—Statements under sec. 161:—Before the Amendment Act of 1923, it was held that statements made to a police-officer by a person whom he was examining under sec. 161 should not be recorded in the special diary—Dadan Gazi, 33 Cal. 1023; Sheru Shah, 20 Cal. 642. A contrary view was taken in

The diary cannot be used for the purpose of testing the evidence of prosecution witnesses by reading the earlier statements of those witnesses made to the police and entered in the diary—Dal Singh, supra. It is at least equally contrary to law to make use of the Police diary for the purpose of corroborating the evidence of prosecution witnesses as given in the Court, especially having regard to sec. 162, Cr. P. Code. Therefore a Magistrate makes an improper use of police diaries when he observes in his judgment "Some discrepancies in the statements of some witnesses examined in Court have been pointed out from what they stated before the investigating officer. I have gone through the case diary Those discrepancies are not material to facts in issue"—Sakul Ahir v. Palakdhari Ahir, 11 P.L.T. 837, 131 I.C. 535, A.I.R. 1931 Pat 96, 1931 Cr.C 192, 32 Cr.L.J. 735, Ind. Rul. 1931 Pat. 215; Sanmon Tiwari v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 102, 165 I.C. 761, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 581, 1936 Cr.C. 952. Such improper admission of evidence will not, in all cases, compel interference by a superior Court—Sanmon Tiwari v. Emp., supra.

The aid which a Court can receive from the entries in such a diary is usually confined to utilising the information given therein as a foundation for questions to be put to the witnesses, and in using the diary the Court should always employ very great caution—Raja Ram, 3 O.W.N. 1001, 28 Cr.L.J. 134, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 64. As observed by Knox, J., in Nasiruddin, 16 All. 207 (208): "Statements made to the police during the investigation are recorded by police-officers in the most haphazard manner. Officers conducting an investigation not unnaturally record what seems in their opinion material at that stage and omit many matters equally material, and, it may be, of supreme importance as the case develops. Besides that, in most cases they are not experts of what is and what is not evidence. The statements are recorded hurriedly in the midst of a crowd and confusion, subject to frequent interruptions and suggestions from by-standers. There is no guarantee that they do not contain much more or much less than what the witness has said." These principles should be remembered by the Court when utilizing the record of statements made by a police-officer in the course of an investigation and entered in the diary—Raja Ram, supra.

The trying Magistrate has no business whatever to look at the case diary and the appeal should be heard on the evidence adduced and the reasons advanced in the trial Court alone. The conclusion that was reached by the police-officer who made the enquiry is irrelevant for the purpose of the appellate Court's consideration, as is also the fact that persons were called as witnesses for the prosecution who were not examined by the police-officer—Raghunathmal v. Patiram, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 394 (395), 172 I.C. 177.

Use by Police-officer for refreshing memory or by the Court to contradict the Police-officer:—A Criminal Court may permit the Police-officer who made the special diary to look at it for the purpose of refreshing his memory, or may use it for the purpose of showing contradiction between the statements recorded in the diary and the evidence which the police officer is giving in Court. A special diary cannot be used to enable any witness other than the Police-officer who made it, to refresh his memory by looking at it, and it cannot be used to contradict any witness other than such Police officer—Mannu, 19 All. 390 (394, 395) (F.B.); Dal Singh, 44 Cal 876 (889) (P.C.), 21 C.W.N. 818, 26 C.L.J. 13, 39 I.C. 311, A.I.R. 1917 P.C. 25, 18 Cr.L.J. 471, 13 N.L.R. 100, 15 A.L.J. 475, 1 P.L.W. 661, 22 M.L.T. 31, 19 Bom L.R. 510, 6 M.L.W. 71, 1917 M.W.N. 522, 33 M.L.J. 555, 1 Bur.L.T. 54.

Before using the police-diary for the purpose of contradicting the police-officer who made it, the Court must comply with the specific enactment of sec. 145, Evidence Act, and call the attention of the Police-officer to such parts of the diary as are to be used for the purpose of contradicting him; otherwise such an use of the special diary would be illegal. Section 145, Evidence Act, does not either extend or control sec. 172, Cr. P. Code. It is only if the Court uses the diary for contradicting the police-officer that sec. 145, Evidence Act applies, and, in such case it applies for that purpose only, and not for the purpose of enabling a Court or a party to contradict any other witness or to show it or its contents to any other person—Mannu, 19 All 390 (394), 1897 A.W.N. 174 (F.B.).

The accused is not entitled to insist that a Police-officer should refer to the diary to refresh his memory—Kali Charan, 8 Cal. 154; Mohinder, 33 P.L.R. 891, 33 Cr.L.J. 97 (105), 135 I.C. 209, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 103, 1932 Cr.C. 123, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 81; nor is the Judge bound to compel the Police-officer to look at the diary to refresh his memory—Jhubboo, 8 Cal. 739. Such use is at the discretion of the Judge and of the Police-officer—Mohinder, supra. It may be within the right of the Police-officers not to refer to a diary, but the accused is entitled to the benefit of their refusal to refer to the diary and to disclose the source of their information—Deodhary Pandey, 26 Cr.L.J. 738 (739), 86 I.C. 274, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 131, 6 P.L.T. 810. But if a Sub-Inspector does not remember what certain witnesses stated at the investigation, and refuses to refresh his memory from the diaries, the Court should compel him to look into the diaries—Mohiuddin, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 829 (830).

The diary is permitted to be used for the limited purpose of contradicting the Police-officer, and not for the purpose of corroborating him—Achhabat, 2 P.L.T. 223, 61 I.C. 230, 22 Cr.L.J. 374; Sakal v. Palakdhari, 11 P.L.T. 837, 32 Cr.L.J. 735, 131 I.C. 535. But where independently of the police diary wrongly relied upon by the Court below, there was ample legal evidence to corroborate the prosecution case and to sustain the conviction, the High Court in revision condoned the irregularity and refused to interfere—Achhabat, supra. See also Sanmon Tiwari, 38 Cr.L.J. 102, 165 I.C. 761, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 581, 1936 Cr.C. 952, 3 B.R. 78, 9 R.P. 211 and Dal Singh, 44 Cal. 876, 39 I.C. 311, A.I.R. 1917 P.C. 25, 18 Cr.L.J. 471, 44 I.A. 137, 13 N.L.R. 100, 15 A.L.J. 475, 1 P.L.W. 661, 19 Bom.L.R. 510, 21 C.W.N. 818, 26 C.L.J. 13, 6 M.L.W. 71, 22 M.L.T. 31, 1917 M.W.N. 522, 86 L.J.P. 140, 11 Bom.L.T. 54 (P.C.). A Magistrate should not refer to any entry in a diary, which is not used by a prosecution witness to refresh his memory, as corroborative of his evidence; but an error of this kind is not a sufficient ground for interference by the High Court, when the Magistrate has found the accused guilty after considering the other evidence in the case—Cuttialikutti, 1 L.W. 229, 15 Cr.L.J. 256.

539. Accused not entitled to see the diary:—If the diary is one of the kind described in this section neither the accused nor his agent is entitled to call for them or to see them unless and until they are used by the Police or by the Court for the purposes described in the section—Rabindra Nath Singh, 26 Cr.L.J. 297 (298), 84 I.C. 441, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 339. The Special Diary, including every entry in it, is absolutely privileged from inspection by the accused or his pleader. The reason is this: if the accused were entitled to inspect the diary, the police-officer making the investigation would omit from the diary all informations which he believed would be injurious to the prosecution. The accused person is entitled to inspect the diary only in certain cases, viz., when the diary is used by the Court for the purpose of enabling the Police-officer who made it to refresh his memory, or when the diary is used for the purpose of contradicting him—Mannu, 19 All. 390 (399) (F.B.); Nga Lun, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 370 (373), 36 Cr.L.J. 1487, 158 I.C. 784, 1935 Cr.C. 1088, 13 Rang. 570 (F.B.). But even in such a case, the accused is entitled to see only the particular entry used and so much of it as in the opinion of the Court is necessary in that particular matter to the full understanding of the particular entry, and no more—Mannu, 19 All. 390 (405) (F.B.); Lachmi, 2 Pat. 74. It would be contrary to public policy to allow the accused a wholesale inspection of all the diaries relating to the investigation—Dharram Vir, 34 Cr.L.J. 464 (466), 142 I.C. 854, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 498, 1933 Cr.C. 758, 34 P.L.R. 541, Ind. 540. Contents of the diary—Statements under sec. 161:—Before the Amendment Act of 1923, it was held that statements made to a police-officer by a person whom he was examining under sec. 161 should not be recorded in the special diary—Dadan Gazi, 33 Cal. 1023, Sheru Shah, 20 Cal. 642. A contrary view was taken in Mannu, 19 All. 390 (400) (F.B.). "But now whatever opinion may be held as to whether the Diary is a proper place for statements, the Police cannot by entering the statements in the Special Diary under sec. 172 protect them from the provisions of sec. 162, but they are liable to be produced under conditions laid down in the latter section"—Woodroffe's Crim. Pro., p. 192.

See Notes 497, 501 and 502C.

173. (1) Every investigation under this Chapter shall be completed without unnecessary delay, and, as soon as it is completed, the officer in charge of the police-station shall—

Report of police-officer.

(a) forward, to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence on a police-report, a report, in the form prescribed by the Provincial Government, setting forth the names of the parties, the nature of the information and the names of the persons who appear to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case, and stating whether the accused (if arrested) has been forwarded in custody, or has been released on his bond, and if so, whether with or without sureties, and

(b) communicate, in such manner as may be prescribed by the Provincial Government, the action taken by him to the person, if any, by whom the information relating to the commission of the offence was first given.

(2) Where a superior officer, or police has been appointed under section 158, the report shall, in any cases in which the Provincial Government by general or special order so directs, be submitted through that officer, and he may, pending the orders of the Magistrate, direct the officer in charge of the police-station to make further investigation.

(3) Whenever it appears from a report forwarded under this section that the accused has been released on his bond, the Magistrate shall make such order for the discharge of such bond or otherwise as he thinks fit.

(4) A copy of any report forwarded under this section shall, on application, be furnished to the accused before the commencement of the inquiry or trial:

Provided that the same shall be paid for unless the Magistrate for some special reason thinks fit to furnish it free of cost.

Change:—Clause (b) and sub-section (4) have been added by sec. 40 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. For reasons of sub-section (4), see below.

The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

540A. Scope:—There are three sections in the Code relating to final reports, viz., 169, 170 and 173. Section 169 relates to cases in which no person is sent up for trial, sec 170 to cases in which some person is sent up, and sec. 173 contains general directions relating to both. The three sections must be read together—Hakim Ally, 7 Cr.L.J. 414 (415), 4 LBR 173. The provisions of the Cr P. Code apply, unless there is anything in any enactment for the time being in force regulating the manner of investigating offences connected with Railway accidents to the contrary. This is provided for by sub-sec. (2) of sec. 5, Cr. P. Code. If there is anything contained in the rules under sec. 84 of the Indian Railways Act (IX of 1890) that is opposed to the provisions of sec. 173, Cr P Code, operating, then undoubtedly the provisions of sec 173, Cr. P. Code, must give way; but there is nothing that clearly frustrates the authority of the Police-officer mentioned in sec. 173, Cr P. Code, who has completed his investigation at the time an enquiry under rule 20 framed under sec 84 of the Indian Railways Act (IX of 1890) is commenced or ordered—Shivbhat Manjunathbhat Hattangadi v. Emp., 29 Cr L J 551 (553), 109 IC 487, 30 Bom L.R. 392, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 162, 52 Bom 238, 10 A I Cr.R. 308.

541. Police report:—The police report referred to in sec. 190, cl. (b) is the report under this section—Ahmed Khan, 12 Cr L J 92, 9 IC 492, 5 SLR 1. This case was dissented from in Mehrab, 26 Cr L J. 181, 83 IC 885, 17 SLR 150, AIR. 1924 Sind 71 (FB), where it was held that the police report mentioned in sec. 190, cl (b) also included reports other than that mentioned in this section. See Note 582. It is the duty of the Police to make a report in every investigation under this Chapter. Where a person gave information to the Police of the commission of a non-cognizable offence, and the Police obtained the authority of a Magistrate, under sec. 155, to investigate the case, and without making any report instituted proceedings against that person under sec 211, I P C, which ended in his conviction, it was held that the conviction was illegal in the absence of a Police report under this section—Appa Ragho, 17 Bom L.R. 69, 16 Cr L J 161, 27 IC. 545.

There is no legal limit to the number of investigations which can be held into a crime, and when one has been completed by the submission of a report under this section, another may be begun on further information received—Divakar v. Ramamurthi, 35 MLJ 127, 47 IC 273, 19 Cr.L.J. 901; Mohinder, 33 PLR. 891, 33 Cr L J. 97 (102). See also Alt, infra.

The report must set forth the 'nature of the information.' A report which omits to set forth the information is defective, and a Magistrate taking cognizance of a case on such report acts illegally—Lee v. Adhikary, 5 IC 553, 37 Cal. 49, 14 C.W.N. 301. The report must be made "in the form prescribed by the Local Government" Where the heading of the form is—"Charge or information, the name of the offence and circumstances connected with it in concise detail and under what section of the Penal Code charge", but in filling up the form the police-officer only set out the sections of the Penal Code but no details or circumstances of any description, held that the provisions of this section were not complied with, and the Magistrate could not take cognizance upon such report—Shivlingappa, 32 Bom L.R. 782, 31 Cr.L.J 1142 (1143), AIR 1930 Bom 372.

It is sufficient if the Police report contains the names of the parties, the nature of the information and the names of the persons acquainted with the circumstances of the case. The report need not state whether in the opinion of the police the accused are guilty or not—Mehrab, 17 SLR. 150, 26 Cr L J. 181.

On receipt of a police report under this section, the Magistrate can take cognizance of the case under sec 190 (b). If, instead of doing so, he proceeds to make over the case to a subordinate Magistrate for enquiry and report as if he has taken cognizance of the case on a complaint, the proceedings of the Magistrate are irregular—Abdullah, 40 Cal 854, 17 C.W.N. 1004, 14 Cr L.J. 297, 19 IC. 953.

A Magistrate's order directing a case reported to him by the police under this section to be struck off, is merely an administrative order and not a judicial order.

When an information of the commission of a cognizable offence is conveyed to a Police-officer competent to investigate the same, he must either decline to investigate the case, if he considers that there is no ground to suspect that an offence has been committed, or he must commence an investigation and, if, in the course of his investigation, he finds that there is sufficient evidence to justify the forwarding of the accused to a Magistrate he must send up the case under sec. 170, Cr. P. C., even if the investigation has not been completed. If, on the other hand, the investigation is completed then he must send up the case under sec. 173, and then he has no power to resume investigation. There is no legal sanction for further investigation by a Police-officer if he has sent up the case for trial under sec. 173, especially with a view to find evidence in favour of the accused in order to enable the District Magistrate to decide whether he should direct the Public Prosecutor to withdraw the case—Emp. v. Ali, 33 Cr.L.J. 912 (914), 140 I.C. 25, 33 P.L.R. 793, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 675, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 611, 1932 Cr.C. 917, following S. N., 4 P.R. 1908 (Cr.). It is clear from the words "or otherwise" in cl. (3) of this section that the Magistrate can on such a report order the prosecution of the person who has been released. It appears to be quite clear that the power of the Magistrate to order a prosecution does not depend on the question whether the police have arrested the person who, in Magistrate's opinion, ought to be put on his trial. The Magistrate's powers in this respect are quite as wide under sec. 173 as under sec. 159. It is the part of the daily duty of Township Magistrates to receive both first and final reports of the Police and to pass orders upon them. It would be a mere farce to tell a Magistrate that he has such a duty to perform if he may not correct a mistake made by the police in sending up the wrong person for trial—Hakim Ally, 7 Cr.L.J. 414 (415), 4 L.B.R. 137. For the procedure after the submission of a report under this section see Raghunath, 33 Cr.L.J. 349 (353), 136 I.C. 842, 12 P.L.T. 937, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 72, 1932 Cr.C. 136, Ind. Rul. 1932 Pat. 129 in Note 587.

This section lays down that as soon as the investigation is completed, the investigating officer is to send a report to the Magistrate. There can be no justification whatever for the Sub-Inspector to delay his final report on the charge of dacoity until the proceedings under sec. 202, Cr. P. C., before the Magistrate had terminated—Rahat Husain, A.I.R. 1933 All. 582 (585), 1933 Cr.C. 926, 146 I.C. 896, 35 Cr.L.J. 208.

This section does not require that an abstract of the evidence to be given by each of the witnesses mentioned, should be entered in the report or charge-sheet—Balasundaram, 31 Cr.L.J. 387, 122 I.C. 341, 1929 M.W.N. 504, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 191, 1930 Cr.C. 191.

Neither in sec. 173, Cr. P. C., nor in the form prescribed by the Local Government, is it provided that the prosecution should produce along with the challan all the documents on which reliance is to be placed in the trial or which have to be produced by the witnesses to be tendered for the prosecution. An accused person is consequently not entitled as of right to insist upon the production of any such document before the case starts. He does not run the risk of being hampered in his defence, as the law clearly entitles him to cross-examine the witnesses even after the charge—K. L. Gauba v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Lah 411 (415), I.L.R. (1937) 18 Lah. 114, 39 P.L.R. 613, 170 I.C. 586, 38 Cr.L.J. 955, 10 R.L. 135.

Sub-section (4):—"This amendment relates to the supply to the accused person of a copy of the charge-sheet in the case in which he is being prosecuted. There has been considerable difficulty in this matter on account of the rulings of various Courts that copies of charge-sheets should not be furnished to accused persons. Some Courts went to the length of holding that till the accused brings his defence, a copy of the charge-sheet should not be furnished to him. It has worked a great hardship. The accused has to grope in the dark as to what case he has to meet, who the prosecution witnesses are, and what their evidence is going to be. This amendment is, therefore, very necessary. Before a case begins or the inquiry or trial commences, an accused person ought to be furnished with a copy of the charge on which he is being prosecuted"—Legislative Assembly Debates, 31st January, 1923, pages 1763—1764.

Before the enactment of this sub-section, it was held that the report made by a Police-officer under this section not being a public document within the meaning of sec. 74 of the Evidence Act, the accused was not entitled to get a copy of the report before trial—Arumugam, 20 Mad 189; Venkataratnam, 19 Mad 14. These cases are no longer law.

A report is not necessary when the police forward the accused to a Magistrate under sec. 170, before the investigation is complete; nor is a report necessary before the Magistrate takes action in such a case under sec. 344 by remanding the accused to custody. See Sooba, 1931 A.L.J. 617, 32 Cr.L.J. 1045 (1047), cited in Note 534 under sec. 170.

It is an elementary principle of natural justice which needs no authority that an accused person shall have free access at any time during the trial to all the records which are before the Court. The same considerations apply to the refusal to permit reference in cross-examination to the contents of the charge sheet, for, this also forms part of the Committal record—Brahmayya v. The King, 40 Cr.L.J. 265 (268), 179 I.C. 783, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 442. In Dinanath Sahay v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 174, 40 Cr.L.J. 509, 17 Pat. 622, 20 P.L.T. 70, 1939 P.W.N. 136, 180 I.C. 845, the informant who was proceeded against under sec. 182, I. P. C., was held to be entitled to get copies of the final report.

174. (1) The officer in charge of a police-station or some other police-officer specially empowered by the Provincial Government in that behalf, on receiving information that a person—

- (a) has committed suicide, or
- (b) has been killed by another, or by an animal, or by machinery, or by an accident, or
- (c) has died under circumstances raising a reasonable suspicion that some other person has committed an offence, shall immediately give intimation thereof to the nearest Magistrate empowered to hold inquests, and unless otherwise directed by any rule prescribed by the Provincial Government, or by any general or special order of the District or Sub-divisional Magistrate, shall proceed to the place where the body of such deceased person is, and there, in the presence of two or more respectable inhabitants of the neighbourhood, shall make an investigation, and draw up a report of the apparent cause of death, describing such wounds, fractures, bruises and other marks of injury as may be found on the body, and stating in what manner, or by what weapon or instrument (if any), such marks appear to have been inflicted.

(2) The report shall be signed by such police-officer and other persons, or by so many of them as concur therein, and shall be forthwith forwarded to the District Magistrate or the Sub-divisional Magistrate.

(3) When there is any doubt regarding the cause of death, or when for any other reason the police-officer considers it expedient so to do, he shall, subject to such rules as the Provincial Government may prescribe in this behalf, forward the body, with a view to its being examined, to the nearest Civil Surgeon, or other qualified medical man appointed in this behalf by the Provincial Government, if the state of the weather and the distance admit of its being so forwarded without risk of such putrefaction on the road as would render such examination useless.

(4) In the Presidencies of Fort St. George and Bombay, investigations under this section may be made by the head of the village, who shall then report the result to the nearest Magistrate authorised to hold inquests.

(5) The following Magistrates are empowered to hold inquests, namely, any District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class and any Magistrate especially empowered in this behalf by the Provincial Government or the District Magistrate.

Change:—In sub-section (5) the words "or Magistrate of the first class" have been newly added by sec. 41 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. By this amendment, all first class Magistrates have been generally empowered to hold inquests.

The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

542. Scope:—When the body cannot be found or has been buried, there can be no investigation under sec. 174. This section is intended to apply to cases in which an inquest is necessary, which presupposes that the corpse must be available—Gul Hasan, 1908 P.R. 27, 9 Cr.L.J. 105.

Proceedings under this section should be kept more distinct from the proceedings taken on the complaint—Gulab Khan v. Ghulam, 28 Cr.L.J. 26, 99 I.C. 58, 8 Lah.L.J. 524, 27 P.L.R. 779, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 30 See also Surendra v. Police Sergeant given below in para. 545.

The procedure under this section is for the purpose of discovering the cause of death and the evidence taken is very short—Chaman Lal v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 639 (612), 188 I.C. 440, A.I.R. 1910 Lah. 210 (214).

543. Report:—The report is different from the final or complete report mentioned in sec. 173. Inquest reports must be written up and completed on the spot where the inquest over the corpse is being held. Immediately the inquest is closed, the report thereof will be put into a cover and handed over in the presence of the Panchayeldars to the constable about to take the corpse to the Medical Officer's station for examination—Mad. Pol. Man., Vol. I, p. 85.

Considering the important nature of the evidence which is generally* supplied by the results of the post mortem examination, it is necessary that in such cases the result of the observation, external and internal, should be fully recorded. A verbatim report of the statements of witnesses examined at the inquest may often be of great use to the Court in testing the value of evidence subsequently given—Pachudayan, 9 M.L.T. 321, 12 Cr.L.J. 124. A medical man may use the post mortem report to refresh his memory when giving evidence; but the report itself is not admissible in evidence—Roghuni, 9 Cal 455 (451); Ram Sarup, 6 C.W.N. 98 (101). The accused is entitled to a copy of the post mortem report—Maruthamutha Kudumban, 50 Mad. 750, 52 M.L.J. 601, 28 Cr.L.J. 463, 91 I.C. 532, 1927 M.W.N. 392, A.I.R. 1927 Mad 512.

When a Medical officer is not examined at the beginning of a post mortem inquiry, a copy of the post mortem certificate ought to be given to the accused for the purpose of enabling him to conduct his defence. Similarly, he should be given a copy of the inquest report (excluding statements made therein, which the accused is not entitled to get, under sec 162) when the investigating police-officer is not examined at the beginning of the inquiry—Maruthamutha Kudumban, 50 Mad 750, 52 M.L.J. 601, 28 Cr.L.J. 463 (464), 91 I.C. 532, 1927 M.W.N. 392, A.I.R. 1927 Mad 512. The investigation under this section is made by the police-officer, and the statements are, therefore, statements made to a police-officer "in the course of an investigation under this chapter" under sec 162, Cr P. Code. The fact that the inquest is held in the presence of two or more respectable inhabitants does not render the statements taken there any the less statements made to a Police-officer. Such statements are, therefore, not public documents of which accused is entitled to a copy and the procedure which governs the grant of copies of statements under sec 162, Cr P. Code, governs also the grant of copies of statements made at the inquest—ibid., following Peramasami Naidu, 22 M.L.W. 784, 91 I.C. 532. See also Hans Raj v Emp., A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 241 (344), 16 Lah 345, 37 P.L.R. 605, 1936 Cr.C. 264, 161 I.C. 900, 37 Cr.L.J. 504 and the Notes under the heading "Inquest Report" in Note 501. There is no objection whatever to the accused being granted a copy of the statements made by witnesses at the inquest inquiry; and if the record of the inquest proceedings is in the custody of the Court, the Magistrate should allow certified copies to be given upon the application made on behalf of the accused. If the inquest report is not in the Court, the Magistrate has power under sec 94, Cr P. C., to call for it to be produced by the police—Chaulet, 26 Cr.L.J. 426, 85 I.C. 42, 20 M.L.W. 745, A.I.R. 1925 Mad 424.

Special diary not necessary in all cases:—"The Lieutenant-Governor does not think that special diaries are intended or necessary in all cases of inquiry into unnatural deaths. The report described in sec 174, Cr P. Code is very much the same in character as the special diary of sec 172. If the Police-officer investigating sees reason to suspect crime, the inquiry becomes one under sec. 172 and special diaries become as a matter of course necessary, but in ordinary cases in which the inquiry is made and completed in a few hours, there seems to be no necessity of reporting the facts first in a special diary and then in the report prescribed by sec. 174. When, however, the inquiry is prolonged or lasts for more than one day, the diary should be sent to inform the District Superintendent and Magistrate of what is going on. The Lieutenant-Governor would, therefore, rule that in cases of any complexity or in which the inquiry lasts over one day, or in which a crime is suspected, special diaries should be sent in anticipation of the final report, which will be made under sec 173 if a crime is detected, and under sec 174 if the death is from accident or unnatural causes. It is to be understood that in the Station Diary everything done by the Police will be entered"—Bengal Police Circular, 1872, page 107.

175. (1) A police-officer proceeding under section 174 may, by order in writing, summon two or more persons as aforesaid for the purpose of the said investigation, and any other person who appears to be acquainted with the facts of the case. Every person so summoned shall be bound to attend and to answer truly all questions other than questions the answers to which would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge, or to a penalty or forfeiture.

(2) If the facts do not disclose a cognizable offence to which section 170 applies, such persons shall not be required by the police-officer to attend a Magistrate's Court.

Punishment:—A person who fails to attend in obedience to the order issued under this section is punishable under sec. 174, I. P. Code.

It should be noticed, however, that the word 'truly' which has been omitted from sec. 161 is still retained under this section, probably through oversight; but as the word has been retained, a person giving false answers to questions put to him is liable to prosecution under sec. 193, I. P. C. If he refuses to answer the questions, he is punishable under sec. 179, I. P. Code.

It should be further noted that the obligation to answer truly all questions attaches only to the persons summoned by the Police-officer. If a person voluntarily comes forward without any summons, and makes false statements, he cannot be prosecuted for perjury—Id. Hayat, 23 Cr.L.J. 82, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 133, 1922 P.W.R. 6, 65 I.C. 434.

544. Record of statement:—The statements of witnesses examined at the inquest should be recorded verbatim in the report, as the statements may be of great use to the Court in testing the value of evidence subsequently given—In re Pachudayan, 9 M.L.T. 321, 12 Cr.L.J. 124, 9 I.C. 730, 1911 M.W.N. 138.

176. (1) When any person dies while in the custody of the police, the nearest Magistrate empowered to hold inquests shall, and, in any other case mentioned in section 174, clauses (a), (b) and (c) of subsection (1), any Magistrate so empowered may, hold an inquiry into the cause of death either instead of or in addition to the investigation held by the police-officer, and, if he does so, he shall have all the powers in conducting it which he would have in holding an inquiry into an offence. The Magistrate holding such an inquiry shall record the evidence taken by him in connection therewith in any of the manners hereinafter prescribed according to the circumstances of the case.

(2) Whenever such Magistrate considers it expedient to make an examination of the dead body of any person who has been already interred, in order to discover the cause of his death, the Magistrate may cause the body to be disinterred and examined.

545. Object:—This section proceeds on the basis that enquiry into a suspicious death should not depend merely upon the opinion the Police may form, but that there should be a further check by enabling a local Magistrate to hold an independent inquiry—Laxminarayan, 30 Bom.L.R. 1050, 29 Cr.L.J. 1063 (1071), A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 390, 112 I.C. 567. The Magistrate is empowered to hold an inquiry into the cause of death, and if he does so, is invested with all the powers which he would have in holding an inquiry into an offence. That would bring the proceedings within the meaning of an 'inquiry' as defined by sec. 4 (1) (k), Cr. P. C., and of a 'judicial proceeding' as defined by sec. 4 (1) (m), Cr. P. Code. Therefore a Magistrate holding judicial proceedings in which it is necessary for him to come to a finding as to the cause of death and as to the person or persons, if anybody, responsible for that death, must be considered to be acting as a 'Court'. When holding an inquiry under this section, he is acting as a Court subordinate to the High Court for the purposes of the Contempt of Courts Act (XII of 1926)—Advocate-General v. Maung Chit Maung, 41 Cr.L.J. 470, 187 I.C. 573, A.I.R. 1940 Rang 68.

The inquest held under this section cannot take the place of the inquiry contemplated by sec. 202—Surendra v. Police Sergeant, 35 C.W.N. 1032 (1033), 1932 Cr.C. 106, 33 Cr.L.J. 218, 135 I.C. 787. Therefore, if a Magistrate dismisses a complaint under sec. 203, on a consideration of an inquest report, he acts illegally—Ibid.

Jurisdiction of Presidency Magistrates—The Presidency Magistrate is not ousted of his jurisdiction to hold a preliminary inquiry into a charge of murder, because the Coroner has held an inquiry into the cause of death and has committed the accused to the High Court under sec. 25 of the Coroner's Act (IV of 1871)—Id. Rajudin, 16 Bom. 159; Jogeshwar, 31 Cal. 1.

Power to disinter corpses:—A Police officer making an investigation under this section has no power to cause a dead body which has been already interred, to be disinterred in order to examine it. Such power is conferred on a Coroner under sec. 11 of the Coroner's Act (IV of 1871) and on a Magistrate holding an inquest under the present section.

546. Revision:—Proceedings under this section are now liable to revision by the Court under secs. 435 and 439, by reason of the repeal of sub-section (3) of sec. 435 by the Amendment Act of 1923—Laxminarayan, 30 Bom.L.R. 1050, 29 Cr.L.J. 1063 (1066), A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 390, 112 I.C. 567.

In an earlier Calcutta case it was held that as there was nothing in this section which required that a Magistrate holding an inquiry under this section was bound to make a report or to come to a finding, the report of the inquiry under this section into the cause of a suspicious death was not a judicial proceeding, and therefore where he sent a report of the result of his inquiry to his executive superior (the District Magistrate) the High Court could not call for it under sec. 435—Troylokhannath, 3 Cal. 742 (752, 753), 3 C.L.R. 59. In other words, an inquiry under sec. 176 was a judicial proceeding, but the report of an inquiry under this section was not so, and could not be sent for by the High Court under sec. 435.

PART VI.

PROCEEDINGS IN PROSECUTION.

CHAPTER XV.

OF THE JURISDICTION OF THE CRIMINAL COURTS IN INQUIRIES AND TRIALS.

A—Place of Inquiry or Trial.

177. Every offence shall ordinarily be inquired into and tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it was committed.

Ordinary place of inquiry or trial.

547. General Rule:—All crime is local; the jurisdiction over the crime belongs to the country where the crime is committed—MacLeod v. Attorney-General, L.R. (1891) A.C. 458. Crimes in their nature are local, and the jurisdiction of crimes is local—Rafael v. Verelst, 2 Blackstone, p. 1058. Crime is purely local, i.e., depends on the law of the place in which it is committed, and not on the nationality of the person who commits it—Sirdar Gurdayal v. Rajah of Furidkote, [1894] A.C. 670. See also Jivandas Savchand, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 490 (491), 32 Cr.L.J. 331, 129 I.C. 385, 32 Bom.L.R. 1195, 55 Bom. 59, Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 161, 1930 Cr.C. 1026. Therefore, British Indian Courts have no jurisdiction to try offences committed and completed outside the British territory—Ibrahim, 1894, P.R. 7; Ranchhod, 2 Bom.L.R. 337; Siddha v. Biligiri, 7 Mad. 354; Anonymous, 6 M.H.C.R. App. 3. As to the jurisdiction of British Indian Courts over offences committed by subjects of the Crown in places outside British India, see sec. 188.

Wheaton in his Elements of International Law says:—"The judicial power of every independent state extends to the punishment of all offences against the municipal laws of the state by whomsoever committed within the territory, also to the punishment of all such offences by its subjects wheresoever committed" (Edition 1885, p. 179). To the same effect is Philimore's International Law, 3rd Edition, Vol. I, p. 216. According to Mr. Mayne in his Criminal Law, 3rd Ed., p. 956, "the jurisdiction of the mosussil Courts depends upon the offence having been committed within their local limits. See Hursee Mahapatro v. Dinobundo Patra, 7 Cal. 523.—Ganga, 34 All. 451 (454), 9 A.L.J. 696, 13 Cr.L.J. 575.

The general principle of international law is that every person who is found within a foreign state is subject to, and is punishable by, its law. The English lawyers base this rule on the principle that a person who enters a state becomes entitled to the protection of its law, and is, therefore, bound to render it obedience. It is, perhaps, sufficient to say, in the words of Baron Pollock, "Otherwise the criminal law could not be administered according to any civilized method" (Queen v. Gauz, L.R. 9 Q.B.D. 93 at p. 100). The state to which the accused belongs can only demand that he be fairly tried under the municipal law of the forum, provided such law is in conformity with those sanctions of justice which all civilized nations hold in common, and does not contravene some special right acquired by treaty by the country whose aid is invoked. (Taylor's "International Public Law," 1901, page 242)—Adams v. Emp., 26 Mad. 607 (617).

Sections 177 to 185, Cr. P. Code, deal with the venue or the place of the trial of crimes. Sec. 177 reiterates the well-established common law rule referred to in Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 9, para. 83, that the proper and ordinary venue for the trial of a crime is the area of jurisdiction in which, on the evidence, the facts occurred and are alleged to constitute the crime. But this rule is subject to several well-recognized exceptions, and some of these exceptions are contained in the subsequent sections of the Code. The common rule referred to above, determines the venue of an offence commenced and completed within the territorial jurisdiction of one and the same Court. But a criminal offence may be commenced within the jurisdiction of one Court and completed within the jurisdiction of another Court. And it stands to reason that such an offence may be tried by either the Court in which it was commenced or the Court in which it was completed. It was so provided in England by sec. 12 of (1826) 7 Geo IV, c. 64—Mukhi Trathdas v. Jethanand Matvalomal, 38 Cr L.J. 512 (517), 9 R.S. 222, 31 S.L.R. 123, 168 I.C. 89, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 69 (F.B.).

The doctrine that the law of the country where a crime has been committed governs the nature of the offence and that the Courts of that country alone have jurisdiction to try the offender is a well-established principle of international law. As pointed out by Woodroffe in his Commentary on the Criminal Procedure Code all the sections in Chap. XV are to be read subject to the general rule that an act committed on land outside British territory by a foreigner not being a servant of the King is not an offence triable by the British Courts and that illus (d) to sec 179 must be read subject to this general rule—Gokaldas v. Emp. 35 Cr L.J. 585 (587), 27 S.L.R. 392, 148 I.C. 135, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 333, 1933 Cr.C. 1130, 6 R.S. 180. See also Note 577.

548. Offence:—This chapter deals with the place of inquiry and trial in respect of offences only; an application under sec. 488 for maintenance is not a complaint of an offence, and the provisions of this section are not applicable to determine the jurisdiction of a Court competent to entertain such application—Huldephonsus v. Malone, 1885 P.R. 13; Bishen Das v. Nanaki, 1893 P.R. 3. Contra—Bibi Nur v. Shah Walail, 1883 P.R. 9 and In re Malcolm De Castro, 13 All 348, 1891 A.W.N. 115, where it was held that neglect to maintain a wife being an offence punishable under this Code under sec. 488, the place for its trial must be determined by the provisions of this Chapter. But the amendment (1923) of sec. 488 (9) shows that the section does not contemplate any offence.

So also, proceedings under Chapter XII are not proceedings in respect of an offence, and therefore sec. 182 does not apply to a proceeding under sec. 145—Maharaja Harbulla v. Bajrang Das, 3 C.W.N. 148; nor does sec. 185 apply to determine jurisdiction in respect of such proceeding—Rudra Pratap v. Dewan, 12 A.L.J. 390, 15 Cr L.J. 520.

Similar remarks may also apply to proceedings under Chapters VIII and X.

"Ordinarily":—The word "ordinarily" indicates that this section is a general one and must be read subject to the special provisions of the succeeding sections. Thus, this section must be read subject to the special provisions of sec. 197 (2) which override the general rule contained in this section; and the Local Government may specify any Court for the trial of a public servant, irrespective of the place where the offence was committed—Maung Ka, 4 L.B.R. 265, 8 Cr L.J. 70.

Bigamy:—The word "ordinarily" must be taken to mean "except in the case provided hereinafter to the contrary." Therefore, an offence of bigamy can only be tried by the Court within whose jurisdiction the bigamous marriage took place—Goverdhan, 29 Cr L.J. 533, 109 I.C. 357, 30 Bom L.R. 387, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 140, following Bhagwatia, 83 I.C. 577, 3 Pat. 417, 26 Cr.L.J. 49, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 87; Ramnarayan v. Emp., 38 Cr L.J. 769 (773), 11 L.R. 1937 Bom. 244, 39 Bom.L.R. 61, 169 I.C. 526, 10 R.B. 34, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 186. The offences of bigamy and abetment of bigamy are triable only in the district in which the second marriage or the abetment takes place—Amir Chand v. Emp., 26 Cr L.J. 525, 85 I.C. 365, 6 L.L.J. 422, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 732.

For the purpose of an offence under sec. 5 of the Child Marriage Restraint Act (XIX of 1929) it is only the marriage that has to be considered. It is quite immaterial where or when or by whom the Tilak ceremony was performed. Under this section the offence must ordinarily be tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the marriage was solemnized—Matuk Das v. Vinayak, 35 Cr.L.J. 1175, 150 I.C. 993, 1934 A.L.J. 681, 57 All. 83.

549. Local jurisdiction:—Although this section lays down that every offence must be inquired into and tried by the Court within whose jurisdiction it was committed, still if the offence is inquired into or tried by a Magistrate who has no territorial jurisdiction over the place of offence, it would be at most an irregularity which would be cured by sec. 531 if such commitment or trial has occasioned no failure of justice—Rayan Kutti, 26 Mad. 640; Asst. Sessions Judge v. Ramammal, 36 Mad. 387; Doraisamy, 30 Mad. 94. This section only provides for the ordinary place of inquiry and trial, and there is no difficulty whatsoever in reading it along with sec. 531, Cr. P. C., the result being that a conviction cannot be set aside merely on the ground that the trial has taken place in a wrong district but that the party aggrieved is entitled to have the conviction set aside if he shows that such error has in fact occasioned a failure of justice—Acharaja Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 410, 15 Pat. 418, 17 P.L.T. 543. Where a Magistrate being empowered to commit to the sessions, but having no territorial jurisdiction over the place of offence, commits a case to a Sessions Court which has jurisdiction over the place, the commitment is valid and cannot be quashed under sec. 532, even though the objection to such commitment is taken before the commitment—Abbi Dedi, 17 Mad. 402. But no Judge or Magistrate can try to pass an order of committal in respect of an offence committed outside the Province altogether. Such a trial or order of committal is illegal and the illegality cannot be cured by sec. 531—Bhagwatia, 3 Pat. 417 (422), 26 Cr.L.J. 49. Sec. 531 cures any defect due to want of legal jurisdiction unless there has been a failure of justice by the exercise of such irregular jurisdiction—Lakhan, 35 Cr.L.J. 973 (976), 149 I.C. 533, 1934 Cr.C. 587, 11 O.W.N. 534, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 200.

Commitment to wrong Sessions:—Where a Magistrate commits a case to a Sessions Court other than the one within whose local jurisdiction the offence has been committed, the commitment is merely irregular and would be cured by sec. 531; the High Court will not quash the commitment but will direct the transfer of the case to the Court having jurisdiction—Thaku, 8 Bom. 312; Altaram, 2 Bom.L.R. 394; Ram Die, 18 All. 350; Wahid Bux, 1929 Cr.C. 678 (681) (Sind). But the Madras High Court, dissenting from the above cases, and following the Privy Council ruling in Ledgerd v. Bull, 9 All. 191, has laid down that a commitment to a Sessions Court having no territorial jurisdiction over the offence, is illegal and must be set aside; and the High Court would not be justified in upholding the commitment and directing the transfer of the case to the proper Sessions Court—Asst. Sessions Judge v. Ramammal, 36 Mad. 381 (391), 13 Cr.L.J. 35, 13 I.C. 275, 1912 M.W.N. 3, 22 M.L.J. 141, 10 M.L.T. 563. This is also the view of the Patna High Court—Bagwatia, 3 Pat. 417, 26 Cr.L.J. 49, 83 I.C. 577, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 187; and of the Oudh Court—Sheo Dayal, 23 O.C. 87, 57 I.C. 459, 21 Cr.L.J. 635 (following 36 Mad. 387). But where a commitment was made to the High Court Sessions in respect of two offences, one of which was committed within, and the other without, the original jurisdiction of the High Court, held that the High Court could, on the grounds of expediency and convenience, proceed with the trial, the irregularity being cured by sec. 531. Even if the High Court had no jurisdiction on its original side to try the case, an order could be made under sec. 526 directing the trial to take place at the High Court Sessions. And the High Court ordered accordingly—Ganapathi, 42 Mad. 791, 37 M.L.J. 60, 20 Cr.L.J. 484, 1919 M.W.N. 808, 51 I.C. 468. See also Mohanlal Aditram, 30 Cr.L.J. 191, 113 I.C. 617, 30 Bom.L.R. 1253, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 475, Ind. Rul. 1929 Bom. 185 where under similar circumstances the High Court directed the withdrawal of the charge which was not committed within the ordinary criminal jurisdiction of the High Court.

When the offence was committed in the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Sessions Court of Howrah, the commitment, if it is to be made by the Central Children Court in Calcutta, should be made not to the High Court Sessions but to the Sessions Court at Howrah—Lathi Sahu, 33 Cr.L.J. 645, 138 I.C. 626, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 487, 33 C.W.N. 161, 1932 Cr.C. 479, 59 Cal. 856, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 479.

550. Holding trial outside British India:—Where an offence has been committed within the local limits of the jurisdiction of a District Magistrate, he cannot try that offence at some place outside British India—Maneklal, Ratanlal 376.

551. Effect of irregular arrest:—The irregularity of an arrest is not a ground for invalidating all proceedings and trials subsequent to the arrest—Sobha, 6 P.R. 1899; Gobinda, 1 P.R. 1911, 12 Cr.L.J. 113. Thus, a Magistrate should not acquit an accused merely because the officer who arrested the accused did not belong to the circle in which the arrest was made—Ravalu, 26 Mad 124, 1 Weir 630. And so, where the subject of a Native State, who having committed an offence in British India, escaped into the Native State, was arrested by the British police without the intervention of that State, held that the subsequent trial and conviction of the accused were not affected by the irregularity of the arrest—Sobha, supra. See also Vinayak, 35 Bom 225.

552. Effect of transfer of Territory to Native State:—Where an offence was committed in a place within British territory, but some time after the commitment of the case to the Court of Session and before the commencement of the trial, the place in which the offence was committed ceased to be a British territory and became part of a Native State, it was held that this fact did not oust the jurisdiction of the British Court to try the offence—Ram Naresb, 34 All 118, 9 A.L.J. 51; Ganga, 34 All. 451, 9 A.L.J. 696, 13 Cr.L.J. 575. Similarly, if, pending an appeal from a conviction, the place where the offence had been committed was transferred to a Native State, it was held that this transfer of territory did not deprive the Court in which the appeal had been filed of its jurisdiction to hear it—Mahabir, 33 All 578, 8 A.L.J. 630, 12 Cr.L.J. 401.

Effect of transfer of locality of offence to a different district:—Under sec. 177, Cr. P. C., every offence shall ordinarily be enquired into and tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it was committed. Where the offence was committed within the local jurisdiction of the Magistrate who took cognizance, he was authorized under sec. 177, Cr. P. C., to try the case or to commit it to Sessions. The fact that the locality in which the offence was committed was subsequently transferred to another District did not oust the jurisdiction of the Magistrate. Since he had jurisdiction to take cognizance, he had jurisdiction to commit the case to the Sessions Court. Even if the Committing Magistrate had no territorial jurisdiction at the time of the commitment and it were considered that he had on that account no jurisdiction to make the commitment, such want of jurisdiction would not be a good ground for setting aside the order of commitment in view of the provisions of sec. 531, Cr. P. C.—Sayeruddin Pramanik, 40 Cr.L.J. 270, 179 I.C. 805, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 159, I.L.R. (1938) 2 Cal. 357.

552A. Contempt of Court:—Contempt of Court is not an offence within the ambit of the Penal Code, but nevertheless it conforms to the ordinary rule that the jurisdiction of the Court is determined by the place where the offence is committed and not by the place where the offender may happen to reside—Rajah v. Witherington, 35 Cr.L.J. 962, 57 Mad. 831, 66 M.L.J. 650. See also Moti Lal, 45 Cal. 169 (173); L. R. v. Mati Lal, 41 Cal. 173; Surendra Nath v. Chief Justice, 10 Cal. 109.

552B. Jurisdiction when can be questioned:—A point of jurisdiction can be raised at any stage. It can be raised before the Sessions Judge although it was not raised before the Committing Magistrate—Bhagawatia, 3 Pat. 417, 26 Cr.L.J. 49 (50), 87 I.C. 577, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 187; M. A. Kaleek, 28 Cr.L.J. 452 (453), 101 I.C. 484, 1927 M.W.N. 221, 52 M.L.J. 511, A.I.R. 1927 Mad 544.

178. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 177, the Provincial Government may direct that any cases or class of cases committed for trial in any district may be tried in any sessions divisions;

Power to order cases to be tried in different sessions divisions.

Provided that such direction is not repugnant to any direction previously issued by the High Court under section 15 of the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, or section 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915, or section 224 of the Government of India Act, 1935, or under this Code, section 526.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" and the words "or section 224 of the Government of India Act, 1935" have been inserted after "Act, 1915" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937

553. The Local Government of Burma has no power under this section to transfer a case committed to the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon for trial, to the Court of the Commissioner. But it can transfer a case from the District of Rangoon to the Sessions Judge of Pegu—Nga Tha, 10 Cal 642.

179. When a person is accused of the commission of any offence by reason of anything which has been done, and of any consequence which has ensued, such offence may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any such thing has been done, or any such consequence has ensued.

Illustrations.

(a) A is wounded within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court X, and dies within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Z. The offence of the culpable homicide of A may be inquired into or tried by X or Z.

(b) A is wounded within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court X, and is, during ten days within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Y, and during ten days more within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Z, unable in the local limits of the jurisdiction of either Court Y or Court Z to follow his ordinary pursuits. The offence of causing grievous hurt to A may be inquired or tried by X, Y or Z.

(c) A is put in fear of injury within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court X, and is thereby induced, within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Y, to deliver property to the person who put him in fear. The offence of extortion committed on A may be inquired into or tried either by X or Y.

(d) A is wounded in the Native State of Baroda, and dies of his wounds in Poona. The offence of causing A's death may be inquired into and tried in Poona.

554. Scope of section:—This section applies when the act (or omission) is an offence by reason of anything which has been done and of any consequence which has ensued. But where the act or (omission) is a complete offence irrespective of any consequence which has ensued, this section does not apply, and the offence is to be inquired into and tried only by the Court within whose jurisdiction the act was committed (sec. 177). This section contemplates two things. The first is that the offender has done an act and the second is that a consequence has followed from such act and the offender is being tried for the offence as a result of both the act and the consequence; or in other words, the act done by him does not by itself render him liable for the offence; and that it is the act coupled with the consequence which constitutes the offence and makes him liable for it. That being so, there is hardly any scope for argument that the consequence referred to in this section does not mean the consequence which is one of the ingredients of the offence—Mukhi Tirathdas v Jethanand Matvalomal, 38 Cr.L.J. 512 (518), 9 R.S. 222, 31 S.L.R. 123, 168 I.C. 89, A.I.R. 1937 Sind. 69 (F.B.). The offences contemplated in this section are those which are not complete till a specified consequence has ensued. The consequence must be an essential ingredient of the offence and it must arise within the jurisdiction of the Court trying the offence—Diwan Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 55 (63), 161 I.C. 635, 1936 Cr.C. 367, 36 Cr.L.J. 474. Thus—

Examples :—(a) The offence of falsification of accounts (sec. 477A, I. P. C.) is complete as soon as the accounts are falsified, and any consequence resulting from it is immaterial for the offence. Therefore, it is to be tried only by the Court within whose jurisdiction the accounts were falsified, and not by any other Court—Swaminathan v. Annamalai, 4 M.L.T. 481, 9 Cr.L.J. 92.

(b) Where a person who was assaulted by the accused in Baroda had his leg completely broken there and then came to British India where he remained for 2 months in the hospital, it was held that the offence of grievous hurt was complete in Baroda by the fracture of the leg, irrespective of any consequence (viz., the injured man lying in hospital) ensuing in British India; therefore the offence could not be tried in British India—Sirdar Meru v. Jethabhai, 8 Bom.L.R. 513, 4 Cr.L.J. 54.

(c) Where a dacoity was committed in a Native State and some stolen property was found concealed by the accused in the British territory, it was held that the offence of dacoity was complete in the Native State irrespective of retaining the stolen property in the British territory, and could not be tried in British India—Reg v. Lakhyia, 1 Bom. 50.

(d) Where a woman sold in District A her minor girl to a prostitute, who took the girl to District B, it was held that the offence of selling a minor girl for the purposes of prostitution was complete in District A, and that the possession of the girl in District B was not a consequence completing the offence; the Magistrate of District B had no jurisdiction to try the offence—6 Agra 46.

(e) The offence of infringement of copyright is complete as soon as the book infringing the copyright is printed, and it does not depend for its completion upon any consequence (e.g. loss of money to the complainant) such as contemplated by sec. 179. Therefore, the offence is to be inquired into and tried under sec. 177 at the place where the infringing book was printed—Kalidas v. Karam Chand, 1916 P.R. 28, 18 Cr.L.J. 353, 38 I.C. 737.

(f) Where a person consigned some goods from District F to District K, and the consignee misappropriated the goods at K, it was held that the consignee could be tried in K and not in F, because the accused was not charged by reason of any consequence or loss which ensued to the consignor at F, but solely by reason of what was alleged to have been done at K—Nirbhai Ram v. Kallu Ram, 4 O.C. 376.

(g) Where a complaint was made before a Magistrate at Aligarh that a person had dishonestly and fraudulently, two days after he became insolvent, realised at Calcutta the money due in respect of certain hundies which the complainant purchased, it was held that the offence should be inquired into at Calcutta where the offence (sec. 415, I. P. C.) was committed and not at Aligarh where the loss ensued to the complainant—Babu Lal v. Ghansham, 5 A.L.J. 333, 7 Cr.L.J. 394.

(h) Where the offence of kidnapping is committed outside British India, the subsequent act of conveying the kidnapped person to British India is not such a consequence as is contemplated by this section, so as to give jurisdiction to a British Indian Court over the offence committed outside British India—Bhuta Santal v. Dama Santal, 20 C.W.N. 62, 17 Cr.L.J. 128; Jai Mal Singh, 1901 P.R. 1; Koochri, 7 S.L.R. 17, 14 Cr.L.J. 439.

(i) The accused induced the complainant to purchase a barrel at Meerut on the false representation that the barrel contained a certain quantity of spirits. At Agra it was discovered that the quantity was less than what it was represented to contain. It was held that the Agra Court had no jurisdiction, because the offence of fraud had been committed and completed at Meerut, and that the discovery of the fraud at Agra after the delivery of the article was not a 'consequence which has ensued' within the meaning of sec. 179—*Pragdas v. (j) Where a petition under sec. 21 of the Income Tax Act (1918) was falsely verified at a place in the Tanjore District and was presented in the Ramnad District, held that the offence of false verification was completed in the Tanjore District, and the Ramnad Magistrate had no jurisdiction—In re Mohideen, 45 Mad 839, 43 M.L.J. 475, 23 Cr.L.J. 619.

(k) The accused sent from Madras a V. P. parcel to the complainant at Hyderabad in consequence of an order by the complainant for some tea. The complainant paid the V. P. amount, and took delivery of the parcel which on opening was found to contain only saw-dust. Held that the cheating was complete when the money was handed over to the Post Office at Hyderabad, and the subsequent delivery of the money by the Post Office to the accused at Madras was not a necessary ingredient of the offence; sec. 179 did not apply, and the offence being committed wholly at Hyderabad, the Madras Court had no jurisdiction—Laleep, 52 M.L.J. 511, 28 Cr.L.J. 452, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 544. The Bombay High Court dissented from this view and held that the accused could be tried at the place where the V.-P. parcel was posted—Gafur Karimbux, 31 Cr.L.J. 1155, 127 I.C. 177, 32 Bom.L.R. 785, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 358.

The accused at Coonoor gave the telegram for despatch from Tanjore to one J., in order to cheat one P. Assuming that the accused caused the despatch of the telegram at Tanjore, the Tanjore Court had jurisdiction to try the accused for an offence under sec. 420 read with sec. 511, I. P. C.—Raman Chettiar, 28 Cr.L.J. 95, 99 I.C. 127, 51 M.L.J. 635, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 77.

(l) The accused was charged with kidnapping a girl at Bombay and with having abetted the committing of rape on her at Ahmedabad. Held that the Bombay High Court had no jurisdiction to try the accused for the latter offence—Mohanlal, 30 Cr.L.J. 191, 113 I.C. 617, 30 Bom.L.R. 1253, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 475, Ind. Rul 1929 Bom. 185.

(m) In cases under sec. 361, I. P. C., the 'taking' is not a continuing offence but is complete as soon as the person concerned is out of the keeping or control of the guardian. The same applies to enticing also. No doubt enticing in itself may be a continuous process, but enticing from a particular person cannot be so, i.e., it cannot continue after that person's control has ceased. Consequently where the accused entices and takes a married woman in Madras and brings her to Bombay, the Bombay Court has no jurisdiction to try the offence under sec. 498, I. P. C.—Ramnarayan v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 769 (773), 11 L.R. 1937 Bom. 244, 39 Bom.L.R. 61, 169 I.C. 526, 10 R.B. 34, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 186.

555. Criminal misappropriation and breach of trust:—The offences of criminal misappropriation and breach of trust have been specially provided for in sec. 181 (2), and so it has been held in some cases that the provisions of that section and not of sec. 179 should be applied in determining the place of trial of those offences. That is sec. 179 is controlled by sec. 181 (2)—Sirihachalam 21 C.W.N. 573, 18 Cr.L.J. 762, 41 I.C. 138, 44 Cal. 912 (915); Gunananda v. Santi, 29 C.W.N. 432 (434), 26 Cr.L.J. 725; Mehlab Din, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 663 (665), 25 Cr.L.J. 410; Girdhar, 21 A.L.J. 621, 24 Cr.L.J. 929, A.I.R. 1924 All. 77 (78); Jivandas, 55 Bom. 59, 32 Cr.L.J. 331 (334) (F.B.); Gorkatan, 1 P.L.T. 200, 21 Cr.L.J. 519, 56 I.C. 175 (177); Ali Mohamed Kassim, 9 Rang 338, 32 Cr.L.J. 1120 (1125).

This section has no application to the offence of criminal breach of trust which is governed by sub-sec. (2) of sec. 181, Cr. P. Code—Huda v. Ali Hussain, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 357 (368).

But in numerous other cases, the Courts, instead of following the above rule, have launched upon a discussion as to whether the consequence of wrongful loss caused to the principal by reason of the act of the accused is an essential ingredient of the offences of criminal misappropriation and breach of trust. And this has led to a divergence of opinion among the High Courts. One view is that the wrongful loss is not an essential part of the crime; the offence does not depend on any consequence which has ensued but only on the act which has been done, and, therefore, section 179 does not apply. The offence is triable at the place where the misappropriation took place (sec. 181). Another view is that the consequence of loss to the principal is a necessary ingredient of the offence, and, therefore, the accused can be tried under this section either at the place where the offence was committed or at the place where loss ensued to the principal. See these two sets of cases cited in Notes 557 and 563, infra.

556. Cases where either Court has jurisdiction:—Where an act is an offence by reason of any consequence which ensued, the offence is triable either by the Court within whose jurisdiction the act was committed or by the Court within whose jurisdiction the consequence was ensued. Thus —

(a) Where a petition presented to a person at Lahore contained defamatory statements against another, and was published at Amritsar, it was held that the Amritsar Court had jurisdiction to try the offence of defamation, because the publication at Amritsar completed the offence and was a consequence by reason of which the accused was charged with the offence of defamation—Mahesh Das, 1885 P R 41

(b) Where an alleged defamatory letter is written and posted in Madras with a view to its being read at Tinnevely, the offence of defamation is triable either in Madras or in Tinnevely—Krishnamurti v Parasurama, 44 M L J 648, 32 M L T 164, 24 Cr.L.J. 309, 72 I.C. 69.

(c) Where A sent goods by Railway from Karachi to Lahore under a false description, the Court at Lahore could under this section try A for the offence of cheating, as the consequence of A's act, viz., the loss of freight to the Railway Company, was an ingredient of the offence and took place at Lahore, the Head quarters of the Railway Company—Ghulam Ali, 1900 P.R. 7.

(d) In fulfilment of a contract the accused consigned several tins of groundnut oil at Salem (Madras) to the complainant at Dhulia (Bombay). The tins when opened were found to contain groundnut oil mixed with rock oil. The complainant thereupon filed a complaint of cheating in the Magistrate's Court at Dhulia. Held that the Dhulia Court had jurisdiction for the deception took place at Dhulia where the complainant became the victim of the deceit in consequence of the accused's act—Jamnadas, 17 Bom.L.R. 389, 16 Cr.L.J. 433; Yusuf Ali v Wahajuddin, 12 A.L.J. 1022, 16 Cr.L.J. 719

(e) Where the accused residing at Lahore recovered money from a Bank at Bombay on a forged draft of the Amritsar Branch of the Punjab National Bank of Lahore, it was held that the Lahore Court had jurisdiction to try the accused for an offence under sec. 420, I. P. C., as the consequence (viz., loss to the P. N. Bank) contemplated by this section ensued at Lahore where the Head Office of the Bank was situated—Ishar Das, 108 P.W.R. 18, 8 Cr.L.J. 75

Cheating :—The offence of cheating may be tried either at the place where the cheating was committed (where the accused resided) or at the place where the loss ensued to the complainant, i.e., where the complainant resides or his firm is situated—Girdhar, 21 A.L.J. 621, 24 Cr.L.J. 929, A.I.R. 1924 All 77 (78); Madho v. Gobardhan, 10 O.W.N. 239, 1933 Cr.C. 425 (431); Calville v. Kishore, 26 Cal 746 (747), 3 C.W.N. 598; Gobindram, 32 Cr.L.J. 924, 132 I.C. 477, A.I.R. 1931 Sind 94, Ind Rul. 1931 Sind 93, 1931 Cr.C. 491.

The complainant charged the accused before the Criminal Court at Buxar with having cheated him over a cheque given by the accused to the complainant at Gya in part payment for a business. The cheque on presentation in Calcutta was dishonoured by the Bank. Certain correspondence passed between the parties and the complainant alleged that the crucial letter by which, for the first time, he was clearly led to realise that there had been an intention to cheat on the part of the accused was received by him at Buxar. Held that the prosecution could have been initiated either in Buxar, or in Gya, or in Calcutta—Metcalfe v Watson, 25 Cr.L.J. 81, 76 I.C. 17, A.I.R. 1924 Pat was held that the Agra Court had no jurisdiction, because the offence of fraud had been committed and completed at Meerut, and that the discovery of the fraud at Agra after the delivery of the article was not a 'consequence which has ensued' within the meaning of sec. 179—Pragdas v Daulatram, 13 A.L.J. 1067, 16 Cr.L.J. 825, 31 I.C. 1001.

(j) Where a petition under sec 21 of the Income Tax Act (1918) was falsely verified at a place in the Tanjore District and was presented in the Ramnad District, held that the offence of false verification was completed in the Tanjore District, and the Ramnad Magistrate had no jurisdiction—In re Mohideen, 45 Mad 839, 43 M.L.J. 475, 23 Cr.L.J. 619.

(k) The accused sent from Madras a V. P. parcel to the complainant at Hyderabad in consequence of an order by the complainant for some tea. The complainant paid the V. P. amount, and took delivery of the parcel which on opening was found to contain only saw-dust. Held that the cheating was complete when the money was handed over to the Post Office at Hyderabad, and the subsequent delivery of the money by the Post Office to the accused at Madras was not a necessary ingredient of the offence; sec. 179 did not apply, and the offence being committed wholly at Hyderabad, the Madras Court had no jurisdiction—Laleep, 52 M.L.J. 511, 28 Cr.L.J. 452, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 544. The Bombay High Court dissented from this view and held that the accused could be tried at the place where the V.-P. parcel was posted—Gajur Karimbux, 31 Cr.L.J. 1155, 127 I.C. 177, 32 Bom.L.R. 785, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 358.

The accused at Coonoor gave the telegram for despatch from Tanjore to one J. in order to cheat one P. Assuming that the accused caused the despatch of the telegram at Tanjore, the Tanjore Court had jurisdiction to try the accused for an offence under sec. 420 read with sec 511, I. P. C.—Raman Chettiar, 28 Cr.L.J. 95, 99 I.C. 127, 51 M.L.J. 635, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 77.

(l) The accused was charged with kidnapping a girl at Bombay and with having abetted the committing of rape on her at Ahmedabad. Held that the Bombay High Court had no jurisdiction to try the accused for the latter offence—Mohanlal, 30 Cr.L.J. 191, 113 I.C. 617, 30 Bom.L.R. 1253, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 475, Ind. Rul. 1929 Bom. 185.

(m) In cases under sec 361, I. P. C., the 'taking' is not a continuing offence but is complete as soon as the person concerned is out of the keeping or control of the guardian. The same applies to enticing also. No doubt enticing in itself may be a continuous process, but enticing from a particular person cannot be so, i.e., it cannot continue after that person's control has ceased. Consequently where the accused entices and takes a married woman in Madras and brings her to Bombay, the Bombay Court has no jurisdiction to try the offence under sec. 498, I. P. C.—Ramnatayan v Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 769 (773), I.L.R. 1937 Bom. 244, 39 Bom.L.R. 61, 169 I.C. 525, 10 R.B. 34, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 186.

555. Criminal misappropriation and breach of trust:—The offences of criminal misappropriation and breach of trust have been specially provided for in sec. 181 (2), and so it has been held in some cases that the provisions of that section and not of sec. 179 should be applied in determining the place of trial of those offences. That is sec. 179 is controlled by sec. 181 (2)—Simhachalam, 21 C.W.N. 573, 18 Cr.L.J. 762, 41 I.C. 138, 44 Cal. 912 (915); *Gunananda v. This section has no application to the offence of criminal breach of trust which is governed by sub-sec. (2) of sec. 181, Cr. P. Code—Huda v. Ali Hussain, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 367 (368).

But in numerous other cases, the Courts, instead of following the above rule, have launched upon a discussion as to whether the consequence of wrongful loss caused to the principal by reason of the act of the accused is an essential ingredient of the offences of criminal misappropriation and breach of trust. And this has led to a divergence of

The accused were charged with attempting to cheat the office-in-charge of the Currency, Bombay, by claiming payment of halves of certain currency notes. The declaration signed in support of the claim was posted in Calcutta. Held that the offence was triable in Calcutta—Amulya, 25 Cr.L.J. 184, 76 I.C. 424, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 401.

The accused owed some money to the complainant who instituted a criminal case against the accused in the Court of a Magistrate at Gujrat under sec. 420, I. P. C., alleging that the accused sent from a place in the Bombay Presidency, a letter addressed to him in Suk Kalan in Gujrat District, and insured for Rs. 400, intending to use the complainant's receipt given to the Post Office as proof of discharge of accused's debt. Held that the Gujrat Court had jurisdiction, under this section if not also under sec. 177, Cr. P. Code, to try this case—Narain Das v. Prem Chand, 32 Cr.L.J. 996, 132 I.C. 854, 32 P.I.R. 6, Ind. The accused entered into a contract of purchase at X with a partner of a firm which was situated at Y. The accused was prosecuted for an offence of cheating in respect of the contract in the Court of a Magistrate at Y. Held that it was not the complainant but his firm at Y who were cheated, that the consequences resulting from the deception practised by the accused at X ensued at Y, that sec. 179 applied to this case and that the Court at Y had jurisdiction to try the case—Emp. v. Alma Ram, 36 Cr.L.J. 490, 151 I.C. 315, A.I.R. 1934 All. 846, 1934 Cr.C. 1033.

Where the allegations were that the accused cheated the complainant by giving spurious gold pieces in return for money and that the money was paid to the accused at T and the spurious coins were handed over to the complainant at another district, the complainant was cheated and parted with the money at T and the case can be tried by the Sub-divisional Magistrate of T—Natesa Padayachi, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 649, 1940 M.W.N. 391, 51 M.L.W. 522, (1940) 1 M.L.J. 760, 1940 M.Cr.C. 109.

557. Consequence:—In some cases it has been held that the 'consequence' mentioned in this section is the primary consequence, and not any secondary consequence of the offence; the primary consequence should be taken into consideration in determining the jurisdiction; thus, where an accused living in Nandyal was appointed agent for the sale of the oil of the complainant living in Madras, and when called on to account the accused failed to do so, held that the offence of criminal breach of trust was triable at Nandyal and not at Madras, because the firm's loss at Nandyal was a primary consequence, and the loss at Madras, the firm's head quarters where the funds were kept, is a secondary one which is not sufficient to attract the operation of this section—Krishnamachari v. Shaw Wallace & Co., 39 Mad 576, 16 Cr.L.J. 491, 29 I.C. 331, 18 M.L.T. 25, 1915 M.W.N. 418, 29 M.L.J. 178. The loss to the principal is not an essential ingredient of the offence of criminal misappropriation. The offence is complete if the conversion is done with the intention of causing wrongful gain to the offender, irrespective of any loss which may ensue to any other person. The offence does not depend on the consequence which has ensued but only on the act which has been done. This section, therefore, does not apply and the offence is triable at the place where the misappropriation took place (section 181) and not where loss ensued to the principal—Smkhachalam, 41 Cal 912 (915), 21 C.W.N. 573, 18 Cr.L.J. 762, 11 I.C. 138. The same view is taken in Gunananda v. Santi, 26 Cr.L.J. 725, 29 C.W.N. 432 (434); Rambilas, 38 Mad. 639 (641), 26 I.C. 136, 16 M.L.T. 505, 1914 M.W.N. 891, 29 M.L.J. 175; Ali Mohamed Kassim, 9 Rang 338, 32 Cr.L.J. 1120 (1123); *Ahmad Ebrahim v. But in several other cases, a wider interpretation has been put on the word "consequence" which has been taken to include such secondary consequence as loss resulting to the employer by criminal breach of trust or failure to account for monies misappropriated, at the head office of the firm; and this section has been held to apply, and the offender has been held to be triable either by the Court of the place where the misappropriation or breach of trust took place, or by the Court of the place where such secondary consequence has ensued (i.e., where the complainant resides or the head-office of the firm is situated) — Langridge v. Atkins, 35 All. 29; Sheo Shankar v. Mohan, 19 A.L.J. 69; Rich, 52 All. 894, 31 Cr.L.J. 865 (distinguishing *Ganeshi Lal v. But during recent years the pendulum has very rightly swerved to the former view. All the chartered High Courts are now agreed that 'consequence' is confined to that which is an ingredient of the offence for which an accused person is being tried — Mukhi Tirathdas v. Jethanand Matvalomal, 38 Cr.L.J. 512 (520), 9 RS 222, 31 S.L.R. 123, 168 I.C. 89, A.I.R. 1937 Sind. 68 (F.B.), overruling Gobind, 22 S.L.R. 404, 114 I.C. 99, A.I.R. 1929 Sind. 30, 30 Cr.L.J. 249. Rul. 1931 Bom. 161, 1930 Cr.C. 1026, 55 Bom. 59 (F.B.), Madgavar, J., dealt with the question very lucidly. His Lordship observed: "I agree entirely with the view of the learned Judge that criminal breach of trust is not an offence which counts as one of its factors the loss, which is the usual consequence of the act, and that it is the act itself which in law amounts to the offence, apart from any such consequence; and, therefore, the jurisdiction to try an offence of criminal misappropriation or criminal breach of trust is governed by sec. 181, sub-sec. (2), and not by sec. 179. The only doubt in my mind is as regards the class of cases referred to in the concluding portion of the judgment where by reason of the secrecy observed by the accused, doubt exists as to the exact manner, point of time or place where the misappropriation and conversion, etc., takes place, all matters within the special knowledge of the accused himself and not of the complainant, who can only judge from any overt act of the accused showing the dishonesty, which is essentially necessary to be proved. In such cases, if and where the accused is under liability to render accounts at a particular time and fails to do so, such failure may be the first overt dishonest act to the complainant's knowledge and the Court within the local limits where such failure takes place may have jurisdiction. But where the offence is completed at one place, the further liability to render account at another place and failure in rendering such false accounts at the second place, does not confer jurisdiction under sec. 179 upon the Magistrate at the latter place since the offence is already completed at the former place."

In a very recent case the Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court has taken a similar view, holding that sec. 179, Cr. P. C., applies where the act done and the consequence following that act must enter into the definition of the offence the commission of which is complained against. But where the offence is complete in itself by reason of the act having been done and the consequence is a mere result of it which was not essential for the completion of the offence, then sec. 179 would not be applicable. In many cases of criminal misappropriation or breach of trust there may be considerable difficulty in ascertaining the exact place, where or the exact point of time when the offence was in fact committed. In cases of such uncertainty sec. 182 would obviously apply. Where it is the duty of an agent not only to return specific goods to his principal, but to account for that and to render account, the offence of misappropriation may not be committed till he has dishonest intention of causing wrongful loss to his master and wrongful gain to himself, and therefore it may not possibly come into existence till ultimately he refuses either to render account or to pay the balance due. This may happen not only at the place where he received money, but at the place where he is employed or his master resides—Kashi Ram, 35 Cr.L.J. 982, 56 All. 1047, 149 I.C. 420, A.I.R. 1934 All 499, 1934 Cr.C. 596, 1934 A.L.J. 308 (F.B.).

Following the Full Bench cases quoted above it has been held that the 'consequence' referred to in sec. 179, Cr. P. C., must be a part of the offence with which the accused person is being charged. It is evident that the section can apply only to a case where a person is charged with an offence not only by reason of some act committed by him, but also by reason of some consequence which has ensued from the act. In the absence of any one of these two ingredients, the section would be wholly inapplicable. If the consequence is such that even if it had not taken place the offence would have been complete, sec. 179 would have no application. Where, therefore, K filed a complaint in the Court of a Magistrate at Rajshahi in the province of Bengal charging A with the offence of cheating under sec. 420, I P. C., and A was arrested at Cawnpore by the police in execution of a warrant issued by the Magistrate and A launched a complaint in the Court of a Magistrate at Cawnpore charging K with an offence under sec. 500 I. P. C., upon the allegation that K had deliberately made a false complaint in order to defame him, held that the arrest of A at Cawnpore was not such a consequence as is contemplated by sec. 179, Cr. P. Code, and it could not give the Cawnpore Court any jurisdiction to try the offence of defamation with which A charged K—Khwaja Mohd Abdul Latif v. Montri Ahmad Abdul Halim, A.I.R. 1938 All. 632, 1938 A.L.J. 969, 1938 A.W.N. (H.C.) 686, 178 I.C. 713, 1938 A.L.R. 894, 40 Cr.L.J. 128, 1938 A Cr.C. 139.

See Note 563.

Section 179, Cr. P. C., does not come into operation in a charge of conspiracy to cheat as conspirators are not charged with the offence of conspiracy by reason of any consequence which has ensued in pursuance of the conspiracy. Before this section can be invoked it is necessary to show that "the consequence which has ensued" is an essential ingredient of the offence—Gokaldas v. Emp., A.I.R. 1933 Sind 333 (335), 27 S.L.R. 392, 14 I.C. 135, 35 Cr.L.J. 585, 6 R.S. 180, 1933 Cr.C. 1130. See Note 560.

Offence in Native State:—The Courts in British India have always declined jurisdiction against foreigners for offences committed outside British India, e.g., for theft although the stolen property was found in British India—Reg. v. Adisagadu, 1 Mad. 171; Sunker, 6 Cal. 307, 7 C.L.R. 411; Reg. v. Lakha Govind, 1 Bom. 50; Abdul Latif, 10 Bom. 185; Ranchood Daya, 2 Bom.L.R. 377; for criminal breach of trust; Babu Daldi. In re, 5 Mad. 23; Henmandas v. Chellaram, 5 S.L.R. 267, 15 I.C. 836; for being in possession in a Native State of property stolen from India, Kirpal Singh, 9 All. 523, 1887 A.W.N. 131; Moheshwari Prasad Singh, A.I.R. 1914 Cal. 725, 24 I.C. 915, 15 Cr.L.J. 537; for kidnapping though the person kidnapped is concealed in British India; Bhute Santal v. Dama Santal, 17 Cr.L.J. 128, 33 I.C. 304; for instigating the offence of murder outside British India although the offence is committed in British India; Reg. v. Putai, 10 B.H.C.R. 356; of abduction in a Native State although the abducted woman was brought by the accused into British India—Koochra, 7 S.L.R. 17, 14 Cr.L.J. 439, 20 I.C. 599; Anandgar, 7 S.L.R. 128, 15 Cr.L.J. 511, 24 I.C. 599; of conspiracy to cheat a firm in British India when the agreement to commit the offence of cheating was made in a Native State—Gokaldas v. Emp., 27 S.L.R. 392, 14 I.C. 135, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 333, 1933 Cr.C. 1130, 35 Cr.L.J. 585, 6 R.S. 180. See Note 577.

As an offence committed outside British India by a foreigner residing in a foreign country is not an offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code, there is no scope for calling in aid the provision of Cr. P. C. As pointed out by Woodroffe in his Commentary on the Cr. P. C. all the sections in Chap. 15 are to be read subject to the general rule that an act committed on land outside British territory by a foreigner not being a servant of the King, is not an offence triable by the British Courts and that illus. (4) to sec. 179 must be read subject to this general rule. Apart from this it would appear that sec. 179, Cr. P. C., does not come into operation in a charge of conspiracy to cheat as conspirators are not charged with the offence of conspiracy by reason of any consequence which has ensued in pursuance of the conspiracy. Where, therefore, the offence of conspiracy to cheat is committed outside British India, prima facie, it cannot be tried for that offence in British India—Gokaldas, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 333, 27 S.L.R. 392, 1933 Cr.C. 1130.

Where certain jewels were entrusted by the complainant at Vellore (in British India) to the accused for sale on commission, and the latter converted the jewels to his own use by pledging them at Bangalore city, it was held that the loss to the complainant, which was the consequence, occurred at Vellore, and this was sufficient under this section to give jurisdiction to the British Indian Court—Asst. Sessions Judge v. Ramaswami, 38 Mad. 779 (780).

The charge against the accused was that he committed the offence of public nuisance under sec. 290, I. P. C., by arranging a marriage procession with music and by letting off fireworks in the French territory and thereby disturbing the sleep of the people living in the vicinity in the British territory. Held that this section had no application to this case and that the offence was not triable in British India and that, assuming it had application, the provision of sec. 188, Cr. P. C., must be complied with—Sreeramamurthy, 36 Cr.L.J. 467, 154 I.C. 146, 41 M.L.W. 82, 1934 M.W.N. 1316, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 189.

Illustrations:—The illustrations are not exhaustive, and to hold that all the consequences prescribed by the Legislature as conferring jurisdiction are limited to those specified in the illustrations is not justified by the language of the section—Ishar Das, 1908 P.W.R. 18, 8 Cr.L.J. 75. The illustration (d) to this section must be applied with certain restriction. The offender in that illustration must be taken to be a subject of the British Government; and a certificate of the Political Agent must be obtained under sec. 188 before he can be tried. If the offender is a subject of the Native State, he cannot be tried by the British Courts. See Gokaldas v. Emp. in Note 547.

180. When an act is an offence by reason of its relation to any other act which is also an offence or which would be an offence if the doer were capable of committing an offence, a charge of the first-mentioned offence may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction either act was done.

Illustrations

(a) A charge of abetment may be inquired into or tried either by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the abetment was committed, or by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offence abetted was committed.

(b) A charge of receiving or retaining stolen goods may be inquired into or tried either by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the goods were stolen, or by any Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any of them were at any time dishonestly received or retained.

(c) A charge of wrongfully concealing a person known to have been kidnapped may be inquired into or tried by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the wrongful concealing, or by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the kidnapping, took place.

558. Scope of section—Foreign territory:—The Code extends only to British territory, and the present section assumes the offence therein indicated to have been committed in a local jurisdiction created by the Code. Therefore, where a foreign subject in a foreign territory instigated the commission of an offence which was in consequence committed in British territory, it was held that the instigation not having taken place in any district created by this Code, the instigator was not amenable to the jurisdiction of a British Court—Pirtai, 10 B.H.C.R. 356; Kishen Koer, 20 P.R. 1878. When a house-breaking took place in a district in British India, and a non-British subject residing in a Native State was found to be in possession of the stolen property, held that that person was not triable by the British Courts—Md. Hussain, 2 Lah.L.J. 318, 23 Cr.L.J. 560. The operation of this Code cannot be extended beyond the British territory, so as to give jurisdiction to a British Court to try a non-British subject residing outside British India for the offence of retaining stolen properties, although the theft of those properties might have taken place in British India—Moheswari, 18 C.W.N. 1178 (1179), 15 Cr.L.J. 537, 24 I.C. 945; Kirpal Singh, 9 All. 523, 1887 A.W.N. 131. If, however, an Indian British subject is found in the Native State in possession of property stolen in British India, he can be tried by a Court in British India under this section, but a certificate of the Political Agent under sec. 188 would be necessary—Session Judge v. Sundara, 26 M.L.J. 511, 11 Cr.L.J. 306.

But if the contrary things happen, i.e., if the theft takes place outside British territory, and the stolen property is brought within British India, the offence of retaining stolen property may be tried in British India, although the offence of theft which was committed outside British India cannot be tried here—Abdul Latif, 10 Bom. 186 (188); Lakhva, 1 Bom. 50; Sunkur, 6 Cal. 307. The contrary view in Moorga Chetty, 5 Bom. 338 is no longer good law in view of the words "within or without British India" added to sec. 410, I. P. C. by the Penal Code Amendment Act VII of 1882.

559. Abetment:—Where a person residing at C sends a letter to another at G through post inciting him to the commission of an offence, he is guilty of the offence of abetment as soon as the letter is received by and the contents known to the addressee at G and is triable at G, the place where the letter is received—Sheo Dial, 16 All. 389 (390), 1891 A.W.N. 135.

Although an abetment of an offence might have taken place outside the territorial jurisdiction of a Magistrate, yet under this section the abettor can be tried by a Magistrate within whose territorial jurisdiction the offence abetted was committed—Chcnanna, 1 Weir 155 (156).

Where the abetment of the offence, as well as the offence itself, is committed in N (a place in the province of Bengal) but the abettor has a house in J (a place in the province of Behar), the charge of abetment should be inquired into and tried in N and not in J. A committal order in respect of the charge of abetment passed by a Court in Behar is without jurisdiction and must be quashed. If the abetment is committed both in a place inside the province of Behar, as well as in a place outside that province, it may be inquired into and tried in a Court of Behar—Bhagwatia, 3 Pat. 417 (424), 26 Cr.L.J. 49.

See Mohanlal in Note 554.

Abetment in British India of offence outside British India:—Where a British subject abets in British India an offence committed outside British India, he may under the amended sec. 108A, I. P. C., be tried in British India—Baku, 24 Bom. 287. In view of sec. 108A, I. P. C., the decision in Ganpatrai, 19 Bom. 105 is no longer good law.

560. Conspiracy:—The offence of an attempt to murder a person in district R in pursuance of a conspiracy entered into in district M can be inquired into and tried in either of the two districts—Gurdit Singh, 24 P.R. 1917, 18 Cr.L.J. 514. But the Calcutta High Court is of opinion that if a conspiracy is entered into in District A and acts are committed in pursuance of that conspiracy in District B, the Magistrate of District A can try the conspiracy but cannot try the accused in the same trial for acts committed outside his district. Even the fact that the offences could have been tried jointly under sec. 239 if committed within his jurisdiction will not give him jurisdiction to try them—Bissessar, 28 C.W.N. 975, 26 Cr.L.J. 207 (208), A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 1034.

Where the accused are charged with conspiracy to bring a false return of service in existence within the jurisdiction of the Court of Gya for the purpose of obtaining an ex parte decree in the Court of Manbhum, held that if there was any conspiracy, it was quite obviously not a conspiracy to obtain an ex parte or any decree for that matter but a conspiracy to bring certain evidence into existence and when that evidence was once brought into existence in the form of a service return containing the signature of the peon and of the two witnesses, the offence would appear to have been complete. There is no doubt that the provisions of sec. 179, Cr. P. C., do not apply, in so far as the words "and of any consequence which has ensued" are concerned, where the offence alleged is complete. The conspiracy was complete at Gaya, and, therefore, the Courts at Gya have jurisdiction—Abdul Karim v. Emp., 30 Cr.L.J. 765, 117 I.C. 309, 10 P.L.T. 161, Ind. Rul. 1929 Pat. 421, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 640.

Where the allegation is that it was in B, where the accused reside that they entered into a conspiracy and that one or two acts of cheating in pursuance of the conspiracy were done within the jurisdiction of P, held that the Court at P cannot be clothed with jurisdiction to try the charge of conspiracy merely because the conspiracy and the different acts of cheating might form part of the same transaction and the charges in respect of them might be tried together, that the charge of conspiracy should be laid in the Court at B and that the Court at P can have jurisdiction only in respect of the acts of cheating alleged to have been committed within its jurisdiction—In re Dani, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 317, 1935 M.W.N. 1164, 1935 Cr.C. 496, 37 Cr.L.J. 634, 162 I.C. 504, 1936 Cr.C. 304.

Conspiracy is a substantive offence in itself. It is not given in one of the illustrations to sec. 180, Cr. P. C., as one of the offences which is an offence because of its relation to another offence, such as abetment which would give the Court jurisdiction either where the principal offence or the connected offence was committed, nor can it be brought within the meaning of the section itself. It is not one of the offences named in sec. 181. The gist of the offence of conspiracy lies not in doing that act or effecting the purpose for which the conspiracy is formed nor in attempting to do any of the acts nor in inducing others to do them, but in the forming of the scheme of agreement between the parties. It is no doubt true that sometimes it is difficult to ascertain the point of time when the alleged agreement is said to have been made, that is to say, the point at which a combination of several persons for a common object becomes unlawful. But the factum of the criminal agreement should not be confounded with its proof. In certain cases it may therefore be difficult for the Courts to decide whether a particular agreement which forms the basis of a criminal charge was made or concluded at a particular time or at a particular place. But it does not follow therefrom that the scope of conspiracy would determine where the conspiracy or part of it occurred. It is not the act done in pursuance of the conspiracy but the place where the conspiracy was formed or made which determines the jurisdiction of the Court and it has been consistently held that in an indictment for conspiracy, the venue should be laid where the conspiracy was and not where the result of such conspiracy was put into execution—Pursumal Gerimal, 39 Cr.L.J. 630 (632), 175 I.C. 620, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 108, 10 R.S. 298; Gokaldas v. Emp., 27 S.L.R. 392, 148 I.C. 135, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 333, 1933 Cr.C. 1130, 35 Cr.L.J. 585, 6 R.S. 180. See also Russel on Crime and Misdemeanours, Edn. 8, p. 185. See also Gokaldas v. Emp., in Note 557.

181. (1) The offence of being a thug, of being a thug and committing murder, of dacoity with murder, of having belonged to a gang of dacoits, or of having escaped from custody, may be inquired into or tried by a Court, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person charged is.

Being a thug or belonging to a gang of dacoits, escape from custody, etc. Criminal misappropriation and criminal breach of trust. breach of trust may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any part of the property which is the subject of the offence was received or retained by the accused person or the offence was committed.

(3) The offence of theft or any offence which includes theft or the possession of stolen property, may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such offence was committed or the property stolen was possessed by the thief or by any person who received or retained the same knowing or having reason to believe it to be stolen.

(4) The offence of kidnapping or abduction may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person kidnapped or abducted was kidnapped or abducted or was conveyed or concealed or detained.

560A. Change:—Sub-section (3) has been amended by sec. 42 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923. "We enlarge the enumeration of offences to include the possession of stolen property. This will also cover the case of extortion. See the definition in sec. 410, I. P. C."—Report of the Select Committee of 1916.

As a result of this amendment, sec. 181 (3) means that the offence of being in possession of stolen property may be inquired into either at the place where it was of section:—This section does not apply to the case of an offence by a person who is not a British subject, outside British territory. It is intended to regulate the jurisdiction of Courts in British India, in respect of offences committed in British India, and cannot vary or abrogate the ordinary rule that an offence can be tried in British India for an offence committed outside British India, 28 All. 372 (374). This section only applies as between Courts in British India whose jurisdiction has been limited under sec. 12—Tribhuan, 1 A.L.J. 530 (531); Adwigadu, 1 Mad. 171 (172).

Dacoity or theft or robbery was committed in a Native State, and the property was found to have been concealed by the accused in British India, the offence of dacoity, or theft or robbery could not be tried by the Courts in British India, although the offence of retaining stolen property could be tried in British India, retaining having taken place in British territory—Lakhya, 1 Bom. 10 Bom 185 (188); Sunkur, 6 Cal. 307; Baldewa, 28 All 372 (374); Adwigadu, 1 Mad. 171 (172). When a person escaped from lawful custody in a Native State and came into British India, held that the British Court has jurisdiction to try him for an offence under sec. 224, I. P. C., as it was committed in British India—Juze, Ratanlal 870 (871). So also, where a criminal offence was committed in a Native State, a Court in British India had no jurisdiction to try him, 5 S.L.R. 266, 13 Cr.L.J. 530 (531). Where the offence of dacoity was committed out of British India, and the minor was brought into British India, the Court had no jurisdiction as the offence was complete out of British India; even the fact that the person kidnapped was conveyed to British India would not give the British Court jurisdiction, because the words 'was conveyed' in this section do not import any separate or distinct offence, where the offence was complete previous to such conveying—Jaimal Singh, 1 P.R. 1901; Koochri, 7 S.L.R. 17, 14 Cr.L.J. 439; Bhuta Santal v. Dama, 20 C.W.N. 62 (63), 17 Cr.L.J. 128. The complainant sent a sum of money from Burma to the accused, who was his agent in Japan. The accused misappropriated the money, whereupon the complainant took criminal proceedings in Rangoon. Held that the offence of criminal misappropriation was complete when the conversion was done with the intent of causing wrongful gain to the offender, and did not depend on the consequence of wrongful loss which had ensued to the complainant. The conversion having taken place in Japan, the Rangoon Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the complaint—Ahmad Ebrahim v. A. A. Ganny, 1 Rang. 56, 24 Cr.L.J. 746.

562. Belonging to a gang of dacoits:—Where a resident of a Native State was arrested in that State and was brought before a Court in British India and charged with the offence of belonging to a gang of dacoits who had committed dacoities within the jurisdiction of that Court, it was held that the Magistrate had jurisdiction over the accused, as the accused was within his district at the time of the charge—Govinda, 1911 P.R. 1, 12 Cr.L.J. 113.

562. Belonging to a gang of dacoits:—Where a resident of a Native State was arrested in that State and was brought before a Court in British India and charged with the offence of belonging to a gang of dacoits who had committed dacoities within the jurisdiction of that Court, it was held that the Magistrate had jurisdiction over the accused, as the accused was within his district at the time of the charge—Govinda, 1911 P.R. 1, 12 Cr.L.J. 113.

"Is":—The word 'is' at the end of sub-section (1) does not mean 'is of his own accord'. The Magistrate has jurisdiction, whether the accused has come within the local limits of his jurisdiction of his own accord or has been brought there by force (i.e. under arrest)—Govinda, supra.

563. Criminal misappropriation, etc.:—The offences of criminal misappropriation and criminal breach of trust have been specifically provided for in sub-sec. (2) of this section. Consequently, according to the rule of interpretation that a special provision excludes the general, the above offences should be tried by the Courts specified in this section. But this rule has not found favour in some Courts, and the Judges nor in inducing others to do them, but in the forming of the scheme of agreement between the parties. It is no doubt true that sometimes it is difficult to ascertain the point of time when the alleged agreement is said to have been made, that is to say, the point at which a combination of several persons for a common object becomes unlawful. But the factum of the criminal agreement should not be confounded with its proof. In certain cases it may therefore be difficult for the Courts to decide whether a particular agreement which forms the basis of a criminal charge was made or concluded at a particular time or at a particular place. But it does not follow therefrom that the scope of conspiracy would determine where the conspiracy or part of it occurred. It is not the act done in pursuance of the conspiracy but the place where the conspiracy was formed or made which determines the jurisdiction of the Court and it has been consistently held that in an indictment for conspiracy, the venue should be laid where the conspiracy was and not where the result of such conspiracy was put into execution—Pursumal Gerimal, 39 Cr.L.J. 630 (632), 175 I.C. 620, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 108, 10 R.S. 298; *Gokaldas v. 181. (1) The offence of being a thug, of being a thug and committing murder, of dacoity with murder, of having belonged to a gang of dacoits, or of having escaped from custody, may be inquired into or tried by a Court, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person charged is.

(2) The offence of criminal misappropriation or of criminal breach of trust may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any part of the property which is the subject of the offence was received or retained by the accused person or the offence was committed.

(3) The offence of theft or any offence which includes theft or the possession of stolen property, may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such offence was committed or the property stolen was possessed by the thief or by any person who received or retained the same knowing or having reason to believe it to be stolen.

(4) The offence of kidnapping or abduction may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person kidnapped or abducted was kidnapped or abducted or was conveyed or concealed or detained.

560A. Change:—Sub-section (3) has been amended by sec. 42 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923. "We enlarge the enumeration of offences to include the possession of stolen property. This will also cover the case of extortion. See the definition in sec. 410, I. P. C."—Report of the Select Committee of 1916

As a result of this amendment, sec. 181 (3) means that the offence of being in possession of stolen property may be inquired into either at the place where it was of section:—This section does not apply to the case of an offence committed by a person who is not a British subject, outside British territory. It is intended to regulate the jurisdiction of Courts in British India, in respect of offences committed in British India, and cannot vary or abrogate the ordinary rule that an offence can be tried in British India for an offence committed outside British India, see, 28 All 372 (374). This section only applies as between Courts in British India whose jurisdiction has been limited under sec. 12—Tribhuan, 11 A.L.J. 530 (531); Adirigadu, 1 Mad 171 (172).

Where an offence of dacoity or theft or robbery was committed in a Native State, and property was found to have been concealed by the accused in British India, the offence of dacoity, or theft or robbery could not be tried by a British Court, although the offence of retaining stolen property could be tried in British India, retaining having taken place in British territory—Lakhya, 1 Bom. 10 Bom. 18b (188); Sunkur, 6 Cal. 307; Baldewa, 28 All. 372 (374); Adirigadu, 1 Mad. 171 (172). When a person escaped from lawful custody in a Native State and came into British India, held that the British Court could try him for an offence under sec. 224, I. P. C., as it was committed in British India—Juze, Ratanlal 870 (871). So also, where a criminal committed an offence in a Native State, a Court in British India had no jurisdiction to try him, 5 S.L.R. 266, 13 Cr.L.J. 530 (531). Where the offence of dacoity was committed out of British India, and the minor was brought into British India, held that no jurisdiction as the offence was complete out of British India; even the fact that the person kidnapped was conveyed to British India would not give the British Court jurisdiction, because the words 'was conveyed' in this section do not import any separate or distinct offence, where the offence was complete previous to such conveying—Jaimal Singh, 1 P.R. 1901; Koocheri, 7 S.L.R. 17, 14 Cr.L.J. 439; Bhuta Santal v. Dama, 20 C.W.N. 62 (63), 17 Cr.L.J. 128. The complainant sent a sum of money from Burma to the accused, who was his agent in Japan. The accused misappropriated the money, whereupon the complainant took criminal proceedings in Rangoon. Held that the offence of criminal misappropriation was complete when the conversion was done with the intent of causing wrongful gain to the offender, and did not depend on the consequence of wrongful loss which had ensued to the complainant. The conversion having taken place in Japan, the Rangoon Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the complaint—Ahmad Ebrahim v. A. A. Ganny, 1 Rang. 56, 24 Cr.L.J. 746.

562. Belonging to a gang of dacoits:—Where a resident of a Native State was arrested in that State and was brought before a Court in British India and charged with the offence of belonging to a gang of dacoits who had committed dacoities within the jurisdiction of that Court, it was held that the Magistrate had jurisdiction over the accused, as the accused was within his district at the time of the charge—Govinda, 1911 P.R. 1, 12 Cr.L.J. 113.

"Is":—The word 'is' at the end of sub-section (1) does not mean 'is of his own accord'. The Magistrate has jurisdiction, whether the accused has come within the local limits of his jurisdiction of his own accord or has been brought there by force (i.e., under arrest)—Govinda, supra.

563. Criminal misappropriation, etc.:—The offences of criminal misappropriation and criminal breach of trust have been specifically provided for in sub-sec. (2) of this section. Consequently, according to the rule of interpretation that a special provision excludes the general, the above offences should be tried by the Courts specified in this section. But this rule has not found favour in some Courts, and the Judges nor in inducing others to do them, but in the forming of the scheme of agreement between the parties. It is no doubt true that sometimes it is difficult to ascertain the point of time when the alleged agreement is said to have been made, that is to say, the point at which a combination of several persons for a common object becomes unlawful. But the factum of the criminal agreement should not be confounded with its proof. In certain cases it may therefore be difficult for the Courts to decide whether a particular agreement which forms the basis of a criminal charge was made or concluded at a particular time or at a particular place. But it does not follow therefrom that the scope of conspiracy would determine where the conspiracy or part of it occurred. It is not the act done in pursuance of the conspiracy but the place where the conspiracy was formed or made which determines the jurisdiction of the Court and it has been consistently held that in an indictment for conspiracy, the venue should be laid where the conspiracy was and not where the result of such conspiracy was put into execution—Pursumal Gerimal, 39 Cr.L.J. 630 (632), 175 I.C. 620, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 108, 10 R.S. 298; Gokaldas v. Emp., 27 S.L.R. 392, 148 I.C. 135, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 333, 1933 Cr.C. 1130, 35 Cr.L.J. 585, 6 R.S. 180. See also Russel on Crime and Misdemeanours, Edn. 8, p. 185. See also Gokaldas v. Emp., in Note 557.

181. (1) The offence of being a thug, of being a thug and committing murder, of dacoity with murder, of having belonged to a gang of dacoits, or of having escaped from custody, may be inquired into or tried by a Court, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person charged is.

Being a thug or belonging to a gang of dacoits, escape from custody, etc.

(2) The offence of criminal misappropriation or of criminal breach of trust may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any part of the property which is the subject of the offence was received or retained by the accused person or the offence was committed.

Criminal misappropriation and criminal breach of trust.

(3) The offence of theft or any offence which includes theft or the possession of stolen property, may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such offence was committed or the property stolen was possessed by the thief or by any person who received or retained the same knowing or having reason to believe it to be stolen.

Theft.

(4) The offence of kidnapping or abduction may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person kidnapped or abducted was kidnapped or abducted or was conveyed or concealed or detained.

Kidnapping and abduction.

560A. Change:—Sub-section (3) has been amended by sec. 42 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923. "We enlarge the enumeration of offences to include the possession of stolen property. This will also cover the case of extortion. See the definition in sec. 410, I. P. C."—Report of the Select Committee of 1916.

As a result of this amendment, sec. 181 (3) means that the offence of being in possession of stolen property may be inquired into either at the place where it was

is committed not at the place where the accused withdraws the money, but at the place where he dishonestly appropriates it or converts it to his own use—Mangal, 36 Cr.L.J. 112, 152 I.C. 463, 11 O.W.N. 1392. Under this section, the offence of misappropriation or criminal breach of trust may be tried by the Court within whose jurisdiction (a) any part of the property which is the subject of the offence was received or (b) retained by the accused or (c) the offence was committed—Gunananda v. Santi, 29 C.W.N. 432 (435), A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 613, 41 C.L.J. 80, 26 Cr.L.J. 725, 86 I.C. 213. In this case Mukherji, J. specified another forum of trial, viz., where the accused is under a liability to render accounts at a particular place and fails to do so by reason of his having committed an offence of criminal breach of trust which is alleged against him, the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction that place is situated may inquire into and try the offence under the provisions of this section—Gunananda v. Santi Prakash, 29 C.W.N. 432 (437), 41 C.L.J. 80, 26 Cr.L.J. 725. This case has been followed in Yacoub v. Abdul Gunny, 6 Rang. 380, 29 Cr.L.J. 940 (942), and Ram Sahai v. Krishna, 27 Cr.L.J. 900 (901), 7 Lah.L.J. 586. But the Bombay and Rangoon High Courts dissent from this view—Jiwandas, 55 Bom 59 (F.B.), 32 Cr.L.J. 331 (335), 42 Bom.L.R. 1195; Ali Mahomed Kassim, 9 Rang. 338, 32 Cr.L.J. 1120 (1123), 134 I.C. 209, A.I.R. 1931 Rang. 164, 1931 Cr.C. 660, Ind. Rul. 1931 Rang. 273 (explaining and distinguishing 6 Rang. 380, 29 Cr.L.J. 940, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 217. The Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court has also accepted the view of the Bombay High Court in Mukhi Tirathdas v. Jethanand Matvalomal, 38 Cr.L.J. 512, 9 RS 222, 31 SLR 123, 168 I.C. 89, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 68 (F.B.), where Rupchand, A.J.C., observes "When there is no evidence to prove where the offence was committed, that is to say, to prove where the money was misappropriated or dishonestly used in contravention of the trust, except the non-accounting, in the place where the person charged with the offence ought to have accounted for the same and failed to do so or has accounted falsely, it is open to the Court to presume that the offence was committed at that place. To that extent I am not prepared to quarrel with the decision of the Allahabad High Court, but I am not prepared to divide sec 405 into two parts, the positive and the negative parts, or to hold that if the offence falls under the second part, the offence is committed in a place other than where the money is actually misappropriated or misused; or to hold that the failure to account for the money in terms of the contract amounts to the offence of criminal breach of trust." And even the Calcutta High Court has recently doubted the correctness of that view—Pascal v. Raj Kishore, 35 C.W.N. 320 (321), 133 I.C. 703, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 521, 1931 Cr.C. 673, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 751, 32 Cr.L.J. 1042. In the recent Calcutta case of Paul de Flonder, 35 C.W.N. 809 (814, 815), 32 Cr.L.J. 1167, 134 I.C. 433, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 528, 59 Cal. 92, 1931 Cr.C. 680, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 817, Lort-Williams, J. after reviewing all the above cases has laid down the following proposition: The offence of criminal misappropriation is triable at the place where the property concerned was received or retained by the accused, or where the offence was committed. But it is sometimes difficult to prove exactly where the misappropriation took place, because misappropriation depends upon intention, and it is not always clear where the intention to misappropriate was formed. If there is evidence, apart from the fact of non-accounting, to show where the misappropriation was committed, the venue may be laid either in that place or in the place where the property was received or retained. But if there is no evidence to show where the misappropriation was committed other than the fact of non-accounting, then the venue may be laid in the place where the accused failed to account, because, that is, where the offence was committed within the meaning of sec 181 (2). Where it was not alleged by the complainant that there was misappropriation committed in respect of the sum which formed the subject-matter of the case or any component parts of it at any particular place but the whole of the case as to misappropriation was founded upon the allegation that there was no accounting in respect of the money and account was to be rendered at the Sudder Kutchery in Calcutta. Held that the Presidency Magistrate has jurisdiction to try the Prokas v. Mohim, 35 Cr.L.J. 734, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 392, 148 I.C. 736, 1934 Cr.C. But where the moneys were alleged to have been received in Behar and it was in again that the alleged omissions to credit them in the firm's books took place, the mere non-accounting in Calcutta will not give the Presidency Magistrate jurisdiction to try the offences of criminal breach of trust and falsification of accounts—Niwasilal v. Routhmull, 32 Cr.L.J. 1249, 134 I.C. 929, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 532, 1931 Cr.C. 684, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 929.

The complainant and the accused were doing business together and the accused managed the business at Lucknow in partnership with the complainant, and on the dissolution of partnership it was agreed that certain sums that were due to the firm should be collected by the accused at Lucknow and remitted to the complainant at Sukkur. The accused collected the sums due but failed to remit them, and a complaint was made at Sukkur by the complainant against the accused for an offence under sec. 405, I. P. C. Held that the offence of criminal breach of trust consists in a person dishonestly misappropriating or converting entrusted property to his own use or dishonestly using or disposing of that property in violation of any direction of law or of any legal contract, and that it is the dishonest misappropriation or conversion or user or disposal as the case may be that is the essence of the offence. If money is to be sent to Sukkur which is dishonestly misappropriated or converted or used or disposed of within the meaning of sec. 405, I. P. C., at Lucknow, and is not sent to Sukkur, it cannot be said that it was dishonestly misappropriated or converted or used or disposed of at Sukkur, nor does sec. 43, I. P. C., make any difference to the case. It may be said that the failure to send it to Sukkur is evidence of dishonest misappropriation or conversion or user or disposal at Lucknow, but a jurisdiction is not to be determined by the place where evidence is to be found but by the place where the offence is committed. The failure to send the money was a failure to send from Lucknow because of the offences there committed, so that the omission to receive it at Sukkur is merely proof of the failure to send it from Lucknow and of evidence of the commission there of the offence which presumably preceded the failure to send. The Sukkur Court had, therefore, no jurisdiction to try the case—Mukhi Tirathdas v. Jethanand Matvalomal, 38 Cr.L.J. 512 (515), 9 R.S. 222, 31 S.L.R. 123, 168 I.C. 89, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 68 (F.B.).

In view of the specific provisions contained in sec. 181 (2) with regard to the jurisdiction of the Courts to try the offence of criminal breach of trust, a Court within whose jurisdiction the property which is the subject matter of the offence was received or retained has jurisdiction to try such offence, even though the actual offence is committed outside its limits. Even, if the property is received quite properly and innocently at one place and is subsequently dealt with at another place dishonestly by the accused, he can be tried at the place where he received or retained the property—Laxman, 51 Bom. 101, 28 Bom.L.R. 1292, 29 Cr.L.J. 44.

K, a resident of Amritsar, gave loan to I, an inhabitant of the district of Lahore. K demanded the loan from I who pleaded discharge and produced the original promissory note with an endorsement on its back in the handwriting of H, also a resident of Amritsar. K instituted a case against H under sec. 379 read with sec. 403, I. P. C., in the Court of Amritsar and a charge under sec. 403, I. P. C., only was framed against H. Held that the Court at Amritsar had jurisdiction to try the case as, when both the complainant and the accused belonged to Amritsar, it would consequently be fair to presume that the promissory note came into the possession of the accused at Amritsar and that, after receiving the amount of the promissory note from I, he retained the money so obtained at Amritsar—Husain Bakhsh v. Khuda Bakhsh, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 85, 39 P.L.R. 868, 171 I.C. 629, 38 Cr.L.J. 1100, 10 R.L. 218, I.L.R. (1937) 18 Lah. 299.

Where the direction of law or the contract requires that the accused should dispose of the property at a particular place, then the Court having jurisdiction at that place will have the jurisdiction to try the offence of the second part of sec. 405, I. P. C., where there is a charge that the accused has failed to comply with the direction of law or the legal contract and has failed to carry out his duty at that place. The first part of sec. 405, I. P. C., will apply where it is known that the accused had dishonestly misappropriated or converted to his own use certain property at a particular place and the jurisdiction to try the accused will be at the place where that dishonest misappropriation or conversion has taken place. But where it is alleged that the accused has failed to account for the property then the second part of sec. 405, I. P. C., will apply and jurisdiction exists at the place where the property should have been delivered by the accused—Mohru Lal, 37 Cr.L.J. 284 (286), 160 I.C. 356, A.I.R. 1936 All. 193, 58 All. 644, 1936 Cr.C. 214, 1936 A.L.R. 107, 8 R.A. 593, 1936 A.L.J. 3; Brij Kishore v. Chandrika Prasad, 37 Cr.L.J. 322, A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 329, 160 I.C. 567, 1936 O.L.R. 89, 1936 O.W.N. 212. But there is no authority for the proposition that where there is only a liability to account at a certain place and no duty to deliver any property at that place still the Criminal Court at the place where the accounting is to be done has jurisdiction to try the offence. An agreement to render accounts at a particular place cannot be deemed to include in every case a further agreement to carry any property or money to that place. Where the question of jurisdiction turns upon the allegations made by a party it is not fair to read into them something which they do not express and which may or may not be implied—Fatch Singh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 All. 92 (94), 1939 A.L.J. 1060, 1939 A.W.R. (H.C.) 784, 1939 A Cr C 198, 41 Cr.L.J. 325, 186 I.C. 481, I.L.R. 1940 All. 43. The view adopted in the case of Mohru Lal, supra, was not followed by the Rangoon High Court in Vasanji Khimjee v. Kanji Tokersey, 39 Cr.L.J. 529, 175 I.C. 175, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 94, 1938 Rang. 1, 10 R.R. 468. It has been laid down in that case that a person might fail to remit the money, or bring it to the place to which he had to bring it, through cause beyond his control. The failure to remit the money or to bring it to the place to which he had to bring it does not necessarily constitute the offence of criminal breach of trust although a person may have to account for money; it is not the failure to account, but the misuse of the money for dishonest purposes, which constitutes the offence. Where, therefore, the complainant alleged that the accused was an employee in the service of the firm at Akyab but was subsequently admitted as a partner and agreed to go to Cochin, receive consignments of rice sent by the firm both from Akyab and Rangoon, sell it there and submit accounts and pay the net cash balance from the business to the firm at Akyab but did not do so and also failed to remit or account for a certain sum of money which he realized on behalf of the firm in a Court of law whilst he was in Cochin, held that the Court at Akyab had no jurisdiction to try the offence because it had not been committed in Akyab. If he had left the money in Cochin then it would appear that he may have committed a breach of trust by so doing and obviously the offence was committed in Cochin. If he took the money somewhere else, it is equally clear that he must have misappropriated the money in Cochin because it was there that he failed to do with the money that which it was required of him to do, namely, send it to be the firm at Akyab, but removed it elsewhere.

Where the accused was entrusted with a railway receipt for goods in one district with instructions to take delivery of the goods at their destination in another district and to sell them in complainant's account, and the accused sold them and misappropriated the sale-proceeds, it was held that the offence was triable by the Court within the jurisdiction of which the goods were sold and the money was received and misappropriated. It was held further that the "property which was the subject of the offence" in this case was not the railway receipt but the money received on sale of the goods—Kasi Chetty v. Kasi Chetty, 10 Bur.L.T. 50, 18 Cr.L.J. 645. Where it is alleged that the accused received a number of items on various dates and subsequently embezzled the entire sum or part thereof in his hands, it is open to the complainant and the Magistrate to consolidate all the items which the accused is alleged to have received, and to frame a charge under sec. 222 (2), Cr. P. C., in respect of only one offence, instead of many offences, as would be the case if each item received by him is to be the subject of a separate charge. The combined effect of secs. 222 (2) and 181 (2), Cr. P. C., is that the accused can be tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any part of the property which is the subject of the offence was received by him—Sundar Lal, A.I.R. 1932 All. 26, 1932 A.L.J. 160, 33 Cr.L.J. 127, 135 I.C. 228, 1932 Cr.C. 35.

The complainant sent nine entries addressed to the Illustrated Weekly of India Commonsense Cross Word, Bombay, with a postal order for Rs 6 from the post office of Muzaffarnagar. The complainant's case was that the free-entry coupon No. 2 sent by the complainant tallied exactly with correct solution published by the accused but the prize of Rs 25,000 payable to him was never paid. It was further alleged that the complainant sent in scrutiny claim for the re-examination of the solutions sent by him and also Rs. 5, by money order from the post office of Muzaffarnagar, as demanded by the accused. The accused did not send any reply to the inquiries made by the complainant. The complaint was filed in the Court of a Magistrate of the Second Class at Muzaffarnagar, alleging that the accused, who was one of the directors of the Company editing the paper, the Illustrated Weekly of India, by his acts of omission and commission cheated the complainant out of the sum of Rs. 25,000 and further criminally misappropriated the sum of Rs. 6 sent by postal order as entry fee and the sum of Rs. 5 sent by money order as scrutiny fee. Held that the delivery of the aforesaid amounts to the accused was as agent of the Illustrated Weekly of India. That being so, it could not be suggested that the accused received the letter containing the postal orders at Muzaffarnagar. The post office was the agent of the addressee and not of the accused. It might be that the accused converted the postal orders to his own use, but the conversion and misappropriation was effected at Bombay and not at Muzaffarnagar. There was yet another reason why the Magistrate at Muzaffarnagar had no territorial jurisdiction. It was conceded that the complainant sent the postal orders to the Illustrated Weekly to be allowed to enter the competition. It followed that the intention of the complainant was that the money should be appropriated by the addressee. If the accused dishonestly and fraudulently misappropriated the money which was the property of the Illustrated Weekly of India, he deprived the addressee of the money and not the complainant. Whatever view might be taken there could not be the least doubt that according to the allegations of the complaint the misappropriation took place at Bombay and not at Muzaffarnagar. The offence of cheating was also committed at Bombay and not at Muzaffarnagar. So the Magistrate at Muzaffarnagar had no territorial jurisdiction to try the case—G. A. St. George v. Uma Dutt, A.I.R. 1939 All. 602, 1939 A.L.J. 574, 40 Cr.L.J. 917, 184 I.C. 313, 12 R.A. 217, 1939 A Cr.C. 117, 1939 A.W.R. (H.C.) 570.

The accused as a carrier was entrusted with 225 baskets of parchment coffee at Mysore for delivery at Mangalore. When the consignment was handed over in Mangalore it was found that from 27 bags coffee had been abstracted and tailings of no value substituted. There was no evidence as to where or when the coffee was abstracted. Held that the failure to deliver was the only evidence of the misappropriation and it was sufficient evidence of the time and place in the absence of the evidence to the contrary, to establish that there was a disposal in violation of the contract at least at the place of delivery and the Magistrate of Mangalore had, therefore, jurisdiction to try the accused under sec. 407, I. P. C.—Public Prosecutor v. Pedimonu Beary, 30 Cr.L.J. 245, 114 I.C. 238, 55 M.L.J. 499, 1928 M.W.N. 791, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 1136, 28 M.L.W. 843, Ind. Rul. 1929 Mad. 254, 52 Mad. 61.

A contractor at Barisal placed an order for certain goods with the complainant's firm carrying on business in Calcutta. The goods were to be sent to Barisal and it was arranged that the purchase price would be remitted to the complainant's firm by a bank at Barisal. It was alleged that the purchaser deposited this sum with the bank at Barisal and instructed that bank to remit the money to the complainant's firm at Calcutta. The accused who were the Secretary and Managing Director of the bank dishonestly retained the money in contravention of this direction. Held that both the entrustment and the breach took place at Barisal and the offence was completed there. It could not be said that any part of the property in question was received or retained elsewhere than in Barisal or that the offence was committed in any other place—Huda v. Ali Hussain, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 367 (368).

- Sub-section (3):—The offences of theft and the possession of stolen property cannot be tried by a Magistrate, if neither the offence of theft was committed nor the property possessed within his jurisdiction, even though a conspiracy to commit these offences was entered into in a place within his jurisdiction—Bisseswar, 28 C.W.N. 975, 83 I.C. 911, 26 Cr.L.J. 207 (208). This sub-section as amended means that the offence of being in possession of stolen property may be inquired into either in the district where it was stolen or where it was found to be dishonestly possessed. This indeed is expressly stated in Illustration (b) to sec 180, Cr. P. C.—Emp. v Bhima, 27 Cr.L.J. 21, 91 I.C. 53, A.I.R. 1926 All. 167, 24 A.L.J. 148; Zahir Nat, 35 Cr.L.J. 1092, 150 I.C. 558, A.I.R. 1934 All. 455, 1934 Cr.C. 524.

564. Sub-section (4)—Scope:—This sub-section refers only to cases of kidnapping and abduction, but it does not apply to offences under Chapter XX of the I. P. C., e.g., detaining a married woman for the purpose of illicit intercourse (sec. 498, I. P. C.). Such offence is to be inquired into only in the district where the detention of the woman occurs—Jaswant, 51 P.L.R. 1918, 18 Cr.L.J. 438.

Kidnapping:—Sub-section (4) was for the first time added in the Code of 1898. Prior to 1898, it was held that the offence of kidnapping, not being a continuing offence, could be tried only by the Court within the local limits of which the minor was taken out, and not by the Court within whose jurisdiction the minor was confined—Surja, 1883 A.W.N. 164; Prasadi, 1887 A.W.N. 139; nor by the Court within whose jurisdiction the minor was conveyed—Budha, 1883 A.W.N. 67. But these decisions are no longer good law. See also Ramder, 18 All. 350, Ram Sundar, 19 All. 109, Tika, 26 All. 197, Nema, 27 Cal. 1041, Rakhal, 2 C.W.N. 81, where it has been held that the offence of kidnapping is not a continuing offence but is complete as soon as the minor is taken out of the custody of the lawful guardian. Under the present section, it is not necessary to decide whether the offence is a continuing one; the forum of trial must be decided with reference to the provisions of sub-section (4).

The words 'kidnapping' and 'abduction' do not include an offence of wrongfully confining or keeping in confinement the kidnapped person—Badlu, 46 All. 138, 21 A.L.J. 912, 25 Cr.L.J. 552. A girl was kidnapped in the Badaun district by D and B. These men took the girl to a place in Etah district where they met two other men H and A, and the four men then took the girl to Karnal district in the Punjab to the house of one Dallu. Held that the offence committed by D and B (viz., kidnapping, sec. 366, I. P. C.) may be tried in Budaun, Etah, or Karnal; the offence committed by H and A (viz., keeping in confinement a kidnapped person, sec. 368, I. P. C.) should be tried in Etah; and the offence committed by Dallu (sec. 368, I. P. C.) should be tried in Karnal—Ibid. But the Oudh Chief Court has held that the offence of wrongfully confining a woman knowing her to be abducted can be tried by the same Court which can try the offence of abduction, i.e., can be tried not only by the Court of the place where the woman was confined but also by the Court of the place from which she was abducted. This is also evident from Illustration (c) to sec. 180—Parag, 9 O.W.N. 1181, 1933 Cr.C. 85 (87), 34 Cr.L.J. 220, 141 I.C. 741, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 45, Ind. Rul. 1933 Oudh 77, dissenting from Badlu, supra. The offence of abduction has been held to be a continuing one, and where the offence is a continuing one and continues to be committed in more local areas than one, it may be enquired into or tried by a Court having jurisdiction over any such local areas—Parag, supra.

See also Note 565.

A person kidnapped outside British India and conveyed into British territory cannot be tried by British Courts. See Bhuta Santal v. Dama Santal, 20 C.W.N. 62, Jai Mal Singh, 1901 P.R. 1 and Koochri, 7 S.L.R. 17 cited under Note 561 above.

182. When it is uncertain in which of several local areas an offence was committed, or where an offence is committed partly in one local area and partly in another, or where an offence is a continuing one and continues to be committed in more local areas than one, or where it consists of several acts done in different local areas, it may be inquired into or tried by a Court having jurisdiction over any of such local areas.

Place of inquiry or trial where scene of offence is uncertain or not in one district only or where offence is continuing or consists of several acts.

565. Object of Section:—This section intends to provide for the difficulty which would arise where there is a conflict between the different areas, in order to prevent an accused person from getting off entirely because there may be some doubt as to what particular Magistrate has jurisdiction to try the case.—Bichitranund v. Bhugbut, 16 Cal. 667 (676). Where there is an uncertainty as to whether a particular spot where an offence has been committed is situated within one district or another, sec. 182 is applicable and the offence may be tried by the Court of either district.—Punardco v. Ram Saran, 25 Cal. 858 (860), 2 C.W.N. 577. Such a case arises where the offence is committed at a place which is the boundary line of two districts, and there is some uncertainty as to which is the true boundary.—Ibid. Where the accused who was a travelling agent of a firm, employed to sell goods, sold the goods, and misappropriated some of the money, and it was not possible to say exactly where the various acts of embezzlement took place, it was held that according to the first para of this section the accused was triable either at the place where the firm was situated or at one of the various districts through which the accused travelled.—Mahadeo, 32 All. 397, 7 A.L.J. 319, 6 I.C. 563, 11 Cr.L.J. 372; Anthony D'Mello v. Joseph Mathew Pereira, 38 Cr.L.J. 977, 171 I.C. 42, 1 I.R. 1937 Bom. 743, 10 R.B. 169, 39 Bom.L.R. 620, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 371.

If a defamatory letter is posted in Madras with a view to its being read in Tinnevely, the offence of defamation is triable either in Madras or in Tinnevely under sec. 179 or 192.—Krishnamurthi v. Parasurama, 44 M.L.J. 648, 24 Cr.L.J. 309. An offence under sec. 134 of the Companies Act, 1913 (default in filing balance sheet), even though the Company is situate outside Calcutta, can be tried by the Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta, because the office of the Registrar of joint stock companies where the balance sheet is to be filed is in Calcutta.—Debendra v. Registrar of the Joint Stock Companies, 45 Cal. 486 (490).

Where in a case of uncertainty as to local area, the trying Magistrate was of opinion that the offence was triable in his Court, but the accused moved the District Magistrate, who relying upon the report of a S. D. O., held that the offence should be tried in another Court, and quashed the proceedings taken before the trying Magistrate, held that the District Magistrate ought to have issued notice to the complainant and come to a proper finding of his own on the question of the local jurisdiction, instead of relying solely on the report of the S. D. O.; held further that the District Magistrate could not quash the proceedings but ought to have made a reference to the High Court.—Kasim Ali v. Md. Tajajal, 49 C.L.J. 62, 30 Cr.L.J. 401 (402), 115 I.C. 95, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 204, Ind. Rul. 1929 Cal. 319.

Continuing offence:—If a person has several adulterous sexual intercourses with a woman at several places, the offence committed is not a continuing offence, nor does it consist of 'several acts done in different local areas'—In re Shankar, 53 Bom. 69, 113 I.C. 70, 30 Cr.L.J. 51 (55), 30 Bom.L.R. 1435, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 530. The offence of kidnapping from lawful guardianship is not a continuing offence. As soon as the minor is actually removed out of the custody of her guardian, the offence is completed. The offence is not continuing as long as the minor is kept out of guardianship. But the offence of abduction is a continuing one. A girl is said to be abducted not only when she is first taken from any place, but also when she is removed from one place to another—Nankua, 53 All. 140, 1930 A.L.J. 1485, 32 Cr.L.J. 690 (691), 131 I.C. 246, A.I.R. 1931 All. 55, 1931 Cr.C. 127, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 358, and the offence may be inquired into and tried by a Court having jurisdiction over any of such places—Parag, 9 O.W.N. 1181, 1933 Cr.C. 85 (87), 34 Cr.L.J. 220, 141 I.C. 741, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 45, Ind. Rul. 1933 Oudh 77. But it is submitted that since the offences of kidnapping and abduction have been specially provided for in sec. 181 (4), it is unnecessary to consider whether they are continuing offences within the meaning of sec. 182.

In a case under sec. 182, I. P. C., where the information given to a public servant is contained in a letter posted at one place and delivered at another, the offence is committed partly in one local area and partly in another. Therefore, the Court within whose jurisdiction the letter was posted as well as the Court within whose jurisdiction the letter was received, can try the offence. In any event sec. 531, Cr. P. C., covers a case like this—Emp v. Naram Das, A.I.R. 1936 All. 105, 159 I.C. 808, 37 Cr.L.J. 157.

566. Local area:—The words 'local area' mean a local area to which the Code applies, and not a local area in a foreign country or in a portion of the British Empire to which the Code has no application—Bichitranund v Bhugbut, 16 Cal 667 (678). Moreover, the expression includes a District and cannot be restricted to mean the spot where the offence has been committed. Therefore, this section applies where the place of the offence is known but it is doubtful to which district the place belongs—Punardeo v Ram Saran, 25 Cal 858 (860), 2 C.W.N. 577.

Where the offence consists of several acts committed in different local areas, a Magistrate having no jurisdiction over any of such local areas cannot try the offence, even though the conspiracy to commit the offence was entered into within his jurisdiction—Bissessar, 28 C.W.N. 975, 26 Cr.L.J. 207 (208), A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 1034.

183. An offence committed whilst the offender is in the Offence committed on course of performing a journey or voyage a journey may be inquired into or tried by a Court through or into the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offender, or the person against whom, or the thing in respect of which, the offence was committed, passed in the course of that journey or voyage.

567. Object and Scope:—The object of this section is to remove doubts and inconveniences as regards the exact locality in which the offences alleged to have occurred in a journey or voyage had been actually committed or completed—Malony, 1 M.H.C.R. 193.

But this section only applies where the offence is committed in British India and not in a foreign territory. The word 'journey' does not include a journey in a foreign territory but is confined to a journey within the territories of British India. Where during the course of a journey through foreign territory and British India, the carrier to whom certain goods were entrusted committed criminal breach of trust in respect of those goods, and there was nothing to show that the offence took place during the journey in British India, the offence could not be tried by any Court in British India—Nadar, 24 Cr.L.J. 579, 77 I.C. 727, A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 487.

This section only applies if the place of offence is in British India. It would not give jurisdiction to a Court in British India to try an offence committed outside British India merely because the offence was committed in the course of a journey—Public Prosecutor v. Pedimonu Beary, 30 Cr.L.J. 245, 114 I.C. 238, 55 M.L.J. 499, 1928 M.W.N. 791, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 1136, 28 M.L.J. 843, Ind. Rul. 1929 Mad. 254, 52 Mad. 61, following Bapu Daldi, 5 Mad. 23, 1 Weir 1, 568. Offence committed in a journey:—Under this section, if a person is accused before a Court of an offence committed during a journey or voyage, he may be tried by that Court if any part of that journey or voyage during which the offence was committed is within the local limits of the Court's jurisdiction—Malony, 1 M.H.C.R. 193. And the Courts competent to try the case of an offender in respect of an offence committed on a journey are the Courts through or into the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offender in the course of the journey passed at the time the offence was committed—Aminulla v. P. M. Guha, 1 C.L.J. 334, 2 Cr.L.J. 411. Thus, if a theft is committed from a running train, the offence may be said to have been committed during a journey, and it can be inquired into and tried by any Court having jurisdiction over any part of the country through which the train passed during the course of its journey, no matter in whose jurisdiction the offence was committed—Lazarus, 24 Cr.L.J. 253, 71 I.C. 797 (Lah.). Where the offence is committed in the course of a railway journey, the accused can be tried at the place of destination, though the offence was actually committed outside the jurisdiction of that Court—Moulabux, 25 Cr.L.J. 439, A.I.R. 1925 Sind 177, 77 I.C. 727.

But this section is applicable only when the journey or voyage is continuous and uninterrupted. Therefore, where an offence was alleged to have been committed by the accused in the course of a journey from Bombay to Howrah, but in fact took place between Bombay and Allahabad, at which place both the complainant and the accused broke the journey and then proceeded separately by different trains to Howrah, it was held that the journey from Bombay to Howrah not being continuous, the Magistrate at Howrah had no jurisdiction to try the offence—Piran, 21 W.R. 66. Where a guard of a train going from Coimbatore to Madras was found drunk and detained at Arkonam on the way, but he broke away, got into train and arrived at Madras, it was held that the journey must be deemed to have been broken at Arkonam, and the offence (of being drunk, under sec. 27 of the Railways Act) could not be tried at Madras—Malony, 1 M.H.C.R. 193.

But any short stoppage in the course of a journey does not break the journey. Thus, where some articles were missed from a boat during a halt at S, in the course of a journey to C, it was held that the journey would not be deemed to have been broken by the halt at S, and that the offence of theft could be tried at C—Abdul Ali, 25 W.R. 45.

569. Voyage on High Seas:—This section applies only to the trial of offences committed in British India. The words 'journey or voyage' do not include a voyage on the High Seas, or in a foreign territory, but are confined only to a voyage or journey within the territories of British India—Bapu Daldi, 5 Mad 23 (25), 1 Weir 1.

But in Ismail, Ratanlal 181, where the accused and the complainant sailed from Bombay to Honawar, and during the voyage the accused threw a box of the complainant into the sea, it was held that the Magistrate of Honawar, through whose jurisdiction the accused passed during the voyage, had jurisdiction to try the offence of mischief (although it was committed on the High Seas, about 9 miles off from the coast).

569A. Effect of non-compliance:—Sections 177, 179, 180, 181 and 183, Cr. P. C., no doubt, define the Courts which ordinarily have jurisdiction to try offences. They should, however, be read with section 531, Cr. P. C., and the manifest intention of that section is to provide against the contingency of a finding, sentence or order, regularly passed by a Court in the case of an offence committed outside its local area, being set aside when no failure of justice has taken place—Doraiswamy Mudali, 30 Mad. 94 (95), 1 M.L.T. 345, 4 Cr.L.J. 253.

184. All offences against the provisions of any law for the time being in force relating to Railways, Telegraph, Post Office and Arms Act.

time being in force relating to Railways, Telegraph, the Post-Office or Arms and Ammunition may be inquired into or tried in a Presidency-town, whether the offence is stated to have been committed within such town or not:

Provided that the offender and all the witnesses necessary for his prosecution are to be found within such town.

185. Whenever any doubt arises as to the Court by which any offence should under the preceding provisions of this chapter be inquired into or tried, the High Court, within the local limits of whose appellate criminal jurisdiction the offender actually is, may decide by which Court the offence shall be inquired into or tried.

185. (1) Whenever a question arises as to which of two or more Courts subordinate to the same High Court ought to inquire into or try any offence, it shall be decided by that High Court.

(2) Where two or more Courts not subordinate to the same High Court have taken cognizance of the same offence, the High Court within the local limits of whose appellate criminal jurisdiction the proceedings were first commenced may direct the trial of such offender to be held in any Court subordinate to it, and if it so decides, all other proceedings against such person in respect of such offence shall be discontinued. If such High Court, upon the matter having been brought to its notice, does not so decide, any other High Court, within the local limits of whose appellate criminal jurisdiction such proceedings are pending, may give a like direction, and upon its so doing all other such proceedings shall be discontinued.

Change:—This section has been re-drafted by sec 43 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act XVIII of 1923. For reasons see below. The old section has been divided into two classes Sub-section (1) which follows the language of the old section, is now restricted to cases where the two Courts, whose relative jurisdiction is in question, are subject to the same High Court. And the contingency where the two Courts are subject to different High Courts is now provided for in sub-section (2), under an entirely new procedure

570. Sub-section (1)—Nature of doubt:—The meaning of the old section was this: Where more Courts than one had jurisdiction under the preceding sections (secs. 177-184) to try an offence, then if a doubt arose as to the Court by which suc

offence should be tried, it must involve a doubt as to the suitability of one Court as compared with another from the point of view of convenience and expediency. The High Court could be called upon to give its decision only where the doubt was—"in which of the two Courts it would be more convenient to have the case tried?" and not—"which of the two Courts had jurisdiction to try the offence?" The words "under the preceding provisions" show that no question of jurisdiction arose under the old section, the doubt being on a matter of convenience only. Therefore, in a case where both the Magistrate at Calcutta and the Magistrate at Karwar had jurisdiction to try the offence, the Calcutta High Court decided that from the point of view of convenience of the parties and their witnesses, the Magistrate at Calcutta should try the case—Charu Chandra, 44 Cal. 595 (609,610), 21 C.W.N. 320, 25 C.L.J. 165, 18 Cr.L.J. 81, 37 I.C. 145 (F.B.). This decision overrules Rapani Benode v. All India Banking Co., 41 Cal. 305, 17 C.W.N. 1207, where it was held that the High Court could interfere only when the doubt arose as to which of the two Courts has jurisdiction to try the offence, and, therefore, where two Courts were equally competent to try an offence, i.e., where there was no doubt as to jurisdiction, the High Court could not interfere merely on the ground of convenience. The cases of Hiran Kumar v. Mangal, 17 C.W.N. 761 (764), 14 Cr.L.J. 398, 20 I.C. 222, and Gurdit Singh, 24 P.R. 1917, 18 Cr.L.J. 514 (518) took the same view as 44 Cal. 595; the case of Girdhar, 21 A.L.J. 621, 24 Cr.L.J. 929, A.I.R. 1924 All. 77 (78) adopted the contrary view.

The words "under the preceding provisions of this chapter" have been omitted by the Amendment Act of 1923, and the effect of the amendment is that the High Court can now be called upon to decide not only the question as to which of two Courts ought to try the offence from the point of view of convenience, but also which of the two Courts has jurisdiction to try the offence. This view was taken in Chaichal, 5 L.B.R. 17, 9 Cr.L.J. 581 (a case decided under the old section).

571. Extra-provincial jurisdiction of High Court:—Where two complaints were filed in respect of the same offence in two different Courts situated in two different provinces, one at Chittagong Court (under the jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court) and another at Gujranwalla (under the jurisdiction of the Punjab Chief Court), the High Court at Calcutta, being of opinion that it would be more convenient to have the case tried at Chittagong, made an order that the case be transferred from the Gujranwalla Court to the Court at Chittagong—Hiran Kumar v. Mangal, 17 C.W.N. 761 (764), 14 Cr.L.J. 398, 20 I.C. 222. A similar order was made in Gurdit Singh, 24 P.R. 1917, 18 Cr.L.J. 514. In the Full Bench case of Charu Chandra, 44 Cal. 595 (611), 21 C.W.N. 320, 25 C.L.J. 165, 18 Cr.L.J. 81, 37 I.C. 145, the Calcutta High Court did not actually transfer the case from an extra-provincial Court, but made a declaration that the case which had been instituted at Karwar (Bombay) should be tried at Calcutta, leaving the prosecution to take the necessary steps accordingly. This was, of course, a transfer by implication. Thus, all the above cases laid down that the High Court had power to make an order of transfer in respect of a case pending in a Court outside its appellate criminal jurisdiction.

But the Madras High Court was of opinion that the High Court had no power to direct the transfer of a case pending before a Magistrate not subject to its appellate jurisdiction—Mahomed Ghouse v. Nathu, 40 Mad. 835, 18 Cr.L.J. 148, 37 I.C. 516, 5 M.L.W. 349.

Sub-section (2) has been enacted to remove this conflict of opinion. By adopting the Madras view it practically disallows the High Court to transfer a case from a Court outside its jurisdiction, and lays down a new procedure in case of such contingency. "In view of the conflicting decisions in the Indian Law Reports, 44 Cal. 595, and Indian Law Reports, 40 Mad. 835, it is proposed to make it clear that one High Court has no power, whether by implication or otherwise, to transfer a case to itself from another High Court or vice versa, or to decide which of two other High Courts should try a particular case"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1921).

By adopting the simple procedure laid down in this sub-section, the High Court will be relieved of the cumbrous procedure of a reference to the Governor-General for an order under sec. 527.

Sub-section (2) applies where two Courts have taken cognizance of the same offence, and not where only one Court has taken up criminal proceedings in respect of the offence, and the proceedings have been rightly started in that Court—Parag, 9 O.W.N. 1181, 1933 Cr.C. 85 (88).

Sections 185 and 527:—The two sections have entirely different scopes. An order under sec. 527 is an executive order which may be made without any opportunity being afforded to the accused to be heard. Moreover, an order under sec. 527 contemplates an order for transfer, and recourse may possibly be had thereto if an order made by one High Court is disregarded by another High Court—Charu Chandra, 44 Cal. 595 (624) (F.B.), 21 C.W.N. 320 (per Mookerjee, J.).

186. (1) When a Pr

Power to issue summons or warrant for offence committed beyond local jurisdiction.

trate, he is the Provincial Government, a Magistrate of the first class, sees reason to believe that any person within the local limits of his jurisdiction has committed without such limits (whether within or without British India) an offence which cannot, under the provisions of sections 177 to 184 (both inclusive) or any other law for the time being in force, be inquired into or tried within such local limits, but is under some law for the time being in force triable in British India, such Magistrate may inquire into the offence as if it had been committed within such local limits, and compel such person in manner hereinbefore provided to appear before him, and send such person to the Magistrate having jurisdiction to inquire into or try such offence, or if such offence is bailable, take a bond with or without sureties, for his appearance before such Magistrate.

Magistrate's procedure on arrest.

(2) Where there are more Magistrates than one having such jurisdiction and the Magistrate acting under this section cannot satisfy himself as to the Magistrate to or before whom such person should be sent or bound to appear, the case shall be reported for the orders of the High Court.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

572. "Empowered":—If a Cantonment Magistrate is not empowered under this section, he can decline to exercise jurisdiction. Under such circumstances the District Magistrate can transfer the case to his own Court under sec. 528, and himself make the inquiry requisite under sec. 186—Ramji, Ratanlal 849. If a Magistrate not empowered under this section acts in good faith, his proceedings will not be set aside for want of jurisdiction, the defect being cured by sec. 529.

Powers of High Court:—Where the facts of a case fall within this section, not only the Magistrate can proceed under this section, but the High Court also has jurisdiction under cl. 29 of the Letters Patent to direct a Magistrate to make a preliminary investigation and, in the event of a prima facie case being made out, to commit the case for trial to the Sessions. But, under ordinary circumstances it will be for the Magistrate to proceed under the special provisions of this section, and the High Court will not exercise the general powers conferred by the Letters Patent which are to be applied only in extremely exceptional cases—Oriental Govt. Security Life Assurance Co. Ltd. v. Masilamany, 2 Weir 146 (147).

573. Issue of warrant from outside jurisdiction:—It is not necessary that the Magistrate issuing the warrant should be present within the local limits of his jurisdiction at the time of issuing it. It is sufficient if he has jurisdiction in the place where the offender is found. Thus, a Magistrate of Ahmedabad District issued from a place in Kathiawar a warrant for the apprehension of a person who was in Ahmedabad for an offence committed in Kathiawar; it was held that the issuing of the warrant from Kathiawar by the Magistrate without being present in the Ahmedabad District in which he had jurisdiction, was not beyond his competency—Locha Kala, 1 Bom. 340 (341).

187. (1) If the person has been arrested under a warrant issued under section 186 by a Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate, such Magistrate shall send the person arrested to the District or Sub-divisional Magistrate to whom he is subordinate, unless the Magistrate having jurisdiction to inquire into or try such offence issues his warrant for the arrest of such person, in which case the person arrested shall be delivered to the police-officer executing such warrant or shall be sent to the Magistrate by whom such warrant was issued.

(2) If the offence which the person arrested is alleged or suspected to have committed is one which may be inquired into or tried by any Criminal Court in the same district other than that of the Magistrate acting under section 186, such Magistrate shall send such person to such Court.

574. "Send the person to the District Magistrate":—Where a British Indian subject was arrested in a British district by a first class Magistrate for an offence committed in a Native State, and the Political Agent's certificate (required by sec. 188) was obtained, it was unnecessary to send the accused to the District Magistrate under this section; the Political Agent's certificate gave full power to the first Class Magistrate to hold the preliminary inquiry himself—Kahandas, Ratanlal 97 (98).

188. When a Native Indian subject of Her Majesty commits an offence at any place without and beyond the limits of British India, or when any British subject commits an offence in the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India, or when a servant of the Queen (whether a British subject or not) commits an offence in the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India, or when any person commits an offence on any ship or aircraft registered in British India wherever it may be,

he may be dealt with in respect of such offence as if it had

Liability of British subjects for offences committed out of British India been committed at any place within British India at which he may be found:

Provided that notwithstanding anything in any of the preceding sections of this chapter, no charge as to any such offence shall be inquired into in British India unless the Political Agent, if there is one, for the territory in which the offence is alleged to have been committed, certifies that, in his opinion, the charge ought to be inquired into in British India; and, where there is no Political Agent, the sanction of the Provincial Government shall be required:

Provided, also, that any proceedings taken against any person under this section, which would be a bar to subsequent proceedings against such person for the same offence if such offence had been committed in British India, shall be a bar to further proceedings against him under the Indian Extradition Act, 1903, in respect of the same offence in any territory beyond the limits of British India.

Change:—The italicised words in the first proviso have been added by sec. 44 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923

In the second proviso, the words "Indian Extradition Act, 1903" have been substituted for the words "Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act, 1879." This is consequential to the repeal of the old Act by the Act of 1903

The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

The words "or when any person commits an offence on any ship or aircraft registered in British India wherever it may be," have been inserted after the words "Prince or Chief in India, where they occur for the second time, by sec. 3 of the Offences on Ships and Aircraft Act, 1940 (Act IV of 1940).

Scope:—Under the terms of sec. 188, Cr. P. C., as it stands since the amendment of 1923, a Court in British India cannot try an offence by virtue of the terms of sec. 179, Cr. P. C., merely because part of the consequences have ensued within its jurisdiction if some part of the offence has been committed in a Native State. The section renders the certificate of the Political Agent necessary even in such cases—Fakhrullah Khan, AIR 1935 Mad 423, 68 MLJ 415, 41 MLW. 352, 37 Cr LJ. 195, 159 IC 1048, 1935 MWN 325, 1935 Cr C 446

This section refers to crimes committed beyond the limits of British India—Manabendra, AIR 1933 All 498 (500), 1933 Cr C 833

A child marriage contracted outside British India is not an offence under the Child Marriage Restraint Act (XIX of 1929) and if it is not an offence under that Act, there is no offence to which sec. 188, Cr. P. C., apply when such child marriage is contracted by British subjects in a foreign territory—Narayan, 37 Cr. L. J. 211, 59 Bom. 745, 159 IC 923, AIR 1935 Bom 437, 37 Bom LR 885, 1935 Cr C. 1305. See Maganti Subba Rao v. Vedullapalli Kamaraju in Note 579

In a case under sec. 401, I. P. C., the proof of association of the accused outside British India for the purpose of committing crimes is not barred under sec. 188, Cr. P. Code, read with sec. 4, I. P. C., because the Court is not concerned with the trial of a person for an offence committed outside British India, but with the fact that the accused committed offences outside British India, which affords evidence that the accused associated together for the purpose of committing crime—Arumugam v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 355 (356), 180 I.C. 431, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 858, 1938 M.W.N. 595, 48 M.W.N. 639.

575. This section controls the preceding sections:—Sections 177 to 184 are controlled by the provisions of sec. 188, so that if the offence specified in those sections (177—184) happen to be committed outside British India, those sections would cease to apply, and the special provision of sec. 188 would come in. Thus, to give concrete illustration, where the offence of criminal breach of trust was committed in a Native State by a British subject, then according to sec. 181, independently of sec. 188, such offence could not have been tried by a British Court. But as secs. 177—184 are controlled by sec. 188, the latter section would apply, and would give jurisdiction to a British Court to try the offence, but the certificate of a Political Agent would be absolutely necessary. See Tribhum, 5 S.L.R. 266, 13 Cr.L.J. 530 (531). See also Sup. and Rem. of L. A., Bengal v. Lundur, 33 Cr.L.J. 267 (269), 136 I.C. 137, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 185, 36 C.W.N. 456, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 465, 1932 Cr.C. 455, 59 Cal. 1065. So also, where a person was kidnapped in a Native State and conveyed to British territory, sec. 181 would not apply but the case would fall under sec. 188 and a certificate of the Political Agent would be a preliminary requisite of the trial of the offence by a British Court—Koochri, 7 S.L.R. 17, 14 Cr.L.J. 439; Narain, 41 All. 452 (454), 17 A.L.J. 450, 20 Cr.L.J. 276. Where a British Indian subject is found in a Native State in possession of stolen articles, he can be tried in British India for an offence under sec. 411 or 412, I.P.C., but the certificate of the Political Agent would be necessary—Sessions Judge v. Sundara, 21 M.L.J. 441, 11 Cr.L.J. 306, 6 I.C. 308; Sana Mathur, 54 Bom. 171, 32 Bom.L.R. 98, 31 Cr.L.J. 833 (835). Even the fact that there is an alternative charge under sec. 379, I.P.C., for theft in British India, will not enable the Magistrate to try the offence under sec. 411, I.P.C. (receiving stolen articles in a Native State) without the Political Agent's certificate—Sana Mathur, supra.

But in a Madras case, where the complainant in a place in British India entrusted certain jewels to the accused, a Native Indian subject of His Majesty, for sale on commission, and the latter pledged the jewels in a Native State and converted them to his use, it was held that since the loss of the jewels (which was consequence mentioned in sec. 179) occurred to the complainant in British India, this was sufficient under sec. 179 to give jurisdiction to the British Indian Court to try the offence; that secs. 179—184 should not be read subject to sec. 188, and that no certificate of the Political Agent was necessary—Assistant Sessions Judge v. Ramaswami, 38 Mad. 779 (780, 783), 26 M.L.T. 235, 15 Cr.L.J. 207, 22 I.C. 991 (doubting Sessions Judge v. Sundara, 21 M.L.J. 441, 1910 M.W.N. 143, 11 Cr.L.J. 306). This view of the law was untenable and the words "notwithstanding anything. . . . Chapter" have now been added in the proviso to make it clear that sec. 188 controls the preceding sections of this chapter. The Select Committee observe:—"Certain decisions of the Madras High Court seem to make it doubtful whether section 188 is subject to the provisions of secs. 179—184, and we think it is desirable to clear this up. We are not satisfied that this was the intention of section 188, and in our opinion it is safer, when a man is tried in British India in respect of an offence committed in a Native State, to require the Political Agent's certificate in every case. The amendment which we propose will make this clear."—Report of the Select Committee of 1916.

576. Illegal arrest:—See Notes 551 under sec. 177. A trial under this section will not be vitiated by reason of the fact that the accused has been brought into British India from a foreign territory under an illegal arrest—Vinayak Damodar Savarkar, 35 Bom. 225, 13 Bom.L.R. 296, 12 Cr.L.J. 356.

577. "Native Indian Subject":—This expression means only a Native Indian subject de jure and not de facto; a person who is not a Native Indian subject de jure but who owns some land in British territory and occasionally resides in British India, does not thereby become an Indian subject, amenable to the jurisdiction of a British Indian Court for an offence committed by him in a foreign territory—Fakir, 1885 P.R. 1: on appeal from 1883 P.R. 22.

Foreigners:—This section does not apply to an offence committed by a foreigner outside British territory, though he may subsequently be found in British India—Abdul Latib, 10 Bom 186 (188). No foreign subject can be tried in British India for an offence committed outside British India—Baldewa, 28 All 372 (374), 3 A.L.J. 146, 3 Cr.L.J. 247; Ibrahim, 7 P.R. 1894; Ranchhod, 2 Bom.L.R. 337; Fakir, 22 P.R. 1883; Roda, 30 P.R. 1889. Therefore, where the subject of a Native State committed theft in that State, and was subsequently found in British India in possession of the stolen property, the British Indian Court had no jurisdiction to try him for the offence of theft (but had jurisdiction to try him for retaining stolen property, under sec. 411, I P. C.)—Baldewa, 28 All. 372 (374), 3 A.L.J. 146, 3 Cr.L.J. 247; Abdul Latib, 10 Bom. 186 (188). See Note 557 under the heading "Offence in Native State."

578. Offence:—The word "offence" in this section means an offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code. Thus, the act of giving false evidence before a foreign Court where the oath is administered not under the provisions of the law in force in British India but under the law of that State in relation to proceedings before the Court, is not punishable under section 193 of the Indian Penal Code, and cannot be taken cognizance of by Magistrates of British Indian Courts. So also, the offence of lodging a false complaint in foreign Court is not punishable under the Indian Penal Code, because it cannot be said that a false information was given to a 'public servant' as defined by the Indian Penal Code. Similarly, the act of instituting criminal proceedings and making false charges before a foreign Court does not constitute an offence under sec. 211 of the Indian Penal Code, because the criminal proceedings and false charges contemplated by that section mean proceedings and charges in British India where the Indian Penal Code is in force. Therefore, offences committed in relation to Courts and authorities outside British India do not constitute offences under the Indian Penal Code and cannot be tried by any Court in British India; and a certificate of the Political Agent is out of the question—In re Rambharathi, 47 Bom. 907, 25 Bom.L.R. 772, 25 Cr.L.J. 333, 77 I.C. 189.

"May be found":—The word 'found' must be taken to mean not where a person is discovered, but where he is actually present, even though under arrest. So, if the accused committed an offence at R (in a Native State), whence he was brought under arrest to Ahmedabad, where he was tried, held that he was "found" not at S, but at Ahmedabad, where he was actually present, though under arrest, and the Ahmedabad Court had jurisdiction—Maganlal, 6 Bom. 622 (625). For the purposes of criminal jurisdiction an accused person is found wherever he is actually present, whether or not he has been brought there against his will—Vinayak Damodar Savarkar, 35 Bom. 225, 10 I.C. 956, 12 Cr.L.J. 356, 13 Bom.L.R. 296; Zincke, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 152 (153), 37 Cr.L.J. 979, 164 I.C. 687, 1936 Cr.C. 707.

579. Scope of proviso:—This proviso is of universal application and is not restricted to Native States only. If the offence is committed in a Native State, the certificate of the Political Agent is necessary; if the Native State has no Political Agent, the sanction of the Local Government is required. And if the offence is committed in a place other than a Native State, i.e., in a foreign territory, the sanction of the Local Government is likewise necessary, e.g., in case of an offence committed in Spain—Chellaram, 6 S.L.R. 260, 19 I.C. 954, 14 Cr.L.J. 298; or at Chandernagar—Sasadhara, 35 C.W.N. 1082 (1086).

A British Indian subject cannot be convicted for dishonest retention of property in French territory in absence of a certificate of the Political Agent of the said territory—Narayanawamy Padayachi, 31 Cr.L.J. 545, 143 I.C. 190, 1932 M.W.N. 1229, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 461, 1933 Cr.C. 707, Ind Rul 1933 Mad. 281.

Where a dacoity was committed in British India and murder was committed soon after in the Native State, in attempting to carry away stolen property, the British Indian Court had jurisdiction to try the accused under sec. 395, I P. C., without a certificate as required under this section—Punjab Singh, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 977, 35 P.L.R. 51, 1933 Cr.C. 1467, 147 I.C. 2.

The words "or where there is no Political Agent, the sanction of the Local Government shall be required" have been added to the Code in 1898. Under the previous Codes, when the offence was committed in a territory in which there was no Political Agent, no certificate (or sanction) was necessary, as for instance in Goa (Daya Bhima, 13 Bom. 147) or Siam (Abdul Husen, Ratanlal 773) or Cyprus (Sarmukh, 2 All 218).

In the absence of the certificate of the Political Agent or sanction of the Local Government a charge of an offence under the Child Marriage Restraint Act (XIX of 1929) committed in French territory cannot be inquired into in British India. There is nothing to the contrary in that Act—Maganti Subba Rao v. Vedullapalli Kamaraju, A.I.R. 1939 Mad 577, 49 M.L.W. 656, 1939 M.W.N. 742, 40 Cr.L.J. 822, 183 I.C. 708. See Narayan above under the heading "Scope" under this section.

530. Offences on High Seas:—Section 188 does not apply to offences committed on the High Seas. The proviso to this section refers to offences committed in a "territory" and not to offences committed on the High Seas. Therefore, an offence committed by a Native Indian subject on the sea at a distance of five or six miles from the coast can be tried by a Magistrate of British India without the sanction of the Local Government—Manuel Philip, 41 Bom 667, 18 Cr.L.J. 782, A.I.R. 1917 Bom 280, 41 I.C. 158, 19 Bom L.R. 527; Fernandes, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 3, 37 Cr.L.J. 314, 160 I.C. 375, 1936 Cr.C. 50. Po Thaung, 5 L.B.R. 221, 10 I.C. 705, 12 Cr.L.J. 198. The power to try offences committed on the High seas is conferred on Indian Courts by Stat 23 & 24 Vict., c. 88 (within three miles from the Coast of British India) and Stat 30 & 31 Vict., c. 124, section 11 (beyond the three miles limit). See Kastya Rama, 8 B.H.C.R. 63; Sheik Abdool Rahiman, 14 Bom. 227.

531. Political Agent:—A British Vice-Consul appointed by the British Government in any part of a foreign territory or colony under the suzerainty of a foreign independent state is not an officer appointed by the British Government, and does not come within the meaning of a Political Agent as used in this section. Jerandas, 36 Cr.L.J. 240 (244), 153 I.C. 60, 28 S.L.R. 27, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 96, 1934 Cr.C. 821. His Britannic Majesty's Minister at Kabul is not a Political Agent—Mahammed Qasin Khan, 36 Cr.L.J. 430 (431), 153 I.C. 747, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 827, 1934 Cr.C. 1154.

531A. Certificate of a Political Agent:—The certificate of the Political Agent is the preliminary requisite for the institution of criminal proceedings in a Court of British India for an offence committed outside British India. Want of certificate will invalidate all subsequent proceedings—Kal'charan, 24 All 256 (257); Ram Sundar, 19 All 109 (110); Narain, 41 All. 452 (454); Baku, 24 Bom 287; Sirdar v. Jethabhai, 8 Bom L.R. 513, 4 Cr.L.J. 54; Kathaperumal, 13 Mad 423 (426); Bapu Daldi, 5 Mad. 23 (25); Ram Charan, 5 Lah. 416 (420), 27 Cr.L.J. 218; Buta Singh, 7 Lah 396, 27 Cr.L.J. 1168; Ram Prasad, 11 P.L.T. 433, 31 Cr.L.J. 364 (365); Fazal Rahman, A.I.R. 1937 Pesh. 52, 170 I.C. 772, 38 Cr.L.J. 1042; Khawas Habib, A.I.R. 1940 Pesh. 4 (5), 41 Cr.L.J. 565, 88 I.C. 290. The want of a certificate is not a mere irregularity which can be cured by section 532 by a subsequent production of the certificate—Kathaperumal, supra; Ram Charan, supra. Even where the Magistrate was himself the Political Agent, the defect would not be cured by any subsequent production of the certificate signed by him—Kathaperumal, 13 Mad. 423 (426).

An agreement entered into (under the instructions of the Political Agent), by some members of Native State and some members of the executive authorities of the neighbouring portion of British India, to the effect that for convenience the British Indian Courts might arrest and try British Indian subjects found gambling in the Native State, and vice versa, cannot do away with the necessity of obtaining the certificate or sanction required by this section—Nandu, 42 All. 89 (90), 17 A.L.J. 1055, 20 Cr.L.J. 700, 52 I.C. 668.

The obtaining of sanction is imperative and the omission to do so vitiates the trial and the conviction of the accused—Ram Prasad, 31 Cr.L.J. 364, 122 I.C. 155, 11 P.L.T. 433, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 501.

In a sessions case, the certificate of the Political Agent must be obtained before the commencement of the committal proceedings in the Magistrate's Court—Ruliya Singh, 7 Lah. 468, 27 Cr.L.J. 942 (944); and the proceedings of a Magistrate committing an accused to the Sessions Court without a certificate under sec. 188 are void and illegal—Buta Singh, 7 Lah. 395, 27 P.L.R. 447, 27 Cr.L.J. 1168; Ram Charan, supra; Narain, supra; Kathapurmal, supra; Ram Sundar, supra. Where a commitment was made without the certificate, the fact that the certificate existed at the date of the commitment, (i.e., it had been signed by the Political Agent before the date of commitment) could not cure the defect—Kalicharan, 21 All. 256 (257). In certain Punjab cases, however, it has been held that the want of a certificate is not a fatal defect invalidating the commitment, but is a mere irregularity curable by sec. 537, if no objection is taken at the trial and no prejudice to the accused has been caused in the defence—Shamir Khan, 1888 P.R. 35; Roda, 1889 P.R. 30; Feteih Din, 1902 P.R. 4 (F.B.); Mohammad Qasim Khan, 36 Cr.L.J. 430, 16 Lah. 73, 37 P.L.R. 419, 153 I.C. 747, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 827, 1934 Cr.C. 1154. Where, however, the defect was observed and objected to by the Sessions Judge, the commitment should be quashed—Mastana, 1899 P.R. 11; Ram Charan, 5 Lah. 416 (420), 27 Cr.L.J. 218.

The word 'charge' as used in this section means "accusation" and cannot be limited to a formal charge as in a warrant case—Harnarayan v. Govindram, 41 Cr.L.J. 645 (646), 188 I.C. 606; 1940 N.L.J. 304, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 245. The proviso lays down that "no charge shall be inquired into British India unless the Political Agent," etc., and therefore the Bombay High Court holds that there is nothing illegal in obtaining the certificate or sanction after the complaint has been filed and the inquiry has begun or been completed as far as the framing of the charge—Sakharam, 12 Bom.L.R. 667, 7 I.C. 934, 11 Cr.L.J. 543; In re Ram Bharathi, 47 Bom. 907 (at p. 911), 25 Cr.L.J. 333, 25 Bom.L.R. 772, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 51, 77 I.C. 189. If the certificate is not produced at the time the proceedings have reached the stage of framing a charge, the Magistrate cannot proceed any further, but it is open to him to give the complainant a reasonable time within which to obtain the certificate, and then to continue the proceedings in the event of such certificate being obtained—Allibhoy, 19 S.L.R. 122, 25 Cr.L.J. 620, A.I.R. 1925 Smd. 588, 81 I.C. 108. In another Bombay case, it has even been held that where the certificate was received after the examination of some prosecution witnesses but before the commitment of the case to the Sessions, the commitment was good, and the irregularity, if any, was cured by sec. 537—Mahamad Buksh, 8 Bom.L.R. 597, 4 Cr.L.J. 49. There is no reason why cognizance should not be legally taken even though the further progress of the case depends on the production of a certificate—Harnarayan v. Govindram, 41 Cr.L.J. 645 (647), 188 I.C. 606, 1940 N.L.J. 304, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 245.

A document certifying that a case should be tried in British India, and purporting to be signed by the Under-Secretary for the Political Agent, is not sufficient; it is necessary that the Agent should himself certify. But a certified copy of an order signed by the Agent himself and directing that a certificate should issue under sec. 188 in the particular case sufficiently meets the requirements of this section. If the order bears a date prior to the commencement of committal proceedings in the Magistrate's Court, though the certified copy is produced in the Sessions Court, the commitment is not invalid—Ruliya Singh, 7 Lah. 468, 27 P.L.R. 708, 27 Cr.L.J. 942. When a certificate purports to be a certificate of the Political Agent but is signed by another officer "By order," it may be accepted as sufficient evidence of the fact that the Political Agent had certified as required by this section. But when it does not purport to be a certificate of the Political Agent and is signed by another officer for him it cannot be accepted as a sufficient evidence of the same. Bhaiji Manar, 35 Cr.L.J. 629, 148 I.C. 268, 35 Bom.L.R. 1177, A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 41, 1934 Cr.C. 203, 58 Bom. 97. But see Kalicharan, 24 All. 256, cited above.

Magistrate not confined to the charges in the certificate:—The Magistrate is not restricted to the charge mentioned in the certificate. The certificate granted by the Political Agent in respect of an offence will cover every charge which the facts declared in the certificate will suffice to sustain—Krishna Nath, 33 All. 514, 12 Cr.L.J. 359. An order of committal on a charge which is different from that mentioned in the certificate but based upon the same set of facts, will be perfectly valid—In re Sessions Judge, 8 M.L.T. 203, 11 Cr.L.J. 531, 7 I.C. 802.

Effect of the certificate :—The certificate operates and the case may be dealt with as if the offence has been committed in British India, "when any British subject commits an offence in the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India," that is, whether he is an Indian British subject or a European British subject, his claim to be tried as a European British subject arises after the certificate has been furnished and it has been decided to deal with him as if the offence had been committed in British India—Zincke, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 152 (153), 37 Cr.L.J. 979, 164 I.C. 687, 1936 Cr.C. 707.

Certificate cannot be revoked :—Where the District Magistrate as the Political Agent granted a certificate for the trial of the accused by a Magistrate in British India, it was held that the latter was legally seised of the case, and it was not competent to the Political Agent to recall the certificate and to hand over the accused to the Native State for his trial in that State—Vazir Saheb, 14 Bom.L.R. 377, 13 Cr.L.J. 537, 15 I.C. 809.

189. Whenever any such offence as is referred to in section

Power to direct copies of depositions and exhibits to be received in evidence.

188 is being inquired into or tried, the Provincial Government may, if it thinks fit, direct that copies of depositions made or exhibits produced before the Political Agent or a judicial officer in or for the territory in which such offence is alleged to have been committed shall be received as evidence by the Court holding such inquiry or trial in any case in which such Court might issue a commission for taking evidence as to the matters to which such depositions or exhibits relate. .

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

B. Conditions requisite for Initiation of Proceedings.

190. (1) Except as hereinafter provided, any Presidency

Cognizance of offences by Magistrates.

Magistrate, District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate, and any other Magistrate specially empowered in this behalf, may take cognizance of any offence—

(a) upon receiving a complaint of facts which constitute such offence;

(b) upon a report in writing of such facts made by any police-officer;

(c) upon information received from any person other than a police-officer, or upon his own knowledge or suspicion that such offence has been committed.

(2) The Provincial Government, or the District Magistrate subject to the general or special orders of the Provincial Government, may empower any Magistrate to take cognizance under sub-section (1), clause (a) or clause (b), of offences for which he may try or commit for trial.

(3) The Provincial Government may empower any Magistrate of the first or second class to take cognizance under sub-section (1), clause (c), of offences for which he may try or commit for trial.

532. Change:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

The words in clause (b) have been substituted for the words "upon a police report of such facts," by section 45 of the Cr P C Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. In Sada, 25 Bom. 150, 3 Bom L.R. 586 (F.B.), Bhairab, 46 Cal 807 (817, 818), In re Chidambaram, 32 Mad 3, Ram Lal, 1 PLT 73, 55 IC 285, 21 Cr L.J. 269, Harihar, 23 C.W.N. 481, and Ghulam Husain, 6 Lah L.J. 606, 25 Cr L.J. 1361, it was held that the term police report in the old clause was used in a technical sense as meaning the report of the police in a cognizable case only, and that since a police-officer had no power to make a report in a non-cognizable case without the order of a Magistrate under sec 155 (2), a police report in such a case was to be treated as a complaint under clause (a) and the procedure of sec 200 was to be followed by the Magistrate. Under the present amendment, the wording of clause (b) is quite general, and would empower a Magistrate to take cognizance of a non-cognizable offence upon a report in writing by a police-officer, even though such report was made upon investigation without the order of a Magistrate under sec 155 (2)—Shivaswami, 51 Bom. 498, 29 Bom L.R. 742, 28 Cr L.J. 939 (941), 105 IC. 459, AIR 1927 Bom 440, (per Patkar, J.); Ratnavelu, 49 Mad 525, 27 Cr L.J. 1031 (1037), AIR 1926 Mad 865, 96 IC 983, 52 MLJ 210, (F.B.) (overruling In re Perumal, 22 LW 209, 26 Cr L.J. 1550); Babulal, 37 Cr L.J. 587, 162 IC 308, 19 NLJ 120, AIR 1936 Nag. 86; Muhammad Hashim v Emp, AIR 1940 Sind 134 (135) (F.B.). The present amendment lays down that the report of a police-officer in a non-cognizable case is a report under clause (b) all the same, and not a complaint under clause (a), and the Magistrate will not have to follow the procedure of Chapter XVI, e.g. to examine the complainant (i.e. the police-officer) on oath. See Bholanath, 28 C.W.N. 490, 26 Cr L.J. 68, 83 IC 628; Ratnavelu, supra; Shankar Lal, 9 Lah 280, 28 Cr L.J. 821 (822); Prag Datt, 51 All 382, 27 A.L.J. 68, AIR 1928 All 765, 111 IC 382, 29 Cr L.J. 938; Nagendra Nath, 51 Cal 402 (414); Mt Lachmi Devi v. Emp, AIR. 1931 Cal 122 (127), 35 C.W.N. 257, 130 IC. 241, 1931 Cr C 154, 32 Cr L.J. 511, 53 CLJ 461, 58 Cal 971. Even though sec. 4 (h), Cr. P. C., has not been amended, the words in it as it stands, are sufficiently wide to include a report of a non-cognizable offence and the meaning of the phrase in the two secs 190 and 4 (h), although the wording is different, amounts to the same thing. The report of a police-officer whether in a non-cognizable or in a cognizable offence does not amount to a complaint—Babulal, 37 Cr L.J. 587, 162 IC 308, AIR. 1936 Nag. 86, 1936 Cr.C. 551, 1 LR. 1936 Nag. 50, 19 NLJ. 120. In the above case of 51 Bom. 498, Fawcett, J., adhered to the old view (following 26 Bom 150, F.B.), viz. that a report made by a police-officer in a non-cognizable case without the investigation being ordered by a Magistrate under sec 155 (2), was not a report but a complaint, that the amendment of clause (b) has not changed the law in this respect, and that the Magistrate could not take cognizance of the case upon such report under clause (b) of sec. 190. Even Patkar, J., at the end of his judgment said that he was inclined to treat the report as a complaint. See also Raghunath, 34 Bom L.R. 901, 1932 Cr C. 868 (869), 33 Cr L.J. 733 (734), 139 IC. 281, AIR. 1932 Bom. 610, Ind. Rul. 1932 Bom. 484. But so far as examination of the complainant (sec. 200) is concerned, this view makes no difference, for even if the report be treated as a complaint under clause (a) and not as a police report, the examination of the police-officer (complainant) is not necessary, under the new clause (a) of sec. 200. See Ratnavelu, supra; and the view of Patkar, J. in 51 Bom. 498, 28 Cr.L.J. 939 (at p. 941).

By virtue of sections 190 (1) (b) and 200 (a), Cr. P. C., Magistrates mentioned in sec. 190 are entitled to take cognizance of even non-cognizable offences upon a report made in writing by a police-officer without examining the officer upon oath—Ratnavelu, 49 Mad. 525, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 865, 27 Cr.L.J. 1031, 1927 M.W.N. 43, 25 M.L.W. 248, 52 M.L.J. 210 (F.B.); Shankar Lal, 28 Cr.L.J. 821, 104 I.C. 437, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 702, 9 Lah. 280, 29 P.L.R. 469; Prag Datt Tiwari v. Emp., A.I.R. 1928 All. 765, 51 All. 382, 1929 A.L.J. 68, 111 I.C. 858, 29 Cr.L.J. 938; Lal Bihari, 31 Cr.L.J. 55, 120 I.C. 297, 10 P.L.T. 601, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 514.

Moreover, before the present amendment, the words 'police report' were used in a technical sense to mean a police report under section 170 or 173, i.e., a report made after investigation, and not an information sent by the Police to the Magistrate before making any investigation—Ahmed Khan, 5 S.L.R. 1, 12 Cr.L.J. 93, 9 I.C. 492; Khusaldas, 6 S.L.R. 82, 13 Cr.L.J. 752; In re Nagendra Nath, 51 Cal. 402 (413); Sada, 26 Bom. 150 (157). See also Ghulam Hussain, 25 Cr.L.J. 1361, 82 I.C. 753, 1 Lah. Cas. 16, 6 L.L.J. 605, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 237. Under the present amendment the words have been changed altogether and replaced by the non-technical words "report made by any police-officer" which would certainly include a report or information given before investigation. Even before the present amendment, it was held in a Sind case that the Police report referred to in this section was not confined to a report under sec. 173 but was wide enough to cover reports under other sections of Chapter XIV (e.g., reports under secs 157 and 168), nor was it confined to reports under Ch. XIV alone—Mehrab, 17 S.L.R. 150 (F.B.), 26 Cr.L.J. 181 (183) (dissenting from 5 S.L.R. 1). See Abdullah Khan, 34 Cr.L.J. 256, 141 I.C. 879, Ind. Rul. 1933 Sind 79, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 188, 1933 Cr.C. 569. If the police makes a report after investigation into a non-cognizable offence under the order of a Magistrate under sec. 155 (2), the report would fall under clause (b) of this section—Shivastami, supra; Chandri Bawooji, 49 Bom. 212, 26 Cr.L.J. 441.

533. Magistrate empowered:—Under this section a third class Magistrate can take cognizance of an offence under clauses (a) and (b) only i.e., upon a complaint or a police report—Sada, 26 Bom. 150.

The District Magistrate of the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore has jurisdiction to take cognizance of and try offences committed by European British subjects in accordance with the provisions of this Code—Marchant, 34 Mad. 346 (348), 9 I.C. 255, 12 Cr.L.J. 42.

If a Magistrate not empowered to take cognizance under cl. (a) or (b) does so under a bona fide mistake, his proceedings will not be set aside merely on the ground of his not being empowered. See sec. 529 (e). But proceedings under clause (c) of a Magistrate not empowered to take cognizance under that clause are void. See sec. 530 (k).

If a Magistrate not empowered to take cognizance of offences upon complaint (e.g., a second class Magistrate who is not competent to take cognizance of a murder case) nevertheless takes cognizance of the case, sends the complaint to the police for inquiry, and on receiving the police report, dismisses the complaint as false and prosecutes the complainant under sec. 211, I. P. Code, for making a false complaint, the action of the Magistrate in taking cognizance of the offence may be cured by sec. 529 (e), but the further action of the Magistrate in prosecuting the complainant for making a false complaint cannot be validated by sec. 529 (e)—Bengali Gope, 5 Pat. 447, 7 P.L.T. 335, 27 Cr.L.J. 704.

The District Magistrate cannot authorize a second class Magistrate to take cognizance of complaints of offences which the second class Magistrate is not competent to try (e.g., a case of murder). Section 37 and Schedule IV of this Code must be read with sec. 190; and there is nothing in these provisions to extend the power which the District Magistrate can confer—Bengali Gope, supra.

534. Offence:—A Magistrate authorised under this section to take cognizance of an offence upon complaint, can take cognizance of an offence under sec. 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act, even in the absence of a special authorisation in that behalf; because the very definition of the word 'offence' in section 4 clause (o) includes any act in respect of which a complaint may be made under section 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act—Vistanatha, 44 Bom. 42, 21 Bom L.R. 1084, 21 Cr.L.J. 95; Deenadayalu v. Ratna, 50 Mad. 841, 52 M.L.J. 251, 28 Cr.L.J. 301. See also Budhan v. Issur, 34 Cal. 926 (927).

535. "Taking cognizance":—Under this section cognizance is taken of the offence and not necessarily of the individual offenders whose names transpire in the course of the investigation—Mathura, 36 Cr.L.J. 641, 155 I.C. 58, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 467, 15 P.L.T. 438, 1934 Cr.C. 1062. The Magistrates mentioned in sec. 190, sub-sec. (1) are empowered to take cognizance of an offence whether or not the complainant before them charges any particular individuals with having committed the offence. This section does not empower Magistrates to deal with offenders but to take cognizance of offences—Fatch Mulammad v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Sind 97 (98). See also Jugeshwar and Vithu in Notes 614B and 614C. When a Magistrate has taken cognizance of an offence upon a complaint or upon a police report any offence that may be disclosed by the evidence may be dealt with at the trial; and that sec. 190 (1) (c) and sec. 191 have no application in such circumstances Baldeo Prasad, 34 Cr.L.J. 942 (946), 145 I.C. 382, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 297, 14 P.L.T. 330, 12 Pat. 758, 1933 Cr.C. 789; Baburao Tatyarao v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 9 (11), 165 I.C. 867, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 379, 38 Bom.L.R. 946, 1936 Cr.C. 924. But see Rajaratnam Pillai, 37 Cr.L.J. 501, 161 I.C. 846, 1936 M.W.N. 181, 70 M.L.J. 340, 43 M.L.W. 367, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 341, 8 R.M. 880, 59 Mad. 442, 1936 Cr.C. 384. A Magistrate can take cognizance of a case either under sec. 190 (1) (a), (b) or (c), or under all three of them if he is invested with powers thereunder—U Po Yone, 34 Cr.L.J. 1185, 146 I.C. 196, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 271, 1933 Cr.C. 1015. The expression "to take cognizance" has not been defined in the Code, and it is difficult to ascertain at what precise stage of the case cognizance is said to be taken. When a District Magistrate, on receipt of a police report, made over the case to another Magistrate for inquiry, and the latter after taking evidence summoned the accused, it was the latter Magistrate (and not the District Magistrate) who really took cognizance of the offence, because he was the first Magistrate who really contemplated taking proceedings against the accused—Ananta Ram v. Sheikh Altab, 17 C.W.N. 795 (796), 14 Cr.L.J. 425; Lachhmi Narain, 4 Luck. 353, 30 Cr.L.J. 134 (135). The expression "taking cognizance of an offence" in sec. 190 of the Code deals with a matter of a purely technical nature. Cognizance is usually taken upon complaint when process is issued, but no restricted interpretation can be given to that expression in consideration of the character of the action of a Magistrate at any particular stage of the proceeding before him. But from the terms of sec. 190 it is clear that cognizance is taken upon issue of process before evidence is recorded. It is the complaint, therefore, which gives jurisdiction to the Magistrate to try the offence—Baburao Tatyarao v. Emp., supra, following Mackey, 53 Cal. 350, 93 I.C. 33, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 470, 27 Cr.L.J. 385, 30 C.W.N. 276, 43 C.L.J. 310 (F.B.). A Magistrate cannot be said to have taken cognizance of a case under section 107 until he issues notice to the person charged to show cause why he should not be proceeded against under that section. Therefore, where the Police reported the matter to the District Magistrate who ordered the case to be transferred to the file of the Head Quarters Deputy Magistrate, who then issued notice to the accused, held that it was the latter Magistrate and not the District Magistrate who took cognizance of the case—Konda Reddy, 41 Mad. 246 (249).

Taking cognizance does not involve any formal action or indeed action of any kind but occurs as soon as a Magistrate applies his mind to the suspected commission of an offence Where a police report of a dacoity was submitted to the Sub-divisional Officer on the 24th April 1909, and the case was afterwards withdrawn by the District Magistrate to his own file on the 20th January 1910, held that the District Magistrate took cognizance of the case on the 20th January 1910—Sourindra, 37 Cal. 412, 11 C.W.N. 512, 11 Cr.L.J. 217. Taking cognizance occurs as soon as the Magistrate reads the complaint and even before he examines the complainant which he is bound to do—Harnarayan v. Govindram, 41 Cr.L.J. 645 (647), 188 I.C. 606, 1940 N.L.J. 301. See also Mathura, 36 Cr.L.J. 641, 155 I.C. 58, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 647, 15 P.L.T. 438, 1934 Cr.C. 1062. It would appear that cognizance may be taken by a Magistrate of any matter in respect of which an enquiry or trial may be held under the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure and, in taking cognizance of an offence or other case, for example cases under secs 107, 110 or 145 of the Code, a Magistrate merely takes seisin of the matter for the purpose of exercising the specific powers with which he has been invested under the Code in connection with the case in question—Hafizer Rahaman v. Ainal Hoque, 44 C.W.N. 1114 (1118).

Where an officer who is also Magistrate holds departmental inquiry and charges are made before him, he cannot be said to have taken cognizance—Karikowda, 19 Bom. 51.

In cases where sanction of the Government is necessary, e.g., an offence under sec. 4 (b), Explosive Substances Act, the Magistrate is not competent to take cognizance upon a mere complaint unaccompanied by the requisite sanction—Lalit Chandra, 39 Cal 119 (125), 13 Cr.L.J. 433, 15 I.C. 65.

A Magistrate is not debarred from taking cognizance of an offence simply because another Magistrate has already taken cognizance of the same and is in seisin of the case. But since the accused person cannot be tried twice for the same offence, the proper course is for the one Magistrate to transfer his case to the other, and thus a multiplicity of trials can be avoided—Hari Satya, 50 Cal. 482, 24 Cr.L.J. 710, 37 C.L.J. 327.

The three alternatives upon which a Magistrate may take proceedings are not mutually exclusive. It is not correct to say that a Magistrate who has taken cognizance of an offence must be held to have done it under some one of the alternatives to the exclusion of the others. And so, a Magistrate who has taken cognizance of an offence upon a complaint is not debarred from proceeding upon a simultaneous police report which has come to him. In such a case it will not be necessary for him to follow the procedure of Ch. XVI and examine the complainant—Bharat Kishore v. Judhistr, 9 Pat. 707, 10 P.L.T. 779, 30 Cr.L.J. 1056 (1058) (F.B.).

The provisions of this section are exceedingly wide. There is nothing in the section which prevents a Sub-Divisional Magistrate from taking cognizance of an offence that happens to be reported to him by an officer who presides in a Court of justice—Tara Singh v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 840, 176 I.C. 960, A.I.R. 1938 All. 449, 1938 A.L.J. 528, 11 R.A. 158, 1938 A.L.R. 689, 1938 A.C.R.C. 45, 1938 A.W.R. (H.C.) 361.

586. Clause (a)—Cognizance upon complaint:—For 'complaint' see sec. 4 (h) and notes thereunder.

It is entirely wrong that any Court should accept a complaint which charges two people in the alternative—Narinjan Dass v. Emp., 31 Cr.L.J. 1065 (1066), 126 I.C. 535, A.I.R. 1930 Rang. 51.

"Complaint of facts which constitute offence":—Where a complaint presented to the Magistrate contains the offences with which the accused is charged, the fact that it is defective in not stating all the facts necessary to constitute the offence charged is immaterial—Sardar Dayal Singh, 1891 P.R. 8. But where the complaint mentions only the sections of the Penal Code, but no details or circumstances of any description are set out, it cannot be treated as a valid complaint—Shivilingappa, 32 Bom.L.R. 782, 31 Cr.L.J. 1142 (1143).

Where the complaint is not a sufficiently specific statement of facts to come within sec. 190 (1) (a), Cr. P. C., the defect is cured under sec. 529, Cr. P. C., which provides that if any Magistrate not empowered by law to do any of the following things, namely, (e) to take cognizance of an offence under sec. 190, sub-sec. (1) cl. (a) or cl. (b) erroneously in good faith does that thing, his proceedings shall not be set aside merely on the ground of his not being so empowered—Raghunath, 33 Cr.L.J. 733 (734), 139 I.C. 281, 34 Bom.L.R. 901, 1932 Cr.C. 868, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 610, Ind. Rul. 1932 Bom. 484.

Magistrate bound to take cognizance upon complaint.—The use of the term 'may take cognizance of an offence' does not mean that a Magistrate may refuse to take, and is not bound to take, cognizance of an offence on receiving a complaint of facts constituting an offence. The use of those terms does not make it optional with a Magistrate to hear a complaint, but rather refers to the action of the Magistrate in taking cognizance of the offence in either of the specified courses in which the facts constituting the offence may be brought to his notice. He is bound to examine the complainant and can then either issue summons to the accused or order an inquiry under sec. 202 or dismiss the complaint under sec. 203—Umer Ali v. Safar Ali, 13 Cal. 334 (335). He is bound, when the circumstances giving him jurisdiction exist, to receive the complaint and deal with it according to law—In re Jankidas, 12 Bom. 161 (163); and has no option to refer it to the police under sec. 155 or 156 (3) without taking cognizance of it—Jankidas, supra; In re Arula, 10 M.L.T. 120, 12 Cr.L.J. 463. It is true that sec. 200, Cr. P. C., does not say in so many words that the Magistrate is bound to take cognizance of a complaint made to him but that is the general interpretation of the section by the High Courts. The word "may" under sec. 190, Cr. P. C., does not mean that Magistrate may refuse to take cognizance of an offence upon a complaint duly made to him. As a Magistrate he is bound to examine the complainant and then either issue summons to the accused or make an inquiry under sec. 202, Cr. P. C., or dismiss the complaint—Radhakrishnan G. Keswari v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 449, 180 I.C. 436, A.I.R. 1939 Sind. 78. When a complaint is made to a Magistrate of a petty offence ordinarily within the cognizance of heads of villages, the Magistrate is bound to take cognizance of it, to proceed under sec. 200 and to dispose of the complaint according to law. The mere fact that the complaint is also cognizable by the head of the village does not entitle the Magistrate to decline to exercise jurisdiction and to direct the complainant to seek redress from the head of the village—Anonymous, 2 Weir 237, 7 M.H.C.R. App. 31.

Instances where Magistrate acts under cl. (a) and not under cl. (e).—Where a complaint is made before a Magistrate, he takes cognizance of the case under clause (a) and not under clause (e), even though he may record on the complaint that he acts under clause (e)—Meshidi v. Rangeon Municipal Committee, 4 L.B.R. 300; Rasid, 9 Bom.L.R. 212, 5 Cr.L.J. 202; Girdhari Lal, 1911 P.R. 11; Jhuna Lal, 2 P.L.J. 657.

The mere fact that previous to the making of the written complaint the Sub-divisional Magistrate happened to be in the village and the complainant related the story to him orally and he inspected the locality, does not bring the case within the purview of cl. (e) of this section. Section 191, Cr. P. C., has no application to such a case which was taken cognizance on the written complaint under cl. (a)—Saldeo, 27 Cr.L.J. 1406, 98 I.C. 718, A.I.R. 1927 All. 101.

Where a complainant charged certain persons with committing a certain offence, and the examination of the complainant revealed an offence different from that mentioned in the complaint, or revealed an additional offence, the Magistrate was competent to take cognizance of the latter offence, and in taking cognizance thereof he acted under clause (a) and not under clause (e), so that sec. 191 did not apply—Jagat Chandra, 26 Cal. 786 (789); Abdul Rahman, 4 Bur.L.J. 213, 27 Cr.L.J. 669; on appeal, Abdul Rahman, 5 Rang. 53 (P.C.), 31 C.W.N. 271, 28 Cr.L.J. 259, 52 M.L.J. 585, 25 A.L.J. 117; Baldeo Prasad v. Emp., A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 297 (298), 12 Pat. 758, 14 P.L.T. 330, 1933 Cr.C. 789, 145 I.C. 382, 34 Cr.L.J. 942.

Similarly, where the complainant charged several persons with having committed an offence, but the Magistrate after examination of the complainant or of some witnesses found out that other persons, not mentioned in the complaint, were concerned in the offence, he was competent to take cognizance in respect of the latter persons also, and in so doing he acted under clause (a) and not under clause (c), so that sec. 191 was not applicable to the case—Jagat Chandra, 26 Cal 786 (789); Qutba, 1904 P.R. 32; Imankhan, 14 Bom L.R. 141; Dedar Bux v. Shyamapada, A.I.R. 1914 Cal. 801, 24 I.C. 954, 15 Cr.L.J. 516, 18 C.W.N. 921, 41 Cal. 1013; Charu Chandra v. Narendra, 4 C.W.N. 367; Sri Kishan v. Debi Dayal, 2 O.W.N. 823, 26 Cr.L.J. 1619, 90 I.C. 915. Section 190, Cr. P. C., refers in terms to "offence" and not "offender," and a Magistrate having taken cognizance of an offence can add co-accused—Assudomal Ramandas v. Jhamandas Hotchand, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 100 (102), following Mehrab v. Emp., 17 S.L.R. 150, A.I.R. 1924 Sind 71, 83 I.C. 885, 26 Cr.L.J. 181 (F.B.); Dedar Bux v. Shyamapada, supra; and Fateh Muhammad v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Sind 97. See also Note 592.

Where a complaint under the Child Marriage Restraint Act (XIX of 1929) made to a District Magistrate was referred by him to a local Magistrate for inquiry, and the latter reported that the complainant also should be prosecuted, and the District Magistrate prosecuted the complainant, held that the report of the local Magistrate was a complaint under clause (a) and not an information under clause (c)—Sukha Sahu, 13 P.L.T. 791, 34 Cr.L.J. 237 (238), A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 87, 141 I.C. 810, 1933 Cr.C. 211.

An Assistant Police Prosecutor is an officer of the Police, but it is not his business to make report. It is open to a Magistrate to treat the application filed by him as a complaint made by him in his private capacity—Bulomal, 35 Cr.L.J. 266, 146 I.C. 1088, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 393, 1933 Cr.C. 1433.

537. Clause (b)—Police Report:—The 'police report' referred to in this clause is the report described in sec. 173, Cr. P. C., i.e., a report made by the Police after they have investigated the case and ascertained the facts and came to a conclusion that there are sufficient grounds to justify forwarding the person reported against to the Magistrate—Ahmed Khan, 12 Cr.L.J. 92, 9 I.C. 492, 5 S.L.R. 1. This case was dis-sented from in Mehrab, 26 Cr.L.J. 181, 83 I.C. 885, 17 S.L.R. 150, A.I.R. 1924 Sind 71 (F.B.), where it was held that this clause also included reports other than that mentioned in sec. 173, Cr. P. C. See Notes in para 582. The 'police report' mentioned in this section is not limited to a report mentioned in Chap. XIV. Where on an information received by post, a Magistrate sent the case to the police for inquiry and report, and on receiving the report took cognizance of the case, it was held that the action taken by him was based on the police report—Sarfaraz Khan, 11 A.L.J. 331, 14 Cr.L.J. 218, 19 I.C. 314.

A police report made after investigation into a non-cognizable case under the order of a Magistrate under sec. 155 (2) falls within this clause. See Note 582 above under heading "Change."

A report submitted by a Police-officer under sec. 24 of the Police Act falls under this clause—Abdul Ali, 1 P.L.T. 446, 59 I.C. 41 (44). The report of an Excise Sub-Inspector is a Police report for the purposes of this section—Radhika v. Hamid Ali, 54 Cal. 371, 28 Cr.L.J. 316, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 405. A police challan is a police report of facts constituting an offence under clause (b) and a Magistrate can take cognizance upon it—Sundar, 1901 P.R. 8; Chet Singh, 1900 P.R. 22. But a mere suggestion by the police-officer is not a police report, and where a Magistrate issued summons to the accused on the suggestion of a police-officer that the accused injured the crops of the people of the village, it was held that the Magistrate acted illegally, as none of the conditions required by this section had been fulfilled—Samun, 1891 P.R. 24. An application of the Prosecuting Inspector for putting a witness on trial is a report within the meaning of this clause—Chuni Lal, 34 Cr.L.J. 761, 144 I.C. 380, A.I.R. 1933 All. 399, 1933 Cr.C. 682, 1933 A.L.J. 735, Ind. Rul. 1933 All. 420.

When a report under sec. 173, Cr. P. C., is received by the Magistrate empowered under sec. 190, cl. (b), he takes cognizance of the offence under that section. Even if the accused is not sent up, i.e., not a charge-sheet but a final report is sent, the Magistrate when he applies his mind to that report takes cognizance of the offence and if he wants to place the accused on trial he can issue his process. This he can only do under sec. 204, Cr. P. C. He can also do the same on perusal of police report submitted to him after the enquiry under sec. 202, Cr. P. C., in case of a complaint. In both cases he will be acting under sec. 204, Cr. P. C.—Raghunath, 33 Cr.L.J. 349 (353), 136 I.C. 842, 12 P.L.T. 937, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 72, 1932 Cr.C. 136, Ind. Rul. 1932 Pat. 129.

The police report must state the facts which constitute the offence, that is, the concrete facts which constitute the alleged offence. Where no facts were stated, the mere assertions made by the police that certain offences had been committed, could not be regarded as compliance with the letter or the spirit of the law—In re Nagendra, 51 Cal. 402 (414), 81 I.C. 220, 38 C.L.J. 388, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 476, 25 Cr.L.J. 732. A prosecution is not legally instituted under sec. 190 (b) when the police report is defective and does not fulfil all the requirements of sec. 173 (e.g., when it does not set forth the nature of the information) and the first information report under sec. 154 is equally defective in this respect—Lee v Adhikari, 37 Cal. 49, 5 I.C. 553, 14 C.W.N. 304, 11 Cr.L.J. 145. Where the police report contains only the sections of the Penal Code but no details or circumstances of any description regarding the offence, the report is defective, and a Magistrate cannot take cognizance upon such report—Shivlingappa, 32 Bom.L.R. 782, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 372, 31 Cr.L.J. 1142 (1143). In Feroja v Amiruddin, 16 C.W.N. 1049 (1051), it has been remarked that if the police report be defective it is open to the Magistrate to treat it as a complaint, and in that case it will be necessary for him to call upon the Police-officer to appear and substantiate that complaint upon oath. (But it is not now necessary to examine the Police-officer, see cl. (aa) of sec. 200). But if the report does not contain the facts constituting the offence, it cannot be treated as a complaint, for a complaint equally with the report of a police officer must contain the facts which constitute the offence—Shivlingappa, supra. But where facts are not actually written out in the document which is called the charge-sheet but are contained in a document annexed to it, that is sufficient compliance with the requirements of sec. 190 (1) (b), Cr. P. C.—Hemendra Nath Gupta v Emp., 32 Cr.L.J. 94 (96), 165 I.C. 956, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 160, 17 P.L.T. 932, 9 B.R. 114, 9 R.P. 243. If the police charge-sheet contain a certain number of facts, though not a specific statement of all the facts, the Magistrate may take cognizance upon such charge-sheet, the defect being cured by sec. 529 (e)—Raghunath, 34 Bom.L.R. 901, 1932 Cr.C. 868 (869).

A Magistrate duly empowered under this section to take cognizance of an offence upon a police report and to try the case cannot refuse to take cognizance on the ground that the gravity of the offence requires severer punishment than he can inflict—Gema, Ratanlal 375.

Instances where Magistrate acts under Clause (b) and not under Clause (c):—Where L was charged by the police before the Magistrate, and the Magistrate after examining the investigating officer found that another person S should be joined as an accused person, and issued process against him, it was held that the Magistrate took cognizance of S's offence under clause (b) and not under clause (c), and was not bound to act under sec. 191—Sarwa, 9 N.L.R. 63, 14 Cr.L.J. 290. The principle is that when a Magistrate takes cognizance under clause (b) on a police report, he takes cognizance of the offence and not merely of the particular person charged in the report as the offender. He can, therefore, issue process against other persons also who appear to him, on the basis of the report and other materials placed before him when he has taken cognizance of the case, to be concerned in the commission of the offence. When he does so, it is not a case of taking cognizance against such persons under clause (c) of this section—Mehrab, 17 S.L.R. 150 (FB), 26 Cr.L.J. 181, overruling 5 S.L.R. 1. Similarly, where the Magistrate issued warrants against persons not named in the complaint or in the first information, but named in a report subsequently made by the police after investigation, it was held that the Magistrate took cognizance of the case under clause (b) and not under clause (c) of this section—Rajani Kanto, 8 C.W.N. 864. Where a Magistrate, while acquitting a certain person sent up by the Police, stated that another person had in his opinion committed the offence, and that the Police should take action against that person, and that person was accordingly sent up and convicted, it was held that the Magistrate acted under clause (b) and not clause (c), and sec. 191 was not applicable—Kahim Ally, 4 L.B.R. 137, 7 Cr.L.J. 414. Where an accused person charged by the Police was convicted and the case came up in appeal before a Sub-divisional Magistrate, the latter could try the offender himself under sec. 423 (1)(b) if the offence was one within his ordinary jurisdiction; and in so doing the Sub-divisional Magistrate took cognizance of the case not under clause (c) but under clause (b), as he had before him the police charge-sheet stating all the facts—Manikka, 30 Mad. 228, 16 M.L.J. 546. Where after the close of a trial the Magistrate ordered the police to send up a charge-sheet in respect of a witness for the prosecution, which the Police did, and then the Magistrate tried that person and convicted him, held that the Magistrate took cognizance of the case under clause (b) and not under clause (c), and sec. 191 did not, therefore, apply to the case—Gundoo, 23 Bom.L.R. 842, 22 Cr.L.J. 603, 62 I.C. 875. Where the Magistrate himself ordered that the witness should be put on his trial he did not act under clause (c) of this section and sec. 191 did not apply—Intaj Khan, 35 Cr.L.J. 1312, 151 I.C. 406, A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 193, 1934 Cr.C. 887.

There was a Police investigation into a charge under sec. 379, I. P. C., and the Police reported that the charge against the accused appeared to be false. On receipt of the report the Magistrate made an endorsement thereon "False under sec. 379. Action should be taken under sec. 211, Indian Penal Code." As a result of that a complaint was ultimately lodged by the Police with the Magistrate. Held that if the Magistrate took cognizance of the case on the endorsement that was made on the Police report, he took cognizance under sub-cl. (b) of sub-sec. (1) of sec. 190, Cr. P. C., that is, upon a Police report, and not upon his knowledge or suspicion under sub-cl. (c) and it was not necessary for the Magistrate to inform the accused under sec. 191, Cr. P. C., that he could be tried, if so desired, by another Magistrate—Lal Bihari, 31 Cr.L.J. 55, 120 I.C. 297, 10 P.L.T. 601, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 514.

588. Clause (c):—Clause (c) deals with cases where there has been neither a formal complaint nor a police report, and independently of these the Magistrate takes the initiative upon information received from any person other than a police-officer or upon his own knowledge or suspicion—Dedar Bux v. Shyamapada, 41 Cal 1013 (1020), A.I.R. 1914 Cal 801, 24 I.C. 954, 15 Cr.L.J. 546, 18 C.W.N. 921. This clause applies only to cases where the private individual who is injured or aggrieved or some one on his part does not come forward to make a formal complaint. It is a provision of law for enabling a public official to take care that justice may be vindicated, notwithstanding that the persons individually aggrieved are unwilling or unable to prosecute—Surendra, 13 W.R. 27, 5 Beng.L.R. 274.

Where upon the Sub-Registrar refusing to register a deed, the petitioner appealed to the District Registrar (who was also the District Magistrate) under the provisions of the Registration Act, and the District Magistrate finding that the document was a forgery ordered the prosecution of the petitioner for an offence under sec. 471, I. P. C., held that although the District Registrar, not being a Civil, Criminal or Revenue Court, could not direct a prosecution under sec. 476 of the Cr. P. Code, still his action must be deemed as one under clause (c) of sec. 190, Cr. P. Code, because in his capacity as District Magistrate he was competent to take cognizance of the offence under this clause, and to transfer the case to a subordinate Magistrate under sec. 191—Cheta Mahto, 2 Pat. 459 (463), 4 P.L.T. 727, 21 Cr.L.J. 792.

A Magistrate is entitled under this clause to record and act on the information furnished by the accused himself—Arunachala, 33 Cr.L.J. 586, 138 I.C. 240, 55 Mad. 717, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 500, 1932 Cr.C. 504, Ind. Rul. 1932 Mad. 552, 1932 M.W.N. 644, 62 M.L.J. 680, 35 M.L.W. 607.

The provisions of this clause do not apply to proceedings under sec. 110, Cr. P. C.

and limit by them the wide and unfettered language used in secs. 110 and 112, Cr. P. C.—Mahomed Ally, 27 Cr.L.J. 1280, 98 I.C. 128, A.I.R. 1927 Sind 77.

When in the course of a police investigation the Magistrate thinks that a particular person should be put on trial the proper course is to take cognizance of the case against him under cl. (c) of this section without sending the papers to the Superintendent of Police so as to deprive the accused of his right under sec. 191, Cr. P. C.—Nek Ram, 32 Cr.L.J. 370, 129 I.C. 267, A.I.R. 1931 All. 273, 1931 Cr.C. 337, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 139. See also Muhammad Sadiq v. Emp., in Note 593. But where the Sub-divisional Magistrate only acted on information contained in the police diary and the petition filed by the first informant, this latter coming within cl. (a) of sub-sec. (1) of this section and the former within clause (b), clause (c) has no application whatsoever—Panu Samal v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 111, 1939 P.W.N. 803, 41 Cr.L.J. 318, 186 I.C. 435.

Magistrate should state grounds.—It is most desirable that a Magistrate taking cognizance under clause (c) should record the grounds on which he is taking action, and this not only in fairness to the accused who is entitled to know for what reason he is being arrested, but also for his own protection. His omission to do so, however, does not necessarily vitiate the proceedings where the accused has not in any way been prejudiced—Maung Nyi, 4 Bur.L.J. 211, 27 Cr.L.J. 413, 93 I.C. 77.

539. Information:—The essential difference between a complaint and an information is that a Magistrate acts on a complaint because the complainant has asked him to act, but a Magistrate acts on information on his own initiative. In the case of a complaint the Magistrate is asked to prosecute the persons named therein, and he has then to decide whether he will accede to the request or not. If he does not, then he may either make an inquiry himself or direct an enquiry or investigation, under sec. 202, or dismiss the complaint under sec. 203, after recording his reasons. But in the case of receiving information he is not asked by any one to issue process, and if he does not choose to act on the information he need not record any reasons or pass any order. In the case of information there is no complainant to examine on oath, as in the case of a complaint—Sheo Pratap, 1930 A.L.J. 1316, 32 Cr.L.J. 306 (307), A.I.R. 1930 All. 820, 53 All. 208, 1930 Cr.C. 1204, 129 I.C. 436.

A petition which does not strictly fall within the definition of a complaint may be treated as an information, upon which the Magistrate may take action under this clause—Sarfaraz, 7 O.W.N. 947, 32 Cr.L.J. 124 (126), A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 500.

The information need not contain all the allegations necessary to be proved to establish the offence; it is sufficient if enough is alleged to justify the Magistrate in dealing judicially with the matter. What allegations or how much of the information should be recorded by the Magistrate in such case, it is difficult to lay down in general terms; if the recorded information is sufficient to justify the Magistrate in considering that a prima facie case has been made out, he can take cognizance under this clause—Rash Behary, 35 Cal. 1076, 12 C.W.N. 1075, 8 Cr.L.J. 235.

Where a Deputy Commissioner, as a Collector and as such representing the Court of Wards, received information of an offence, he as Magistrate was not competent to act on the information and to issue warrants, as by such action he was practically making himself a Judge in his own case—Thakur Pershad, 10 C.W.N. 775; Lakhi Narayan, 37 Cal. 221 (per Stephen, J.). But this view does not seem to be correct, for sec. 191 provides a sufficient safeguard and gives the accused a right to have the case transferred to another Magistrate. On this principle the Madras and Rangoon High Courts have held (dissenting from 10 C.W.N. 775) that there can be no objection to a Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence upon information received by him in another capacity, e.g., as President of the District Board—Sundarasan, 43 Mad. 709, 32 M.L.J. 219; Nga Po, 8 Rang. 246, 31 Cr.L.J. 867 (869). See also the judgment of Carnuff, J., in Lakhi Narayan, 37 Cal. 221, 14 C.W.N. 589, 11 Cr.L.J. 514.

The following are held to be 'information' within the meaning of this section:—

(a) An anonymous communication—In re Hari Narain, 3 C.W.N. 65; Bhairon, 51 All.

377, 30 Cr.L.J. 62 (63); (b) communication through post—Anon, 2 Weir 149; Karim Buksh v. Adil Khan, 1899 A.W.N. 201; (c) information received from another Magistrate—Makhan v. Jepson, 1914 P.L.R. 65, 15 Cr.L.J. 261, 3 C.W.N. cclxii; (d) a letter written to the District Magistrate conveying information of an offence and asking for action to be taken—Chhotey Maharaj, 28 O.C. 33, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 144, 25 Cr.L.J. 1147; (e) information furnished by the accused himself, e.g., a confession made by him to the Magistrate immediately after the offence—Arunachala, 55 Mad. 717, 33 Cr.L.J. 586 (587).

Information must be recorded :—A Magistrate taking cognizance upon information under this clause should at least record the information on which he acted, though he may not be obliged to disclose the sources of the information—Thakur Persad, 10 C.W.N. 775; Rash Behary, 35 Cal. 1076, 12 C.W.N. 1075; but his omission to do so does not necessarily vitiate the proceedings—Mg Nyi Bu, 4 Bur.L.J. 211, 27 Cr.L.J. 413.

Information received from witness :—A Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence against a person on evidence given on behalf of another accused person, proceeds under clause (c) of this section—Raghab, 3 C.W.N. cclxxix. So also, a Magistrate who takes cognizance of an offence against a witness in a case pending before him, upon the facts disclosed by the evidence of another witness, does so under clause (c) of the present section and not under sec. 351—Khudi Ram, 1 C.W.N. 105. Contra—Yas'n Khan, 5 N.L.R. 113 and Lalu, 4 S.L.R. 258, 11 I.C. 583, 12 Cr.L.J. 399, in which under such circumstances it was held that the Magistrate took cognizance against the new accused under sec. 351 and not under clause (c) of sec. 190. See also Kishan v. Debi Doyal, 26 Cr.L.J. 1619, 2 O.W.N. 823, 90 I.C. 915. If, however, the Magistrate had already taken cognizance upon a complaint of an offence against some person, and after examination of some witnesses the offences of other persons are revealed, the Magistrate proceeding against the latter does so under clause (a), (since there is a complaint) and not under clause (c)—Dedar Bux v. Shyamapada, 41 Cal. 1013, 24 I.C. 954, 18 C.W.N. 921, 15 Cr.L.J. 546. When cognizance is taken against accused persons on the basis of evidence in a case under sec. 109, Cr. P. C., the Magistrate acts under clause (c) of this section—Malak, 35 Cr.L.J. 1407, 151 I.C. 792, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 210, 1934 Cr.C. 445. See also K. V. Venkata Ramanier in Note 593.

590. Knowledge :—Knowledge means actual personal knowledge of the Magistrate or knowledge based upon evidence legally placed before him—Nga Shwe, 1 L.B.R. 18.

Where a Magistrate issued an order under sec. 144 to stop work in a quarry, and took action for the disobedience of that order, and convicted the accused, it was held that the Magistrate took cognizance of the offence on his own knowledge of the facts under this clause—Mul Raj, 1905 P.R. 36, 2 Cr.L.J. 365. So also, where the accused in disobedience of an order given by a Cantonment Magistrate tied his buffaloes in a certain place, and the Magistrate finding the place filthy in consequence sent for the accused and fined him, it was held that the Magistrate took cognizance from his own knowledge under this clause and was debarred from trying the case by virtue of sec. 191—Abdul Rahim, 1905 P.R. 8.

A Magistrate who takes part in the initiation of proceedings is not incompetent to take cognizance of the offence, because this clause empowers the Magistrate to take cognizance upon his own 'knowledge'; but, of course, the Magistrate will be debarred under sec. 556 from trying the case—Oziullah v. Beni Madhab, 50 Cal. 135. But see Nga Chit Kyaw v. Emp., 26 Cr.L.J. 249, 81 I.C. 249, 3 Bur.L.J. 121, A.I.R. 1924 Rang 352 in Note 1429.

591. Suspicion :—Where a Magistrate has a mere suspicion that an offence has been committed, he should not, as a matter of sound judicial discretion, take cognizance of it until some person aggrieved has complained [clause (a)] or until he has before him a police report [clause (b)] on the subject based on investigation directed to the offence—Sham Lal, 14 Cal. 707.

592. Miscellaneous:—

No Limitation :—The general law of limitation is chiefly intended for civil matters and does not apply to criminal prosecutions—Nageshapa, 20 Bom 543 (547). But inordinate delay in the filing of the complaint may lead the Court to infer that the prosecution is not a bona fide one—Sher Sing v. Jitendra, 59 Cal 275, 36 C.W.N. 16 (27).

Complaint in respect of an offence—Cognizance in respect of another :—Where a complainant charges certain persons with committing a certain offence, and the examination of the complainant reveals a different offence from that mentioned in the complaint, or reveals an additional offence, the Magistrate is competent to take cognizance of the latter offence—Jagat Chandra, 26 Cal 786 (789). The Magistrate is not bound to adhere to any particular section of the law which may be mentioned by the complainant in his complaint, but may apply any section which he thinks applicable to the case, so long as the parties are not misled and the proper procedure is observed—Kalidass v. Mohendra, 12 W.R. 40 (41). See Note 585

Complaint against some persons—Cognizance against others :—Where a complaint is made against some persons and the Magistrate takes cognizance of the offence, it is the duty of the Magistrate to deal with the evidence brought before him, and to see that justice is done in regard to any other person who might be proved by the evidence to be concerned in the offence—Charu Chandra v. Narendra, 4 C.W.N. xlv. When once a Magistrate has taken cognizance of an offence, he is competent to take proceedings against all who from the evidence appear to be offenders. His power is not limited only with regard to the persons mentioned in the complaint or Police report—Bishen Dayal v. Chedi Khan, 4 C.W.N. 560; Girdhari Lal, 21 C.W.N. 950, 18 Cr.L.J. 901; Nga Chan, 1 Bur.L.J. 183; Mehrab, 17 S.L.R. 150 (F.B.). Cognizance is taken of an offence and not of the individual offenders, and it would ordinarily follow that, once a complaint has been made according to the provisions of the Cr P Code, cognizance can be taken in respect of the offenders named in the complaint and also others who may be shown to have taken part in the transaction, although no complaint has been specifically made against them. Consequently, the absence of the name of a person in the operative part of the complaint will not be sufficient to take away the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to try him—Vithu, 38 Cr.L.J. 717, 169 I.C. 74, I.L.R. 1937 Nag 492, 9 R.N. 297. See also 26 Cal. 786; 1901 P.R. 32; 14 Bom.L.R. 141; 41 Cal. 1013 and 4 C.W.N. 367 cited in Note 586 under clause (a); also N.L.R. 65 and 8 C.W.N. 864 cited in Note 587 under clause (b).

191. When a Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence

Transfer or commitment on application of accused.

under sub-section (1), clause (c), of the preceding section, the accused shall, before any evidence is taken, be informed that he is entitled to have the case tried by another Court, and if the accused, or any of the accused if there be more than one, objects to being tried by such Magistrate, the case shall, instead of being tried by such Magistrate, be committed to the Court of Session or transferred to another Magistrate.

593. Principle:—The principle of this section is that no man ought to be a Judge in his own case. If a Magistrate proceeds against a person upon his own personal knowledge, he is interested in the prosecution and thereby he would practically make himself a Judge in his own case and his pre-conceived opinion as to the guilt of the accused person is likely to bias his mind against that person.

When a Magistrate takes cognizance suo motu either on his own knowledge or suspicion, or upon information received from some person who will not take the responsibility of setting the law in motion, the law, partly out of regard for the susceptibilities of the accused, and partly to inspire confidence on the administration of justice, allows the accused the right to claim to be tried before another Magistrate—Shewak Ram, 7 S.L.R. 77, 15 Cr.L.J. 369 (370).

A Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence under clause (c) of sec. 190, is bound to comply with the provisions of this section—Abdul Ali, 1 P.L.T. 446, 59 I.C. 41. Where on a report being made by a Government official in respect of an offence under sec. 92, Cantonment Code, the Cantonment Magistrate took cognizance of the case and convicted the accused, held that the trial and conviction were illegal as the Magistrate should have informed the accused under this section that he was entitled to have the case transferred to another Magistrate—Anadi Pershad, 1920 P.L.R. 124, 21 Cr.L.J. 394, 55 I.C. 1002 (1003). When a Magistrate himself institutes criminal proceedings under sec. 476, he is bound to inform the accused that he is entitled to have his case tried by another Court—Naipal, 28 O.C. 1, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 448, 25 Cr.L.J. 1224. Where a matter was brought to the notice of the District Magistrate, and he sent the matter to the S. D. O. for inquiry and report, and the S. D. O. reported that the offence had been committed and decided that a case should be instituted, whereupon the District Magistrate ordered the S. D. O. to try the case, held that it was the S. D. O. who had taken cognizance of the case (and not the District Magistrate) and he should have given the accused an opportunity to be tried by a different Magistrate—Lachhmi Narain, 4 Luck. 353, 30 Cr.L.J. 134 (135); Ananta Ram v. Sheikh Altab, 17 C.W.N. 795 (796), 14 Cr.L.J. 425.

The mere fact that the Magistrate himself arrests the accused and thus takes cognizance under sec. 190, clause (c) does not bring the case within the operation of sec. 556; and so long as the Magistrate complies with the provisions of sec. 191, he is entitled to try the case—Nga Chit, 3 Bur.L.J. 121, 26 Cr.L.J. 249.

Where the Magistrate orders the police to investigate and, if any cognizable offence is discovered, to take legal action and the police submits a chalan in consequence of such order, no doubt the Magistrate takes cognizance on a police chalan under sec. 190 (1)(b), Cr. P. C., but at the same time the action of the Magistrate practically amounts to his taking cognizance under sec. 190 (1)(c), Cr. P. C., necessitating the application of the principle of sec. 191, Cr. P. C. Failure on the part of the Magistrate to comply with the provisions of sec. 191, Cr. P. C., will vitiate the trial in such a case—Mohammad Sadiq v. Emp., A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 19, 173 I.C. 324, 39 Cr.L.J. 299, 10 R.L. 436.

Section 190 (i) (c), Cr. P. C., is concerned with extra-judicial information, knowledge or suspicion and it has nothing to do with knowledge gathered by a Magistrate in open Court from the evidence of witnesses given during a trial. If a Magistrate begins a trial as a summons case and then finds that an offence triable only under warrant case procedure has been committed, he is bound to apply warrant case procedure thenceforward and he is not in any way disqualified from proceeding with the trial—K. V. Venkata Ramanier, 39 Cr.L.J. 958, 177 I.C. 814, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 815, 47 M.L.W. 739, 1938 M.W.N. 589, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 360, I.L.R. 1938 Mad. 814, 11 R.M. 385, dissenting from Rajaratnam Pillai, 59 Mad. 442, 161 I.C. 846, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 341, 1936 Cr.C. 384, 37 Cr.L.J. 501, 70 M.L.J. 340, 1936 M.W.N. 181, 43 M.L.W. 367, 8 R.M. 830 where, in similar circumstances, it has been laid down that it is the bounden duty of the Magistrate to afford the accused person an opportunity of saying whether he wishes to be tried or not to be tried by that Magistrate.

594. Right of accused to have case transferred:—The words "shall be informed that he is entitled" are mandatory, and a Magistrate cannot refuse to comply with them—Q. E. v. Hawthorne, 13 All. 345. He is bound to inform the accused of his right to have the case transferred. If he omits to inform the accused of his right, or if in spite of objections taken by the accused, the Magistrate proceeds with the case, the proceedings will be wholly void. It is not a mere irregularity curable by sec. 537—Hawthorne, 13 All. 345, 1891 A.W.N. 102; Chedi, 28 All. 212; Mohib Ali, 3 A.L.J. 691; Ram Katan, 19 A.L.J. 138; Chander Sen, 21 A.L.J. 89, 24 Cr.L.J. 656; Mul Raj, 2 Cr.L.J. 365, 81 P.L.R. 1905 P.R. 36; Abdul Rahim, 1905 P.R. 8, 170

The accused can waive his right under this section—Mahomed Shah, 1 S.L.R. 98. But if a Magistrate omits to inform the accused of his right, the mere silence on the part of the accused is not to be taken as a waiver of his right—Raghab, 3 C.W.N. cclxxix. Waiver cannot be implied unless the accused is distinctly told in accordance with the terms of this section—Chander Sen, 21 A.L.J. 89, 24 Cr.L.J. 655. The accused may waive his right under this section, but still this waiver will not empower the Magistrate to deal with the case if he is debarred from trying it by another section of this Code (e.g., sec. 556)—Mahomed Shah, supra.

Although this section enables the accused to apply for a transfer of the case, still unless the accused exercises that right, the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to try the case is unquestionable. The mere fact that the Magistrate has taken cognizance under sec. 190, clause (c) does not by itself oust his jurisdiction to hear and determine the case—In re Ganeshi, 15 All. 192 (194).

595. Nature of the accused's right:—All that the accused is entitled to under this section is to have the case tried by another Court; but he cannot choose or determine for himself by what other particular Court the case is to be tried—In re Shrinivas, 7 Bom.L.R. 637, 2 Cr.L.J. 582. And the Magistrate has a discretion, on objection being taken, either to transfer the case to another Magistrate or to commit it to the Sessions. He is not bound to transfer the case to another Magistrate. He may elect to commit the case to the Court of Session—Karuppana v. Felix, 22 Mad. 148, 2 Weir 150.

The accused can object only to the trial of the case by that Magistrate, but he cannot object to a preliminary inquiry. This section directs the Magistrate either to transfer the case to another Magistrate or to commit the case to the Sessions. And the commitment involves the holding of a preliminary inquiry. This section empowers the Magistrate to hold a preliminary inquiry even in a case triable by himself; if the case is one triable exclusively by the Sessions Court, the Magistrate is a fortiori entitled to hold an inquiry preliminary to commitment—Abdul Razzak, 21 All. 109; Azam Ali, 20 Cr.L.J. 47, 48 I.C. 687 (Cal.).

But a Magistrate who takes cognizance of a case under sec. 190 (c) cannot, after becoming a District Magistrate, hear an appeal from a conviction in the case (which was tried by another subordinate Magistrate) without following the procedure laid down in sec. 191, as an appeal is a part of the trial of the offence—Bansi Lal, 12 C.W.N. 438, 7 Cr.L.J. 224.

Another Court:—This section begins with "when a Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence. . .," and what it means by trial by another Court is made clear by the substantive provision that if the accused objects to being tried by such Magistrate, the case shall be committed to the Court of Session or transferred to another Magistrate. This section does not give the accused the right to be tried by a Court or Magistrate of his choice, but only makes it impossible for the Magistrate who took cognizance under sub-sec. (1), cl. (c) of this section to try the accused except with his consent. Therefore when a Sub-divisional Magistrate takes cognizance of a case under cl. (c), his successor can try it without complying with the requirements of this section—Panu Samal v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 111, 1939 P.W.N. 803, 41 Cr.L.J. 318, 186 I.C. 435.

of the accused, and partly to inspire confidence on the administration of justice, allows the accused the right to claim to be tried before another Magistrate—Shewak Ram, 7 S.L.R. 77, 15 Cr.L.J. 369 (370).

A Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence under clause (c) of sec. 190, is bound to comply with the provisions of this section—Abdul Ali, 1 P.L.T. 446, 59 I.C. 41. Where on a report being made by a Government official in respect of an offence under sec. 92, Cantonment Code, the Cantonment Magistrate took cognizance of the case and convicted the accused, held that the trial and conviction were illegal as the Magistrate should have informed the accused under this section that he was entitled to have the case transferred to another Magistrate—Anadi Pershad, 1920 P.L.R. 124, 21 Cr.L.J. 394, 55 I.C. 1002 (1003). When a Magistrate himself institutes criminal proceedings under sec. 476, he is bound to inform the accused that he is entitled to have his case tried by another Court—Nasipal, 28 O.C. 1, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 448, 25 Cr.L.J. 1224. Where a matter was brought to the notice of the District Magistrate, and he sent the matter to the S. D. O., for inquiry and report, and the S. D. O. reported that the offence had been committed and decided that a case should be instituted, whereupon the District Magistrate ordered the S. D. O. to try the case, held that it was the S. D. O. who had taken cognizance of the case (and not the District Magistrate) and he should have given the accused an opportunity to be tried by a different Magistrate—Lachmi Narain, 4 Luck 353, 30 Cr.L.J. 134 (135); Ananta Ram v. Sheikh Altab, 17 C.W.N. 795 (796), 14 Cr.L.J. 425.

The mere fact that the Magistrate himself arrests the accused and thus takes cognizance under sec. 190, clause (c) does not bring the case within the operation of sec. 556; and so long as the Magistrate complies with the provisions of sec. 191, he is entitled to try the case—Nga Chit, 3 Bur.L.J. 121, 26 Cr.L.J. 249.

Where the Magistrate orders the police to investigate and, if any cognizable offence is discovered, to take legal action and the police submits a chalan in consequence of such order, no doubt the Magistrate takes cognizance on a police chalan under sec. 190 (1) (b), Cr. P. C., but at the same time the action of the Magistrate practically amounts to his taking cognizance under sec. 190 (1) (c), Cr. P. C., necessitating the application of the principle of sec. 191, Cr. P. C. Failure on the part of the Magistrate to comply with the provisions of sec. 191, Cr. P. C., will vitiate the trial in such a case—Mohammad Sadiq v. Emp, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 19, 173 I.C. 324, 39 Cr.L.J. 299, 10 R.L. 436.

Section 190 (1) (c), Cr. P. C., is concerned with extra-judicial information, knowledge or suspicion and it has nothing to do with knowledge gathered by a Magistrate in open Court from the evidence of witnesses given during a trial. If a Magistrate begins a trial as a summons case and then finds that an offence triable only under warrant case procedure has been committed, he is bound to apply warrant case procedure thenceforward and he is not in any way disqualified from proceeding with the trial—K. V. Venkata Ramanier, 39 Cr.L.J. 958, 177 I.C. 814, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 815; 47 M.L.W. 739, 1938 M.W.N. 589, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 360, I.L.R. 1938 Mad. 814, 11 R.M. 385, dissenting from Rajaratnam Pillai, 59 Mad. 442, 161 I.C. 846, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 341, 1936 Cr.C. 384, 37 Cr.L.J. 501, 70 M.L.J. 340, 1936 M.W.N. 181, 43 M.L.W. 367, 8 R.M. 880 where, in similar circumstances, it has been laid down that it is the bounden duty of the Magistrate to afford the accused person an opportunity of saying whether he wishes to be tried or not to be tried by that Magistrate.

594. Right of accused to have case transferred:—The words "shall be informed that he is entitled" are mandatory, and a Magistrate cannot refuse to comply with them—Q. E. v. Hawthorne, 13 All. 315. He is bound to inform the accused of his right to have the case transferred. If he omits to inform the accused of his right, or if in spite of objections taken by the accused, the Magistrate proceeds with the case, the proceedings will be wholly void. It is not a mere irregularity curable by sec. 537—Hawthorne, 13 All. 315, 1891 A.W.N. 102; Chedi, 28 All. 212; Mohib Ali, 3 A.L.J. 691; Ram Ratan, 19 A.L.J. 138; Chander Sen, 21 A.L.J. 89, 24 Cr.L.J. 656; Mul Raj, 2 Cr.L.J. 365, 84 P.L.R. 1905 P.R. 36; Abdul Rahim, 1905 P.R. 8, 170

Emp*, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 479 (484), 41 Cr.L.J. 65 (69), 184 I.C. 680.

The accused can waive his right under this section—Mahomed Shah, 1 S.L.R. 98. But if a Magistrate omits to inform the accused of his right, the mere silence on the part of the accused is not to be taken as a waiver of his right—Raghab, 3 C.W.N. cclxxix. Waiver cannot be implied unless the accused is distinctly told in accordance with the terms of this section—Chander Sen, 21 A.L.J. 89, 24 Cr.L.J. 655. The accused may waive his right under this section, but still this waiver will not empower the Magistrate to deal with the case if he is debarred from trying it by another section of this Code (e.g., sec. 556)—Mahomed Shah, supra.

Although this section enables the accused to apply for a transfer of the case, still unless the accused exercises that right, the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to try the case is unquestionable. The mere fact that the Magistrate has taken cognizance under sec. 190, clause (c) does not by itself oust his jurisdiction to hear and determine the case—In re Ganeshi, 15 All. 192 (194).

595. Nature of the accused's right:—All that the accused is entitled to under this section is to have the case tried by another Court; but he cannot choose or determine for himself by what other particular Court the case is to be tried—In re Shrinivas, 7 Bom.L.R. 637, 2 Cr.L.J. 582. And the Magistrate has a discretion, on objection being taken, either to transfer the case to another Magistrate or to commit it to the Sessions. He is not bound to transfer the case to another Magistrate. He may elect to commit the case to the Court of Session—Karuppana v. Felix, 22 Mad. 148, 2 Weir 150.

The accused can object only to the trial of the case by that Magistrate, but he cannot object to a preliminary inquiry. This section directs the Magistrate either to transfer the case to another Magistrate or to commit the case to the Sessions. And the commitment involves the holding of a preliminary inquiry. This section empowers the Magistrate to hold a preliminary inquiry even in a case triable by himself; if the case is one triable exclusively by the Sessions Court, the Magistrate is a fortiori entitled to hold an inquiry preliminary to commitment—Abdul Razzak, 21 All. 109; Azam Ali, 20 Cr.L.J. 47, 48 I.C. 687 (Cal.).

But a Magistrate who takes cognizance of a case under sec. 190 (c) cannot, after becoming a District Magistrate, hear an appeal from a conviction in the case (which was tried by another subordinate Magistrate) without following the procedure laid down in sec. 191, as an appeal is a part of the trial of the offence—Bansi Lal, 12 C.W.N. 438, 7 Cr.L.J. 224.

Another Court:—This section begins with "when a Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence. . . ." and what it means by trial by another Court is made clear by the substantive provision that if the accused objects to being tried by such Magistrate, the case shall be committed to the Court of Session or transferred to another Magistrate. This section does not give the accused the right to be tried by a Court or Magistrate of his choice, but only makes it impossible for the Magistrate who took cognizance under sub-sec. (1), cl. (c) of this section to try the accused except with his consent. Therefore when a Sub-divisional Magistrate takes cognizance of a case under cl. (c), his successor can try it without complying with the requirements of this section—Panu Samal v. Emp, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 111, 1939 P.W.N. 803, 41 Cr.L.J. 318, 186 I.C. 435.

596. When objection is to be taken:—If the accused wants to be tried by another Court, he must express his objection before any evidence is taken—Murad, 1894 P.R. 29 (at p. 82).

597. Application of Section to Chapter VIII:—The provisions of secs. 190 and 191 do not apply to proceedings under sec. 110, and a Magistrate who has instituted those proceedings need not inform the person proceeded against that he is entitled to have his case transferred to another Magistrate—In re Mithu Khan, 27 All. 172, 1 A.L.J. 685; Mahomedally, 20 S.L.R. 291, 27 Cr.L.J. 1280, A.I.R. 1927 Sind 77, 98 I.C. 128. But in Almuddin, 29 Cal. 392, 6 C.W.N. 595 and Godhan, 4 P.L.J. 7 (9), however, it has been held that the principle of this section, viz., that no man ought to be a judge in his case, applies to proceedings under sec. 110, though they do not relate to offences; therefore, where a Magistrate has initiated proceedings against a person under sec. 110, mainly, if not wholly, upon his own knowledge of the character of that person he is incompetent to proceed with the inquiry under sec. 117.

192. (1) Any Chief Presidency Magistrate, District
 Transfer of cases by Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate Magistrates. may transfer any case, of which he has taken cognizance, for inquiry or trial, to any Magistrate subordinate to him.

(2) Any District Magistrate may empower any Magistrate of the first class who has taken cognizance of any case to transfer it for inquiry or trial to any other specified Magistrate in his district who is competent under this Code to try the accused or commit him for trial; and such Magistrate may dispose of the case accordingly.

'May transfer':—The power under this section is optional and not obligatory. As to cases which a Magistrate is disqualified from trying and is bound to transfer, see secs. 487 and 556.

598. Scope of section:—This section deals with the power of the Magistrate to transfer any case; the words 'any case' are not restricted to criminal cases only, but are wide enough to include any case triable by any Criminal Court, e.g., cases under Chap. VIII—Chintaman, 35 Cal. 243, 12 C.W.N. 299; Muona, 24 All. 151; Hirananda, 1 Pat. 621; or cases under Chap. XII—Satish v. Rajendra, 22 Cal. 898 (902); Ram Kissors v. Dwarka, 10 C.W.N. 1095; Mahendra v. Rajpati, 20 A.L.J. 215; Abdul Hamid v. Hasan, 4 P.L.T. 297, 24 Cr.L.J. 487. Even if it is held that a case under sec. 145 is not covered by this section, the irregularity in the transfer of such a case will be cured by sec. 529 (f). See Gurudas v. Gaganendra, 2 C.L.J. 614, 3 Cr.L.J. 83; Akbar v. Dami Lal, 4 C.W.N. 821; Raj Mohan v. Prosunna, 5 C.W.N. 686; Kishori Lal Roy v. Srinath Roy, 35 Cal. 370 (373), 13 C.W.N. 530, 9 Cr.L.J. 399, 1 I.C. 817. It is, therefore, clear that the Magistrates mentioned in sec. 192 (1), Cr. P. C., have power to transfer cases to Subordinate Magistrates either for the purpose of holding a trial, for example under Chapters XX or XXI of the Code, or for enquiry, for example under Chapters VIII, XII or XVII of the Code—Hafizur Rahaman v. Amina Hoque, 44 C.W.N. 1114 (1119).

The word 'case' has not been defined, but reading together sections 192 (1), 190 (a) and 200 (c) it is clear that the term includes a proceeding upon a complaint as soon as the complaint has been received by the Magistrate who takes cognizance of the offence and before he issues any process. A case can, therefore, be transferred under sec. 192 even before a decision to issue process against the accused has been made—Asaram v. Bhagirathi, 7 N.L.R. 97, 12 Cr.L.J. 437, 11 I.C. 621.

Under sub-sec. (1), the District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate has power to transfer a case to any Magistrate subordinate to him (even though the latter be incompetent to try the case on his own initiative); thus, a complaint under sec. 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act can be entertained only by the District Magistrate or a Magistrate specially authorized; but this section will empower such Magistrate to transfer the case, after taking cognizance of it, to any subordinate Magistrate—Budhan v. Issur Singh, 34 Cal. 926 (928), 6 Cr.L.J. 363.

But if a first class Magistrate transfers a case under sub-section (2) he can transfer to a Subordinate Magistrate only those cases which the latter is competent to try or commit for trial. See also Umrao Singh v. Kanwar Lal in Note 323.

599. "Of which he has taken cognizance":—This section empowers the District Magistrate to transfer to Subordinate Magistrates only those cases of which he has taken cognizance. A Magistrate is said to take cognizance of a case under sec. 107 only when (and not before) he issues a notice to the person charged to show cause why he should not be proceeded against under that section. Therefore, where the District Magistrate has not issued any notice to the person charged, that is, where he has not taken cognizance of a case under sec. 107, he cannot transfer the case to a Subordinate Magistrate—Konda Reddy, 41 Mad 246, 41 I.C. 990, 18 Cr.L.J. 878. In respect of a case under sec. 145, if a Magistrate receives a petition, examines the petitioner, orders a police inquiry to be made, applies his mind to the police report and comes to the conclusion that there is some basis for the complaint, but cannot proceed with the case any further (e.g., cannot issue notices, etc.) because he is busy otherwise, he must be held to have undoubtedly taken cognizance of the case—Kapoor Chand v. Suraj, 1933 A.L.J. 188 (F.B.), 34 Cr.L.J. 414 (416).

This section enables a District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate to transfer only those cases of which he has taken cognizance under the provisions of sec. 190. It has no reference to cases which have already been transferred to his Court from the Court of another Magistrate—Dara v. Mukat, 12 A.L.J. 277, 15 Cr.L.J. 357 (358), 23 I.C. 725. In other words, a case which has once been transferred to a District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate for disposal cannot be transferred by him again under sec. 192—Bashur Husain v. Ali Husain, 36 All 166, 12 A.L.J. 225, 15 Cr.L.J. 406. Such frequent orders of transfer are also objectionable in view of the trouble they give to parties and their witnesses—Dara v. Mukat, supra. But where a case had been transferred by the High Court under sec. 526 from one District Magistrate to another District Magistrate with a direction that the latter should either dispose of the case himself or transfer it to some other competent Magistrate in the District, and the latter District Magistrate transferred the case under sec. 192 to an Honorary Magistrate, held that he was competent under this section to make the transfer—Kishen Singh, 1917 P.R. 30, 18 Cr.L.J. 881 (883), 44 I.C. 993. Even, if no such direction is given to a District Magistrate, when a case is transferred to him by the High Court under sec. 526 (from the Court of another District Magistrate) the inference is that he is competent either to try the case himself or to transfer it to some Subordinate Magistrate. In other words, he must be deemed as if he has taken cognizance of the case, and consequently he will be competent to exercise the powers conferred by sec. 192—Mata Prasad, 19 All. 249 (250).

Where a trying Magistrate sends up a report to the District Magistrate that an accused before him has committed perjury and altered a document filed in Court, the report amounts to a complaint, and the District Magistrate can take cognizance of the case under sec. 190 (a) and transfer it for trial under sec. 192 to another Magistrate subordinate to him—Suraj Prasad, 21 A.L.J. 825; Sundar Sarup, 26 All. 514.

The effect of the order of transfer of a case by a Magistrate who had not taken cognizance of the same is undoubtedly a defect of jurisdiction which would not be cured by sec. 537 Cr. P. Code. The order would, however, be rendered valid by cl. (f) of sec. 529, Cr. P. Code—Ramkrishna Sinha v. Emp., 42 C.W.N. 246 (251), 174 I.C. 513, 39 Cr.L.J. 417, 10 R.C. 693, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 195. See also 21 Cr.L.J. 96, 54 I.C. 496 (Pat.) and Note 598.

600. At which stage case can be transferred:—The Magistrate can transfer the case on taking cognizance of it. A District Magistrate is competent, under sec. 190, to take cognizance without complaint, and to transfer the case to a Subordinate Magistrate without such complaint—Allahwarayo, 1 S.L.R. 119. He can transfer the case before any process had been issued to the accused—Asaram v. Bhagirathi, 11 I.C. 621, 7 N.L.R. 97, 12 Cr.L.J. 437. He can transfer a case even after summons has been issued against the accused—In re Azim Sheikh, 7 C.L.J. 249; Eqbal, 20 Cr.L.J. 413 (Pat.). The usual practice throughout Bengal is that the Sub-Divisional Magistrate retains the case in his own file until after the accused summoned by him has appeared, and then transfers it for disposal to a Magistrate subordinate to him. If secs. 192 (1), 202 and 204, Cr. P. C., are read together, it is clearly competent for the Sub-Divisional Magistrate to follow this procedure and to transfer the case as soon as the accused person has appeared or at any time thereafter when the case becomes ready for the inquiry or the trial. It would be equally competent for the Sub-Divisional Magistrate to transfer the case to a Subordinate Magistrate immediately after the complainant had been examined and, having regard to the provisions of sec. 202 of the Code, it would then be for such Subordinate Magistrate to decide whether he would issue process immediately or postpone the issue of such process for the purpose of holding a preliminary investigation under that section for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsehood of the complaint. When, however, a case has been transferred under sec. 192 (1), Cr. P. C., it is transferred for all purposes from the file of the superior Magistrate to that of the Subordinate Magistrate, and, thereafter, the superior Magistrate has no jurisdiction to issue any orders connected with the case except such as are contemplated under the provisions of sec. 528 and Chapter XXXII of the Code—Hafizar Rahaman v. Aminal Hoque, 44 C.W.N. 1114 (1120).

But a case cannot be transferred under this section after it has been partly tried, e.g., after all the evidence for the prosecution and the defence has been taken—Radhe, 12 All. 66. The transfer of a part-heard case, after the framing of the charge and the cross-examination of some of the prosecution witnesses, to another Magistrate for disposal is undesirable. A Magistrate who undertakes a trial and hears the witnesses should, if possible, finish it—Mazhar Ali, 50 Cal. 223 (226). It is recognized that the transfer of a part-heard case should be made only in circumstances of an exceptional character, and to transfer a case which has been completely heard on the mere ground that the Magistrate is overworked is an occurrence which is unheard of—Kisni, 38 Cr.L.J. 719, 169 I.C. 96, I.L.R. 1937 Nag. 163, 9 R.N. 301, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 103. But see Public Prosecutor v. Shanmuga, 35 Cr.L.J. 1055, 149 I.C. 1155, 1934 M.W.N. 521, 39 M.L.W. 777, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 435 where a transfer after framing of the charge was held legal.

Where a case was sent back to the District Magistrate for further inquiry by the Additional Sessions Judge with a request that he would transfer it to a Magistrate other than the Magistrate, who had given his opinion, the case was none the less a case which the District Magistrate had taken cognizance and could transfer under this section to a different Magistrate—Virumal Manghanmal v. Muhammad Khan, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 146 (147).

For inquiry or trial:—The term "inquiry" in sec. 192 (1), Cr. P. C., is used with special reference to such inquiries as are held in connection with proceedings under Chapters VIII, XII and XVIII of the Code. The inquiry which is contemplated by sec. 202, Cr. P. C., on the other hand, is merely for the limited purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsehood of a complaint in order to enable the Magistrate to decide whether an accused person should be summoned or the complaint against him should be dismissed under sec. 203, Cr. P. C. The plain meaning of sec. 192 (1), Cr. P. C., is that a case which is transferred to a Subordinate Magistrate under that section is transferred to him in order that he may complete the inquiry or trial to be held in connection with the case and take all requisite steps to that end. The holding of an enquiry under sec. 202, Cr. P. C., in a suitable case is merely one of such requisite steps to be taken by a Magistrate who has taken cognizance of a case or to whom a case may have been transferred for trial under sec. 192 (1), Cr. P. C. It is clear that, a Magistrate who orders an enquiry under sec. 202 of the Code does not transfer the case at all. Ordinarily he merely retains the case on his own file and directs some suitable person to hold an enquiry and send the report to him. It follows, therefore, that an order for an enquiry under sec. 202 of the Code cannot operate as a transfer under sec. 192 (1), Cr. P. C. Another steps requisite to the completion of the trial is the issue of process against the person or persons whom it is intended to prosecute, and the language of sec. 202 of the Code shows that a Subordinate Magistrate to whom a case has been transferred under sec. 102 (1) has the power to issue such process. It, therefore, follows that, when once a case has been validly transferred to a Subordinate Magistrate under sec. 102 (1) of the Code, such Magistrate would have no authority to return the case to the transferring Magistrate in order that the latter might issue process under sec. 204 and his duty would be to complete the trial according to law—Hafizur Rahman v. Aminul Hoque, 44 C.W.N. 1114 (1119).

This section empowers a Magistrate to transfer a case for inquiry or trial, but it does not empower him to transfer a case simply for the purpose of considering the report of an investigation under sec. 202, which he has himself ordered. The provisions of secs 192 and 202 do not entitle a Magistrate, after he has proceeded under the latter section, to make an order under the provisions of the former section transferring the case for the purpose of being dealt with under sec. 203 or 204, with a fresh investigation as contemplated by sec. 202—Mahabir v. Gribala, 29 C.W.N. 508 (509), 26 Cr.L.J. 990, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 742, 87 I.C. 526; Santok Raj Singh v. Gahwar Khan, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 61, 41 P.L.R. 807, 41 Cr.L.J. 344, 186 I.C. 595. But see Kapoor Chand v. Suraj Prasad, A.I.R. 1933 All. 264 (266), 1933 A.L.J. 188, 142 I.C. 537, 34 Cr.L.J. 414, 1933 Cr.C. 434, 55 All. 301, 19 A.I.Cr.R. 187 (F.B.).

Child Marriage Restraint Act (XIX of 1929):—Section 10, Child Marriage Restraint Act (XIX of 1929), provides that a Court taking cognizance of an offence under that Act should either itself make an enquiry under sec. 202, Cr. P. C., or direct a Magistrate of the First Class subordinate to it to make such enquiry and the transfer of the case to the Sub-Divisional Magistrate for disposal according to law without any such inquiry is illegal—Sivagami Ammal v. Muthu Iyer, 40 Cr.L.J. 514, 180 I.C. 902, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 294, 48 M.L.W. 774, 1938 M.W.N. 1312, (1939) 1 M.L.J. 111.

601. How much of the case is transferred:—Where a police report deals with several persons, but the police send up only some of those persons to the District Magistrate, and the District Magistrate transfers the report and the case to a Subordinate Magistrate for disposal, the effect is that the entire case (i.e., the case against all the persons mentioned in the report, and not merely the case against the persons actually sent up by the police) is transferred to the Subordinate Magistrate. If the Subordinate Magistrate tries the persons sent up by the police, and refuses to issue process against the remaining persons mentioned in the police report, the District Magistrate has no power to issue process against them. The entire case having been transferred to the Subordinate Magistrate, it is he alone and not the District Magistrate to decide whether to issue process against the remaining persons—Ajab Lal, 32 Cal. 783 (789), 9 C.W.N. 810, 2 Cr.L.J. 524; Golapdi, 27 Cal. 979, 4 C.W.N. 827; Deonarain, 12 Pat. 341, 1933 Cr.C. 716 (718), 35 Cr.L.J. 533, 147 I.C. 913, 14 P.L.T. 176, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 244; Moul v. Mahabir, 4 C.W.N. 242. See also Mathura, 36 Cr.L.J. 641, 155 I.C. 58, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 467, 15 P.L.T. 438, 1934 Cr.C. 1062, 7 C.L.J. 249, 7 Cr.L.J. 318. In this class of cases the question arises—whether the entire case has been transferred or not. It is a question of fact, depending on the intention of the transferring Magistrate, and this intention must be gathered from the order itself. Where no reservation is made, it may be concluded that the entire case has been transferred—Ajab Lal, 32 Cal. 783 (789); Azim Sheikh, 7 C.L.J. 249. There is doubt as to the legality of the piecemeal transfer of a case under sec. 192 (1), Cr. P. C., subject to the authority of a Magistrate who takes cognizance of an offence on complaint to dismiss the complaint as against some of the persons whom it is sought to prosecute and to leave the case open as against others. But it is clear that, even if such piece-meal transfer is in certain circumstances valid, that portion of the case which has not been transferred must be clearly indicated in the order of transfer recorded by the transferring Magistrate who acts under sec. 192 of the Code. In the absence of a clear indication as to which part of the case is retained on the file of the transferring Magistrate or some further indication to the effect that such Magistrate intended to dismiss the complaint against those accused persons in respect of whom he did not issue process, it must be taken that the whole case had been transferred to the Subordinate Magistrate not only as against the accused persons actually summoned but against all the persons whom the Subordinate Magistrate consider to be implicated in the offence—Hafizar Rahaman v. Aminal Hoque, 41 C.W.N. 1114 (1122).

When on a complaint against several persons the Magistrate summons one of them and then transfers the case to a Subordinate Magistrate, the proceedings before the latter are not terminated by the death or acquittal of the person summoned but the case remains to be decided as against the other accused—Ibid.

See also Golam Rahman v. Kali Pada in Note 603.

602. To whom case can be transferred:—A case can be transferred under this section to the Court of a subordinate Magistrate and not to a superior Magistrate. So, a third class Magistrate cannot transfer a case to a District Magistrate—Radhe, 12 All. 66, 1890 A.W.N. 7.

Under this section a Magistrate of the first class empowered by the District Magistrate has power to transfer a case of which he has taken cognizance for inquiry or trial to another Magistrate in the district who is "competent to try the case or to commit him for trial." From this it is clear that if the Magistrate to whom a case is thus transferred lacks jurisdiction to try the case the order of transfer is bad in law. The case is not covered by sec. 537, Cr. P. C., as a question of jurisdiction is involved and a defect of jurisdiction is not curable by sec. 537, Cr. P. Code. (Vide Khuda Bakhsh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 1009, 147 I.C. 737, 1933 Cr.C. 1554, 35 Cr.L.J. 514, 35 P.L.R. 289, 6 R.L. 444). Mathra v. Kamta, 41 Cr.L.J. 469, 187 I.C. 553, 1910 O.W.N. 351, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 244, 1940 O.L.R. 215. Where the order of transfer is passed before the examination of witnesses, the Court's jurisdiction to transfer the case to a particular Magistrate must be determined on the allegations made in the complaint and on the complainant's statement in support of the complaint—ibid. See also Raghunandan Prasad v. King-Emp., A.I.R. 1925 All. 290, 85 I.C. 730, 47 All. 61, 26 Cr.L.J. 586.

When, in absence of the S. D. O., the Second Officer acted, in addition to his own duties, as the S. D. O., by virtue of an appointment made by the District Magistrate under sec. 13 (3), Cr. P. C., and transferred a case in the file of S. D. O., of which the latter had taken cognizance, to his own file as Second Officer and tried it as such officer, there was undoubtedly a defect of jurisdiction which might, not unreasonably, be said to be outside the scope of sec. 529 (f), Cr. P. C., there being a transfer which the transferring Magistrate could never have been empowered to make, but in the view generally taken by the Calcutta High Court on what was really a matter of procedure the defect would be rendered valid by cl. (f) of sec. 529, Cr. P. Code—Ramkrishna Sinha v. Emp., 42 C.W.N. 246 (250), 174 I.C. 513, 39 Cr.L.J. 417, 10 R.C. 693, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 195.

The subordination of the Presidency Magistrate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate shall be deemed to be of the same kind and extent as the subordination of Magistrates and Benches to the District Magistrate under sec. 17 (1). The Chief Presidency Magistrate can under sec. 528 withdraw any case from any Presidency Magistrate and refer it for inquiry or trial to any other Presidency Magistrate—In re Nageswar, 1 Bom.L.R. 347.

Where a complaint was filed against the accused, who was a District Superintendent of Police and a near relation of the District Magistrate, for certain things that he did while he was a Deputy Commissioner of Police and the District Magistrate transferred the case to a Subordinate Magistrate for trial, held that an officer of this rank would be entitled to have a complaint against him tried by a senior Magistrate, and not a subordinate Magistrate, that as a rule it should have been transferred for disposal to a Magistrate who is entirely independent of the District Magistrate and that an order by the District Magistrate transferring such complaint to one of his subordinates for disposal, was, although not illegal, but not proper—J. W. Atkinson v. S. W. H. Xavier, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 242 (243), 37 Cr.L.J. 723, 162 I.C. 988, 1936 Cr.C. 519.

It is open to objection to transfer calendar cases which are triable by a First Class Magistrate to a Second Class Magistrate with a direction to treat them as preliminary register cases, the intention of such transfer being that the cases should be committed to the Sessions Court for trial. Even if they are counter cases to the murder case, the order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate transferring the calendar cases which are triable by him to the Second Class Magistrate for the purpose of being committed to the Sessions Court is not proper—Gorrepaty Ramasubbayya, 39 Cr.L.J. 715, 176 I.C. 182, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 529, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 403, 47 M.L.W. 486, 1938 M.W.N. 417, 11 R.M. 45.

See also Painda v. Gulab Khan, quoted in Notes 62 and 807.

For the purpose of this section, an Additional District Magistrate is subordinate to the District Magistrate, see sec. 10 (3).

A village headman is not a Magistrate, and a case cannot be transferred to him—Maung Gale, 1 L.B.R. 59.

Under sub-section (2), if a District Magistrate empowers a 1st class Magistrate to transfer a case to some subordinate Magistrate, the District Magistrate must specify the Magistrate to whom the case is to be transferred; an order of the District Magistrate empowering a 1st class Magistrate "to try the case himself or to make over the case for trial by another Magistrate" without specifying the Magistrate, is wrong. But such erroneous order would be cured by sec. 529 (1)—Raj Mohun v. Prosunno, 5 C.W.N. 686 (689).

A Magistrate has no power to send the case to another district himself—Ramasis v. Bhola, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 643, 1933 Cr.C. 1491, 147 I.C. 439.

603. Effect of transfer:—When a District Magistrate has transferred a case for trial to a Deputy Magistrate, the former ceases to have jurisdiction in the case so long as the transfer is in existence, and cannot take any further steps in the matter (e.g., issue warrant), unless the case is withdrawn to his own file under sec. 528—Golapdi, 27 Cal. 979, 4 C.W.N. 827; Amrit Majhi, 46 Cal. 454, 23 C.W.N. 623, 29 C.L.J. 322, 20 Cr.L.J. 508, 51 I.C. 668; Deoraram, 12 Pat. 341, 1933 Cr.C. 716 (718), 147 I.C. 913, 14 P.L.T. 176, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 244, 6 R.P. 384, 35 Cr.L.J. 533. But see Chandra Shekhar Prasad, 36 Cr.L.J. 500 (502), 154 I.C. 387, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 91, 1935 Cr.C. 146, 1 B.R. 302, 7 R.P. 464. Until the transferring Magistrate withdraws the case from the file of the subordinate Magistrate (to whom the case was transferred) to that of his own Court, he has no power to make any order save an order for further inquiry under sec. 437 (now 436)—Ajab Lal, 32 Cal. 783 (790); Radhaballabh v. Benode Behari, 30 Cal. 449. In this respect this section differs from sec. 202. Under that section the Magistrate receiving a complaint refers it to a subordinate Magistrate only for inquiry and report, and does not cease to have control over the case. The provisions of secs. 192 and 202 are separate and distinct and powers conferred by one section do not curtail the power conferred by the other—Amrit Majhi, 46 Cal. 854. From the above-mentioned cases it follows that if a case has been transferred to a Magistrate under sec. 192 (1), Cr. P. that Magistrate has the same authority to deal with the case which has been transferred to him as regards the issuing of processes and other matters connected with the trial.

as is vested in the superior Magistrate from whom he received the case on transfer—Hafizur Rahaman v. Amina Hoque, 44 C.W.N. 1114 (1121).

In a Patna case it has been held that a Magistrate who has transferred a case under sec. 192 to a Subordinate Magistrate cannot recall the case—Mahari v. Baldeo, 7 P.L.T. 530, 26 Cr.L.J. 1585 (1587), A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 525, 90 I.C. 657. This view, it is submitted, is not correct. The learned Judge seems to have overlooked the new provisions of sec. 528, sub-section (4).

When a case is, after issue of process, transferred from one Magistrate to another, the latter stands in the shoes of the Magistrate who originally issues the process. Therefore, if the second Magistrate discharges the accused and suo motu issues process against another person under sec. 190, clause (c), he cannot be said to be acting without jurisdiction—Hemendra, 55 Cal 1274, 30 Cr.L.J. 352, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 192.

No doubt if a complaint is transferred at the very outset by one Magistrate to another, the latter has power to take action under secs 202 and 203, Cr. P. C., but it is impossible to suppose that the Code contemplates that when one Magistrate has examined witnesses under sec. 202, Cr. P. C., and has believed them, and thereupon transfers the case for trial to a Subordinate Magistrate, that Magistrate should have power to examine those same witnesses over again under sec. 202, Cr. P. C., and then proceed to dismiss the complaint under sec. 203, Cr. P. C.—Sheo Balak Singh v. Sant Bux Singh, 37 Cr.L.J. 1128, 165 I.C. 28, 9 R.O. 166, 1936 O.W.N. 1079, A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 81, 1936 O.L.R. 607.

When proceedings under sec. 107, Cr. P. C., were transferred by the District Magistrate from the Court of the Sub-divisional Magistrate to that of another Magistrate at sudder, the latter can draw up proceedings against some additional persons although on the same materials the Sub-divisional Magistrate had not done so—Golam Rahaman v. Kali Pada, 36 C.W.N. 796, 59 Cal. 1484, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 864.

604. Procedure before transfer:—Notice to parties:—Before a case is transferred under this section from one subordinate Court to another, the District Magistrate should give notice to the parties of such transfer—Teacotta v. Ameer Majee, 8 Cal. 393; Umrao v. Fakirchand, 3 All. 749; In re Saker Naik, 2 Bom.L.R. 342; Sadashiv, 22 Bom. 549. But see Q-E. v. Kuppmuthu, 24 Mad. 317.

Examination of complainant:—Under sec. 200, proviso (a), when a complaint is made in writing, the Magistrate is not bound to examine the complainant before transferring the case under this section. See 18 W.R. 18 (Cr.), 9 Beng.L.R. 146.

Order of transfer:—An order of transfer under this section need not be in writing—Ramkrishna Sinha v. Emp. 42 C.W.N. 246 (250), 174 I.C. 513, 39 Cr.L.J. 417, 10 R.C. 693, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 195.

605. Procedure after transfer:—Examination of complainant:—If the transferring Magistrate has already examined the complainant, the Magistrate to whom the case is transferred is not bound to examine the complainant again; see sec. 200 (c).

Examination of prosecution witnesses:—Where the transferring Magistrate has examined all the prosecution witnesses, the Magistrate to whom the case is transferred is not bound to examine the witnesses again, but can act upon the deposition of witnesses recorded by the transferring Magistrate, under the provisions of sec. 350. The contrary view taken in Bashir Khan, 14 All. 346, Tota Venkata, 2 Weir 152 and Dy. Leg. Rem. v. Upendra, 12 C.W.N. 140, 6 Cr.L.J. 434 is no longer correct in view of the new sub-section (3) of sec. 350.

606. Transfer by High Court:—In the case of a transfer of a criminal case by the High Court (under sec. 526) from a Court subordinate to the District Magistrate to the District Magistrate's Court, it will be understood that the District Magistrate should try the case himself, unless the High Court has expressed that the District Magistrate shall have the power to transfer the case to a subordinate Court. But when the High Court transfers a case from the Court of one District Magistrate to the Court of another District Magistrate, it will be understood, unless the contrary is directly expressed, that the Magistrate to whom the transfer is made has power and jurisdiction to apply sec. 192, and to transfer the case to any Magistrate subordinate to him, who may be competent to try it—Mata Prasad, 19 All. 249 (251). See also Kishen Singh, 1917 P.R. 30, 18 Cr.L.J. 881, cited in Note 599 above.

193. (1) Except as otherwise expressly provided by this Code or by any other law for the time being in force, no Court of Session shall take cognizance of any offence as a Court of original jurisdiction unless the accused has been committed to it by a Magistrate duly empowered in that behalf.

(2) Additional Sessions Judges and Assistant Sessions Judges shall try such cases only as the Local Government by general or special order may direct them to try, or, in the case of Assistant Sessions Judges, as the Sessions Judge of the division, by general or special order, may make over to them for trial.

(2) Additional Sessions Judges and Assistant Sessions Judges shall try such cases only as the Provincial Government by general or special order may direct them to try, or * * * as the Sessions Judge of the division, by general or special order, may make over to them for trial.

Change:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

The words "in the case of Assistant Sessions Judges" which occurred in subsection (2) after the words "may direct them to try" have been omitted by sec. 46 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923 "We propose to omit from section 193 (2) the words in the case of Assistant Sessions Judges" The section, as it stands at present (i.e., before the amendment) makes a distinction between Additional Sessions Judges and Assistant Sessions Judges, only allowing transfers by the Sessions Judge in the case of the latter. Considerable inconvenience has been felt owing to this limitation, which we propose to remedy by the omission of the words referred to above"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916. Under the present law, Sessions Judges will be able to make over the cases to Additional Sessions Judges as well as to Assistant Sessions Judges

607. Object of this section:—The object of the requirements of a commitment before trial is to secure, in the case of a person charged with grave offence, a preliminary inquiry which would afford him the opportunity of becoming acquainted with the circumstances of the offence imputed to him and enable him to make his defence—Ram Varma, 3 Mad. 351, 2 Weir 269. The law contemplates that in the serious cases of which a Court of Session may take cognizance, the accused should have some information of the case he has to answer—Chinna Vedagiri, 4 Mad. 227, 2 Weir 584

at once, but can do so only after a proper commitment by a competent Court—Ramatevan, 15 Mad. 352; Jagat Chandra, 22 Cal. 50.

609. Reference under sec. 123:—Power of Additional Sessions Judge:—It was formerly held that a reference to a Court of Session by a Magistrate of a case under section 123 was not a case 'committed' for trial, and the Court of Session disposing of it did not 'try a case' within the meaning of this section. An Additional Sessions Judge empowered by the Government to try all cases which might be committed for trial by the District Magistrate had no jurisdiction to pass an order on such reference—In re Dayaram, Ratanlal 830. This decision is no longer good law, because the new sub-section (3B) of sec. 123 added by the Amendment Act of 1923 expressly authorises the Sessions Judge to make over all references under sec. 123 of the Additional or Assistant Sessions Judge. In Benode Behari, 50 Cal. 229, 27 C.W.N. 996, 39 C.L.J. 75, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 649, the word 'cases' under this section was held to include a reference under sec. 123; but such a laboured interpretation is no longer necessary.

610. Assistant Sessions Judge appointed temporarily:—An Assistant Sessions Judge who has been directed by the Government to take over charge of the duties of the Sessions Judge during a temporary vacancy of the office, is not an officer appointed to act as a Sessions Judge, and has no jurisdiction to try any case even as Assistant Sessions Judge, unless it was made over to him by a general or special order under the last para of this section—Mahadhu, Ratanlal 500.

Power of Assistant Sessions Judge to hear appeal:—The word 'case' used in sub-section (2) does not include an appeal or other matter, and a Sessions Judge has no power to transfer an appeal filed in his Court to the Court of the Assistant Sessions Judge—Abdul Razzak, 37 All. 286, 13 A.L.J. 353, 16 Cr.L.J. 316, 28 I.C. 652. See Note 1110 under sec. 409.

Power of High Court:—Notwithstanding a notification of the Local Government under this section the High Court has power, under sec. 526, Cr. P. C., to direct a transfer of a case to another Court of Sessions—Lakshman, 32 Cr.L.J. 1147, 131 I.C. 347, 33 Bom L.R. 675, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 413, 1931 Cr.C. 728, Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 469.

194. (1) The High Court may take cognizance of any offence upon a commitment made to it in manner hereinafter provided.

Cognizance of offences by High Court.

Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect the provisions of any Letters Patent granted under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, or the Government of India Act, 1915, or the Government of India Act, 1935, or any other provisions of this Code.

(2) (a) Notwithstanding anything in this Code contained, the Advocate-General may, with the previous sanction of the Provincial Government, exhibit to the High Court, against persons subject to the jurisdiction of the High Court, informations for all purposes for which Her Majesty's Attorney-General may exhibit informations on behalf of the Crown in the High Court of Justice in England.

(b) Such proceedings may be taken upon every such information as may lawfully be taken in the case of similar informations filed by Her Majesty's Attorney-General so far as the circumstances of the case and the practice and procedure of the said High Court will admit.

(c) All fines, penalties, forfeitures, debts and sums of money recovered or levied under or by virtue of any such information shall form part of the revenues of the Province.

(d) The High Court may make rules for carrying into effect the provisions of this section.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for "Local Government" and the words "shall form part of the revenues of the Province" for "shall belong to the Government of India" and the word "or the Government of India Act, 1935" have been inserted after "Act, 1915" and the words "the Governor-General in Council or" have been omitted by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

610A. "Advocate-General" includes a Government Advocate; see section 4 (a).

The High Court of Patna has jurisdiction to try persons against whom the Government Advocate, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, has exhibited an ex officio information—Dwarkanath, 37 CWN 514 (521) (PC), 34 CrLJ 322 (325), 1933 Cr.C. 442, A.I.R. 1933 P.C. 124, 142 I.C. 335, 57 CLJ. 177, 64 MLJ 466, 37 M.L.W. 584, 1933 M.W.N. 409, 10 OWN 522, 35 BomLR 507, 14 PLT. 305, 1933 ALJ. 645

An ex officio information under this section should contain a statement of the charge as certain and detailed as an indictment. An information which does not formulate any criminal charge against any one, and which contains merely the opinion of the executive that an offence has been committed, is defective—Dwarkanath, supra.

It cannot be contended that the remedy where a Court and not a particular Judge has been defamed should not be by way of proceedings for contempt of Court, but by criminal proceedings at the instance of the Government Advocate under the provisions of sec. 194, Cr. P. Code. The inherent power of the Court to punish for contempt of Court is a power which is essential in the interests of the administration of justice and that power is not restricted in any degree by the provisions in the Cr. P. Code, relating to proceedings which may be instituted with the sanction of the Government where the Courts or His Majesty's Judges have been defamed. Criminal proceedings as well as contempt proceedings lie against a person who has committed contempt of Court by indulging in illegitimate criticism of the conduct of a particular judge and there is no reason in principle for holding that where a Court generally has been defamed proceedings for contempt of Court do not also lie against the delinquent—An Advocate of Allahabad, A.I.R. 1935 All 1 (3), 4 AWR. 1155, 1935 Cr.C. 1, 1935 A.L.J. 125, 1935 All.L.R. 271, 154 I.C. 955

In the matter of Tushar Kanti Ghosh, 36 CrLJ. 1053 (1082), 156 I.C. 1055, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 419, 39 C.W.N. 770, 61 CLJ 376, 1935 Cr.C. 795, 8 RC 53, 63 Cal 217, Jack, J., observed: "The only alternative procedure in this country is that under sec. 194 Criminal Procedure Code. This procedure has not, I think, been employed in any High Court in cases of this kind of contempt of the High Court. It depends upon the exhibition of information by the Advocate-General with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council or the Local Government, and would, therefore, place the maintenance of regard for the Court entirely in the hands of the Executive. Moreover, in the words of Wills, J., in Rex v Davies, (1906) 1 KB at p. 41, it is "too dilatory and too inconvenient to afford any satisfactory remedy." There would be much to be said for the procedure under sec. 194, Criminal Procedure Code, in a case in which there could be any doubt as to the meaning of the words used, and which had therefore better be left to the decision of a jury, but where, as in this case, there is no ambiguity in the words used, the facts are not disputed, and the accused are thoroughly able and willing to defend themselves in summary procedure, there seems to be no reason why the Court should not adopt it."

195. (1) No Court shall take cognizance—

(a) of any offence punishable under sections 172 to 188 (both inclusive, of the Indian Penal Code, except with the previous sanction, or on the complaint, of the public servant concerned, or of some other public servant, to whom he is subordinate;

Change:—This section has been substantially amended by sec. 47 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923.

The changes introduced by the present Amendment are the following :—

(i) The words "with the previous sanction" have been omitted from clauses (a), (b) and (c) of sub-section (1). Under the old law, a private person could launch a prosecution for the offences referred to in this section, after obtaining the sanction of the Court. Under the present law, by abolishing sanction altogether, the right of private individuals to prosecute for the said offences has been taken away. Sub-sections (4), (5) and (6) which dealt with sanction have also been omitted.

(ii) The words "in writing" have been added after the word "complaint", in clauses (a), (b) and (c); and the words "is alleged to have been committed" have been crees no appeal ordinarily lies, to the principal Court having ordinary original Civil jurisdiction within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such Civil Court is situate:

Provided that—

(a) where appeals lie to more than one Court, the Appellate Court of inferior jurisdiction shall be the Court to which such Court shall be deemed to be subordinate; and

(b) where appeals lie to a Civil and also to a Revenue Court, such Court shall be deemed to be subordinate to the Civil or Revenue Court according to the nature of the case or proceeding in connection with which the offence is alleged to have been committed.

(4) The provisions of sub-section (1), with reference to the offence named therein, apply also to criminal conspiracies to commit such offences and to the abatement of such offences, and attempts to commit them.

- substituted for the words "have been committed" in clauses (b) and (c). For reasons, see Notes 614 and 626 below.

(iii) In sub-section (2) the word 'includes' has been substituted for 'means'.

(iv) Sub-section (3) has been re-numbered as sub-section (4).

(v) Sub-section (7) has been re-numbered as sub-section (3), because that sub-section should come in more properly after the definition of the word "Court" in sub-section (2). The old clause (c) of sub-section (7) has now been incorporated into the body of sub-section (3) with this restriction that it is now confined to Civil Courts only.

(vi) Sub-section (5) is entirely new.

Reasons for the change:—"The provisions of section 195 cause constant and great difficulty, and various amendments have been suggested which we have considered at length. We have no doubt that it will not be possible to remedy the evils which are connected with this section so long as private individuals are allowed to prosecute for offences connected with the administration of justice. In our opinion the only effective way dealing with this section is to allow prosecutions to be launched only by the public servant or by the Court.

"We see no reason why the public servant or the Court should not file a complaint exactly in the same way as a private individual would do in other cases, and our proposals in this connection with this section and the enlargement of section 476 involve the adoption of this principle. In our view section 195 should bar the cognizance by any Court of offences of this nature except upon such complaint, while the procedure to be followed when the Court desires to prosecute should be prescribed by section 476.

"The adoption of this principle will at all events get rid of the objectionable practice of keeping a sanction, which has been granted to a private individual, hanging over the head of the accused person for a period of six months, which is frequently utilised for the various purposes of blackmail. In the case of a complaint by a Court or a public servant we do not think it will be necessary to prescribe any limit of time.

"It will also, in our opinion, be a distinct advantage to get rid altogether of the term 'sanction' in connection with these prosecutions, a result which will be effected by the amendment we propose.

"We recognise that clause (a) of sub-section (1) stands on a somewhat different footing from clauses (b) and (c), but we think there is no reason to retain even in it any reference to a sanction, as prosecution under clause (a) can reasonably be launched in all cases on the direct complaint of a public servant."—Report of the Select Committee of 1916.

The object of the amendment is to stop private persons from obtaining sanction as a means of wreaking vengeance and to give the Court concerned full discretion in deciding whether any prosecution is necessary or not—Abdul Rahman, 4 Bur.L.J. 213, 27 Cr.L.J. 669.

611. Sanction abolished—Effect of Amendment:—Prior to the amendments sec 195 and sec 476 referred to two different things. Section 195 required a sanction or complaint by the Court for the prosecution of certain offences; sec. 476 gave the Court a quite independent power to direct a prosecution of its own authority and send the case for trial on the merits to a First Class Magistrate. As the Code now stands, both the sanction by a Court and the direct order by a Court directing a prosecution are done away with, and the procedure in all cases is one of complaint by the Court. Section 195 describes the offences in respect of which a complaint is necessary, and sec. 476 prescribes the procedure under which a complaint is to be made. This has modified the situation very materially and there is now strong ground for holding that the Legislature intended sec. 476 to be co-extensive in its scope with clauses (b) and (c) of sec. 195 (1). Clause (a) of sec. 195 is not concerned with Courts, and sec 476 does not refer to it—Dwarka v. Matund, 26 Cr.L.J. 1506 (1917), 90 I.C. 290, 24 A.L.J. 122, A.I.R. 1926 All. 21. See also Note 1237.

Since sanction has been abolished by the Amendment Act XVIII of 1923, a sanction granted after the 1st September, 1923 (the date on which the Amendment Act came into operation) is illegal—In re Gafur, 26 Bom.L.R. 1235, 26 Cr.L.J. 448. A sanction granted after 1st September 1923 is illegal, even though an application for sanction was made prior to that date. The order granting sanction cannot be treated even as a complaint—Baldeo Misser, 51 Cal. 652 (655).

So also, where sanction was granted before the 1st September 1923, but no prosecution was launched by that time, further proceedings cannot be taken after that date on the strength of the sanction. A prosecution can then be started only on a complaint by the Court concerned—Am v. Ah Yone, 2 Bur.L.J. 289; Javahir v. Jaggu, 6 Lah. 41, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 350, 26 P.L.R. 152, 26 Cr.L.J. 1163; Ameraj, 23 A.L.J. 35, 26 Cr.L.J. 751 (752).

But where a sanction was obtained and the Court had taken cognizance of the offence, before the Amendment Act came into operation, the subsequent amendment of the law did not take away the jurisdiction of the Court to proceed with the trial, and did not necessitate a fresh complaint under the amended provisions—In re Appasamy, 49 M.L.J. 276, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 1122, 27 Cr.L.J. 84; Muthia Goundan v. Chira, 1924 M.W.N. 358, 36 Cr.L.J. 142; Akbar Ali, 7 Lah. 99, 27 P.L.R. 181, 27 Cr.L.J. 724, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 131; Wasudeo, 27 Cr.L.J. 181, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 71; Kural Ram, 27 Cr.L.J. 560, 93 I.C. 1056, A.I.R. 1926 All. 421.

An application under sub-section (6) of the old section to revoke a sanction granted before the Amendment Act of 1923 is maintainable even after the coming into operation of the Amendment Act of 1923, because the right conferred by sub-section (6) of the old section was not a mere matter of procedure but a substantive right, and such right could not be taken away by any amending Act—Ramatrishna v. Saha Ammal, 48 Mad. 620 (F.B.), 49 M.L.J. 223, 27 Cr.L.J. 91 (Practically overruling Nataraja v. Rangaswamy, 47 Mad. 384, 46 M.L.J. 274, 25 Cr.L.J. 361; and Sesha Ayyar, 19 L.W. 463, 34 M.L.T. 353, 25 Cr.L.J. 702). Similarly, where proceedings under the old section 195 were commenced and the order of the subordinate Judge refusing to sanction a prosecution was passed under the old section, but during the pendency of an application to the District Judge against the order of refusal the new section came into operation, and the District Judge sanctioned the prosecution, held that the case was governed by sec. 6 (e) of the General Clauses Act, and the repeal of the old sec. 195 could not affect any pending investigation in respect of the right which had accrued to the complainant. The District Judge, therefore, did not act illegally in granting the sanction—Kashmir Lal v. Kishan Dasi, 25 Cr.L.J. 90, A.I.R. 1924 All. 563.

Clause (b) of sec. 537, Cr. P. C., relating to sanctions is now omitted from the section because it is no longer necessary. The old system of sanctions is now abolished. The Court or officer concerned makes the complaint direct: sec. 195 (1) (a) and (b), Cr. P. Code. When the complaint is made by the Sub-Inspector concerned, with necessary administrative sanction, no judicial sanction is now necessary—Dharamdas Huvard v. E.P., 40 Cr.L.J. 12 (13), 178 I.C. 218, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 213, 11 R.S. 82.

N.B.—It should be noted that many of the cases cited below are cases relating to sanctions, but the principle of those cases applies also to complaints, for under the old law no distinction was made between a sanction and a complaint. The cases noted below are, therefore, cited with certain verbal alterations.

612. Object of section:—The object of this section is to protect persons from being needlessly harassed by rash, baseless or vexatious prosecution at the instance of private individuals for the offences specified—Perumal v. Perumal, 39 Mad. 671, Palanisami v. Ramasami, 32 M.L.J. 54; to protect persons from criminal prosecutions instituted upon insufficient grounds by persons actuated by malice, ill-will or jealousy of disposition—Balraj v. United Singh, 18 All. 206; to prevent innocent persons being put on trial at the instance of persons likely to be moved by motives of revenge and not protect guilty persons from the penalty of their crimes—Jugeshwar Singh, 37 Cr.L.J. 893 (894), A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 346, 15 Pat. 26, 17 P.L.T. 234, 164 I.C. 86, 1936 Cr.C. 539, 2 B.R. 702, 9 R.P. 84; to ensure prosecution only when the Court after due consideration is satisfied that there is a proper case to put a party on his trial—Tuck Sew v. Hain, 4 L.B.R. 234; and to save the time of Criminal Courts from being wasted by endless prosecutions without convictions—Parameshwaran, 39 Mad 677.

It follows from sec. 4 (g) and sec. 190, Cr. P. C., that the general rule is that any person can set the law in motion by a complaint. Certain exceptions are, however, created by Statutes, for example, secs 195 and 198, Cr. P. C., offences about stamp laws, lotteries etc.—Bal Mukand, 29 Cr.L.J. 652, 110 I.C. 108, A.I.R. 1928 Lah 510, 9 Lah. 678, 10 A.I.Cr.R. 474. See also Ganesh Narayan Salhe, 13 Bom. 600. Section 195, Cr. P. C., is one of the sections which prohibits a Court from taking cognizance of certain offences unless and until a complaint has been made by some particular authority or person. The other sections dealing with similar matters are secs 196 to 199-A, Cr. P. Code. These sections do not lay down any rule of procedure. They only create a bar and say that unless some requirements has been complied with no Court shall take cognizance of the offences described in those sections—Kushal Pal, A.I.R. 1931 All. 443 (445), 32 Cr.L.J. 1105, 134 I.C. 225, 1931 Cr.C. 715, 53 All 804, 1931 A.L.J. 697, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 801

The scope of this section as regards the making of complaints is not restricted to the Courts detailed in sec 476, Cr P Code—Hari Charan v Kaushiki Charan, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 286 (288), 44 C.W.N. 530

The principle underlying sec 195, Cr P C., is plainly this. Where an act amounts to the offence of contempt of the lawful authority of public servants (sec 172-188, I. P. C.) or to an offence against public justice such as giving false evidence (sec. 193 et seq I. P. C.) or to an offence relating to documents actually used in a Court (sec. 471, I. P. C., etc.) private prosecutions are barred absolutely and only the Court in relation to which the offence was committed may initiate proceedings. This salutary rule of law is founded on common sense. The dignity and prestige of Courts of law must be upheld by their presiding officers, and it would never do to leave it to parties aggrieved to achieve in one prosecution gratification of personal revenge and vindication of a Court's honour and prestige. To allow this would be to sacrifice deliberately the dispassionate and impartial calm of tribunals and to allow a Court's prestige to be the sport of personal passions. Where the Court in its discretion has declined to prosecute on the ground that there was not a strong prima facie case and that no prosecution at all is far better than a prosecution which is likely to prove abortive, the complainant cannot be allowed to prosecute merely because he feels that he has been personally dishonoured. The refusal of the Court is final. It must mean that there should be no prosecution at all for this alleged offence. The complainant who is animated by a sense of personal grievance, cannot be allowed or trusted to be an impartial Advocate and Deputy of the Court in the role of prosecutor—K. Ramasawmi Ayyangar v. K. V. Pandurange Mudaliar, 39, Cr.L.J. 1, 171 I.C. 943, 1937 M.W.N. 1070, (1937) 2 M.L.J. 757, 46 M.L.W. 704

Section 195, though it forms a part of the Code of Cr. Procedure, in reality contains a provision of the substantive law of crimes. It does not deal with the competency of the Courts nor lay down which of several Courts shall in any particular matter have jurisdiction to try the case. It in reality lays down that the offences therein referred to shall not be deemed to be any offence at all, except on the complaint of the persons or the Courts therein specified; it enhances the connotation of those offences and limits the scope of their definition—Fakir Mahomed, 21 S.L.R. 1, 27 Cr.L.J. 1105 (1110), A.I.R. 1927 Sind 10.

The requirements of sec. 195 were not abrogated by the Prevention of Intimidation Ordinance (V of 1930)—Ganesh Vasudeo, 32 Cr.L.J. 507, 130 I.C. 396, 55 Bom. 322, Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom 252, 33 Bom.L.R. 59, 1931 Cr.C. 183, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 135;

Since sanction has been abolished by the Amendment Act XVIII of 1923, a sanction granted after the 1st September, 1923 (the date on which the Amendment Act came into operation) is illegal—In re Gafur, 26 Bom.L.R. 1235, 25 Cr.L.J. 412. A sanction granted after 1st September 1923 is illegal, even though an application for sanction was made prior to that date. The order granting sanction cannot be treated even as a complaint—Baldeo Misser, 51 Cal. 652 (655).

So also, where sanction was granted before the 1st September 1923, but no prosecution was launched by that time, further proceedings cannot be taken after that time on the strength of the sanction. A prosecution can then be started only on a complaint by the Court concerned—Am v. Ah Yone, 2 Bur.L.J. 289; Jawahir v. Jaggu, 6 Lah. 41, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 370, 26 P.L.R. 152, 26 Cr.L.J. 1163; Ameraj, 23 A.L.J. 35, 25 Cr.L.J. 751 (752).

But where a sanction was obtained and the Court had taken cognizance of the offence, before the Amendment Act came into operation, the subsequent amendment of the law did not take away the jurisdiction of the Court to proceed with the trial, and did not necessitate a fresh complaint under the amended provisions—In re Appasami, 49 M.L.J. 276, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 1122, 27 Cr.L.J. 81; Muthia Goundan v. Chinn, 1924 M.W.N. 378, 36 Cr.L.J. 1121; Akbar Ali, 7 Lah. 99, 27 P.L.R. 181, 27 Cr.L.J. 724, A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 131; Wasulco, 27 Cr.L.J. 181, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 71; Kewal Ram, 27 Cr.L.J. 590, 93 I.C. 1056, A.I.R. 1926 All. 421.

An application under sub-section (6) of the old section to revoke a sanction granted before the Amendment Act of 1923 is maintainable even after the coming into operation of the Amendment Act of 1923, because the right conferred by sub-section (6) of the old section was not a mere matter of procedure but a substantive right, and such right could not be taken away by any amending Act—Ramakrishna v. Seta Annal, 48 Mad. 620 (F.B.), 19 M.L.J. 223, 27 Cr.L.J. 91 (Practically overruling Nataraja v. Rangaswamy, 47 Mad. 384, 46 M.L.J. 274, 25 Cr.L.J. 361; and Sesha Ayyar, 19 I.W. 463, 31 M.L.T. 353, 25 Cr.L.J. 702). Similarly, where proceedings under the old section 196 were commenced and the order of the subordinate Judge refusing to sanction a prosecution was passed under the old section, but during the pendency of an application to the District Judge against the order of refusal the new section came into operation, and the District Judge sanctioned the prosecution, held that the case was governed by sec. 6 (c) of the General Clauses Act, and the repeal of the old sec. 195 could not affect any pending investigation in respect of the right which had accrued to the complainant. The District Judge, therefore, did not act illegally in granting the sanction—Kashmir Lal v. Kishen Dei, 26 Cr.L.J. 90, A.I.R. 1924 All. 563.

Clause (b) of sec. 537, Cr. P. C., relating to sanctions is now omitted from the section because it is no longer necessary. The old system of sanctions is now abolished. The Court or officer concerned makes the complaint direct: sec. 195 (1) (a) and (b), Cr. P. Code. When the complaint is made by the Sub-Inspector concerned, with necessary administrative sanction, no judicial sanction is now necessary—Dharamdas Harsand v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 12 (13), 178 I.C. 218, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 213, 11 R.S. 82.

N.B.—It should be noted that many of the cases cited below are cases relating to sanctions, but the principle of those cases applies also to complaints, for under the old law no distinction was made between a sanction and a complaint. The cases cited below are, therefore, cited with certain verbal alterations.

612. Object of section.—The object of this section is to protect persons from being needlessly harassed by rash, baseless or vexatious prosecution at the instance of private individuals for the offences specified—Parameswaran, 39 Mad. 67; Polaniappa v. Ramasami, 32 M.L.J. 54; to protect persons from criminal prosecutions instituted upon insufficient grounds by persons actuated by malice, ill-will or spite of disposition—Balwant v. Umed Singh, 18 All. 203; to prevent innocent persons being put on trial at the instance of persons likely to be moved by motives of revenge and as in the case of complaints by ordinary persons. Thus, where a Sub-Inspector drew up what was virtually a complaint and sent it up along with a calendar of witnesses to his immediate superior praying that a case under sec 182, I. P. C., be lodged against the accused and then the superior officer got the documents presented to the Magistrate by the Court Inspector, it was held that there was a sufficient complaint by the Sub-Inspector, although it was not addressed to the Magistrate as required by sec 4 (h) but to his superior officer—Mehr Chiragh Din, 4 Lah. 359 (363), 26 Cr L.J. 125, 76 I.C. 169, A.I.R. 1925 Lah 238. So also, where a police officer made a report that a certain person had lodged a false information before him, and recommended that the person might be prosecuted, held that the report virtually amounted to a complaint within the meaning of sec 195—D'an Singh, 40 Cal. 360. But see Baldeo, 95 I.C. 211, A.I.R. 1926 All 566, 27 Cr L.J. 899 and Abdul Rahman, 33 Cr.L.J. 948, 140 I.C. 184, 1932 A.L.J. 155, 1932 Cr.C. 206, A.I.R. 1932 All. 190, Ind. Rul 1932 All 633 where the report of the Police Officer submitted through the Superintendent of Police with his endorsement for necessary action was not held to be a complaint. The same view has also been taken in Lakhan, 38 Cr L.J. 57 (66), 165 I.C. 769, A.I.R. 1936 All 788, 1931 A.L.J. 1064, 1936 A.L.R. 950, 9 R.A. 312, 1936 Cr C 1011, I.L.R. 1937 All. 162. But in cases in which a sub-inspector writes through the Superintendent of Police to the Magistrate that an offence has been committed, and therefore action should be taken against the accused person and if the Superintendent of Police forwards this to the Magistrate, then certainly the letter would come within the definition of the word complaint—Lakhan, supra.

The words "in writing" have been inserted after the word "complaint" in order to remove the inconvenience which might be felt if it was made incumbent on the public servant to attend the Court and to appear before the Magistrate in order to lodge the complaint. It will be sufficient if he sends a written complaint to the Magistrate. It is for this reason that clause (a) has been added to sec 200, so that it is not incumbent on the Magistrate to examine the public servant (complainant) when taking cognizance of the offence—Lachmi Singh 5 P.L.T. 505, A.I.R. 1924 Pat 691, 25 Cr L.J. 972

If an offence under sec 173, I. P. C., is committed before a public servant, the Court shall not take cognizance of the offence without a complaint in writing from the public servant; and it is not open to a Magistrate to ignore the provisions of this clause by the device of instituting the case under another section of the I. P. Code. Hence the Magistrate cannot say he took cognizance of an offence under sec. 225B of the I. P. Code, and that having done so, he was entitled under sec 238 of the Cr P Code to convict the accused under sec 173, I. P. Code which he regarded as a minor offence of the same character as that for which a penalty is provided under sec. 225B, I. P. Code—Narain Singh, 47 All 114, 22 A.L.J. 1005, 26 Cr L.J. 446.

Where a Court described his complaint as one under sec. 476 and sec. 195, Cr. P. Code, regarding offences under sec 183, I. P. C., the mere fact that he made reference to sec. 476, Cr. P. C., will not make his complaint any the less one under sec. 195, Cr. P. C., and will not render it illegal in any way—Jodhi, 35 Cr L.J. 990, 11 O.W.N. 720, 149 I.C. 377, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 277, 1934 Cr C 773, A.L.R. 1934 Oudh 212.

Instances of complaints :—Where a Munsiff who heard a suit was of opinion that certain persons should be prosecuted for offences under secs. 193, 463, 471, I. P. C., and directed them to be sent to a Magistrate for inquiry, it was held that the Munsiff's order was a complaint within the meaning of this section—Ishri Prosad v. Sham Lal, 7 All. 871 (F.B.). Where a Magistrate ordered the prosecution of a person, and sent the case to another Magistrate for inquiry, it was held that the order must be deemed to be a complaint under sec. 476—Yendava, 7 Mad. 189, 2 Weir 585. Where a Civil Judge trying a rent suit was of opinion that a party to the suit had committed perjury, and sent the record to the Collector for starting a case under sec. 193, I. P. C., it was held that the order was a complaint, though it was not an order under sec. 476—Sundar Sarup, 26 All. 514. Where a Judge passed an order to the following effect:—"I complain that A filed two false and forged bonds in the Court of Small Causes, etc.," Lachmi, 32 Cr.L.J. 511, 130 I.C. 241, 58 Cal. 971, 53 Cr.L.J. 461, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 369, 35 C.W.N. 257, 1931 Cr.C. 154, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 122.

613. Duty of Court:—A complaint ought not to be made under this section when there is no probability of conviction. It is necessary for the Court before making a complaint, to consider the evidence and to decide as to whether there is a prima facie case and any reasonable chance of conviction being obtained—In re Paree Kunhammad, 26 Mad. 116; Chakrapani, 12 M.L.J. 408; Palaniappa v. Ramasami, 32 M.L.J. 54; Munisami v. Rajaratnam, 44 M.L.J. 774; Kali Charan v. Basudeo, 12 C.W.N. 3, 6 Cr.L.J. 356; Kusum Sao v. Janak Lal, 4 P.L.J. 374; In re Raoji, 7 Bom.L.R. 732 (per Russel, J.); Kidha Singh, 13 A.L.J. 1111; Mutayya v. Maung Shwe, 3 Bur.L.T. 152, 11 Cr.L.J. 749; Khajumal, 14 S.L.R. 69; Bhagrathi, 26 Cr.L.J. 1401; Sheoshankarpuri, 10 N.L.R. 177. It would be an abuse of the powers vested in a Court of Justice if complaints were made by it on the principle that though the conviction of the party complained against is a mere possibility, it is desirable that the matter should be threshed out, so that it may be decided whether or not an offence has been committed—Jodunandan, 37 Cal. 250.

In making a complaint, the Court must act on its own independent judgment and should not be guided by the opinions of others. It should not act merely on the report of the Police—Bapu v. Bapu, 39 Mad. 750 (757); Sheikh Beari, 10 Mad. 232 (237).

No one jot or one tittle can be taken away from or added to the plain and express provisions of the Legislature by any decision of the Court; nor can this discretion vested by the section in the Court be crystallized or restricted by any series of cases: it remains free and untrammelled, to be fairly exercised according to the exigencies of each case—An Attorney, 41 Cal. 446 (457), 15 Cr.L.J. 49, 22 I.C. 321.

See also Note 1241.

Cognizance:—Where the Court is confronted with a complaint of a private person and not preferred under sec. 476, Cr. P. C., it must refuse to take cognizance. It cannot even examine the complainant upon oath and then note, it is only taking cognizance of the offence not referred to in sec. 195, Cr. P. C., because the examination of the complainant upon oath under sec. 200, Cr. P. C., is after cognizance has been taken—Sadhuram Chumandas v. Chumandas Budhram, 38 Cr.L.J. 742 (743), 169 I.C. 112, 9 R.S. 277, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 81. An objection as to the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to try the case on the ground of absence of a complaint as required under this section goes to the root of the case and should not be reserved for consideration till the entire evidence is recorded—Banalamudi Parandhamappa v. Y. Nagabhusanam, 49 Cr.L.J. 798, 183 I.C. 268, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 579, 49 M.L.W. 545.

614. Complaint:—Under the present law, a Court must make a complaint and cannot directly order prosecution—Ramprasad, 49 All. 752, 25 A.L.J. 639, 28 Cr.L.J. 543.

If a Court adopts the procedure laid down in sec. 476, and after making the necessary inquiry under that section, sends the case to a first class Magistrate, such action amounts to making a complaint—Rachappa, 13 Bom. 109. In order to make a complaint under this section, the Judge or Munsiff will not have to appear before a Magistrate and make a complaint on oath like an ordinary complainant. If he adopts the procedure under sec. 476, that would be sufficient. Section 476 was enacted with the object of avoiding the inconvenience which might be caused if a Munsiff or Subordinate Judge or a Judge were obliged to appear before a Magistrate like a private individual, and make a complaint on oath to lay the foundation of a prosecution—Ishri Prasad v. Sham Lal, 7 All. 871 (F.B.).

But it should be noted that sec. 476 refers only to offences 'when committed before the Court' and the ruling in 7 All. 871 must be applied to those cases only. But if the offence is committed before a public servant other than a Court, his proper course is to prepare an ordinary complaint. See Nga Lu Po, 10 Cr.L.J. 12 (Bur.).

But even in the case of complaints by public servants, the law is not so stringent as in the case of complaints by ordinary persons. Thus, where a Sub-Inspector drew up what was virtually a complaint and sent it up along with a calendar of witnesses to his immediate superior praying that a case under sec. 182, I P. C., be lodged against the accused and then the superior officer got the documents presented to the Magistrate by the Court Inspector, it was held that there was a sufficient complaint by the Sub-Inspector, although it was not addressed to the Magistrate as required by sec. 4 (h) but to his superior officer—Mehr Chiragh Din, 4 Lah. 359 (363), 26 Cr L.J. 125, 76 I.C. 169, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 258. So also, where a police officer made a report that a certain person had lodged a false information before him, and recommended that the person might be prosecuted, held that the report virtually amounted to a complaint within the meaning of sec. 195—D lan Singh, 40 Cal 360. But see Baldeo, 96 I.C. 211, A.I.R. 1926 All 556, 27 Cr L.J. 899 and Abdul Rahman, 33 Cr L.J. 948, 140 I.C. 184, 1932 A.L.J. 155, 1932 Cr.C. 206, A.I.R. 1932 All 190, Ind. Rul. 1932 All. 633 where the report of the Police Officer submitted through the Superintendent of Police with his endorsement for necessary action was not held to be a complaint. The same view has also been taken in Lakhan, 38 Cr L.J. 57 (66), 165 I.C. 769, A.I.R. 1936 All. 788, 1931 A.L.J. 1064, 1936 A.L.R. 950, 9 R.A. 312, 1936 Cr.C. 1011, I.L.R. 1937 All. 162. But in cases in which a sub-inspector writes through the Superintendent of Police to the Magistrate that an offence has been committed, and therefore action should be taken against the accused person and if the Superintendent of Police forwards this to the Magistrate, then certainly the letter would come within the definition of the word complaint—Lakhan, supra.

The words "in writing" have been inserted after the word "complaint" in order to remove the inconvenience which might be felt if it was made incumbent on the public servant to attend the Court and to appear before the Magistrate in order to lodge the complaint. It will be sufficient if he sends a written complaint to the Magistrate. It is for this reason that clause (a) has been added to sec. 200, so that it is not incumbent on the Magistrate to examine the public servant (complainant) when taking cognizance of the offence—Lachmi Singh 5 P.L.T. 505, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 691, 25 Cr L.J. 972.

If an offence under sec. 173, I P. C., is committed before a public servant, the Court shall not take cognizance of the offence without a complaint in writing from the public servant; and it is not open to a Magistrate to ignore the provisions of this clause by the device of instituting the case under another section of the I P. Code. Hence the Magistrate cannot say he took cognizance of an offence under sec. 225B of the I. P. Code, and that having done so, he was entitled under sec. 238 of the Cr. P. Code to convict the accused under sec. 173, I P. Code which he regarded as a minor offence of the same character as that for which a penalty is provided under sec. 225B, I. P. Code—Narain Singh, 47 All. 114, 22 A.L.J. 1005, 26 Cr.L.J. 446.

Where a Court described his complaint as one under sec. 476 and sec. 195, Cr. P. Code, regarding offences under sec. 183, I P. C., the mere fact that he made reference to sec. 476, Cr. P. C., will not make his complaint any the less one under sec. 195, Cr. P. Instances of complaints —Where a Munsiff who heard a suit was of opinion that certain persons should be prosecuted for offences under secs. 193, 463, 471, I P. Where a Magistrate ordered the prosecution of a person, and sent the case to another Magistrate for inquiry, it was held that the order must be deemed to be a complaint under sec. 476—Yendava, 7 Mad. 189, 2 Weir 585. Where a Civil Judge trying a rent suit was of opinion that a party to the suit had committed perjury, and sent the record to the Collector for starting a case under sec. 193, I. P. C., it was held that the order was a complaint, though it was not an order under sec. 476—Sundar Sarup, 26 All. 514. Where a Judge passed an order to the following effect:—"I complain that A filed two false and forged bonds in the Court of Small Causes, etc," and sent the papers to the District Magistrate for taking action, it was held that the order of the Judge was a complaint—Rajaram, 12 A.L.J. 881, 15 Cr.L.J. 700. Where the Magistrate ordered "Prosecution under sec. 195, Indian Penal Code, is sanctioned. Case to Syed Mohammad Zakir," held that this order could not by any stretch of language be deemed to be a complaint—Kali Charan, 35 Cr.L.J. 789, 148 I.C. 784, 11 O.W.N. 473, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 186, 1934 Cr.C. 582, A.L.R. 1934 Oudh 217. Where a Kurkamin made a report of the occurrence to the Tahsildar who sent it to the Subdivisional Magistrate with an endorsement that certain persons might be proceeded against under secs. 184-186, I. P. C.,; held that there was a valid complaint—Lachman, 34 Cr.L.J. 614, 143 I.C. 686, 10 O.W.N. 553, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 281, Ind. Rul. 1933 Oudh 189, 1933 Cr.C. 672. Where the accused removed the property which had been attached in execution of a decree, and on the report of the attaching officer the District Judge, being of opinion that the accused should be prosecuted, ordered the papers to be sent to the Deputy Commissioner, it was held that the order of the District Judge operated as a complaint—Nihala, 1904 P.L.R. 3, 1 Cr.L.J. 36. Where a Munsiff being of opinion that a document filed in a case before him had been tampered with, communicated his suspicions to the District Judge who thereupon wrote to the District Magistrate requesting him to take action, it was held that the letter of the District Judge amounted to a complaint—Debi Prasad, 35 All. 8, 13 Cr.L.J. 829, 10 A.L.J. 361. Where the District Judge forwarded to the District Magistrate a copy of his judgment, with a letter in which he called attention to his remarks as regards the forgery of a will and requested the latter to take up the matter for judicial investigation, the letter was a sufficient complaint—In re Aparao, 20 Bom.L.R. 1018. Where a Magistrate who tried a case sent up a report to the District Magistrate that the accused had made a certain alteration in a document filed in Court and had thus committed an offence, the report amounted to a complaint—Suraj Prasad, 21 A.L.J. 825.

The endorsement of the Additional District Judge "write to Additional District Magistrate about the matter and ask him to proceed under sec. 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code" on the petition for making a complaint under sec. 476, is not a valid complaint under that section—Rajani v. Bistoo, 46 C.L.J. 40, 28 Cr.L.J. 840.

The Tahsildar, Akola, made the following report to the Sub-divisional Officer:—"The report on the enclosed warrant may kindly be seen. The village Barsitakli is notorious for arrears and unless we help the V. O's in recovery, it will be difficult to recover arrears. The defaulter by his closing the door has done an overt act to obstruct a public servant in discharge of a public function. I, therefore, propose to lodge a complaint under sec. 186, Indian Penal Code, in the Court of Naib-Tahsildar (Mr. Joshi). Submitted to Sub-Divisional Officer for favour of approval as this concerns the general working of the taluq." On this the Sub-Divisional Officer endorsed: "A complaint may be lodged under sec. 183, Indian Penal Code," and returned the paper to the Tahsildar, Akola, who then added to it "forwarded to Naib-Tahsildar (Mr. Joshi) for favour of further action." Held that the communication between the Tahsildar, Akola, and the Sub-Divisional Officer did not constitute a complaint in writing made by a public officer to a Court having jurisdiction to try the case and that consequently the Magistrate had no jurisdiction—Syed Habib v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 58, 172 I.C. 51, 10 R.N. 152, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 106.

Where a police-officer reported to the Sub-Divisional Magistrate that his order under sec. 141, Cr. P. Code had been disobeyed by some persons and suggested that cases under sec. 188, I. P. C., be started against the persons reported against and the Sub-divisional Magistrate sent the reports to the District Magistrate praying that the persons mentioned in the police-officer's report be prosecuted under sec. 188, I. P. C., and the District Magistrate sanctioned the prosecution and made over the cases to a First Class Magistrate for disposal, held that the reports of the Sub-divisional Magistrate showed that they were made with a view to obtaining his permission for the prosecution of the persons concerned and the said reports were in fact not complaints under sec. 195 (1) (a), Cr. P. Code. The mere fact that the Sub-divisional Magistrate, while giving evidence before the trying Magistrate several months after, called them complaints did not make them complaints—Babu v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 228, AIR. 1940 Oudh 241, 1940 O.L.R. 43, 185 I.C. 745, 1940 O.W.N. 118

614A. Want of Complaint:—Under the old clause (b) of section 537, the want of a sanction or any irregularity in the matter of a sanction or in a proceeding under sec. 476 did not stand in the way of a conviction, if it was otherwise sound. After the amendment of 1923, this clause does not any longer find a place in sec. 537. The inference is that want of a regular complaint by a public servant or a Court must be fatal to a prosecution—Ameraj, 23 A.L.J. 35, 26 Cr.L.J. 751 (752); Jaswant, 25 Cr.L.J. 721, 81 I.C. 209, 1 Lah. Where a statute says that a particular thing shall not be done unless a bar is removed, the statutory prohibition stands, and everything done in contravention of the prohibition is bad—Ramdin Lal v. Emp., supra.

Where the Court has acted without jurisdiction with regard to a part of the trial (i.e., in respect of one of several offences), the whole proceedings are vitiated by the illegality committed—Ramchandra Rango v. Emp., supra. See also Note 647.

Effect of complaint when it is not necessary—Where a complaint under sec. 476, Cr. P. C., is forwarded to the District Magistrate under circumstances in which sec. 476 is inapplicable, the complaint ceases to be a valid complaint. But there is nothing to prevent the District Magistrate from proceeding under cl. (c) of sub-sec. (1) of sec. 190, Cr. P. C., as on information received from any person other than a police officer or of his own knowledge or suspicion—Govt Advocate, Bihar v. Kumar Singh, AIR 1938 Pat. 83 (89), 16 Pat. 571, 1937 P.W.N. 937, 19 P.L.T. 51.

614B. Complaint not mentioning all sections under which offences have been committed:—Sections 476 and 195 are intended really to prevent indiscriminate prosecutions under the various sections mentioned therein. Once the bar is removed there is no difference between the cases mentioned in secs. 476 and 195 and any other case, e.g., if a complaint is filed under sec. 471, I. P. C., and it appears that some other offence has also been committed, it is not necessary to have a fresh complaint—Jamuna v. Laldhari, AIR. 1934 Pat. 536, 36 Cr.L.J. 26, 152 I.C. 228, 1934 Cr.C. 1191, 15 P.L.T. 684; Kunhammad, 1933 M.W.N. 1261; Hampana Goud, AIR. 1936 Mad. 280, 1935 M.W.N. 1346, 70 M.L.J. 109, 1936 M.Cr.C. 1, 43 M.L.W. 236, 161

When a prosecution has been instituted of a kind requiring the previous complaint, sanction or order of a particular authority, then once the proceedings are on foot they will take their course in respect of any offence which the facts disclose—Sakaldeo Singh, 38 Cr.L.J. 210 (211), 166 I.C. 345, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 4, 17 P.L.T. 806, 3 B.R. 162, 9 R.P. 287, 16 Pat. 92; Dharmumal v. Tenumal, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 133 (34). What section 195 prohibits is taking cognizance of an offence of a certain class except on a complaint of a Court; but where a Court has complained of an offence specified in this section then cognizance can be and is to be taken of the whole case, that is to say, prosecution will go forward as against all the persons found to be concerned in the offence and also under any sections found applicable to the facts which are the subject-matter of the complaint—Jugeshwar Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 346 (347), 2 B.R. 702, 9 R.P. 84, 15 Pat. 26, 17 P.L.T. 234, 37 Cr.L.J. 893, 164 I.C. 86, 1936 Cr.C. 539; Vithu, 38 Cr.L.J. 717, 169 I.C. 74, I.L.R. 1937 Nag. 492, 9 R.N. 297. The mere omission of the section may not be material if upon a reading of the complaint it appears that other charges were also contemplated—Bhikhari, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 561, (563), 15 P.L.T. 523. 614C. Complaint not mentioning all the accused:—The Criminal Procedure Code provides for taking cognizance of offences and not of offenders. So a Magistrate who has legally taken cognizance of an offence under sec. 476, Cr. P. C., has jurisdiction to proceed against anyone who might be proved by the evidence to be concerned in that offence, whether he was mentioned in the order under sec. 476, Cr. P. C., or not, even though the Court may have refused to make a complaint against him, on being moved to do so—Nitai Charan v. Kshetra Nath, 40 C.W.N. 573, 37 Cr.L.J. 521, 162 I.C. 102, 1936 Cr.C. 289, 8 R.C. 562, 63 Cal. 819, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 147, following Eshan Chunder v. Prannath, 1 Marshall 270, (1863) W.R. 71 (F.B.), 2 Hay, 236 and Girdhari Lal, 21 C.W.N. 950, A.I.R. 1917 Cal. 121, 42 I.C. 133, 18 Cr.L.J. 901 and dissenting from Mahomed Bhakku, 23 Cal. 532. See also Jugeshwar and Vithu, supra and Assudomal Ramandas v. Jhamandas Hotchand, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 100 (102).

The procedure for the removal of the bar is provided by sec. 476, Cr. P. C., and sec. 476 is so worded as to make it clear that the procedure therein provided is intended to deal primarily with offences, but with offenders also if they are known and available. Section 476, Cr. P. C., has no reference to jurisdiction. If then in respect of one of the offences enumerated in sec. 195 (1) (b) committed in or in relation to any proceeding in any Court that Court or some Court to which that Court is subordinate has proceeded under sec. 476 and filed a complaint, the bar under sec. 195 is removed; the Magistrate before whom the complaint is lodged takes cognizance of the offence under sec. 190 (1) (a) and thereafter proceeds to inquire into the complaint and to deal with it according to law, using for this purpose all the powers vested in him by the Code of Criminal Procedure. If the offender is named in the complaint the Magistrate will proceed against him. If, on inquiring into the complaint, other persons appear to be involved therein by the evidence recorded by the Magistrate, he is entitled to proceed against those others under the powers conferred upon him by sec. 190 (1) (a) as has been held in Dedar Buksh v. Svamatada, A.I.R. 1914 Cal. 801, 24 I.C. 954, 15 Cr.L.J. 546, 41 Cal. 1013, 18 C.W.N. 921 and in Mekrab v. Emp., A.I.R. 1924 Sind 71, 83 I.C. 885, 26 Cr.L.J. 181, 17 S.L.R. 150 (F.B.) and by the Code of Criminal Procedure generally, and section 195 (1) (b) cannot possibly bar him from doing so. In fact sec. 195 (1) (b) ceases to have any application the moment a Magistrate takes cognizance of one of the offences enumerated therein after the removal of the bar imposed by the Section—Fatch Muhammad v Emp, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 97 (98), 41 Cr.L.J. 750, 189 I.C. 586, 1 L.R. 1940 Kar. 287, dissenting from Ram Bilas v. Lachmi Narain, 45 All 140, 20 A.L.J. 904, 24 Cr.L.J. 220, 71 I.C. 684, A.I.R. 1923 All. 84

Complaint in the alternative:—It is entirely wrong that an order sanctioning a prosecution of two persons in the alternative should be passed—Narinjan Dass v. Emp., 31 Cr.L.J. 1065 (1066), 126 I.C. 535, A.I.R. 1930 Rang. 51.

614D. Evasion of the provisions of sec. 195:—When upon the facts the commission of several offences is disclosed, some of which require sanction (complaint), and others do not, it is open to the complainant if he so wishes, to proceed in respect of those only which do not require sanction (complaint)—Supdt., etc., Legal Affairs v. Biscamber, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 633 (635), 33 C.W.N. 474, 56 Cal. 1041, 120 I.C. 449, 1929 Cr.C. 401, 31 Cr.L.J. 125; Raghubar v. Khusehar, 36 Cr.L.J. 594, 154 I.C. 847, 1935 O.W.N. 370; Sarbeswar, 39 C.L.J. 33; Tarsu Beg v. Muhammad Yar Khan, 25 Cr.L.J. 688, 81 I.C. 176, 21 A.L.J. 915, A.I.R. 1924 All 296; Krishna Pillai v. Krishna Konan, 31 Mad 43, 17 M.L.J. 559, 7 Cr.L.J. 6, 3 M.L.T. 113; Ghulam Mohammad v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Lah 802, 39 P.L.R. 1011, 172 I.C. 373, 39 Cr.L.J. 112, 10 R.L. 307. If in course of one transaction a number of offences are committed some requiring sanction for prosecution of some authority or the other and others not requiring such sanction, it is not necessary that the prosecution of those offences which do not require such sanction should depend upon the obtaining of the sanction for prosecution for those offences which required such sanction. The law requires that for the prosecution of a particular offence sanction of the Court should be obtained; but it does not say that if in course of the commission of an offence, which requires sanction for prosecution other offences are committed, the magistracy or the police are helpless in proceeding to prosecute the offender for these latter offences, unless the Court sanctions the prosecution of the former—Sheo Ahir v Emp, A.I.R. 1938 Pat 548, 19 P.L.T. 665, 1938 P.W.N. 813, 5 B.R. 104, 178 I.C. 487, 17 Pat. 680, 40 Cr.L.J. 71. But where an offence containing, say ingredients, A, B and C, can only be inquired into upon complaint of the Court concerned by reason of the presence of ingredient C, it is not open to a Criminal Court, upon the same allegation, to entertain a complaint of an offence containing ingredients A and B only, although ingredient C is also clearly present. Thus, where the facts disclosed an offence under sec. 193, I. P. C., committed in relation to a proceeding in Court, no Court shall take cognizance of such an offence otherwise than in the manner prescribed in this section, and it makes no difference that the complaint, evidently to evade that provision, elected to name the offence of forgery in this petition—Perianna v. Vengu, 30 Cr.L.J. 322 (325), 114 I.C. 360, Ind Rul 1929 Mad 280, A.I.R. 1929 Mad 21, 28 M.L.W. 687, 1929 M.W.N. 196, 56 M.L.J. 208; Ravanappa, 33 Cr.L.J. 361, 136 I.C. 779, A.I.R. 1932 Mad 253, 1931 M.W.N. 1314, 35 M.L.W. 180, Ind Rul 1932 Mad 315, 1932 Cr.C. 182, 55 Mad 343, 62 M.L.J. 735; Subbava v. Siddhu, 1933 M.W.N. 722; Appadurai, 59 Mad 165, 1936 Cr.C. 85, 8 R.M. 565, 37 Cr.L.J. 159, 159 I.C. 853, 1935 M.W.N. 946, 69 M.L.J. 812, A.I.R. 1936 Mad 89. Parties should not be allowed to evade the provisions of sec. 195 (1) (b), Cr. P. C., by filing a complaint under another provision of the Penal Code if clearly an offence under sec. 193 I. P. C., or any other section mentioned in sec. 195 (1) (b), Cr. P. C., has been committed—Appadurai, 59 Mad. 165 (169), 37 Cr.L.J. 159, 159 I.C. 853, 1935 M.W.N. 946, 69 M.L.J. 812, A.I.R. 1936 Mad 89, 1936 Cr.C. 85, 44 M.L.W. 901, following Ravanappa, supra. When a complaint is made there must be no splitting up of the facts, and the Court is not entitled to disregard some of the facts and try or convict the accused person for an offence which the remaining facts disclose, but the Court must consider the facts as a whole and if these facts disclose an offence for which a special complaint is necessary under the provisions of sec. 195, a Court cannot take cognizance of the case unless that special complaint has been filed—Muthurelu Kundumbaran, A.I.R.

Mad. 8 (9), 37 Cr.L.J. 1134, 1936 M.W.N. 641, 1936 M.Cr.C. 258, 71 M.L.J. 485, 44 M.L.M. 631, 165 I.C. 292, 59 Mad. 1083 (1086). See also Dharmamal v. Teunmal, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 133. The Courts should not tolerate evasion of the provisions of sec. 195, Cr. P. C., or of the intention of the legislature, but, on the other hand, the Court must be careful not unnecessarily to extend the provisions of a section which restricts the right of a subject to have recourse to the Courts. The principle to be followed in cases of this kind is not whether the complaint discloses other facts which constitute offences for which no complaint of the Court is necessary, as well as facts for which a complaint of the Court is necessary, but whether there is or is not an evasion of the provisions of sec. 195, Cr. P. C., and the test whether there is evasion or not is whether the facts disclose primarily and essentially an offence for which the complaint of the Court is required—Sadkuram Chimandas v. Chimandas Budhuram, 38 Cr.L.J. 742 (743), 169 I.C. 112, 9 R.S. 277, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 81; Sahebrao Baburao, 38 Cr.L.J. 272, 38 Bom.L.R. 1192, 166 I.C. 731, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 46, 9 R.B. 252. See also Ram Nath, 26 Cr.L.J. 362 (364), 48 I.C. 714, 22 A.L.J. 1106, A.I.R. 1925 All. 230, 47 All. 268. See also Note 616.

A person who having been accused of an offence by another, has been discharged or acquitted, cannot be allowed to evade the provisions of sec. 195, Cr. P. C., by preferring a complaint under sec. 500, I. P. C., when leave has been refused to prosecute under sec. 211, I. P. C., the offence being clearly and essentially an offence under the latter section. The care taken to protect complainants from being harassed by prosecutions for instituting false cases is a clear indication that the Legislature never intended or contemplated that upon refusal of leave to prosecute under sec. 211, a person who has been discharged or acquitted should be allowed to fall back upon section 500. To permit such a course to be taken would render entirely nugatory the salutary provisions of sec. 195, Cr. P. C.—Profulla v. Harendra, 44 Cal. 970 (976), 18 Cr.L.J. 377, 21 C.W.N. 253, 25 C.L.J. 445, A.I.R. 1917 Cal. 708, 38 I.C. 761. Even after the amendment of this section in 1923 the Rangoon High Court came to the same conclusion under similar circumstances—Swee Ing v. Koon Han, 36 Cr.L.J. 970, 156 I.C. 598, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 163, 1936 Cr.C. 626, 8 R.Rang. 27. In this case no application was made to the Magistrate for lodging a complaint under sec. 211, I. P. C., nor did he lodge any suo motu.

The complainant lodged a complaint under sec. 211, I. P. C., which was dismissed under sec. 203, Cr. P. C. He then instituted a fresh complaint on the same facts, alleging that these facts constitute an offence under sec. 500, I. P. C., held that when the complainant could file a second complaint under sec. 211, I. P. C., he could certainly file a second complaint on the same facts, but instead of alleging an offence under sec. 211, I. P. C., allege an offence under sec. 500, I. P. C.—U Sein Ywet v. U Maung Fyi, 35 Cr.L.J. 802, 148 I.C. 845, 1934 Cr.C. 263, A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 40, A.L.R. 1934 Rang. 130. In this case no sanction or authority of any Court was necessary to the filing of the complaint under sec. 211, I. P. Code.

Where it is clear that the publication was to a person in authority and was really intended to give information about some offences with a view to get redress or protection the offence, if any, must be only the furnishing of false information or the making of a false accusation. It cannot be said that the offence of defamation is also committed simply because some part of the information or the accusation may be found to be defamatory and false. Offences of this nature cannot be taken cognizance of by a Magistrate in the absence of a complaint by the public servant concerned or of some authority to whom the public servant is subordinate—G. N. Subba Rao v. Anna M. Venkatachalapathi Ayyar, 40 Cr.L.J. 69, 178 I.C. 478, 1938 M.W.N. 871, 48 M.L.W. 320, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 397, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 904. The accused charged the son-in-law of the complainant with theft of certain documents and records and in the affidavit filed in support of the application for a search warrant and the sworn statement, the accused alleged that some of the articles had been secreted in the house of the complainant. A search warrant was issued and the house of the complainant was searched but nothing was found. The son-in-law of the complainant was ultimately discharged. The complaint of defamation, which was subsequently lodged by the complainant, was founded on the allegations in the affidavit and sworn statement that some of the articles were secreted in the house of the complainant and those allegations were stated to be false. Held that the offence committed would, therefore, fall under sec. 193, I. P. C., which cannot be taken cognizance of without a complainant by the Court and that the parties cannot be allowed to evade the provisions of sec 195 (1)(b), Cr. P. C., by filing a complaint under another provision of the Indian Penal Code—Shanmugasundaram Pillai v. Manicka Mudaliar, 40 Cr.L.J. 542, 181 I.C. 86, 49 M.L.W. 102, 1939 M.W.N. 192, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 368, (1939) 1 M.L.J. 412, 11 R.M. 770. Where the defamatory statement was made in the deposition of the accused as a witness and the finding is that the statement was deliberately false, the offence committed would fall under sec 193, I. P. C., which cannot be taken cognizance of without a complaint by the Court and parties cannot be allowed to evade the provisions of sec 195 (1)(b), Cr. P. C., by filing a complaint under another provision of the Indian Penal Code (i.e., sec 500, I. P. C.)—Ganapathi Asari v. Kuppuswamy Asari, 40 Cr.L.J. 757, 183 I.C. 179, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 493, 1939 M.W.N. 320, 49 M.L.W. 456, (1939) 1 M.L.J. 614, 12 R.M. 250.

Overruling Swee Ing v. Koon Hau, supra, the Full Bench of the Rangoon High Court has laid down that to sec 499, I. P. C., there are ten exceptions and it would have been quite easy for the Legislature to have inserted an eleventh exception saying that when the defamation is made in a statement to a public servant or in Court proceedings by virtue of which the offence was punishable under sec. 182 or 211, I. P. C., or some other section, then no prosecution under sec 500, I. P. C., would lie. But there is no such extra exception. Consequently, a complaint under sec 500, I. P. C., cannot be dismissed even if the same facts constitute also an offence under sec 182, I. P. C., and no sanction as required by sec. 195, Cr. P. C., is obtained—U Aung Pe v. The King, 39 Cr.L.J. 663, 175 I.C. 915, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 232, 11 R.Rang. 15, 1938 Rang. 404 (F.B.). The same view seems to have been taken by the Calcutta High Court in the recent case of Guru Prosad Ram Gupta v. Rameswar Marwari, 39 Cr.L.J. 730, 176 I.C. 572, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 527, 42 C.W.N. 674, 11 R.C. 127, where it has been laid down that since the Legislature has not chosen to include sec 500, I. P. C., amongst those sections in which prosecution must be initiated by the Court in connection with which the offence has been committed, there is no provision of the law by which the Court can refuse to permit a prosecution under sec 500, I. P. C., where the facts appear to justify such a prosecution. In this case Profulla v. Harendra, supra, and Ibrahim v. Emp., 111 I.C. 433, 29 Cr.L.J. 849, 11 A.I.Cr.R. 79, were distinguished on the ground that in both those cases sanction to prosecute coming under sec. 195, Cr. P. C., had been refused.

It is undesirable that people should be hampered in their access to the Courts and in getting justice by the fear that if they are unsuccessful they might be prosecuted for defamation and, therefore, all Courts should be careful when a complaint of defamation is filed in respect of proceedings in a Civil Court to see whether the provisions of sec. 209, I. P. C., and of the Cr. P. C., generally have not been evaded—Gangumal, 25 Cr.L.J. 941, 86 I.C. 1005, A.I.R. 1925 Sind. 263, 18 S.L.R. 83. The same Court has also laid down that it seems impossible to hold that the litigant who elects to allege that statements made in an affidavit are false and on that allegation to present a complaint under sec. 500, I. P. C., can be regarded as evading the law, even though it might have been open to him to wait until the civil suit had been decided and then to invite the Civil Court to take action against the affidavit, for the offence of perjury—Kalumal v. Kissumal, 36 Cr.L.J. 881 (883), 156 I.C. 219, A.I.R. 1935 Sind. 81, 1935 Cr.C. 367. See also Chotelal v. Phulchand in Note 616 under the heading "False evidence."

In this case the High Court stayed the proceedings on the complaint of defamation until the disposal of the civil suit. But the purpose of this section is clear. It is to keep within the control of the Courts in the public interests offences committed in relation to their proceedings, and it would be an evasion of the provisions of this section to allow an aggrieved party, merely by placing the offence under another section, to escape its provisions. Thus, where a person, who had a decree against him and, in satisfaction of the decree, made certain payments in kind to the decree-holders who fraudulently concealed the facts from the Court and obtained further execution of decree and a warrant against him for his arrest, made a complaint under sec. 406, I. P. C., held that the offence was primarily an offence relating to the administration of justice and was not merely a subordinate or ancillary offence, nor was it in any way separable or distinguishable from the offence for which complaint of the Court was required, that the offence, as disclosed, upon the facts was not the offence under sec. 406, I. P. C., but an offence under sec. 210, I. P. C., which could not be taken cognizance of without a complaint of the Civil Court—Bhimomal v. Jalo, 9 R.S. 55, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 123, 29 S.L.R. 356, 37 Cr.L.J. 1007, 164 I.C. 797, 1936 Cr.C. 804. The principle upon which the two cases reported in Gangumal, supra and Bhimomal v. Jalo, supra, have been decided, is that a complainant cannot, by placing his complaint under one section rather than another, evade the provisions of law which provide that offences relating to the administration of justice must be kept within the control of the Court. But where it is a matter of doubt, as in the case of defamatory statements alleged to have been made in the affidavit filed in a civil suit in support of an application for attachment before judgment, whether the facts complained of do constitute one of such offences it cannot be said that the complainant is thereby debarred from placing his complaint under sec. 500, I. P. Code—Kalumal Mottram v. Mulchand Kimatrai, 39 Cr.L.J. 736, 176 I.C. 365, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 129, 11 R.S. 1. See Venkataramanjulu v. Kanniah, 1933 M.W.N. 1262. See also Ali Ahmad, cited in Note 1094, cl. (8).

The provisions of this section cannot be evaded by the device of charging a person with an offence to which this section does not apply and then convicting him of an offence to which it does, upon the ground that such latter offence is a minor offence of the same character—Sri Narain Singh, 47 All. 114 (118), 85 I.C. 62, 22 A.L.J. 1005, A.I.R. 1925 All. 129, 26 Cr.L.J. 446; Babulal, 37 Cr.L.J. 587 (588), 162 I.C. 308, 19 N.L.J. 120.

615. Sub-section (1)—Subordination of public servants:—The subordination of one public servant to another may arise from express enactment or from the fact that both the public servants belong to the same department, one being superior in rank to another—Narasimhaya v. Venkatasami, 18 M.L.J. 584, 8 Cr.L.J. 400.

A constable is subordinate to the Superintendent of Police—Tarinee v. Bonomali, 19 W.R. 33. The District Magistrate (in his executive capacity) is at the head of the Police, under sec. 4, Police Act, 1861, and the Police (e.g., the Superintendent of Police) is subordinate to him—Shib Singh, 27 All. 292 (293) (dissenting from 27 Cal 452); Chhote Lal v. Chhedi Lal, 45 All. 135 (136) (dissenting from 27 Cal. 452); Shibboo, 1910 P.R. 6, 11 Cr.L.J. 252. Contra—Ramasory Lal, 27 Cal. 452 and Khazan Singh v. Kirpa Singh, 4 Lah. 130 (132). (In these two cases it has been held that although the police officers in a district are generally subordinate to the District Magistrate, the subordination contemplated by sec. 195 is not such subordination; and that sec. 195 contemplates the subordination of the police officers to some superior officer of Police). A Sub-Inspector of Police in charge of a police station is not subordinate to the Prosecuting Inspector within the meaning of this section—Mahadeo, 37 Cr.L.J. 180, 159 I.C. 932, A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 241, 1935 Cr.C. 1252. If the District Magistrate makes the complaint at the request of the police, the complaint is not improper—Saroda, 32 Cal. 180.

A Sub-divisional Magistrate passing an order under sec. 144 does so as a public servant and not as a Court. He is subordinate to the District Magistrate and not to the Sessions Judge (sec. 17). Sub-section (3) of sec. 195 does not apply to the case—Maini Misser, 6 Pat. 29, 28 Cr.L.J. 353. A commissioner appointed by the Court to examine accounts is a public servant subordinate to the Court which appointed him—Nana Khanderao, 29 Bom.L.R. 1476, 28 Cr.L.J. 1021 (1022).

The Secretary of a Municipal Board is subordinate to the Chairman—In re Seo Prasad, 1892 A.W.N. 31.

The Registrar of the Small Cause Court is subordinate to the Chief Judge of the Court—In re Goverdhandas, 27 Bom. 130.

A bailiff of the Small Cause Court is subordinate to the Judge of the S. C. Court and not to the Additional Judge of that Court. But if after the Judge has issued notice to the accused why they should not be prosecuted for causing obstruction to the bailiff under sec. 186, I. P. Code, the Judge makes over the proceedings to the Additional Judge of the S. C. Court under sec. 8 (2), Prov. S. C. Act, the latter can lodge a complaint against the accused—Ghulam Mohd, 32 Cr.L.J. 964, 132 I.C. 842, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 530 (532).

There can be no doubt that the Civil Court peon is a subordinate of the District Judge—Ramesh Chandra v. Hari Mohan, 42 C.W.N. 531.

A Naib-Nazir is subordinate to the Nazir, to the District Judge and probably to the Munsiff who under the order of the District Judge is in charge of the nazarat department but he is not subordinate to the Subordinate Judge. So, the Subordinate Judge has no authority to lodge a complaint relating to resistance to the Naib-Nazir in attaching the property of the judgment-debtor in an execution case in his Court. His complaint is inadequate to remove the bar to cognizance of an offence under sec. 186, I. P. C., presented by the provisions of sec. 195 (1) (a)—Thakur Prasad, 37 Cr.L.J. 104, 159 I.C. 503, 1936 Cr.C. 103, 16 P.L.T. 808, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 74. But the position has since been altered by an amendment of Rule 24, at page 16, Vol. I of the Patna High Courts General Rules and Circular Orders (Civil)—Bayrang Marwari v. Durga Prasad, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 31 (32), 1936 P.W.N. 747, 166 I.C. 870, 38 Cr.L.J. 292, 9 R.P. 350, 3 B.R. 226.

A Station House Officer is not subordinate to the Taluk Magistrate—Velayudam, 6 Mad. 146. The Police is not subordinate to the Honorary Magistrate—Baldeo, 1895 A.W.N. 152; Tarnee v. Bonomah, 19 W.R. 33; or to the Township Magistrate—Mizan, 1 L.B.R. 101. Neither the Police nor the Sub-Inspector is subordinate to the Sessions Judge—Reddi Rama Reddi, 27 M.L.J. 586, 15 Cr.L.J. 612. A village Munsiff or village Magistrate is not subordinate to a Sub-Magistrate—Narasimhaya v. Venkatasami, 18 M.L.J. 584 (dissenting from Periannan, 4 Mad 241); Pallikudathan v. Budda Goundan, 37 Mad 229 (231).

Public servant concerned:—The proper construction of the words "public servant concerned" is the public servant holding for the time being the office held by the public servant to whom the false information was given—Jot Narain v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Sind 164, 40 Cr.L.J. 659, 182 I.C. 412, I.L.R. 1939 Kar 556, 12 R.S. 7. The object of sec. 195 (1) (a), Cr. P. C., appears to be that the person best qualified to decide whether a complaint should or should not be made should have a power to make the complaint. Whether a complaint should, or should not be made depends on circumstances existing at the time and it has to be decided whether a complaint should or should not be made and it is therefore the person who is then on the spot who can decide and not the person who originally passed the order who may be in some other district where he cannot possibly say whether a complaint should or should not be made—Chhedi Singh, A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 160, 1939 O.L.R. 206, 180 I.C. 769, 40 Cr.L.J. 508, 1939 O.W.N. 337, 1939 A.Cr.C. 68, 1939 O.A. 319, 11 R.O. 260, 1939 A.W.R. (C.C.) 71. Therefore the successor of a public servant can also make a complaint under clause (a) of this section—Patel, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 292, 35 Cr.L.J. 131, 146 I.C. 653, 1933 Cr.C. 1123; Jot Narain v. Emp., supra; Chhedi Singh, supra. Section 195 (1) (a), Cr. P. C., does not authorise a superior authority to lodge a complaint under sec. 186, I. P. C., when the public servant concerned has dropped the matter and the aggrieved person is not a public servant—Madhu Sudhan v. Haridas, 41 C.W.N. 1011 (1013). The complaint prescribed in sec. 195 (1) (a), Cr. P. C., is a public duty and responsibility, and must not be mistaken for a personal privilege; and there is nothing in the ruling in Kantir Missir v. Emp., A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 98, 1930

Cr.C. 74, 117 I.C. 37, 30 Cr.L.J. 710, 11 P.L.T. 88 against a successor in office of the public servant to whom information was given making the complaint under sec. 182, J. P. Code: see also sec. 18, General Clauses Act (X of 1897), and sec. 559 (1), Cr. P. Code. But what was ruled in that case was that as information had been given to the officer in charge of the police station, junior Sub-Inspector who had investigated the case had no power to make a complaint under sec. 182, I. P. C., as he was not a public servant to whom the information had been given—Govt. Advocate, Bihar v. Kumar Singh, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 83 (88), 16 Pat. 571, 1937 P.W.N. 937, 19 P.L.T. 51.

615A. Clause (a):—Under sec. 195 (1) (a), Cr. P. C., the complaint should be filed by the officer concerned or by some officer to whom he is subordinate and not by an officer who is himself subordinate to him—Sher Mohammad v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 15, 41 Cr.L.J. 368, 186 I.C. 703.

The accused filed an application before the Sub-divisional Magistrate making certain allegations and asking for an order against certain persons under sec. 144, Cr. P. Code. The Magistrate sent the petition to the Police for a report on receipt of which he wrote a long order concluding as follows:—"I come accordingly to the finding that the petitioner's information is false, and I direct that he shall give bail of Rs 200 to answer a charge under sec. 182, Indian Penal Code, before the Second Officer on January 16, 1935." The Second Officer tried and convicted him under sec. 182, I. P. Code. Held that in view of sec. 195 (1) (a), cognizance could only be taken on the complaint in writing of the Sub-divisional Magistrate, that there was no such complaint, that cognizance by that Magistrate under sec. 190 (c) upon his own knowledge or suspicion that an offence had been committed, would not be sufficient in law and that the only course open to the Sub-divisional Magistrate in the circumstances was to prefer his complaint to the District Magistrate—Mosafir, 36 Cr.L.J. 904, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 356, 156 I.C. 310, 16 P.L.T. 440. See also Ram Prasad Dube, 41 Cr.L.J. 787.

A Sub-divisional Officer has no power to take cognizance of a case under sec. 188, I. P. C., when the offence complained of was disobedience to his own order under sec. 144, Cr. P. Code. He must make a complaint under this section—Lokendra Lal Pal Choudhury, 37 Cr.L.J. 936, 164 I.C. 434, 61 C.L.J. 579, 39 C.W.N. 1053; Veerappa Moopan, 40 Cr.L.J. 752, 183 I.C. 240, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 496, 49 M.L.W. 474, 1939 M.W.N. 340, (1939) 1 M.L.J. 573, 12 R.M. 263; Ram Prasad Dube, 41 Cr.L.J. 787.

Resistance to Civil Court peons:—The process-server should not make a direct complaint to the Criminal Court in view of the provisions of para 1057 of the Burma Courts Manual, which require a report to the Civil Court concerned, and an enquiry by that Court, and then preferably a complaint by the Court itself under sec. 195 (1) (a), Cr. P. Code. It is only where that is not possible that the Court will direct the process-server to make a complaint, giving him a letter addressed to the Magistrate, informing the Magistrate that the complaint is being made by the direction of the Court, and that the Court has prima facie satisfied itself before permitting the complaint to be made—Maung Po Shern, 40 Cr.L.J. 845 (846), 183 I.C. 791, 1939 Rang.L.R. 445, 12 R.R. 116, A.I.R. 1939 Rang 320.

The Calcutta High Court has made the following rules:—

When a process-serving peon or other officer in execution or service of any process entrusted to him (e.g., writ of attachment, warrant of arrest, etc.) is resisted or obstructed by the judgment-debtor or any other person; or when property duly attached or the person duly arrested is illegally snatched away from his custody by any of them, he shall immediately send a report to the Court concerned from the place of occurrence. If the Court upon a consideration of the facts disclosed in the process-server's declaration or affidavit (when called for), supplemented, if necessary, by the examination on oath of the process-server or any other person alleged to have been present at the occurrence, is of opinion that a criminal complaint is necessary in the interest of justice, it shall make a complaint accordingly, carefully observing the provisions of sec. 195 (1) (a) and 476 Cr. P. Code. Vide clauses (1) and (2) of paragraph 262 of the Civil Rules and Orders issued by the authority of the Calcutta High Court (Appellate Side), Vol. I.

Where the process-server presented a report of the occurrence on the back of the warrant to the Civil Court, and did not make any allegation either orally or in writing to a Magistrate and the Civil Court merely reported the matter to the Police, held that neither that, nor the Police challan, did constitute a complaint which was necessary for taking cognizance of an offence under sec. 186, I. P. C.—Darkhan, 29 Cr L.J. 645, 110 I.C. 101, A.I.R. 1928 Lah 827. See also Ram Singh, 36 Cr L.J. 714 (716), 155 I.C. 421, 16 P.L.T. 295 (S.B.), in this connection.

Where accused persons are alleged to have obstructed an amin attaching property in execution of a warrant of attachment, no complaint of the Court is necessary for an offence under sec. 186, 379 or 424, I. P. Code—Rengaswami Thevan v Emp, 1939 M.W.N. 886.

In execution of a decree some property was attached and was given into the custody of K. Somehow or other there was a scuffle between K on the one hand and the accused on the other. The parties filed complaints against each other in the Criminal Court. K's complaint against the accused was under secs 323, 352 and 504, I. P. C. Held that the mere fact that those facts constituted an offence under sec. 188 or sec. 186, I. P. C., does not render the complaint of K illegal. None of the sections on which the complaint was based is referred to in sec 195, Cr P C., and so it was not necessary for the complainant to move the Court which passed the decree to file a complaint against the accused—Raghubar Dayal Gupta v Khusekar Prasad, 36 Cr L.J. 594, 154 I.C. 857, 1935 O.W.N. 370, 1935 O.L.R. 206, 7 R.O. 514, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 331, 1935 Cr C 669.

Section 182, I. P. C., is one of the sections mentioned in this clause. Under this section no cognizance can be taken of an offence under sec 182, I. P. C., except on the complaint in writing of the public servant before whom the false information is given or some other public servant to whom he is subordinate. Where the false information was given to the Superintendent of Police but no complaint in writing was made to the Magistrate either by the Superintendent of Police or by any other officer to whom the Superintendent of Police was subordinate, the trying Magistrate was not the proper complainant under this section in respect of that information, although he tried the case and found the information to be a false one—Abdul Hakim, A.I.R. 1932 Cal 511, 59 Cal 334, 1932 Cr C 440, 138 I.C. 551, 33 Cr L.J. 631. Where the accused submitted a petition to the District Magistrate in which they enumerated their grievances from which the villagers under a Union Board were suffering on account of various illegal and unauthorised acts of the President and Secretary of the Union Board and prayed for redress by an enquiry by himself or by the Sub-divisional Officer and the District Magistrate sent the petition for disposal to the Sub-divisional Magistrate who asked the Circle Officer to enquire and report about the allegations, directed the issue of the notice on the accused to show cause why they should not be prosecuted under sec. 182, I. P. C., on receipt of the Circle Officer's report and summoned the accused to stand their trial under sec. 182, I. P. C., without any further enquiry although they appeared and showed cause stating that there had not been a proper enquiry into the allegations and an enquiry might be made by the Sub-divisional Magistrate himself or by the Sub-deputy Magistrate, held that the Sub-divisional Magistrate had no jurisdiction to take cognizance of a case under sec. 182, I. P. C., against the accused without a written complaint by the District Magistrate or some other public servant to whom that officer was subordinate and that the Sub-divisional Magistrate should have enquired into the allegations made by accused judicially when they submitted a naraji petition against the report of the Circle Officer before taking any action under sec 182, I. P. Code—N Mukherjee v. Ramkinkar Palit, 67 C.L.J. 583.

The petitioner made a complaint before the Sub-divisional Magistrate who referred it for inquiry and report by the police. The police reported the case to be maliciously false, recommended the prosecution of the petitioner under sec. 211, I. P. C., and preferred a complaint of that offence against the petitioner. The Magistrate, however, directed the police to submit a report for prosecution under sec. 182, I. P. C., which was done. Held that this clause was a bar to the complaint by the police of an offence under sec. 182, I. P. C., since he was not the public servant or the superior of such public servant to whom a false information punishable under sec. 182, I. P. C., was given, that if the offence was under sec. 182, I. P. C., no complaint of it could be laid by any person except the Sub-divisional Magistrate himself and that as the complaint was one of the house-trespass, extortion and other offences and properly fell under the provisions of sec. 211, I. P. C., and as it was committed in relation to the Court of the Sub-divisional Magistrate, sec. 195 (1) (b) was a bar to cognizance being taken of it except on the complaint of that Court—Jokhi v. Mahmud, 30 Cr.L.J. 545, 115 I.C. 882, 10 P.L.T. 77, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 92, Ind. Rul. 1929 Pat. 258. See also Bachalal, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 56, 16 P.L.T. 807.

Complaint at the instance of a third party:—When the accused are alleged to have resisted and obstructed a Civil Court peon when he went to their house under the orders of the Court to execute certain writs of attachment, action in such a matter ought not ordinarily be taken at the instance of a third party—Ramesh Chandra v. Hari Mohan, 42 C.W.N. 531 (533). See also Madhu Sudhan v. Haridas, 44 C.W.N. 1011.

Enquiry:—The law does not require that proceedings with a view to the making of a complaint under sec. 195 (1) (a), Cr. P. C., should be in the form of a public judicial enquiry. Some enquiry before making a complaint is of course desirable, but that enquiry ought to be of a purely administrative character and need not be made in public; nor need the statements of witnesses be recorded on oath—Ramesh Chandra v. Hari Mohan, 42 C.W.N. 531 (533).

616. Clause (b):—Section 195 (1) (b), Cr. P. C., does not relate to offences under sec. 211 generally. It relates to offences under sec. 211, I. P. C., when such offence is alleged to have been committed in or in relation to any proceedings in any Court—Dharamdas Hiranand v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 12 (14), A.I.R. 1938 Sind 213, 178 I.C. 218, 11 R.S. 82. Therefore when an offence is not committed in or in relation to any Court, a complaint of such an offence can be made by a private individual—Raji v. Allaudin M. Samo, I.L.R. 1939 Kar. 388, 11 R.S. 183, 40 Cr.L.J. 461, 160 I.C. 650, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 65. See also Bechu Singh v. Tribeni Sah, 40 Cr.L.J. 157, 179 I.C. 167. The same principle of law seems to apply, in respect of complaints regarding other offences mentioned in sec. 195 (1) (b), Cr. P. Code.

The power of a Court to complain in respect of offences mentioned in clause (b) is not restricted, as under clause (c), to the parties before it—Syed Khan, 3 Rang. 303 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 321, 27 Cr.L.J. 4, 91 I.C. 36. Nothing in this clause confines the power of the Court to persons who are parties to the proceedings. It is clause (c) which confines the power of the Court to parties to the proceedings and there it is in respect of documents and not of oral evidence—U Kadoe, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 369 (372), 37 Cr.L.J. 1008, 164 I.C. 769, 1936 Cr.C. 771. The Court has, therefore, jurisdiction to prosecute a person who causes a false complaint to be lodged, though he was not a party to a proceeding before it—Kazlar Rahaman, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 515, 31 Cr.L.J. 1055, 1930 Cr.C. 859; Akhla Kulla, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 671, 52 Cr.L.J. 149, 1930 Cr.C. 1063, 31 Cr.L.J. 1145, 127 I.C. 65; Ivor Henry Bridgnell, 38 Cr.L.J. 1002 (1005), 170 I.C. 891, 10 R.S. 81, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 193. Moreover, it is to the taking cognizance of the offence that sec. 195 (1) (b) and (c), Cr. P. C., refer to; it is the offence, not the offender which is referred to—Ivor Henry Bridgnell, supra.

In the case of an offence to which reference is made in sec. 195, clause (b), a Court taking cognizance of such an offence when that offence has been committed in, or in relation to any proceeding in any Court, or a Court taking cognizance of a criminal conspiracy to commit such an offence or of abetment or attempt to commit such an offence, cannot do so unless sanction has been given not only to the factum but to cover the case of each person who is charged with having committed it—Ram Bilas v. Lachmi Narain, 45 All 140 (141), A.I.R. 1923 All. 84, 71 I.C. 684, 24 Cr.L.J. 220, 20 A.L.J. 904. See see Note 614B and 614C.

Where the facts disclose an offence mentioned in this clause (e.g., an offence under sec. 193, I. P. C., committed in relation to a proceeding in Court), no Court can take cognizance of the offence without a complaint by the Court before which the offence was committed, as required by this section, and the complainant cannot evade this condition by electing to name the offence under a different name which does not require a complaint by Court—Perianna v. Vengu Ayyar, 56 M.L.J. 203, 30 Cr.L.J. 322 (325); Ravanappa, 55 Mad. 343, 33 Cr.L.J. 361 (362); Prasulla v. Harendra, 44 Cal 970 (974); Subramania v. Sivamikanu, 34 Cr.L.J. 800, 144 I.C. 519, Ind. Rul. 1933 Mad. 424, 37 M.L.W. 547, 1933 Cr.C. 566, 1933 M.W.N. 217, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 413. For, if this were allowed to be done, the provision of sec. 195 might just as well be wiped out—Prasulla v. Harendra, supra.

False evidence:—In making a complaint against a witness for perjury the Court should remember that the statement must be intentionally false in order to justify a prosecution. Moreover, the statement alleged to be false must have a bearing upon the matter in issue. When the question is neither material to the issue in the case nor goes to the credit of the witness, he is not liable to prosecution—Sheodahn v. Bandhan, 2 A.L.J. 836, 3 Cr.L.J. 45; Chatur Jethaji, 34 Cr.L.J. 33, 104 I.C. 619, 34 Bom.L.R. 1247, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 551, 1932 Cr.C. 783, Ind. Rul. 1933 Bom. 1; Ghansamdas, A.I.R. 1932 Sind 412, 1933 Cr.C. 1545; Khajumal, 14 S.L.R. 69; Maharaja Prosad, 21 A.L.J. 673, 24 Cr.L.J. 779; Jagat, 31 Cr.L.J. 179, 120 I.C. 687, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 55, 1930 Cr.C. 23; Monohar, 28 Cr.L.J. 310, 100 I.C. 531, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 515. But it is to be noticed that it is not necessary that in a case of giving false evidence before a Court of Justice, the false evidence should always be concerning a question material to the decision of the case before the Court in which the evidence was given. It is sufficient if the false evidence is intentionally given, that is to say, if the person knowing the statements to be false, makes them advisedly and with the intent of deceiving the Court or by leading it to believe that what he stated was true. If the false evidence does not bear directly on the material issue in the case before the Court in which the false statement was made, being only relative or incidental to the matters directly in controversy before the Court, that is a matter which should be taken into consideration in fixing the sentence to be passed on the accused placed on his trial. [See in this connection cases of Babu Ram, 25 All 509, 1901 A.W.N. 115, 1 A.L.J. 236, 1 Cr.L.J. 434; Mahomed Hossain, 16 W.R. 37; and Shib Prosad Giri, 19 W.R. 69] Jugal Chandra v. Emp., 42 C.W.N. 31; Behari Lal Sud v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 204 (205), 185 I.C. 588, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 529, 41 P.L.R. 652, where it has also been held that a replication filed by a party under Order 6, Rule 5, C. P. C., which is rejected by the Court but placed on record, can be used as a previous statement to contradict the statements made by the petitioner in Court under sec. 145, Evidence Act for the purposes of his prosecution under sec. 193, I. P. Code.

A prosecution for perjury ought not to be made while the principal proceeding in respect of which the perjury is said to have been committed is pending. If such a prosecution is to be started, it ought to be started after the principal proceeding has terminated—In re Vasudev, 24 Bom.L.R. 1153. However exasperating it may be when a witness resiles from a true statement made in the committing Magistrate's Court, the Sessions Judge should not issue notice to show cause while the proceedings are pending. The witness cannot then be considered a free witness; he is giving evidence under fear and duress and it may not only influence and invalidate his testimony but it may affect the testimony of witnesses who come later. The question of the witness's prosecution for perjury can be considered after—Samero, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 140 (141). A complaint for perjury should not be made by the Court in cases where it will have to determine the question by merely weighing the evidence on both sides—Padarath v. Ratan Singh, 5 P.L.J. 23, 1 P.L.T. 458, 21 Cr.L.J. 145. A prosecution for perjury in respect of a piece of evidence should not generally be made where the trial Court and the Appellate Court have taken different views as to its credibility—Hirulal v. Lila Mahton, 3 P.L.T. 60. It would almost be a judicial scandal if a witness whose evidence was accepted by the Appellate Court is prosecuted by the trial Court for perjury on the strength of the very testimony which had been disbelieved by the Appellate Court—Appaji Goundan, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 779, 1939 M.W.N. 471, 1939 M.Cr.C. 140. The fact that the trial Judge felt himself able to accept the statement of witnesses as true is a point to be taken in their favour when the question of prosecuting these persons for perjury arises, on their being disbelieved by the Appellate Court. Prosecutions for perjury should not be launched unless there is some proof likely at least to satisfy a Court that the statements made by the persons charged are false statements. It is not enough to prove that ordinary village witnesses coming forward in a communal case decided amongst themselves what they were to say and how they were to say it—Yar Mohamed v. Bansi, 34 Cr.L.J. 105, 141 I.C. 146, A.I.R. 1932 All. 674, 1932 Gr.C. 826, Ind. Rul. 1933 All. 51. See also Debi Datt, 10 I.C. 816, 26 A.L.J. 1327, 29 Cr.L.J. 284, A.I.R. 1928 All. 548. Where two Courts have taken different views of facts, sanction for prosecution should not be granted—Hira Lal v. Lila, 65 I.C. 360, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 102, 3 P.L.T. 342; Rahamat Ali, 32 Cr.L.J. 652, 131 I.C. 95, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 404, 1931 Cr.C. 644, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 367.

A prosecution for offences under secs 193, 467 and 471, I. P. C., in respect of a handnote sued upon may be made even though the suit was compromised after it was heard in part—Dulloo, 49 Cal. 551, 23 Cr.L.J. 138.

Prima facie persons who give false evidence which may result in the conviction of an innocent person for murder ought to be tried for offences they have committed. Their relationship to the accused, their age, the circumstances under which they came to give false evidence, are matters to be considered by the Magistrate before whom they will appear—Maromma, 34 Cr.L.J. 92, 140 I.C. 756, 1933 M.W.N. 100, 1933 Cr.C. 157, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 125, Ind. Rul. 1933 Mad. 43. But when the prospects of a conviction are very much more remote it is seldom desirable to launch criminal prosecution lightly against every witness who may be suspected of having departed from the truth in some particular—Nawalal, 37 Cr.L.J. 193 (195), 159 I.C. 817, 2 B.R. 112, 8 R.P. 313, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 162, 1936 Cr.C. 254; Mahalinga, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 1044, 37 Cr.L.J. 15, 158 I.C. 140, 1935 Cr.C. 1287, 69 M.L.J. 783.

In considering the question whether a prosecution for perjury shall or shall not be made, it is a safe rule to give the witness a locus penitentiae and an opportunity to correct himself, and if he subsequently corrects his false statement, prosecution is inadvisable—Hukum Chand, 29 Cr.L.J. 679, 110 I.C. 231, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 862, 10 A.I.Cr.R. 518; In re Pandu, 19 Bom.L.R. 61, 18 Cr.L.J. 480 (481), 19 I.C. 320; Maharaj Prosad, 21 A.L.J. 673, 24 Cr.L.J. 779; Ghanshamdas, 35 Cr.L.J. 519 (523), 147 I.C. 1019, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 412, 1933 Cr.C. 1545.

It cannot be held that in the case of a person who alleges that he has been defamed and has not been a party to the proceedings at all, cannot move a Magistrate to entertain a complaint in respect of defamation without moving the Court in which the statement was made to make a complaint under sec. 195, Cr. P. C., in respect of perjury committed before it. No doubt the Courts should be slow to admit complaints of defamation where the circumstances are such that the accusation is really one of perjury in which the Court should be moved to make a complaint. But this will not apply where the party who alleges that he has been injured was not a party to the proceedings at all, and, the complainant is asking for the redress of a personal grievance—Chotelal v. Phulechand, 38 Cr.L.J. 775 (776), 169 I.C. 429, 10 R.N. 1, I.L.R. 1937 Nag. 425, 20 N.L.J. 33, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 138.

Before action can be taken on an application under sec. 476, read with sec. 195, Cr. P. C., against a person for having fabricated evidence by making a false entry there must be some satisfactory evidence that the entry was fabricated for the purpose of being used in proceedings though actual use is not necessary—Gopaldas Khetriya v. Jnanendra Nath Dawn, 40 Cr.L.J. 450 (453), 180 I.C. 586, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 677.

617. Contradictory statements:—The mere fact that a witness made contradictory statements in the course of a deposition is not a ground of prosecution for giving false evidence; in such a case the Court should consider if the contradiction may possibly be due to some confusion or mistake or some other cause—Keramat Ali, 55 Cal. 1312, 30 Cr.L.J. 221 (222), 113 I.C. 842, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 862. Nor should the Court make a complaint on the mere fact that the witness made two contradictory statements, one before the committing Magistrate and another at the trial before the Sessions Judge. The Court should consider how the contradiction has happened and why the witness in the trial has resiled from his statement made before the committing Magistrate. Where the witness had made false statements before the Committing Magistrate but deposed truly at the trial, the High Court refused to prosecute—Tripura Shankar, 37 Cal. 618, 14 C.W.N. 767, 6 I.C. 476, 11 Cr.L.J. 360; Pandu, 39 I.C. 320, 18 Cr.L.J. 480, 19 Bom.L.R. 61; Allah Wasaya, 112 I.C. 468, 29 Cr.L.J. 1014; Bajrao, 34 Cr.L.J. 649, 143 I.C. 747, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 179, 1933 Cr.C. 693, Ind. Rul. 1933 Nag. 182; Jani, 36 Cr.L.J. 10, 152 I.C. 254, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 155, 1935 Cr.C. 1147; Pragi, 37 Cr.L.J. 885, 164 I.C. 107, 1936 O.L.R. 429, 9 R.O. 34, 1936 O.W.N. 763, A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 373, 1936 Cr.C. 982. It is in the interests of the Crown as well as in the interests of justice that prosecution witnesses should be free to tell the truth to the Court of Session irrespective of whatever evidence they may have given in the Court of the Committing Magistrate. To compel prosecution witnesses merely to repeat in the Court of Session the evidence they gave before the Committing Magistrate on pain of being prosecuted for an offence of perjury would be to deprive the Court of Session of an opportunity of getting at the true facts of the case and would not be conducive to the interests of justice—Pragi, supra.

It should not be laid down as a general rule that a witness is exempt from prosecution with regard to a statement made in the Sessions Court, differing from a previous statement made by him before the Committing Magistrate, even though the subsequent statement is considered to be true. There may be good reasons for not prosecuting the witness in many cases, should the subsequent statement be held to be true, but where it is doubtful which of the two statements is true and where it may be held with some degree of certainty that the subsequent statement is the false one, a complaint for giving false evidence should, as a rule, be made. Other matters, it is true, should of course be considered, such as any compulsion that may have been brought to bear upon the witness in making either of the statements but where no compulsion has been shown, the Court should not refrain from making a complaint except for good reasons—Local Government v. Jit Singh, 36 Cr.L.J. 935, A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 145, 156 I.C. 257. Although there is no provision of law that the Magistrate is bound to give an opportunity to the witness to explain the contradictory statements, still the Magistrate may consider the explanation given by the witness and see if the statements are reconcilable—Kamins Kumar, 33 C.W.N. 664 (666), 31 Cr.L.J. 373. Before making a complaint, it would be proper to allow the person, against whom the complaint is made, an opportunity to explain the statements fully and to state the circumstances under which they came to be made—Iqbal v. W'layal, 17 Cr.L.J. 93 (All.); Fazal Din, 3 Lah.L.J. 442; Surendra, 35 Cr.L.J. 785, 142 I.C. 866, 1933 A.L.J. 1623, A.I.R. 1934 All. 385, 1934 Cr.C. 464. Unless the two contradictory statements are so absolutely opposed as to exclude the possibility of any hypothesis than that of prisoner's guilt, there can be no conviction upon an alternate charge—Bhagirathi, 26 Cr.L.J. 1401 (1404), 89 I.C. 713, A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 141. If he gives an explanation for his contradiction, and says that he did not contradict himself wilfully or out of malice, the Court should consider that explanation before directing prosecution. See Keramat Ali, supra. If the explanation given by the accused is unsatisfactory and cannot reconcile the two statements, the Court should make a complaint for his prosecution. Every allowance should be made for forgetfulness and for confusion, but in a proper case the Court should take action. It cannot, however, be held that every witness should be allowed one lie and one contradiction, that every witness should be allowed to say one thing and then another and then say it is "a mere contradiction. I cannot be convicted of perjury"—Gopaldas Khetriya v. Jnanendra Nath Dawn, 40 Cr.L.J. 450 (452), 180 I.C. 586, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 677.

A Court should not prosecute merely where there is a discrepancy between a statement made on oath and a statement made under circumstances in which the witness is not bound to state the truth; e.g., where a person made two contradictory statements, one in a petition in which he is not bound to state the truth, and another in a deposition—In re Chennamma, 2 Weir 169.

Where a person made two contradictory statements, one before a Magistrate and another before a Subordinate Judge, it is necessary that there should be a proper complaint for prosecution on each branch of the alternative, i.e., one complaint from the Magistrate and another from the Subordinate Judge. The Court to which both Courts are subordinate may properly make the complaint where one Court is not subordinate to the other—Purshottam, 45 Bom. 834 (F.B.), 23 Bom.L.R. 1, 22 Cr.L.J. 241. When a person makes one statement in the Committing Magistrate's Court, and contradicts it in the Sessions Court, the Sessions Judge can make a complaint in the alternative that one or other of the statement must be false. Even if in such a case the statement made before the Sessions Court is true, the Sessions Judge's complaint is not illegal, because the false statement made before the Magistrate in the committal stage which eventuates in a trial must be deemed to have been made "in relation to" the trial—Ganesh Mull, 61 M.L.J. 914, 1931 Cr.C. 1034 (1035); Narayanan v. Palaniappa, 37 I.C. 897, 1917 M.W.N. 141; Athi Ambalagan, 33 Cr.L.J. 519, 137 I.C. 761, 55 Mad. 536, Ind. Rul. 1932 Mad 451, 35 M.L.W. 803, 1932 M.W.N. 724, 1932 Cr.C. 469, A.I.R. 1932 Mad 494, 62 M.L.J. 717, not following Rami Reddi v. Public Prosecutor, 15 Cr.L.J. 612, 27 M.L.J. 686, 1914 M.W.N. 793, 25 I.C. 527, 27 M.L.J. 586. It is neither advisable nor necessary for the Committing Magistrate to direct his prosecution also—Athi Ambalagan, supra. Similarly, a special Tribunal has jurisdiction to make a complaint under this section both as regards the statement in its own Court and the statement before the Magistrate under sec. 164, Cr. P. C.—Brahm Datt, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 981.

Where the alleged false statements were not set out in the order of sanction (now complaint) but were specified in the application for it and also in the charge subsequently framed, held that the accused was not prejudiced by the omission in the sanction—Rakkhal Chandra, 36 Cal. 808 (813).

See Note 1241 under the heading "Expedient in the interests of justice".

618. False charge:—Where a Magistrate dismisses a complaint as false, and is of opinion that the complainant ought to be proceeded against under sec. 211, I. P. Code, the proper procedure for him to follow is to make a complaint under sec. 193, Cr. P. Code, and not to hold an inquiry into the case himself under Ch. XVIII and commit the complainant to the Court of Session for trial under sec. 211, I. P. Code—Ambika, 5 Pat. 450, 7 P.L.T. 716, 27 Cr.L.J. 987, 96 I.C. 651.

Mere acquittal of the person against whom the charge was made is not sufficient for a prosecution under sec. 211, I. P. C. There must be more than a mere acquittal; there must be a reasonable belief in the mind of the prosecuting Court that there was no foundation whatever for the original charge; there must be a belief that in instituting the criminal proceedings the accused had acted knowingly without belief in the truth of the allegations made by himself and recklessly without caring whether the allegations were true or false—Kusum v. Janaklal, 4 P.L.J. 374.

The High Court set aside the order of prosecution under sec. 211, I. P. C. directed by the Appellate Court when trying Magistrate believed the prosecution case and convicted the accused, holding that where one sees split opinions of two different tribunals it may be taken as generally a normal safe guide to suggest that definite expressions as to the malice of either party are probably somewhat undesirable—Raghupat, 66 I.C. 336, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 160, 3 P.L.T. 93, 23 Cr.L.J. 272, 1922 Pat. H.C.C. 26.

The fact that the complainant fails to prove his case is by itself not sufficient to sanction a prosecution under sec. 211, I.P. Code. It must be established satisfactorily that the complaint was made with intent to cause injury or that it was a false complaint made with the knowledge that it was false—Bhun Kahar, 6 P.L.T. 365, 26 Cr.L.J. 141, 83 I.C. 701, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 329; Chhedu Upadhya v. Emp., A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 379, 72 I.C. 76, 24 Cr.L.J. 316, 4 P.L.T. 703; Mukti Narayan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 97 (99), 1939 P.W.N. 871, 20 P.L.T. 947.

Undoubtedly it is necessary, in considering an application for an order to prosecute under sec. 476, Cr. P. C., to bear in mind that whereas had the original complainant gone to trial the entire burden of proof would have lain on the complainant, the opposite party will have to carry the whole burden should the complainant be prosecuted under sec. 211, I.P. C., and the ingredients of sec. 211, I.P. C., go a good deal further than the mere absence of proof of the guilt of the person said to have been falsely charged with an offence. The complainant must have falsely charged such person with having committed an offence, that is to say, the person must be innocent. The complainant must have known that there is no just or lawful ground for the proceeding or charge, that is to say, there is no penalty in this section for incautious or negligible acceptance of information which the complainant might have learnt by enquiry to be unreliable. Thirdly, there must have been an intention to cause injury to the person. The last can in some cases be inferred from the relation of the parties when the other two elements are established. As regards the other two ingredients, it is important to remember that there is a difference between suspicion and evidence. The prosecution will have to establish facts irreconcilable with the innocence of the accused. Prosecutions under that section are not to be undertaken lightly. If the complaint in its generality was bona fide, the fact that one accused person had been wrongly identified cannot be regarded as a ground for instituting a prosecution under sec. 211, I.P. C.—Bachu Singh v. Tribeni Sah, 40 Cr.L.J. 157 (159), 179 I.C. 167.

Where a Magistrate asked a Sub-Inspector of Police to file a complaint against a person who filed a petition of complaint before him, which on inquiry by the Police was found to be false, held that the Magistrate's action in asking the Sub-Inspector to file a complaint and in acting upon it was illegal, that the proper authority to file a complaint under sec. 182, I.P. C., was the Magistrate who was the public servant to whom the alleged false complaint was made, that there was no privity between the complainant and the Sub-Inspector who accordingly could not remove the bar under sec. 195 (1)(a), Cr. P. C., to take cognizance of the alleged offence under sec. 182, I.P. C., and that the Magistrate's order to him was not a complaint within the meaning of this section—Bachalal, 37 Cr.L.J. 324, 160 I.C. 797, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 56, 16 P.L.T. 807, 1935 Cr.C. 82.

Before making a complaint for bringing a false case, it is necessary that the case must be judicially determined; the original case must be disposed of according to law and dismissed as false before proceedings can be taken for prosecution for false charge—Gunnamongy, 3 C.W.N. 758; In re Sahiram, 5 C.W.N. 254; Munshi Isser, 14 C.W.N. 765, 11 Cr.L.J. 354; Sham Lal, 14 Cal 707 (720); In re Ningappa, 48 Bom. 360, 26 Bom.L.R. 183; Aly Mahomed, 1912 P.R. 2, 12 Cr.L.J. 539, 12 I.C. 515; *Murugan v. Code does not contemplate that when the Magistrate has received a formal complaint he need not follow the procedure set out in sec. 200, Cr. P. C., but can straightway send it to the police under sec. 156 (3), Cr. P. C., and then upon issue of B summary, make a complaint of a false charge—Radhakrishin G. Keshwani v. Emp, supra. If the original case is neither tried out nor dismissed on evidence taken, the prosecution is invalid—Ram Sarup, 4 O.C. 127. But in a later Calcutta case it has been said that there is no statutory provision requiring that the original case must be finally disposed of before a prosecution under sec. 211, I. P. C., can commence. If the prosecution is started before the original case is dismissed, it is at most an irregularity curable by sec. 537—Gangadhar, 43 Cal 173 (177).

Where the Magistrate, without examining the complainant on oath though he had a formal complaint in writing before him, sent the case direct to the police for investigation under sec. 156 (3), Cr. P. C., and, when it was returned by the Sub-Inspector with a recommendation for a B summary, made a complaint against him under sec. 211, I. P. C., without giving any notice to him of the complaint to be made against him, held that the procedure was not legal and that the complaint must be withdrawn—Radhakrishin G. Keswani, 40 Cr.L.J. 499, 180 I.C. 436, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 78.

619. False claim:—Before prosecuting a person under sec. 219, I. P. C., for bringing a false claim, that person should be allowed an opportunity of proving his claim; a prosecution should not be made when that person has been thwarted in his attempt to establish the correctness of his claim by the unwarranted activities of the Police acting as the agent of the other party—Khairati Ram, 3 Lah.L.J. 537.

620. False charge made before police:—A complaint by the Court is necessary when the offences referred to in this clause are committed in or in relation to any proceeding in Court; no complaint is necessary when the offence is committed only in police proceedings, e.g., when the informant has made a false charge only to the Police but has not applied to the Magistrate for a judicial investigation thereof (even though the police refers the false charge to the Magistrate)—Tayebullah, 43 Cal. 1152 (1155), 20 C.W.N. 1265, 24 C.L.J. 134, 36 I.C. 845; Ramasami, 7 Mad. 292 (293); Karim Baksh, 1905 P.R. 12, 2 Cr.L.J. 66; Ganpat, Ratanlal 704 (705); Haibat Khan, 33 Cal 30 (32); Sheikh Ahmed, 5 Bur.L.T. 129 (F.B.), 13 Cr.L.J. 578 (579); Bakshi, 21 A.L.J. 805; *Bholu v. The mere fact that a Magistrate gives a "B" summary does not bring the offence in relation to which that summary is given within the provision of sec. 195 (1), Cr. P. C., for the giving of a "B" summary is merely an administrative and not a judicial act—Dharamdas Hiranand v. Emp, 40 Cr.L.J. 12, 178 I.C. 218, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 213, 11 R.S. 82; Raji v. Allaudin M. Samo, 40 Cr.L.J. 461, 180 I.C. 650, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 65, 11 R.S. 183, 1 I.R. 1939 Kar 388. It is not the intention of the Legislature that an offence under sec. 211, I. P. C., can be made the subject of complaint only by Courts or public officers. When an offence under sec. 211, I. P. C., is not committed in or in relation to any Court, a complaint of such an offence can be made by a private individual—Raji v. Alaudin, M. Samo, supra. But the Lahore High Court quashed the proceedings even in such a case for want of a complaint by the Court, holding that the words in sec. 195 (b) "in relation to any proceedings in any Court" applied to the case of a false report or a false statement made in an investigation by the police with the intention that there should, in consequence of this, be a trial in the Criminal Court—Ghulam Rasul, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 238. If, however, the informant has not only laid a false charge before the Police (sec. 211, I. P. C.), but has subsequently made a false complaint to the Court based on the same allegations and on the same charges as those contained in the charge made before the Police, and the complaint is investigated by the Court, a complaint of the Court is necessary under this section for prosecuting the complainant, even in respect of the false charge made to the police, because it was an offence committed in relation to a proceeding in Court—Brown v. Ananda Lal, 44 Cal. 650 (655), 20 C.W.N. 1347, 36 I.C. 857, 8 Cr.L.J. 25, 25 C.L.J. 59, A.I.R. 1917 Cal. 596; Samir v. Sajidur, 53 Cal. 824, 99 I.C. 118, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 95, 28 Cr.L.J. 86 (87); Tayebulladah, 43 Cal. 1152 (1155); Po Hlaing v. Ba E, 6 L.B.R. 50, 13 Cr.L.J. 565 (566); Md Yassin, 4 Pat. 323, 6 P.L.T. 457, 26 Cr.L.J. 889 (890); Rambrose, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 254, 114 I.C. 685, Ind. Gutka Rami Naidu*, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 851, 104 I.C. 625, 1927 M.W.N. 694, 39 M.L.T. 103, 26 M.L.W. 405, 53 M.L.J. 455, 28 Cr.L.J. 849, 9 A.I.Cr.R. 27; Sarup Singh, 40 Cr.L.J. 638, 181 I.C. 928, 1939 N.L.J. 210, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 226, 11 R.N. 494. (Even the fact that the false complaint was not investigated or proceeded with by the Court does not make any difference—Md. Yasin, supra; Rambrose, supra; Chukhermal, supra). The reason is that by making his complaint to the Court the informant has withdrawn the information from the category of mere police-proceedings and has raised it to the category of a proceeding in Court. This necessitates a complaint by the Court if the informant is to be proceeded against in respect of the false charge laid before the police—Muhammad Yasin, supra—Cf. Hardwar, 34 All. 522 cited below. In a more recent case, however, the Allahabad High Court has said that no complaint of the Court is necessary in respect of the false charge made before the police, because the offence of preferring the false charge is complete as soon as it is made before the police, and it cannot be said to have been committed in relation to any proceeding in Court simply because a false complaint is subsequently filed in Court—Prag Dutt, 51 All. 382, 27 A.L.J. 68, 29 Cr.L.J. 938 (939), 111 I.C. 858, A.I.R. 1928 All. 765.

A fortiori, where the accused is prosecuted not only in respect of the false charge made before the police but also in respect of the false complaint made before the Court, a complaint by the Court is essential for the prosecution—Dholiah, 54 Mad. 1018, 61 M.L.J. 770, 32 Cr.L.J. 1215 (1217), Ind. Rul. 1931 Mad. 861, 134 I.C. 813, 32 Cr.L.J. 1215, 1931 M.W.N. 513, 34 M.L.W. 329, 1931 Cr.C. 942, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 702. In such a case the prosecution will not be allowed to evade the requirement of sec. 195 by proceeding with the minor charge alone (false charge made before the Police), and abandoning the major charge (false complaint made before the Court). The principle is this: where a complaint sets forth certain facts disclosing a minor offence (e.g., offence under sec. 182, I. P. C.) as also a grave offence (e.g., offence under sec. 211, I. P. C., committed before a Court) prosecution should ordinarily be for the graver offence. If in entertaining such a complaint there is a legal bar to taking cognizance of the graver offence by reason of want of a complaint by the Magistrate, the legal consequence should not be allowed to be evaded by confining the case to the minor offence alone and disposing of it accordingly—Dholiah, supra (following Perianna v. Vengu Ayyar, 56 M.L.J. 208, 30 Cr.L.J. 322); Rambrose, 6 Rang. 578, 30 Cr.L.J. 342 (343), A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 254, 114 I.C. 685; Ramchand, A.I.R. 1929 Sind 115, 115 I.C. 313, 30 Cr.L.J. 399, 23 S.L.R. 225, Ind. Rul. 1930 Oudh 44, 1930 Cr.C. 954 where Rambrose, supra, was distinguished on the ground that the offence of dacoity in respect of which report was made at the police station was not tried by the Magistrate. But the Patna High Court holds that though the prosecution cannot proceed in respect of the major offence (sec. 211, I. P. C.) for want of a complaint by the Court, it is open to the Court to convict the accused for the minor offence under sec. 182, I. P. C.—Daroga Gope, 5 Pat. 33 (39), 6 P.L.T. 515, 26 Cr.L.J. 1269 (1271, 1272). See also Ma Paw, 8 Rang. 499 (505), 32 Cr.L.J. 202 (205), 128 I.C. 836, A.I.R. 1931 Rang. 12, Ind. Rul. 1931 Rang. 52.

If a false charge is made by A before the police against three persons B, C and

If a false charge is made by A before the police against three persons B, C

D, but the police takes criminal proceedings in Court against B and C but releases D from the charge, and B and C are acquitted by the Court, held that a complaint of the Court is necessary for the prosecution of A for making a false charge against B and C, but no complaint is necessary for the prosecution of A for making false charge against D, because there was no proceeding in Court against D, he having been released by the police before the case came to Court—Kashi Ram, 46 All. 906 (910, 912), 82 I.C. 167, 22 A.L.J. 829, 10 O. & A.L.R. 918, 25 Cr.L.J. 1239, A.I.R. 1924 All 779, dissenting from Hardwar, 34 All. 522, 16 I.C. 510, 10 A.L.J. 61, 13 Cr.L.J. 702 in which it was held that under similar circumstances, a complaint of the Court would be necessary for the prosecution of A for making false charge against D, because the charge against D led to the proceeding in Court although D was not charged in Court. The view taken in Hardwar, supra, was followed in Guruditta, 39 I.C. 692, 19 P.R. 1917 (Cr.), 20 P.W.R. 1917 (Cr.), 18 Cr.L.J. 548 which was, however, dissented from in Muhammada, 29 Cr.L.J. 605, 9 Lah. 408, 109 I.C. 685, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 259, 29 P.L.R. 515, 10 Lah.L.J. 218, 10 A.I.Cr.R. 313. The latest decision of the Lahore High Court, which was taken in Muhammad, supra, is based in Kanshi Ram, supra. See Registrar v. Kodangi, 1930 M.W.N. 1130 in this connection.

But where all that the informant did was to show cause against his prosecution and asserted that the case was a true one and that he was perfectly innocent and he never made a complaint against anybody or asked the Magistrate to investigate it, there was nothing really to justify an argument that complaint of the Magistrate would be necessary for his prosecution as there was no "narazi" petition before the Magistrate in the real sense of the term—Jamini Kanta v. Bhabanath, I.L.R. (1939) 1 Cal 318, 12 R.C. 156, 183 I.C. 384, 40 Cr.L.J. 785, A.I.R. 1939 Cal 273, 43 C.W.N. 279. See also Kangali Molla v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 647, 182 I.C. 253, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 340, I.L.R. (1939) 1 Cal. 322. But see also Bhagbat Chandra Mandal v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 644, 182 I.C. 235, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 271.

A complicated question arises if the Magistrate takes cognizance of the offence of preferring a false charge before the police, before the accused repeats the charge in Court. Thus, the accused lodged an information at a police station that a certain person has committed an offence. The police found the charge to be untrue and preferred a complaint against the accused under secs 182 and 211, I. P. Code. The Magistrate took cognizance of the offence under sec. 182 only. The accused thereupon filed a protest petition in Court stating that the offence of which he had given information to the police was true. The Magistrate then charged the accused under sec. 211, I. P. C., and committed him to the Sessions. Held, that so far as sec. 182, I. P. C., was concerned, since the Magistrate had taken cognizance of the offence before the accused had repeated the false charge in Court, the Magistrate was entitled to proceed on the complaint of the police officer, and a complaint of the Court was not necessary under sec. 195 (b), Cr. P. Code. But as regards sec. 211, I. P. C., since the Magistrate took cognizance of the offence after the accused had repeated the charge (by filing the protest petition) in Court, the Magistrate was not entitled to take cognizance of the offence without a complaint by the Court; and the committal and conviction must be set aside—Subhag Ahir, 11 Pat. 155, 12 P.L.T. 905, 33 Cr.L.J. 153 (155), Ind. Rul. 1932 Pat. 40, 135 I.C. 520, 1932 Cr.C. 269, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 152. In cases like this, the question of the date when cognizance is taken by the Magistrate upon complaint of the police (whether before or after the accused repeats his charge before the Court) is always important. If cognizance has been taken of the offence under sec. 211, I. P. C., on the complaint of the police before the informant has by an application to the Magistrate traversed the police report, repeated his charge, and asked for a judicial investigation, sec. 195 (1) (b) does not become applicable; but when no cognizance has been taken by the Magistrate of the offence under sec. 211, the application of the informant, if within the definition of a complaint, does bring sec. 195 (1) (b) into operation—Ibid. See also Daroga, A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 573, 152 I.C. 817, 36 Cr.L.J. 200, 15 P.L.T. 756, 1931 Cr.C. 1237, where all previous decisions of the Patna High Court on this point have been discussed. See also Naga Ba Shein, 35 Cr.L.J. 1259, 151 I.C. 185, 1934 Cr.C. 182, A.I.R. 1934 Rang 21; Gonour, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 505, 31 Cr.L.J. 1200, 127 I.C. 287, 1930 Cr.C. 533. But see Samir v. Sajidur, 53 Cal. 824, 28 Cr.L.J. 86 (87), where the Magistrate took cognizance of the offence of making a false charge before the Police (sec. 211, I. P. C.), before the accused repeated the charge in Court, but still it was held that the offence of making a false charge before the Police required the complaint of the Court. In a very recent case the Calcutta High Court, however, took the view expressed in Subhag Ahir, supra, and held that the complaint of the Magistrate was not necessary to the maintainability of the prosecution in a case where the police reported the case to be a false one and prayed for the prosecution of the informant under sec. 211, I. P. C., and the Magistrate actually took cognizance of the case before the informant appeared on the scene and filed a naraji petition—Jamini Kanta v. Bhabanath, 43 C.W.N. 279, I.L.R. (1939) 1 Cal. 318, 12 R.C. 156, 183 I.C. 384, 40 Cr.L.J. 785, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 273. See also Jamuna Dasi alias Furu Dasi, Ref. No. 195/38 decided by the Calcutta High Court on 12.12.38 (Unreported). See also Dharamdas Hiranand v. Emp., A.I.R. 1938 Sind 213, 178 I.C. 218, 40 Cr.L.J. 12 where it has been laid down that sec. 195 (1)(b) does not relate to offences under sec. 211, I. P. C., generally but relates to offences under sec. 211, I. P. C., when such offence is alleged to have been committed in or in relation to any proceedings in any Court. So when "B" summary was given by a Sub-divisional Magistrate as an administrative officer and not as a Court, the giving of a "B" summary cannot be held to have been a proceeding in his Court necessitating his complaint.

Opportunity to prove the case:—A Magistrate is not justified in issuing process under sec. 182, I. P. C., against the accused without inquiring into and disposing of his naraji petition pending at the time—Charles Johns, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 550, 36 C.W.N. 794, 1932 Cr.C. 550, 139 I.C. 217, 33 Cr.L.J. 724; Munshi Isser, 14 C.W.N. 765; N. Mukherjee v. Ramkimkar Palit, 67 C.L.J. 583; Bhagbat Chandra Mandal v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 644, 182 I.C. 235, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 271; Kangali Molla v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 647, 182 I.C. 253, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 340, I.L.R. (1939) 1 Cal. 322. Ordinarily a person ought to be given an opportunity to show cause before he is ordered to be prosecuted under sec. 211, I. P. C.—Sheikh Abdulla, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 287, 35 C.W.N. 1210, 1932 Cr.C. 213, 137 I.C. 133, 33 Cr.L.J. 406. In this case the naraji petition was filed after process had been issued against the accused under sec. 211, I. P. Code. See also Lalji v. Girdhari, 5 C.W.N. 106. But if the Magistrate examines the complainant and his witnesses and comes to the conclusion that the charge is false, he can then proceed under sec. 476, Cr. P. Code. When the case is disposed of by the Magistrate under sec. 253, Cr. P. C., there is nothing before him into which he should make any further enquiry—Fazlar Rahaman, 31 Cr.L.J. 1055 (1058), 126 I.C. 553, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 515. Where a Magistrate dismisses a complaint after holding a preliminary enquiry under sec. 202, Cr. P. C., there is no necessity for him to give opportunity to the complainant to substantiate his case before issue of process against him under sec. 211, I. P. Code—Mahabir, 32 Cr.L.J. 1023, 133 I.C. 172, A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 302, 12 P.L.T. 710, Ind. Rul. 1931 Pat. 332, 1931 Cr.C. 723. A Magistrate is wrong in law when he issues a process against a person under secs. 211 and 182, I. P. C., without having dismissed his naraji petition which is to be treated as a complaint—Lachmi, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 383, 36 C.W.N. 15, 1932 Cr.C. 312, 33 Cr.L.J. 514, 137 I.C. 849. In all these cases the High Court set aside the order summoning accused in the preliminary stage of the proceedings. Where the nareji petition was actually dismissed by the Magistrate under sec. 203, Cr. P. C., it was finished and done with, and there was nothing further to prevent the trial proceeding—Kangali Molla v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 647, 182 I.C. 253, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 340, I.L.R. (1939) 1 Cal. 322.

It would be a better procedure if the Magistrate gives the accused an opportunity to prove the truth of his case before he is prosecuted under sec. 182, I. P. Code. But there is no provision in the law that before a Magistrate can inquire into a case

D, but the police takes criminal proceedings in Court against B and C but releases D from the charge, and B and C are acquitted by the Court, held that a complaint of the Court is necessary for the prosecution of A for making a false charge against B and C, but no complaint is necessary for the prosecution of A for making false charge against D, because there was no proceeding in Court against D, he having been released by the police before the case came to Court—Kashi Ram, 46 All. 906 (910, 912), 82 I.C. 167, 22 A.L.J. 829, 10 O. & A.L.R. 918, 25 Cr.L.J. 1239, A.I.R. 1924 All. 779, dissenting from Hardwar, 34 All. 522, 16 I.C. 510, 10 A.L.J. 61, 13 Cr.L.J. 702 in which it was held that under similar circumstances, a complaint of the Court would be necessary for the prosecution of A for making false charge against D, because the charge against D led to the proceeding in Court although D was not charged in Court. The view taken in Hardwar, supra, was followed in Guruditta, 39 I.C. 692, 19 P.R. 1917 (Cr.), 20 P.W.R. 1917 (Cr.), 18 Cr.L.J. 548 which was, however, dissented from in Muhammad, 29 Cr.L.J. 605, 9 Lah. 408, 109 I.C. 685, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 259, 29 P.L.R. 515, 10 Lah.L.J. 218, 10 A.I.Cr.R. 313. The latest decision of the Lahore High Court, which was taken in Muhammad, supra, is based in Kanshi Ram, supra. See Registrar v. Kodangi, 1930 M.W.N. 1130 in this connection.

A complicated question arises if the Magistrate takes cognizance of the offence of preferring a false charge before the police, before the accused repeats the charge in Court. Thus, the accused lodged an information at a police station that a certain person has committed an offence. The police found the charge to be untrue and preferred a complaint against the accused under secs. 182 and 211, I. P. Code. The Magistrate took cognizance of the offence under sec. 182 only. The accused thereupon filed a protest petition in Court stating that the offence of which he had given information to the police was true. The Magistrate then charged the accused under sec. 211, I. P. C., and committed him to the Sessions. Held, that so far as sec. 182, I. P. C., was concerned, since the Magistrate had taken cognizance of the offence before the accused had repeated the false charge in Court, the Magistrate was entitled to proceed on the complaint of the police officer, and a complaint of the Court was not necessary under sec. 195 (b), Cr. P. Code. But as regards sec. 211, I. P. C., since the Magistrate took cognizance of the offence after the accused had repeated the charge (by filing the protest petition) in Court, the Magistrate was not entitled to take cognizance of the offence without a complaint by the Court; and the committal and conviction must be set aside—Subhag Ahir, 11 Pat. 155, 12 P.L.T. 905, 33 Cr.L.J. 153 (155), Ind. Rul. 1932 Pat. 40, 135 I.C. 520, 1932 Cr.C. 269, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 152. In cases like this, the question of the date when cognizance is taken by the Magistrate upon complaint of the police (whether before or after the accused repeats his charge before the Court) is always important. If cognizance has been taken of the offence under sec. 211, I. P. C., on the complaint of the police before the informant has by an application to the Magistrate traversed the police report, repeated his charge, and asked for a judicial investigation, sec. 195 (1) (b) does not become applicable; but when no cognizance has been taken by the Magistrate of the offence under sec. 211, the application of the informant, if within the definition of a complaint, does bring sec. 195 (1) (b) into operation—Ibid. See also Daroga, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 573, 152 I.C. 817, 36 Cr.L.J. 200, 15 P.L.T. 756, 1934 Cr.C. 1237, where all previous decisions of the Patna High Court on this point have been discussed. Sajdur*, 53 Cal. 824, 28 Cr.L.J. 86 (87), where the Magistrate took cognizance of the offence of making a false charge before the Police (sec. 211, I. P. So when "B" summary was given by a Sub-divisional Magistrate as an administrative officer and not as a Court, the giving of a "B" summary cannot be held to have been a proceeding in his Court necessitating his complaint.

Opportunity to prove the case:—A Magistrate is not justified in issuing process under sec. 182, I. P. In this case the naraji petition was filed after process had been issued against the accused under sec. 211, I. P. Code. See also Lalji v. Girdhari, 5 C.W.N. 106. But if the Magistrate examines the complainant and his witnesses and comes to the conclusion that the charge is false, he can then proceed under sec. 476, Cr. P. Code. When the case is disposed of by the Magistrate under sec. 253, Cr. P. C., there is nothing before him into which he should make any further enquiry—Fazlar Rahaman, 31 Cr.L.J. 1055 (1058), 126 I.C. 553, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 515. Where a Magistrate dismisses a complaint after holding a preliminary enquiry under sec. 202, Cr. P. C., there is no necessity for him to give opportunity to the complainant to substantiate his case before issue of process against him under sec. 211, I. P. Code—Mahabir, 32 Cr.L.J. 1023, 133 I.C. 172, A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 302, 12 P.L.T. 710, Ind. Rul. 1931 Pat. 332, 1931 Cr.C. 723. A Magistrate is wrong in law when he issues a process against a person under secs. 211 and 182, I. P. C., without having dismissed his naraji petition which is to be treated as a complaint—Lachmi, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 383, 36 C.W.N. 15, 1932 Cr.C. 312, 33 Cr.L.J. 514, 137 I.C. 849. In all these cases the High Court set aside the order summoning accused in the preliminary stage of the proceedings. Where the naraji petition was actually dismissed by the Magistrate under sec. 203, Cr. P. C., it was finished and done with, and there was nothing further to prevent the trial proceeding—Kangali Molla v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 647, 182 I.C. 253, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 340, I.L.R. (1939) 1 Cal. 322.

It would be a better procedure if the Magistrate gives the accused an opportunity to prove the truth of his case before he is prosecuted under sec. 182, I. P. Code. But there is no provision in the law that before a Magistrate can inquire into a case under sec. 182, I. P. C., on the complaint of a police officer, he must give the accused party an opportunity of proving the truth of his case, and that if the accused person is convicted without any preliminary opportunity being given to prove the truth of his case, the conviction is not illegal on that account—Baharali, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 634, 134 I.C. 919, 32 Cr.L.J. 1241, 1931 Cr.C. 834, 58 Cal. 1065; Nishikanta v. Behari, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 532, 37 C.W.N. 368, 60 Cal. 656, 1933 Cr.C. 891, 145 I.C. 660, 34 Cr.L.J. 1059. This view of law was not followed in—Shekandar, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 614, 37 C.W.N. 399, 1933 Cr.C. 1000, 145 I.C. 824, 6 R.C. 163, 34 Cr.L.J. 1077 where the High Court set aside a conviction under sec. 182, I. P. C., as the Magistrate issued warrant against the accused and, when he appeared on receipt of the warrant and filed a naraji petition, did not entertain the naraji petition and dismissed the complaint, being of opinion that he “will have ample opportunity to adduce evidence to prove his case if it is true when he enters into his defence under sec. 182, I. P. C.” This decision was not followed in Kangali Molla v. Emp, 40 Cr.L.J. 647, 182 I.C. 253, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 340, I.L.R. (1939) 1 Cal. 322, where Henderson, J., observed: “But, with greatest respect to the learned Judge, we are of opinion that the case was wrongly decided. We are unable to see how, when a complaint has been dismissed, it can be made a ground for holding up other proceedings. The learned Judge seems to have been influenced largely, because he thought the accused person would be prejudiced. In our judgment no question of prejudice can arise. If the accused person was dissatisfied with the order dismissing his complaint he could file an application in revision, and possibly get it set aside and a further enquiry ordered. But when he does not do so, no question of prejudice can arise.”

Where the Magistrate examined the petitioner on oath and gave him an opportunity of proving his case but he never appeared and produced any witnesses, it cannot be complained that his petition was not properly disposed of—Jamini Kanta v. Bhobanath, 43 C.W.N. 279, I.L.R. (1939) 1 Cal. 318, 12 R.C. 156, 183 I.C. 384, 40 Cr.L.J. 785, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 273.

See also Note 618.

“Alleged to have been committed”:—These words have been substituted for the simple word “committed” occurring in the old section. See Note 626 under clause (c), infra.

621. Proceeding in or in relation to Court:—There must be some proceeding in a Court, in relation to which the offence (e.g., fabrication of false evidence) is alleged to have been committed. Where there was no proceeding pending in any Court, but there was simply an investigation being held by the police in a certain matter during the course of which the offence was alleged to have been committed, no complaint is necessary under this section—Jagat Chandra, 26 Cal. 786 (790); Ajaib Singh, 34 P.R. 1917, 18 Cr.L.J. 893 (894). The proceeding contemplated in sec. 195 (1) (b), Cr. P. C., seems to be a judicial proceeding—Govt. Advocate, Behar v. Kumar Singh, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 83 (89), 16 Pat. 571, 1937 P.W.N. 937, 19 P.L.T. 51.

The words “in relation to” in this clause are very general and are wide enough to cover a proceeding in contemplation before a Criminal Court, though the proceeding may not have begun when the offence was committed but was begun afterwards. Therefore, sanction (complaint) is necessary for the prosecution of a person for abetment of perjury, committed on 10th April, though the main case in which the false evidence was intended to be given was not then commenced but was in contemplation and was commenced on the 15th April—In re Vasudeo, 24 Bom.L.R. 1153, 71 I.C. 253, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 105, 25 Cr.L.J. 171. The words “in relation to any proceedings in any Court” apply to the case of a false report or a false statement made in an investigation by the Police with the intention that there shall in consequence of this be a trial in the Criminal Court—Ghulam Rasul, 37 Cr.L.J. 426, 161 I.C. 316, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 238, 37 P.L.R. 738, 1936 Cr.C. 209, following Chuhermal, 30 Cr.L.J. 732, 117 I.C. 147, A.I.R. 1929 Sind 132, 1929 Cr.C. 160, 23 S.L.R. 285. Complaint of the Court is necessary not only where the offence is committed pendente lite, but also where the offence was committed in anticipation of a proceeding, and before such proceeding was brought. Thus, the accused (a debtor) made a false endorsement on a promissory note, purporting to record a payment of Rs. 1,500 towards the amount due, and the endorsement was made with the intention that it might appear as evidence of payment in case a suit was brought on the pro-note. This was done in 1912. A suit was brought thereafter in 1913 and the pro-note was filed in that suit as exhibit. Then the creditor filed a complaint in 1914 against the accused under sec. 193, I. P. Code, in respect of the forged endorsement. Held that the Magistrate was not competent to take cognizance of the case without a complaint by the Court which heard the suit in which the false endorsement was filed. Although the offence was completed before the suit was brought, still as the accused had the suit in mind when the forged endorsement was made, and as the suit was afterwards instituted, the complaint of the Court in which the suit was brought was essential—Parameshwaran, 39 Mad. 677 (683). See also Subba Reddi v. Swami Reddi, 1937 M.W.N. 870.

Where there was no proceeding, started or pending or disposed of, in which or in relation to which, an offence under sec. 193, I. P. Code is said to have been committed, no complaint is necessary—Govind Pandurang, 45 Bom. 668 (671), 22 Bom L.R. 1239, 22 Cr L.J. 49. (In this case the offence was committed in connection with a certain payment made by a judgment-debtor in satisfaction of a decree out of Court, and no execution proceeding was commenced at that time nor was any application pending to certify this payment). See Mohanraj, 32 Cr L.J. 391 (393), 32 Bom L.R. 589, 129 I.C. 581, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 337, 1930 Cr.C. 769, Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 181. But in a recent Bombay case, sec. 195 (b) has been analysed as follows:—Four cases may arise under this clause. (1) At the date when the Court takes cognizance of the offence, there may be proceedings pending in a Court, in or in relation to which the offence is committed; in such a case the complaint of the Court is necessary. (2) A second case is where a suit was pending but has been disposed of before any prosecution is launched. This is the normal case in which sec. 193 (b) comes into operation. (3) A third case is where a suit has been started in connection with which the offence was committed under sec. 193, I. P. C., but that suit has been withdrawn before any prosecution is started. In this case also, a complaint of the Court is necessary. (4) Fourthly, where an offence under sec. 193, I. P. C., is committed in respect of proceedings in a Court of law which are contemplated but which in fact are never started. In such a case sec. 195 does not apply, and the Magistrate can take cognizance of it without any complaint by the Court—Indra Chand, 56 Bom. 213, 34 Bom L.R. 294, 1932 Cr C 244 (245, 246), Ind. Rul. 1932 Bom. 219, 137 I.C. 134, 33 Cr L.J. 386, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 185. See also Ramchandra Rango v. Emp., 40 Cr L.J. 579 (587), 181 I.C. 870, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 129, 41 Bom L.R. 98, 12 R.B. 356.

For the purpose of determining whether a complaint by the Court is necessary, the crucial date is not the date when the offence is committed, but the date when the Magistrate takes cognizance of the offence—Indra Chand, supra.

This section does not apply where the fabrication of false evidence was made not with the intention of using that evidence in a Court, but only with the intention of influencing the Police in their investigation—Ismail, 52 Bom. 385, 30 Bom L.R. 330, 29 Cr L.J. 403 (406), 108 I.C. 501, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 130, 10 A.I. Cr R. 188.

A false statement made before a Magistrate in the commitment proceedings which end in a trial must be deemed to have been made in relation to the trial, and the trial Court (Sessions Judge) can, therefore, make a complaint in respect of the perjury—Ganesh Mull, 61 M.L.J. 914, 1931 Cr C 1034 (1035), 1931 M.W.N. 1061, 34 M.L.W. 377, 134 I.C. 1137, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 778. See Notes in para. 1243.

622. Court:—A Court is a place where justice is judicially ministered—Coke on Littleton, 58, quoted with approval in Sashi Bhusan v. Fulkhan, 44 C.W.N. 763.

The word "Court" in this section has a wider meaning than a Court of Justice as defined in the Penal Code. Having regard to the obvious purpose for which this section was enacted, the widest possible meaning should be given to this word, and it will include a tribunal empowered to deal with a particular matter and authorised to receive evidence on that matter in order to come to a determination (e.g., a tribunal formed under the Calcutta Improvement Act)—Nunda Lal v. Khetra Mohan, 45 Cal 585; Raghubans v. Kohil, 17 Cal 872; Seadut Ali, 11 C.W.N. 909; Bibhuti v. Khem Chand, 35 Cr.L.J. 946, 149 I.C. 363, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 457, 1934 Cr.C. 623, 61 Cal. 792, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 412, 38 C.W.N. 578. The word "Court" in this section does not necessarily mean a tribunal which can administer justice or give final decisions but it means any person or persons authorised to take evidence and to report on a matter referred to them for inquiry, e.g., the Election Commissioners appointed under Election Offences and Inquiries Act (XXXIX of 1920) or Commissioners appointed under the Public Servants Inquiries Act (XXXVII of 1850)—Bilas Singh, 47 All. 934, A.I.R. 1925 All. 737 (739); M. M. Khan, 12 Lah. 391, 32 Cr.L.J. 1252 (1253).

The word "Court" in sec. 482, Cr. P. C., and also in sec. 195, Cr. P. C., means all the members constituting the particular Court in question and that sir-panch more especially when he was not even a member of the Bench which was actually sitting, cannot in law represent the Court for the purpose of making a complaint under sec. 195, Cr. P. C., or hold an enquiry under sec. 482, Cr. P. Code—Vithal Sonaji Marath, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 275, 1936 Cr.C. 1120.

The word "Court" cannot be so construed as to include a Court in a Native State, e.g., Baroda Court—In re Muljibhai, 49 Bom. 860, 27 Bom.L.R. 1063, 26 Cr.L.J. 1456.

The expression 'Court' in sec. 195 is of wider scope than the expression 'Civil, Criminal or Revenue Court' in sec. 476. This is indicated by the word 'includes' occurring in sub-section (2) of sec. 195. Section 476 speaks of a Civil, Revenue or Criminal Court; it does not refer to any Court other than such Courts, whereas sec. 195 refers to Courts in general—Kanahiya Lal v. Bhagwan Das, 48 All. 60, 89 I.C. 1053, A.I.R. 1926 All. 30, 23 A.L.J. 956, 26 Cr.L.J. 1485; Bilas Singh, 47 All. 934, 23 A.L.J. 845, A.I.R. 1925 All. 737 (740), 89 I.C. 630, (per Sulaiman, J.; Daniels, J., contra); Babulal v. Kisansao, 41 Cr.L.J. 376, 186 I.C. 708, 1940 N.L.J. 23. Thus, the Election Commissioners are a 'Court' within the meaning of sec. 195, though they are not a "Civil, Criminal or Revenue Court" under sec. 476. They can make a complaint under sec. 195, but cannot proceed under sec. 476—Bilas Singh, supra. But the Calcutta High Court holds that although the word used in sub-section (2) of this section is 'includes,' the Court which can make a complaint under this section was restricted to the Courts detailed in sec. 476. Reading sec. 476 together with sec. 195, it is difficult to see what would be the Court contemplated by sec. 195 other than Civil, Revenue or Criminal Courts—Galstaun v. Banku Behari, 31 C.W.N. 825 (827), 28 Cr.L.J. 809. An Election Commissioner hearing disputes regarding an election held under the Madras Local Boards Act (XIV of 1920) is a Civil Court within the meaning of this section—Mahabaleswarappa v. Gopalaswami, 36 Cr.L.J. 895, 156 I.C. 311, 1935 M.W.N. 152, 41 M.L.W. 503, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 673, 58 Mad. 954. In this case Mr. Justice Cargenven observed "To summarise the effect of these decisions it would seem that we have to look, not to the source of a tribunal's authority, or to any peculiarity in the method adopted of creating it, (though it is undoubtedly a consideration that it derives its powers mediate or immediately from the Crown) but to the general character of its powers and activities. If it has power to regulate legal rights by the delivery of definitive judgments, and to enforce its orders by legal sanctions, and if its procedure is judicial in character, in such matters as the taking of evidence and the administration of the oath, then it is a Court." These observations were quoted with approval by Edgeley, J., in Hari Charan v. Kaushiki Charan, 41 C.W.N. 530 (537), A.I.R. 1910 Cal. 286, 41 Cr.L.J. 662, 186 I.C. 686, where His Lordship observed: "We are prepared to adopt the above summary so far as it goes, but, in our judgment, particular emphasis should also be laid upon what we consider to be an essential feature of all Courts, viz., that the tribunal in question must be one in which justice is judicially administered, and which is empowered to arrive at an independent judicial decision on legal evidence." See also Sashi Bhushan v. Fulkhan, 44 C.W.N. 763.

What are 'Courts' :—A Collector acting in appraisal proceedings under secs 69 and 70 of the Bengal Tenancy Act—Raghubans v. Kokil, 17 Cal 872. A Collector holding summary investigation under sec. 14 of the Patni Regulation (VIII of 1819)—Bighuti v. Khem Chand, 35 Cr L.J. 946, 149 I.C. 363, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 457, 1934 Cr.C. 623, 61 Cal. 792, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 412, 38 C.W.N. 578. A Certificate Officer acting under sec. 6 of Bengal Act I of 1895 (Public Demands Recovery Act)—Sunder v. Sital, 28 Cal. 217, (but see Dwarkanath v. Srigobinda, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 130, 112 I.C. 71); a Tahsildar holding an enquiry as to whether a transfer of names in a land register should be made or not is a Court, since he is authorised under Madras Act III of 1869 to receive evidence and to come to a judicial determination as to whether the transfer should be made or not—Munda, 24 Mad 121; a village Munsiff trying a case under Regulation IV of 1816—Venkayya, 11 Mad 375; a Registrar of the Presidency Small Cause Court of Calcutta is a Court, since he is entitled to decide the question of service of summons, and is entitled to receive evidence in order to come to a finding on that matter—Balchand v. Taraknath, 18 C.W.N. 1323, 16 Cr L.J. 151, 27 I.C. 215; the Assistant Registrar of a Co-operative Societies, to whom a dispute touching a debt due to the Society by a member is referred, is a Court—Subbi Reddi, 59 M.L.J. 229, 32 Cr L.J. 219 (221); a District Judge determining the validity of election under sec. 22, Bombay District Municipalities Act (III of 1901)—In re Nanchand, 37 Bom. 355; an Income Tax Officer—In re Punamchand, 38 Bom. 642; Nataraja, 36 Mad 72; Rup Singh, 1905 P.R. 44; a Divisional Officer hearing appeals under the Income Tax Act—Nataraja, 36 Mad 72, 23 M.L.J. 393, 16 I.C. 755, 1912 M.W.N. 1012, 13 Cr L.J. 723, 13 M.L.T. 367; a Magistrate recording a statement or confession under sec. 164, Cr. P. C.—Har Narain v. Hoshior, A.I.R. 1935 All 341, 1935 A.L.J. 228, 36 Cr L.J. 1505, 158 I.C. 1118, 1935 Cr.C. 354, 57 All 778; a tribunal constituted under the Calcutta Improvement Act (V of 1911)—Nundo Lal v. Khetra Mohan, 45 Cal. 585; a Deputy Commissioner acting under 5 (ii) or 5 (iii) of the Rules made under sec. 240 of the Punjab Municipal Act (III of 1911)—Karimulla, 22 Cr L.J. 525 (Lah.); the Commissioners appointed under the Public Servants (Inquiries) Act, XXXVII of 1850 constitute a Court—M. M. Khan, 12 Lah. 391, 32 Cr L.J. 1252 (1253), Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 1010, 134 I.C. 818, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 662, 1931 Cr.C. 924. A mukhtarkar holding an enquiry in mutation proceedings is a Revenue Court within the meaning of sec. 195 (1) (c), Cr. P. C., though his proceedings are not judicial proceedings within the meaning of sec. 196, Land Revenue Code (Bombay Act V of 1879)—Assudomal Ramanadas v. Jhamandas Hotchand, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 100 (101). A Mamlatdar holding an enquiry relating to Record of Rights, under Chapter XII of the Land Revenue Code (Bombay Act V of 1879), is a Revenue Court within the meaning of sec. 195 (1) (c), Cr. P. Code—Narayan Ganpaya Havnik, 39 Bom. 310, A.I.R. 1914 Bom. 232, 27 I.C. 147, 16 Bom. L.R. 678, 16 Cr L.J. 99. The Mamlatdar, that is, the City Survey Officer, is a Court within the meaning of this section—Ranchappa Yellappa, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 221, 38 Bom. L.R. 440, 37 Cr L.J. 814, 163 I.C. 279, 60 Bom. 756, 8 R.B. 445. The Debt Conciliation Board is a Court and has power to pass an order under this section. The Board is, however, neither a Civil nor a Revenue Court and no appeal lies from its order refusing to make a complaint under this section—Babulal v. Kisansao, 41 Cr.L.J. 376, 186 I.C. 708, 1940 N.L.J. 23. But see Hari Charan v. Kaushiki Charan, 41 C.W.N. 530 (538), 41 Cr L.J. 662, 188 I.C. 686, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 286 quoted below.

What are not Courts :—A Collector or Deputy Collector acting under the Land Acquisition Act—Durga Das, 27 Cal. 820; Ezra v. Secretary of State, 30 Cal. 36, 7 C.W.N. 249; Galstaun v. Banku Behary, 31 C.W.N. 825; a Collector to whom an application is made to replace a damaged stamp—Gour Mohan, 11 W.R. 48; a Commissioner appointed for the examination of a witness—Seadut Ali, 11 C.W.N. 909; an arbitrator appointed by the Court—Puttiah v. Veerasami, 17 M.L.J. 420; Mula Mal v. Chiranjil Lal, 1914 P.R. 3, 15 Cr.L.J. 358; a Registration Officer—Gopi Nath v. Kuldip, 11 Cal 556; Mulfat, 10 C.W.N. 222; Tulasi v. Danalakshmi, 35 Cr.L.J. 780, 148 I.C. 851, 66 M.L.J. 471, A.I.R. 1934 Mad 316, 39 M.L.W. 693, 57 Mad 682, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 262, 1934 M.W.N. 609, 1934 Cr.C. 606; a Police Officer examining a person under sec. 161 in the course of an investigation—Ismail, 11 Bom. 659; a Police patel—Itbasapa, 4 Bom. 476; an Excise Collector—Mahadeo v. Narayan, 10 C.W.N. 220; an Assistant Collector holding a departmental inquiry under the Bombay Land Revenue Code into the misconduct of a subordinate—In re Chotalal, 22 Bom. 936; a Collector in his administrative (and not judicial) capacity—Santi Lal, 42 All. 130; a Certificate Officer acting under B & O Public Demands Recovery Act—Jharu Lal v. Mohant Madan Das, 2 Pat. 257; (but see 28 Cal. 217 cited above); a Naib Tahsildar acting in his administrative capacity as Revenue officer and not in his judicial capacity as a Revenue Court—Lehna Singh, 1915 P.R. 18; a District Judge in his capacity as District Registrar—Dina Nath v. Nek Ram, 21 A.L.J. 88; a Magistrate passing order under section 144 of this Code acts as a public servant and not as a Court—Nataranjan v. Rangasami, 44 M.L.J. 328. A Member-in-charge of a Forest Department, Assam, disposing of an appeal in a case relating to that department is not a Court; for though he observed the procedure of a legal tribunal and the parties appeared before him by pleaders, still he was not possessed of the ordinary powers of a Court in the matter of issuing processes and compelling the attendance of witnesses—Daulatram, 59 Cal. 1233, 36 C.W.N. 505 (509), 33 Cr.L.J. 685, 55 C.L.J. 349, 1932 Cr.C. 337, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 390, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 504, 138 I.C. 705. A Manager in dealing with a claim under the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act (VI of 1876) is not a Court—Kewal Ram, 36 Cr.L.J. 1354 (1359), 158 I.C. 324, 16 P.L.T. 693, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 515, 15 Pat. 69. Debt Settlement Boards under the Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act (VII of 1936) must be regarded as agents of the Local Government vested with certain legal powers for a definite purpose and they cannot be regarded as "Courts" even within the wide meaning with which that expression is used in sec. 195, Cr. P. Code—Hari Charan v. Kaushiki Charan, 44 C.W.N. 530 (538), A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 186, 41 Cr.L.J. 662, 183 I.C. 686. The functions of the debt settlement tribunals in the first instance or on appeal, however admirable their purpose, do not come within the wide definition of a 'Court'. They are not Courts: they are what their names indicate, debt settlement tribunals. They are not Courts as defined in sec. 195, Cr. P. Code—Sashi Bhusan v. Fulkhan, 44 C.W.N. 763. But see Babulal v. Kisansao, 41 Cr.L.J. 376, 186 I.C. 708, 1940 N.L.J. 23, A.I.R. 1940 Nag 181, where it has been held that the Debt Conciliation Board constituted under C. P. Debt Conciliation Act (II of 1933) must be deemed to be a Court and, under sec. 24A of the aforesaid Act, all proceedings under the Act shall be deemed to be judicial proceedings.

623. What Court can make complaint:—The only Courts that can make complaints for prosecution for an offence are those before which the alleged offence was committed, or the Courts to which such Courts are subordinate—Juggut v. Kashi Chunder, 6 Cal. 440. Where a plaintiff first instituted a suit in one Court and obtained a decree for a part of this claim, and then presented a fresh claim in another Court in respect of the item disallowed by the first Court, and fraudulently obtained an ex parte decree, whereupon the first Court took action under sec. 195, Cr. P. C., and made a complaint in writing under sec. 210, I. P. Code, held that the action could only be taken by the second Court, and not by the first Court, because the institution of the second suit and the obtaining of a decree by fraudulent means could not be held to be an offence committed in relation to proceedings in the first Court—Kishun, 6 Lah. 445, 26 P.L.R. 717, 26 Cr.L.J. 1588.

As a general rule, complaints should be made by the Court before which the offence is alleged to have been committed and not by any other Court—Raja of Venkatagiri, 6 M.H.C.R. 92; Nga Aung, 9 Bur.L.T. 202, 18 Cr.L.J. 97; Karim Baksh v. Mulchand, 1879 P.R. 29; Wajid Ali, 35 Cr.L.J. 821 (826), 148 I.C. 1075, 8 Luck. 638, 11 O.W.N.

490, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 344. But a complaint may be made in the first instance by the superior Court, even though no complaint was made by the subordinate Court before which the offence was committed—Palaniappa v. Annamalai, 27 Mad 223 (225); see also Bhadesar v. Kamta, 35 All 90 (91), 11 A.L.J. 11. The offence of perjury, even though it was committed in the trial Court, may be held to have been committed in relation to the appeal in the Appellate Court, and the latter Court can make a complaint. The offender must be held to have intended that his perjury should not only influence the proceedings in the trial Court, but also subsequent proceedings might take place if either party took the matter to appeal—Ketki v. Sheo Narain, 1931 A.L.J. 829, 1931 Cr.C. 1042 (1043), A.I.R. 1931 All 706. Even, the High Court can make a complaint while exercising its powers of revision—Ponnusami v. Chokalingam, 25 M.L.J. 593, 14 Cr.L.J. 624; Palaniappa v. Annamalai, 27 Mad 223 (226); Ketki v. Sheo Narain, supra; and consequently the High Court can direct that its order in the revision case should issue as a complaint to the Magistrate—Syed Khan v. Nagoor, 3 Bur.L.J. 141, 26 Cr.L.J. 262. See also Note 617.

Where a case was originally tried by a Bench consisting of two Magistrates but a complaint of an offence under sec. 211, I P. C., was made by the Bench consisting of those two Magistrates and another, held that this was a very technical matter not requiring interference in revision on a ground of this kind—Banke Lal v. Maiku, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 430, 35 Cr.L.J. 121, 146 I.C. 638, 1933 Cr.C. 1315, 10 O.W.N. 1037.

The Court contemplated by this section is the Court before which the offence is committed. Where, therefore, the offence of perjury was committed before the Sessions Court of Ahmedabad, and subsequently a portion of the territory subject to its jurisdiction was placed under the newly constituted Sessions Court of Kaira, held that the new Sessions Judge, though having territorial jurisdiction over the accused, had no power to make a complaint regarding the offence which was committed before the Sessions Court of Ahmedabad—In re Maneklal, 28 Bom.L.R. 1296, 28 Cr.L.J. 49. In the case of an attempt to fabricate evidence, the Court which must file the complaint under this section, is the Court which ultimately deals with the case, and in which, the false evidence, if the attempt had succeeded, would have been given. It is not necessary that the Court in which the proceedings were previously pending when the attempt to fabricate was made, should file a complaint under this section—Hasan Ajam, 35 Cr.L.J. 848, 148 I.C. 1011, 36 Bom.L.R. 221, A.I.R. 1934 Bom 185. But where the allegations are that the petitioner attempted to suborn evidence and thereby committed an offence under sec. 193 read with sec. 116, I P. C., and that the alleged attempt was during the commitment inquiry and was with reference to the commitment proceedings, the Sub-divisional Magistrate, who held the inquiry, has jurisdiction to make complaint under sec. 476, Cr. P. Code—Nand Kumar v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 534 (536), 1937 P.W.N. 119, 172 I.C. 237.

Transfer of Judge—As a matter of convenience and expediency, the complaint should be made by the Judge who tried the case, if he is present; if he is not present, it may be made by any other Judge of the same Court. Otherwise there would be great inconvenience and inequality of justice, having regard to the frequent absences and transfer of Judges—Molla Fuzla Karim, 33 Cal. 193 (197). The complaint may be made by the successor-in-office of the Judge who tried the case in which the offence was committed—Begu Singh, 34 Cal. 551, 5 Cr.L.J. 398, 5 C.L.J. 508, 11 C.W.N. (F.B.); Dharamdas v. Sajore, 11 C.W.N. 119, Maung Shwe Phe v. Ma Me Hmoka, 3 Rang 48; Karim Baksh v. Mulchand, 1879 P.R. 29; Behari Lal v. Abdul Qadir, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 292 (297). See sec. 559 as now amended. Under this clause, the complaint can be made only by the Court in question before whom the offence is alleged to have been committed, and not the particular public servant concerned who made the inquiry. Therefore, where a Deputy Magistrate dismissed a complaint as false, and was then transferred to another district, the complaint is to be made not by that particular Deputy Magistrate but by the successor of that person in the office of the Deputy Magistrate—Ram Ajodhya, 8 P.L.T. 674, 28 Cr.L.J. 643, 103 I.C. 99.

arbitrator appointed by the Court—Puttiah v. Veerasami, 17 M.L.J. 420; Mula Mal v. Chiranji Lal, 1914 P.R. 3, 15 Cr.L.J. 358; a Registration Officer—Gopi Nath v. Kuldip, 11 Cal 556; Mulfat, 10 C.W.N. 222; Tulasi v. Danalakshmi, 35 Cr.L.J. 780, 148 I.C. 851, 66 M.L.J. 471, A.I.R. 1934 Mad 316, 39 M.L.W. 693, 57 Mad. 682, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 262, 1934 M.W.N. 609, 1934 Cr.C. 606; a Police Officer examining a person under sec. 161 in the course of an investigation—Ismail, 11 Bom. 659; a Police patel—Irbasapa, 4 Bom. 476; an Excise Collector—Mahadeo v. Singh, 1915 P.R. 18; a District Judge in his capacity as District Registrar—Dina Nath v. Nek Ram, 21 A.L.J. 88; a Magistrate passing order under section 144 of this Code acts as a public servant and not as a Court—Nataranjan v. Rangasami, 41 M.L.J. 328. A Member-in-charge of a Forest Department, Assam, disposing of an appeal in a case relating to that department is not a Court; for though he observed the procedure of a legal tribunal and the parties appeared before him by pleaders, still he was not possessed of the ordinary powers of a Court in the matter of issuing processes and compelling the attendance of witnesses—Daulatram, 59 Cal. 1233, 36 C.W.N. 506 (509), 33 Cr.L.J. 685, 55 C.L.J. 349, 1932 Cr.C. 337, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 390, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 504, 138 I.C. 705. A Manager in dealing with a claim under the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act (VI of 1876) is not a Court—Kewal Ram, 36 Cr.L.J. 1354 (1359), 158 I.C. 324, 16 P.L.T. 693, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 515, 15 Pat. 69. Debt Settlement Boards under the Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act (VII of 1936) must be regarded as agents of the Local Government vested with certain legal powers for a definite purpose and they cannot be regarded as "Courts" even within the wide meaning with which that expression is used in sec. 195, Cr. P. Code—Hari Charan v. Kaushiki Charan, 44 C.W.N. 530 (538), A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 186, 41 Cr.L.J. 662, 188 I.C. 686. The functions of the debt settlement tribunals in the first instance or on appeal, however admirable their purpose, do not come within the wide definition of a 'Court'. They are not Courts; they are what their names indicate, debt settlement tribunals. They are not Courts as defined in sec. 195, Cr. P. Code—Sashi Bhusan v. Fulkhan, 44 C.W.N. 763. But see Babulal v. Kisansao, 41 Cr.L.J. 376, 186 I.C. 708, 1940 N.L.J. 23, A.I.R. 1940 Nag 184, where it has been held that the Debt Conciliation Board constituted under C. P. Debt Conciliation Act (II of 1933) must be deemed to be a Court and, under sec. 24A of the aforesaid Act, all proceedings under the Act shall be deemed to be judicial proceedings.

623. What Court can make complaint:—The only Courts that can make complaints for prosecution for an offence are those before which the alleged offence was committed, or the Courts to which such Courts are subordinate—Juggut v. Kashi Chunder, 6 Cal. 440. Where a plaintiff first instituted a suit in one Court and obtained a decree for a part of this claim, and then presented a fresh claim in another Court in respect of the item disallowed by the first Court, and fraudulently obtained an ex parte decree, whereupon the first Court took action under sec. 195, Cr. P. C., and made a complaint in writing under sec. 210, I. P. Code, held that the action could only be taken by the second Court, and not by the first Court, because the institution of the second suit and the obtaining of a decree by fraudulent means could not be held to be an offence committed in relation to proceedings in the first Court—Kishun, 6 Lah. 445, 26 P.L.R. 717, 26 Cr.L.J. 1588.

As a general rule, complaints should be made by the Court before which the offence is alleged to have been committed and not by any other Court—Raja of Venkatagiri, 6 M.H.C.R. 92; Nga Aung, 9 Bur.L.T. 202, 18 Cr.L.J. 97; Karim Baksh v. Mulchand, 1879 P.R. 29; Wajid Ali, 35 Cr.L.J. 821 (826), 148 I.C. 1075, 8 Luck. 638, 11 O.W.N.

490, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 344. But a complaint may be made in the first instance by the superior Court, even though no complaint was made by the subordinate Court before which the offence was committed—Palanappa v. Annamalai, 27 Mad. 223 (225); see also Bhadesar v. Kamta, 35 All 90 (91), 11 A.L.J. 11. The offence of perjury, even though it was committed in the trial Court, may be held to have been committed in relation to the appeal in the Appellate Court, and the latter Court can make a complaint. The offender must be held to have intended that his perjury should not only influence the proceedings in the trial Court, but also subsequent proceedings might take place if either party took the matter to appeal—Ketki v. Sheo Narain, 1931 A.L.J. 829, 1931 Cr C. 1042 (1043), AIR 1931 All 706. Even, the High Court can make a complaint while exercising its powers of revision—Ponnusami v. Chokalingam, 25 M.L.J. 593, 14 Cr L.J. 624; Palaniappa v. Annamalai, 27 Mad 223 (226); Ketki v. Sheo Narain, supra; and consequently the High Court can direct that its order in the revision case should issue as a complaint to the Magistrate—Syed Khan v. Nagoor, 3 Bur.L.J. 141, 26 Cr L.J. 262. See also Note 617.

Where a case was originally tried by a Bench consisting of two Magistrates but a complaint of an offence under sec. 211, I P C., was made by the Bench consisting of those two Magistrates and another, held that this was a very technical matter not requiring interference in revision on a ground of this kind—Banke Lal v. Maiku, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 430, 35 Cr L.J. 121, 146 I.C. 638, 1933 Cr C. 1315, 10 O.W.N. 1037.

The Court contemplated by this section is the Court before which the offence is committed. Where, therefore, the offence of perjury was committed before the Sessions Court of Ahmedabad, and subsequently a portion of the territory subject to its jurisdiction was placed under the newly constituted Sessions Court of Kaira, held that the new Sessions Judge, though having territorial jurisdiction over the accused, had no power to make a complaint regarding the offence which was committed before the Sessions Court of Ahmedabad—In re Manehlal, 28 Bom L.R. 1296, 28 Cr L.J. 49. In the case of an attempt to fabricate evidence, the Court which must file the complaint under this section, is the Court which ultimately deals with the case, and in which, the false evidence, if the attempt had succeeded, would have been given. It is not necessary that the Court in which the proceedings were previously pending when the attempt to fabricate was made, should file a complaint under this section—Hasan Ajam, 35 Cr.L.J. 848, 148 I.C. 1011, 36 Bom L.R. 221, AIR 1934 Bom. 185. But where the allegations are that the petitioner attempted to suborn evidence and thereby committed an offence under sec 193 read with sec 116, I P C., and that the alleged attempt was during the commitment inquiry and was with reference to the commitment proceedings, the Sub-divisional Magistrate, who held the inquiry, has jurisdiction to make complaint under sec 476, Cr. P Code—Nand Kumar v. Emp, AIR. 1937 Pat. 534 (536), 1937 P.W.N. 119, 172 I.C. 237.

Transfer of Judge—As a matter of convenience and expediency, the complaint should be made by the Judge who tried the case, if he is present; if he is not present, it may be made by any other Judge of the same Court. Otherwise there would be great inconvenience and inequality of justice, having regard to the frequent absences and transfer of Judges—Molla Fuzla Karim, 33 Cal. 193 (197). The complaint may be made by the successor-in-office of the Judge who tried the case in which the offence was committed—Begu Singh, 34 Cal 551, 5 Cr L.J. 398, 5 C.L.J. 508, 11 C.W.N. (F.B.); Dharamdas v. Sajore, 11 C.W.N. 119; Maung Shwe Phe v. Ma Me Hmoka, 3 Rang 48; Karim Baksh v. Mulchand, 1879 P.R. 29; Behari Lal v. Abdul Qadir, AIR. 1940 Lah 292 (297). See sec. 559 as now amended. Under this clause, the complaint can be made only by the Court in question before whom the offence is alleged to have been committed, and not the particular public servant concerned who made the inquiry. Therefore, where a Deputy Magistrate dismissed a complaint as false, and was then transferred to another district, the complaint is to be made not by that particular Deputy Magistrate but by the successor of that person in the office of the Deputy Magistrate—Ram Ajodhya, 8 P.L.T. 674, 28 Cr.L.J. 643, 103 I.C. 99.

Where a Deputy Magistrate who had tried the case was transferred from the district, and the complaint was made by the District Magistrate, before whom all cases pending before the Deputy Magistrate was placed, it was held that although the cases pending in the Court of the transferred Magistrate were placed before the District Magistrate either for disposal or for re-distribution among his subordinate Magistrates, still he never became the presiding Judge of the Deputy Magistrate's Court and therefore was not competent to make the complaint—Mofizuddin v. Basanta, 16 Cr.L.J. 640 (Cal.). Where there are several Deputy Magistrates at a subdivision and one of them is transferred, and another officer is appointed to the subdivision in general terms and not "in place of" the outgoing officer, the Deputy Magistrate who comes to fill the gap is not the successor-in-office of the outgoing Deputy Magistrate, and the former cannot make a complaint under this section in respect of an offence committed before the latter—Girish Chandra v. Sarat Chandra, 42 Cal. 667 (669, 674), following Mohesh Chandra, 35 Cal. 457 (460). An abetment of perjury was committed in the course of an inquiry before a committing Magistrate (who was a first class Magistrate). While the proceedings were pending before him, the Magistrate was transferred and was succeeded by a second class Magistrate who had no power to commit. The outgoing Magistrate, therefore, sent the proceedings to the District Magistrate. It was held that the District Magistrate had jurisdiction to make a complaint in respect of the offence, for he was 'such Court' referred to in clause (1) (b) of this section, and was the officer on whom devolved the disposal of committal of cases in the district. It was further held that the Sub-divisional Magistrate also had jurisdiction to make the complaint, because in the ordinary course of events all cases for commitment would go to him, instead of to District Magistrate—Ramrao, 42 Bom. 190 (194), 20 Bom.L.R. 117.

Transfer of case :—If a case or proceeding has been before various Courts and an offence is alleged to have been committed in that proceeding or case falling under the various Sections prescribed in sec. 195, Cr. P. C., then all the Courts have jurisdiction to make the complaint though, normally speaking, the proper Court to make the complaint is the Court which finally tried and determined the suit. There is no reason on the plain words of the Section to hold otherwise. It cannot be contended that the offence must be committed in the presence of the Presiding officer of the Court and if a case is transferred from one Court to another, then only that Court in which the acts constituting the offence were committed has jurisdiction to make a complaint. If this was so, the Legislature could have expressed their intention quite clearly and different words would have been used—Behari Lal v. Abdul Qadir, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 292 (297).

Where after issue of process a case is transferred to another Court, it is the Court which tries the case on the merits that can make the complaint and not the Court which merely took cognizance of the case and issued process—Jeebun Krista v. Benoy Krista, 6 C.W.N. 35 (36). See also Putiram v. Mahomed, 3 C.W.N. 33 (34) and Tarakeswar, 27 Cr.L.J. 618, 91 I.C. 600, 53 Cal. 488, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 788, 30 C.W.N. 504. But where a complaint made before a Deputy Commissioner was not transferred but simply made over to a subordinate Magistrate for inquiry and report, and the latter upon inquiry found the complaint to be false, the order for prosecution of the complainant under sec. 182, I. P. C., could not be made by the subordinate Magistrate, because the false complaint was not made to him but to the Deputy Commissioner, and this latter officer was the proper person to direct the prosecution—Asmatulla, 4 C.W.N. 366 (367). Where the case is withdrawn to the file of the District Magistrate under sec. 528, Cr. P. C., and is dismissed by him, the District Magistrate can make a complaint—Amanat Ali, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 724, 33 C.W.N. 1058, 122 I.C. 627, 31 Cr.L.J. 430, 1929 Cr.C. 360. If a false complaint made before a Deputy Magistrate who was in charge of the District was made over for investigation not to a subordinate Magistrate but to a Sub-divisional Magistrate, it must be held that the transfer was made not under sec. 202 but under sec. 192, and it was the Sub-divisional Magistrate who had full seisin of the case and who would be competent to direct prosecution under sec. 211, I. P. Code; the Deputy Magistrate who transferred the case ceased to have any jurisdiction in the case and was incompetent to take any action under sec. 476—Bhiku, 39 Cal. 1041 (1046, 1047), 16 C.W.N. 885.

A complaint was made against several persons in the Court of the Sub-divisional Magistrate who transferred the case to the Bench Magistrates for trial of two persons only. The Bench Magistrates ultimately dismissed the complaint. On an application of an accused other than those two who were tried, the Bench Magistrate made a complaint under sec. 476 for the prosecution of the complainant under sec. 211, I. P. C., held that the Bench Magistrates had no jurisdiction to make the complaint as the order of transfer was confined to two accused only—Ramji Lal, AIR 1931 Oudh 417, 135 I.C. 377, 33 Cr.L.J. 160, 8 O.W.N. 1085, 1931 Cr.C. 1038. But see Note 601.

Court acting in a different capacity—The Collector of a District in deciding a revenue appeal came to the conclusion that a receipt filed in the case was not genuine. He took no steps in the connection as Collector, but acting as the District Magistrate made a complaint. It was held that the act of the District Magistrate was ultra vires. He ought to have made a complaint in his capacity as Collector, as the offence was committed before him in that capacity—Ram Sahai, 40 All 144 (146), 16 A.L.J. 68, 19 Cr.L.J. 201.

Temporary Court :—The Court of the City Magistrate is not a permanent one with a perpetual succession of Judges, but is only of recent creation and unknown to the Cr. P. Code. If the City Magistrate before whom the offence has been committed is transferred, it is only the Sessions Judge, and not the successor of such Magistrate, who is competent to make the necessary complaint for prosecution—Jia Lal v. Phogomal, 138 P.L.R. 1918, 19 Cr.L.J. 917, 47 IC 286 (287). See also Muhammad Ishaq v. Muqimuddin, 7 P.R. 1913, 14 Cr.L.J. 178, in case of Sub-Judge's Courts which also are not permanent Courts in Punjab.

Court abolished and re-established—Where by a notification in the Gazette, the Court of the Sub-Magistrate at B was abolished and two years afterwards the said Court was restored with its territorial limits somewhat curtailed, it was held that there was no such continuity as would enable the High Court to hold that the Court that was re-constituted was the same as the one that had ceased to exist; and consequently, the new Court could not make a complaint in respect of an offence committed before the old Court—Appa Atla, 16 Cr.L.J. 787 (Mad.).

See also Notes 1239 and 1240.

624. No delegation of power :—The power to make a complaint must be exercised by the Court before which the offence was committed, and cannot be delegated, even to the Public Prosecutor. The filing of a complaint by the Public Prosecutor will not be treated as equivalent to a complaint by the Court—Gurditta, 19 P.R. 1917, 18 Cr.L.J. 548 (551).

The Deputy Registrar is the principal officer of the Judicial Branch of the High Court office. In that capacity he has to perform the requisite ministerial work in connection with the judicial business of the High Court. He would therefore be deemed to be an officer appointed to file complaints as contemplated in sec. 195 (1) (b), Cr. P. C. Where the order of the Division Bench directed the complaint to be made, that order, by necessary implication, must be treated as having been addressed to the head of Judicial Branch of the High Court office. The mere fact that the authority is not given in writing is immaterial. In any case the irregularity, if any, cannot in view of sec. 537, Cr. P. C., impair the validity of the decision—Sheoshanker Dhondbaji Mahar v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 697 (698), 188 IC 885, 1910 N.L.J. 165.

625. Scope :—Clause (c), sec. 195, Cr. P. C., applies only to cases where an offence is committed by a party, as such, to a proceeding in any Court in respect of a document which has been produced or given in evidence in such proceeding—Kushal Pal, 32 Cr.L.J. 1105 (1116), 134 IC 225, AIR 1931 All. 443, 1931 Cr.C. 715, 53 All. 804, 1931 A.L.J. 697, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 801.

Clause (c)—Offences under this clause:—Offences described in sec. 463, I. P. C. :—The word 'forgery' is used as a general term in sec. 463, I. P. C., and that section is referred to in comprehensive sense in this clause, so as to embrace all species of forgery punishable under the Penal Code, including one under sec. 467, I. P. C.—Tulja, 12 Bom. 36; Teni Shah v. Bolai Shah, 14 C.W.N. 479; Khairati Ram v. Malawa Ram, 5 Lah. 550 (553), 26 Cr.L.J. 537; Ram Samujh, 3 O.W.N. 614, 27 Cr.L.J. 969; Ismail Panju, 26 Cr.L.J. 1115, 88 I.C. 283, A.I.R. 1925 Nag. 337; or an offence under sec. 468, I. P. C.—Asst. Sessions Judge v. Ramammal, 36 Mad. 387; or under sec. 466, I. P. C.—Anonymous, Ratanlal 83; Rachu Behary, 20 Cr.L.J. 630 (Pat.); or under sec. 465, I. P. C.—Khairati Ram v. Malawa Ram, 5 Lah. 550. But it does not include an offence under sec. 474, I. P. C.—Asrabuddin v. Kalidayal, 19 C.W.N. 125, 28 I.C. 645, 16 Cr.L.J. 309; Ibrahim v. Emp., 29 Cr.L.J. 849, 111 I.C. 433, 11 A.I.Cr.R. 79. Where, however, the offence committed was really one under sec. 471, I. P. C., it was illegal to reduce the charge to one under sec. 474, I. P. C., and prosecute the accused without a complaint under sec. 476, Cr. P. C.—Ibrahim v. Emp., supra. See also Guru Prosad Ram Gupta v. Rameswar Marwari, 39 Cr.L.J. 730, 176 I.C. 572, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 527, 42 C.W.N. 674, 11 R.C. 127; nor an offence under sec. 477A, I. P. C. (because sec. 477A has no reference to forgery)—Jethmal, 25 S.L.R. 471, 23 Cr.L.J. 328 (330), 136 I.C. 766, A.I.R. 1932 Sind 53, 1932 Cr.C. 194, Ind. Rul. 1932 Sind 62; Balgaunda, 32 Cr.L.J. 1017 (1020), 55 Bom. 461, Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 381, 133 I.C. 269, 33 Bom.L.R. 296, 1931 Cr.C. 561, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 305.

Since an 'offence described in sec. 463' includes an offence under sec. 467, I. P. Code, it follows that where a prosecution of an accused is ordered only under sec. 471, I. P. Code, without referring to any other section, but he is tried and convicted under secs 471 and 467, I. P. Code, the conviction under the latter section is not sustainable, as there was no complaint in respect of an offence under the section—Ram Samujh, 1 Luck. 523, 3 O.W.N. 614, 27 Cr.L.J. 969 (970). But see Note 614B.

A complaint may be made by the Court for prosecuting the plaintiff for bringing a false claim on a forged document, even though the case in which the claim was held to be false was decided by consent of the parties—Ram Narain, 27 Cr.L.J. 1021 (All.). Cf Narain Das, 25 A.L.J. 559, 28 Cr.L.J. 549.

Where the original complaint made by the Court was in respect of abetment by conspiracy, and the Magistrate acting on the facts disclosed in the evidence for the prosecution added a second charge of abetment of forgery in an account book produced before the Insolvency Court in pursuance of the alleged conspiracy, held that a complaint of the Insolvency Court was not necessary, for the second charge was in respect of an act done in pursuance of the conspiracy mentioned in the original complaint. Sec. 235 of the Code also permits a joinder of such charges—Abdul Rahman, 4 Bur.L.J. 213, 27 Cr.L.J. 669.

626. "Alleged to have been committed":—These words have been substituted by the Select Committee of 1916 for the word "committed" in deference to the remarks made by Piggot, J., in Bhauani Das, 38 All. 169 at page 172; "With regard to the actual wording of the sub-section under consideration it does seem to me to be somewhat lacking in precision. To forbid a Court to take cognizance of an offence committed by a party is open to the criticism that no Court can decide whether an offence was 'committed' or not until after it has taken cognizance. It seems necessary, therefore, to read the word 'committed' as equivalent to the expression 'alleged to have been committed.'" See also Janardhan v. Baldeo Prasad, 5 P.L.J. 135 (139).

Prior to the amendment of 1923, the words in clause (b) were "is committed" and in clause (c) were "has been committed." Both these expressions have now been replaced by the words "is alleged to have been committed."

627. Document:—The word 'document' in this section means the original document. Where the original forged document was not produced or given in evidence, but only a registration copy of it was produced in the suit, no complaint by the Court was necessary for a prosecution under secs. 465 and 467, I. P. C.—Raja Mustafa, 8 O.C. 313, 2 Cr.L.J. 653. The words 'produced or given in evidence' in this section refer only to the production of the original and not to the production of a copy, and this for the very reason that the Court before which a copy of the document is produced is not really in a position to express any opinion about the genuineness of the original—Girdhari Lal, 29 O.C. 1, 2 O.W.N. 174, 26 Cr.L.J. 929. But in some other cases it has been said that the producing of a certified copy of a forged document with the knowledge that the original was forged, is a user of a forged document (i.e., user of the forged original)—Mathura Prasad, 3 O.W.N. 171, 27 Cr.L.J. 402; Hayat Khan, 26 S.L.R. 73, 33 Cr.L.J. 452 (453).

628. "Produced or given in evidence":—Complaint by the Court is necessary if the document was produced in Court—Asrabuddin v. Kalidayal, 19 C.W.N. 125, 16 Cr.L.J. 309, even though it was not given in evidence—Akhil Chandra, 22 Cal. 1004; In re Gopal, 9 Bom.L.R. 735. The word "or" which intervenes between the word "produced" and the words "given in evidence" shows that it is disjunctive, and that a complaint is necessary not only in cases where the document has been given in evidence, but also in cases where it has been only produced—Babu Jha, 9 P.L.T. 800, 30 Cr.L.J. 236 (239). The word "produced" has been added in the Code of 1898, and did not exist in the old Codes, and therefore the decision in Abdul Khadar v. Meera Sahib, 15 Mad. 221, (in which it was held that no sanction was necessary unless the document was given in evidence) is no longer good law. See also Gopaldas Khetriya v. Jnandendra Nath Dawn, 40 Cr.L.J. 450 (453), 180 I.C. 586, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 677.

The words "in or in relation to any proceeding" occurring in sec. 195 (1)(b), Cr. P. C., has nothing to do with the offence of forgery. Sec. 195 (1)(c), Cr. P. C., only requires the production of a forged document in Court or its being given in evidence—N. V. L. Narasimha Rao v. Emp., 1937 M.W.N. 887.

Complaint by the Court is necessary, if the document is 'produced', i.e., tendered in evidence, although it is not exhibited and marked nor considered by the Court—Guru Charan v. Gniya, 29 Cal. 887; Bansi, 51 Cal. 469, 26 Cr.L.J. 24 (26). Where a party to a proceeding hands up a document to the Judge who does not take the document on the file, but returns it to the party, the document is 'produced' all the same within the meaning of this clause—Gulab Chand, 49 Bom. 799, 27 Bom.L.R. 1039, 27 Cr.L.J. 251. Cf. Jabbar Ali, 46 C.L.J. 193, 30 Cr.L.J. 656. The production of an account book before the munsarim of the Court is tantamount to its production in the Court, and therefore any offence committed in respect of this account book (viz., offence under secs. 467 and 471, I. P. Code) must be deemed to have been committed in respect of a document produced in Court, although it may be that the book was never called to the Court after it had been shown to the munsarim (the case having been decided on the oath of the defendant)—Rameshwar Lal, 49 All. 898, 25 A.L.J. 555, 28 Cr.L.J. 668 (670).

This clause equally applies, whether the document was produced or given in evidence in the course of a proceeding by the party who is alleged to have committed the offence or by any one else—Bhau Vyankatesh, 49 Bom. 608 (614), 27 Bom.L.R. 607, 27 Cr.L.J. 69, 91 I.C. 245, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 433. In other words, two things are necessary under clause (c), viz.—(1) the document must be produced or given in evidence in the proceeding (2) the offence must be alleged to have been committed by a party to the proceeding; but it is not necessary that the person who produces the document in Court must be the offender himself.

Where a document was not produced in the suit but was disclosed in an affidavit filed therein, and inspection thereof was allowed to the other side, and it was filed in the office of the Translator of the High Court for translation, held that these actions did not amount to producing the document in evidence, as it was not actually produced in Court, and therefore no complaint of the Court was necessary for prosecution under secs. 465, 467 and 474, I. P. C., in respect of that document—Munisamy v. Rajaratnam, 45 Mad. 928, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 136, 72 I.C. 340, 24 Cr.L.J. 340, 44 M.L.J. 774 (F.B.).

Where in a proceeding under sec. 145 a document comes into Court attached to a police report, prior to the proceeding, the document is not said to be produced in Court; and even if it is, neither of the parties to the proceeding is a party to its production; consequently the complaint of the Court is not necessary as a condition precedent to the institution of criminal proceedings against the guilty party upon a charge under sec. 463, I. P. C.—Janardhan v. Baldeo Prasad, 5 P.L.J. 135 (138), 21 Cr.L.J. 272, 1 P.L.T. 129.

A document is said to be 'given in evidence' when it is handed over to the Court although the Court may reject it for insufficiency of stamp or want of registration—Nagin Das, Ratanlal 242. An Appellate Court hearing an appeal from the suit in which a forged document was produced can make a complaint, because though the document was not originally produced in the Appellate Court, it is nevertheless given in evidence in the appeal which is pending in that Court—Bhadesar v. Kamta, 35 All. 90 (91).

There is a conflict of opinion as to whether a complaint of the Court is necessary in respect of an offence mentioned in clause (1) (c) when such offence has been committed prior to the production of the document in Court. The Bombay High Court holds that where an offence under sec. 471, I. P. C. (using as genuine a forged document) in respect of a document produced in Court has been committed before it comes into Court, no complaint of the Court is necessary, the use complained of being prior to its production in Court—Noor Mahomed v. Kaikhosru, 4 Bom.L.R. 268. This decision was doubted in Sanjiv Ratnappa, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 545, 1932 Cr.C. 777, 142 I.C. 386, 34 Cr.L.J. 357, 34 Bom.L.R. 1090, 56 Bom. 488. The Allahabad High Court also holds that so long as the prosecution is confined to offences connected with a document which have been committed independently of and antecedent to its production in Court, no complaint is required. All that clause (c) prohibits is taking cognizance of an offence described in sec. 463, I. P. C., when such offence has been committed by a party to any proceeding in any Court with respect to a document produced or given in evidence in such proceeding—Lalta Prasad, 34 All. 654, 10 A.L.J. 294. This is also the view of a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court—Kushal Pal, 53 All. 804 (F.B.), 1931 A.L.J. 697, 32 Cr.L.J. 1105 (1116). In this case, the word "party" has been interpreted to mean a party as such; and therefore an offence which has already been committed by a person who does not become a party till 25 years after the commission of the offence, cannot be said to have been committed by a "party" and does not require a complaint under this section.

But the Calcutta High Court is of opinion that complaint of the Court is necessary under such circumstances, because the very fact that the document is produced in Court will bring the case within the purview of this section, and it is immaterial that the forgery is alleged to have been committed before the production of the document in Court—Teni Shah v. Balai Shah, 14 C.W.N. 479, 11 Cr.L.J. 280; Nalini Kanto v. Anukul, 44 Cal 1002, 21 C.W.N. 640, 25 C.L.J. 255, 18 Cr.L.J. 522, 39 I.C. 490. The same view has been taken in two Allahabad cases—Bhawani, 38 All. 169, 14 A.L.J. 74, 17 Cr.L.J. 289, 35 I.C. 161, Kanhaiya v. Bhagwan, 48 All. 60, 23 A.L.J. 956, 26 Cr.L.J. 1485 (1487), 89 I.C. 1053. The Madras High Court also holds that this section is not limited to cases where the fabrication is committed pendente lite, but it extends to cases of fabrication of false evidence in advance—Parameshwaran, 39 Mad. 677 (679), 31 I.C. 161, 16 Cr.L.J. 721, 18 M.L.T. 322; Subbi Reddi, 59 M.L.J. 229, 32 Cr.L.J. 219 (221). See also Ramadoss v. Yellamanda Reddi, 1939 M.W.N. 92. The Lahore High Court has also expressed the view that where a document has been produced in Court by a party, the sanction (complaint) of such Court is necessary for his prosecution in respect of an antecedent forgery—Khairati Ram v. Malawa Ram, 5 Lah. 550 (552) following Nalini Kanta v. Anukul, 41 Cal 1002 and Teni Shah v. Bolai Shah, 14 C.W.N. 479. The same view is taken by the Rangoon High Court and Sind Court—Maung Po Thin v. Ma Ma, 33 Cr.L.J. 919, 140 I.C. 41, 1932 Cr.C. 702, A.I.R. 1932 Rang. 139, Ind. Rul. 1932 Rang. 208; Hayat Khan, 26 S.L.R. 73, 1932 Cr.C. 530, A.I.R. 1932 Sind 90, 137 I.C. 311, Ind. Rul. 1932 Sind 77, 33 Cr.L.J. 452 (451).

Reviewing all the cases mentioned above the Bombay High Court has very recently held that the view taken by the Allahabad High Court in Bhawani, 38 All 169, A.L.R. 1916 All. 299, 35 I.C. 161, 14 A.L.J. 74, is correct and that the sanction (i.e., complaint) of the Court would be necessary before a party to the proceedings in which the document was produced can be prosecuted, notwithstanding that the offence alleged was committed before the document came into Court, at a time when the person complained against was not a party to any proceeding in Court—Rachappa Yellappa, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 221 (225), 38 Bom.L.R. 440, 37 Cr.L.J. 814, 163 I.C. 279, 60 Bom. 756, 1936 Cr.C. 627, 8 R.B. 445. Where the document was produced in Court not in connection with any other case, but in a prosecution founded upon it, for the purpose of convicting the accused of an offence in relating to it, no complaint is necessary—Sanjiv, 34 Cr.L.J. 357, 142 I.C. 386, 34 Bom.L.R. 1090, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 545, 56 Bom. 488, 1932 Cr.C. 777, Ind. Rul. 1933 Bom. 237. The purpose of sec. 195, Cr. P. C., is not that one Court should keep check upon another, because if that were so, the Court itself would not be entrusted with the making of a complaint as it is under the provisions of the section. The purpose of the section is to provide, inter alia, that an offence of forgery, for instance, shall be enquired into upon a complaint of a Court before which the forged document was produced and not upon the complaint of a private individual. It is the Court before whom the forged document is produced which is to decide whether there should be or should not be an inquiry in the first instance, and it is unreasonable to say that while a Court is entrusted by the Legislature with this discretion and with this power it should not be entitled itself to inquire into an alleged offence committed in relation to proceedings before it, provided no other section of the Criminal Procedure Code bars the way, when that alleged offence is part of the same transaction, with the offence of which the Court has already taken cognizance—Jashanmal v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Sind 222, 40 Cr.L.J. 818, 183 I.C. 619, 12 R.S. 64.

But where the Magistrate has already taken cognizance of an offence under sec. 471, I. P. C., using as genuine a forged document, and then the accused brings a suit in the Civil Court on the basis of the document, the Magistrate can proceed with the trial without the complaint of the Civil Court—Biswambhar, 56 Cal. 1041, 33 C.W.N. 474 (475), 1929 Cr.C. 401, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 633, 31 Cr.L.J. 125, 120 I.C. 449 (distinguishing 44 Cal. 1002); Nanak Chand v. Khwaja Mahmud, 38 Cr.L.J. 581, 168 I.C. 740, 9 R.L. 672, 38 P.L.R. 1120, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 238. (In this case cognizance was taken of an offence under sec. 468, I. P. C.). Where the offences were committed long after the proceedings in Court had come to a termination, sec. 195, Cr. P. C., does not operate as a bar to the cognizance of offences and no complaint of the Court is necessary—Kartick, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 278, 51 C.L.J. 51, 127 I.C. 267, 31 Cr.L.J. 1205, 1930 Cr.C. 358.

629. 'Party':—Complaint is necessary if the document is produced or given in evidence by a party to the proceeding. But no complaint is necessary to prosecute a witness in the proceeding since a witness is not a party—John Martin Sequeira v. Lujya Bai, 25 Mad. 671; Chenciah, 42 Mad. 561, 50 I.C. 987, 36 M.L.J. 296, 9 M.L.W. 349, 20 Cr.L.J. 379; Mahalinga, 37 Cr.L.J. 15, 158 I.C. 1040, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 1044, 1935 Cr.C. 1287, 69 M.L.J. 783; Probat Ranjan v. Uma Shankar, 132 I.C. 241, 32 Cr.L.J. 883, 1931 Cr.C. 590, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 438, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 561, 58 Cal. 727, 35 C.W.N. 98 (101); Ambar Ali, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 539 (541), 1929 Cr.C. 194; Ram Dilas v. Lachmi Narain, A.I.R. 1923 All. 84, 71 I.C. 684, 24 Cr.L.J. 220, 45 All. 140, 20 A.L.J. 904; Krishnarao, A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 190, 36 Cr.L.J. 1477, 158 I.C. 647, 18 N.L.J. 247, [where a District Registrar was held competent to lodge a complaint under sec. 190 (1)(a) against the vendee, scribe and attesting witnesses of a forged document as none of them was a party to the proceedings in the Criminal Court where the document was produced and whereupon the District Registrar started the inquiry]; Kondeti, 26 M.L.J. 220, 15 Cr.L.J. 242, 9 I.C. 577; Jivan Mal, 18 Cr.L.J. 544, 1917 P.R. 10; *Debilal v. Mad. 316, 1934 Cr.C. 606, 1934 M.W.N. 609; nor is a complaint necessary to prosecute the agent of a party—Chand Mal, 1879 P.R. 9; Fatima v. Raman, 3 Bur.L.T. 108, 12 Cr.L.J. 87; or a counsel—Ganda, 29 Cr.L.J. 1061; or the guardian or next friend of the minor plaintiff as he is not a party within the meaning of sec. 195 (1)(c), Cr. P. C.—Mallappa Tejappa Bidikar, 38 Cr.L.J. 149, 166 I.C. 270, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 14, 38 Bom.L.R. 964, 9 R.B. 229; so also, no complaint is necessary to prosecute an abettor if he is not a party—Ghansham, 32 All. 74; Kushal Pal, 32 Cr.L.J. 1105, 134 I.C. 225, A.I.R. 1931 All. 443, 1931 Cr.C. 715, 53 All. 804, 1931 A.L.J. 693, Ind. Isardas*, 35 Cr.L.J. 1251, 151 I.C. 60, 1934 Cr.C. 628, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 78; Assudomal Ramandas v. Jhamandas Hotchand, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 100 (101); so also no complaint is necessary to prosecute the Judge before whom the case or proceeding was pending—Behari Lal v. Abdul Qadir, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 292 (297). For contra see Narayan, 39 I.C. 688, 10 P.R. 1917 (Cr.), 18 Cr.L.J. 544, not followed in Fakir Singh, supra. A claimant in insolvency proceedings is a party to the proceedings and a complaint is necessary for his prosecution in respect of statements contained in an affidavit filed by him before the Official Assignee in support of his claim—Hajee Mohamed, 36 M.L.J. 60. In a criminal case the complainant is a party, though the Crown is the prosecutor, and if the complainant produces a forged will as evidence in the criminal case, it must be said that the offence under sec. 467, I. P. C., has been committed by a party to the case—Kanhaiya v. Bhagwan, 48 All. 60, 23 A.L.J. 956, 26 Cr.L.J. 1485 (1487); For contra see Krishnarao, A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 190. The Sind Court has held that if the offenders are not parties to the proceeding, the Court can take action against them not under secs 195 (c) and 476, but under sec. 190 (c)—Rahimino, 22 S.L.R. 201, 28 Cr.L.J. 978 (979), 105 I.C. 802.

Section 195 (1)(c), Cr. P. C., would not apply if the proceedings in Court had terminated so that the accused had only previously been a party to a proceeding, and was no longer a party at the time sec. 195 (1)(c), Cr. P. C., was sought to be applied. The words, "committed by a party to any proceeding in any Court" in sec. 195 (1)(c), Cr. P. C., imply that the proceeding must be pending at the material time. To hold otherwise might lead to rather absurd results. Between the commission of a forgery and the discovery of it a long time may elapse, and in the interval the document may be produced in many proceedings. It might be highly inconvenient to have to obtain a complaint from each of the Courts in respect of proceedings terminated, possibly many years before—Mallappa Tejappa Bidikar, supra.

When an offence of forgery is committed by more than one person, one of them only being a party to the proceedings in which the document is produced, no complaint of the Court is necessary for the prosecution of those participants in the forgery who are not parties to the proceedings—Ponusiwami, 28 L.W. 769, 30 Cr.L.J. 469; Anna Ayyar, 30 Mad. 226. The intervention of the Court is unnecessary for their prosecution—Tulasi v. Danalakshmi, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 316, 35 Cr.L.J. 780, 148 I.C. 851, 63 M.L.J. 471, 57 Mad. 682, 39 M.L.W. 639, 1934 M.W.N. 609, 1934 Cr.C. 606, 6 R.M. 550. The Court has no jurisdiction to complain against those who are not parties to the proceedings—Ghansham, A.I.R. 1934 Pesh. 81; Maung Shew Phe v. Ma Ma Hmoke, 3 Rang. 48; Probhat Ranjan v. Ugra Shankar, supra; C. T. Guruswamy v. D. K. S. Ebrahim, 2 Rang. 374, 81 I.C. 439, A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 28, 26 Cr.L.J. 295; Kushal Pal, 32 Cr.L.J. 1105 (1115), 131 I.C. 225, A.I.R. 1931 All. 443, 1931 Cr.C. 715, 53 All. 804, 1931 A.L.J. 697, Ind. 1931 All. 801 (F.B.). Contra—Narayan, 12 Bom.L.R. 383, 11 Cr.L.J. 368.

This clause lays down that complaint of the Court is necessary to prosecute a party who produced a forged document in that Court. But there is nothing in this section forbidding the Court to make complaint against persons other than the party to the proceeding in the Court who are alleged to have been concerned in the offence—

Balmukand, 9 Lah. 678, 110 I.C. 103, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 510, 29 Cr.L.J. 652 (655); Balgaunda, 32 Cr.L.J. 1017, 133 I.C. 269, 55 Bom. 461, Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 381, 33 Bom.L.R. 296, 1931 Cr.C. 561, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 305; Shabir Hasan, 26 A.L.J. 46, 28 Cr.L.J. 986 (987); Quazi Ejaz Ali Khan v. Emp., 66 I.C. 68, 24 O.C. 367, 23 Cr.L.J. 228, A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 220; Jubasabali v. Ayub Karim Kachhi, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 14, 100 I.C. 529, 28 Cr.L.J. 305.

There is thus a conflict of opinion between the various High Courts on this point. The High Courts of Allahabad, Madras, Calcutta and Rangoon are in favour of holding that the Court has no power to make a complaint against persons, who are not parties to a proceeding before it, in respect of any of the offences mentioned in sec. 195 (1) (c), Cr. P. C., whereas the High Courts of Bombay, Lahore and the Judicial Commissioner's Courts at Nagpur and Oudh have taken a different view. After reviewing all the rulings mentioned above the Full Bench of the Nagpur High Court holds that sec. 476, Cr. P. C., does not inhibit the classes of Courts mentioned therein from making a complaint in respect of any of the offences specified in sec. 195 (1) (c), Cr. P. C., against persons not parties to a proceeding before it, in which or in relation to which, the offence was committed—Abdul Rahim Khan v. Pusiabai, 40 Cr.L.J. 572, 181 I.C. 751, 18 N.L.J. 348, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 85 (FB).

A receiver is not a party to the proceedings. The leave of the Civil Court is not a condition precedent to the prosecution of a receiver appointed by it—Lukmanji v. Valibhai, 35 Cr.L.J. 1403, 151 I.C. 707, 1934 Cr.C. 1034, A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 306, 36 Bom.L.R. 649, following Khimchand, 115 I.C. 387, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 493, 52 Bom. 898, 30 Bom.L.R. 1273, 30 Cr.L.J. 465 and dissenting from Santok Chand, 22 C.W.N. 910, 28 C.L.J. 115, 46 Cal. 432, 29 Cr.L.J. 820, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 647, 46 I.C. 836.

The guardian or next friend of a minor, who is a party to a suit, is not a party within the meaning of sec. 195 (1) (c), Cr. P. C., and, as such, no complaint by Court is necessary for his prosecution in respect of offences mentioned therein—Mallappa Tejappa Bidkar, 38 Cr.L.J. 149, 166 I.C. 270, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 14, 38 Bom.L.R. 964, 9 R.B. 229, following Rup Chand v. Dasodha, 30 All. 55, 1907 A.W.N. 290, Khodabux v. Budree Narain Singh, 7 Cal. 137, 8 C.L.R. 306 and Regina v. Padala Venkatasami, 3 Mad. 4.

630. Proceeding in Court:—For the meaning of Court, see Note 622, ante. No complaint is necessary if the offence is not committed in relation to any proceeding in a Court. Thus, where a mahal belonging to several co-sharers having been sold under the Public Demands Recovery Act, a surplus was lying in deposit with the Certificate officer, and a mukhtar filed an application to withdraw that deposit, purporting to have been signed by all the co-sharers, but the signatures of two of them were alleged to be forged, held that the surplus sale-proceeds not having been entrusted to the Certificate officer in his capacity as a Court, no complaint by the Court was necessary for the prosecution of the alleged forgers—Jharu Lal v. Mahant Madan Das, 2 Pat. 257.

The qualifying words "in or in relation to a proceeding in Court" which occur in clause (b), as well as in sec. 476, do not occur in clause (c). The omission of these words does not mean that even if the offences mentioned in clause (c) are committed in relation to a proceeding in Court, sec. 476 has no application. The words are left out in clause (c) because the sense produced by these words in clause (b) is perfectly conveyed by the language used in clause (c). The cumulative effect of the words employed, namely, "committed by a party to any proceeding in any Court in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in such proceeding" leaves no doubt that the offences contemplated by the language are necessarily those in reference to or "in relation to" the proceeding in Court—Rushal Pal, 53 All. 804, 1931 A.L.J. 697, 32 Cr.L.J. 1105 (1109) (per Niamatullah, J.); Subbarayudu v. Gopaya, 55 Mad. 531, 32 Cr.L.J. 788 (789).

This clause applies only where the document was produced or given in evidence in an independent proceeding unconnected with the offence of forgery. But where the document was produced in Court not in connection with any other case, but in a prosecution founded upon it, for the purpose of convicting the accused of an offence in relation to it, sec. 195 has no application. Thus, where a Police Sub-Inspector was prosecuted and committed to the Sessions for causing hurt to extort a confession, and in the course of the trial he produced his Case-diary in which he had made a false entry to create evidence in his favour, whereupon the Sessions Judge added a charge under sec. 465, I. P. C., the complaint of the committing Magistrate was not necessary for this charge, as the Judge was himself considering the question of what charge should be framed on this document—Sanjiv Ratnappa, 56 Bom. 488, 34 Bom.L.R. 1090, 1932 Cr.C. 777 (778), A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 545.

No complaint is necessary if the offences were committed long after the proceeding in Court had come to a termination—Kartik Chandra, 51 C.L.J. 51, 31 Cr.L.J. 1205 (1207); and the fact that the document (in respect of which the offence of forgery was committed) is still in the custody of the Court when the offence was committed after the termination of the proceeding, makes no difference—Subbarayudu v. Gopayya, supra.

631. Sub-section (3)—Subordination of Courts:—The sub-section applies only to subordination of Courts and not to subordination of public servants. And so, where a Magistrate acts as an executive officer, his subordination must be determined not with reference to this clause but to sec. 17; i.e., if he is a Sub-Magistrate he is subordinate to the Sub-divisional Magistrate; and if he is a Sub-divisional Magistrate he is subordinate to the District Magistrate and not to the Sessions Judge—Sankaram v. Sakkarappa, 2 Weir 155 (156); Maini Misser, 6 Pat. 39, 28 Cr.L.J. 353.

But the word 'Court' in this sub-section will apply to a public servant in clause (a) when such public servant is acting as a Court and the offence is committed in connection with proceedings in which the public servant concerned is so acting—Arunachalam v. Ponnusami, 42 Mad. 64, followed in Badiuddin, 47 Bom. 102. Therefore, although a Sub-Magistrate is no doubt a public servant in his capacity of an administrative officer, still if he is acting in his judicial capacity, he must be deemed to be a 'Court' and is therefore subordinate to the Court to which an appeal from his order would lie, under the provisions of this sub-section—Arunachalam v. Ponnusami, 42 Mad. 64, 35 M.L.J. 454, 20 Cr.L.J. 78. Similarly, a first class Magistrate acting as a public servant is subordinate to the District Magistrate, but if he acts as a Court, he must be taken to be subordinate to the Court to which appeals lie from his Court, viz., the Court of the Sessions Judge (and not the District Magistrate)—Buduiddin, 47 Bom. 102, 24 Bom.L.R. 810, 23 Cr.L.J. 576.

Every Court shall be deemed to be subordinate to the Court to which appeals from the former will ordinarily lie. Thus—

The District Magistrate is subordinate to the Sessions Judge—Jiwan Mal v. Beli Ram, 1917 P.R. 11; Panchlam, 42 Mad. 96; Pilalal, 30 Cr.L.J. 550, A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 97, 25 N.L.R. 1 (F.B.); Shankar Dial v. Venables, 19 All. 121. An appeal from the sentence of an Assistant Sessions Judge, does ordinarily lie to a Court of Sessions even though an Assistant Sessions Judge is a member of that Court—Nagendra, 34 Cr.L.J. 628, 143 I.C. 703, A.I.R. 1933 Cal 192, 37 C.W.N. 192, 1933 Cr.C. 213, Ind. Rul. 1933 Cal. 464, 60 Cal. 596. A first class Magistrate is subordinate to the Sessions Judge—Malu Ram, 1902 P.R. 7 (overruling Soba Singh v. Lal Chand, 1901 P.R. 30); Aly Md, 1912 P.R. 2, 12 Cr.L.J. 539; as also to the Additional Sessions Judge (under the provisions of secs 408 and 409 read together)—Sikandar, 44 Bom. 877 (880); Nishi Chandra v. Ramesh Chandra, 14 Cr.L.J. 195 (Cal.); Kusum v. Janak Lal 4 P.L.J. 374. But he is not subordinate to the Assistant Sessions Judge, as the latter has no power to hear appeals—Sikandar, 44 Bom. 877 (881). A committing second class Magistrate is subordinate to the Sessions Judge—Anonymous, 2 Weir 160. The Assistant Magistrate is subordinate to the Sessions Judge and not to the District Magistrate—Shankar Dial v. Venables, 19 All. 121.

The Court of the Tahsildar when dealing with the mutation case is subordinate to the Court of the Deputy Commissioner—Sajjad Husan, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 113 (114), 1934 O.L.R. 980, 153 I.C. 346, 1935 O.W.N. 28.

A second or third class Magistrate is subordinate to the District Magistrate—Ram Deni v. Nand Lal, 30 All. 109 (111); Pallickudathan v. Buddu, 47 Mad. 229 (230), 45 M.L.J. 553. It should be noted that the second or third class Magistrate is subordinate only to the District Magistrate but not to any other First Class Magistrate who is empowered under sec. 407 (2) to hear appeals, because an appeal from the 2nd or 3rd class Magistrate ordinarily lies under sec. 407 (1) to the District Magistrate, and not to any other 1st class subordinate Magistrate to whom the District Magistrate has delegated under sec. 407 (2) his power to hear appeals from 2nd or 3rd class Magistrate—Eroma, 26 Mad. 656, 2 Weir 202 (F B), (overruling Subbaraya, 18 Mad. 487); Subbamma, 27 Mad. 124 (126); Mohim Chandra, 56 Cal. 824, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 172, 116 I.C. 638, 30 Cr.L.J. 658, 49 C.L.J. 342, 33 C.W.N. 285 (288); Sadhu Lal v. Ram Churn, 30 Cal. 394, 7 C.W.N. 114; Anantharamayya v. Tukkadu, 41 Mad. 787 (789); Ahmad Hussain v. Rahman, 26 O.C. 358, 26 Cr.L.J. 423; Mt. Jivani, A.I.R. 1920 Lah. 479, 68 I.C. 412. An Additional District Magistrate has also no power to hear appeals—Sivasuami v. Perumal, 1931 M.W.N. 1194. An Additional District Magistrate has no jurisdiction to take any proceeding under sec. 476A, Cr. P. C., or to institute the complaint in respect of the offence committed in the Court of a Second or third class Magistrate—Ramdin Lal, 38 Cr.L.J. 97, 165 I.C. 970, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 176, 18 P.L.T. 91, 3 B.R. 117, 9 R.P. 246; Nazar Mohammad v. Harnam Singh, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 641, 1 L.R. 1938 Lah. 188, 40 Cr.L.J. 140, 40 P.L.R. 951, 178 I.C. 795. If the District Magistrate had directed the Additional District Magistrate to make an enquiry and report to him and had then adopted that report and made the complaint himself, the procedure would have been quite legal—Nazar Mohanad v. Harnam Singh, supra.

Appeals from the appealable decrees of a Collector sitting as an original Court in suits included in Group A of Sch. 4 of the Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1916) lie only to the District Judge and never to a superior Revenue Court. The Collector is, therefore, subordinate to the District Judge who has jurisdiction to hear appeals from his orders of complaints under sec. 476, Cr. P. C., in matters relating to such suits—Amanul v. Girdhar, A.I.R. 1934 All. 886, 150 I.C. 775, 4 A.W.R. 241, 1934 A.L.J. 867, 35 Cr.L.J. 1136.

The Sub-Judge is subordinate to the District Judge. The fact that the particular suit in which the offence was committed involved a claim of over Rs. 5,000 and that an appeal from the decision passed in that suit would lie to the High Court and not to the District Court, is immaterial. An appeal from the Sub-Judge's decree ordinarily (i.e., in a majority of cases) lies to the District Judge, and it is only in exceptional cases (involving claims over Rs. 5,000) that the appeal lies to the High Court. The District Judge can therefore make a complaint where the Sub-Judge has refused to do so—Wadero Abdul v. Sadhuram, 25 S.L.R. 196, 32 Cr.L.J. 1012 (1013), Ind. Rul. 1931 Sind 104, 133 I.C. 72, A.I.R. 1931 Sind 163; Lakshman-Sakharam, 2 Bom. 281; Anant Ramchandra, 11 Bom. 438; Viyyanna v. Bajamma, 19 Cr.L.J. 261; Narayanan v. Kadisaya, 44 M.L.J. 320, 24 Cr.L.J. 337; Ganesh v. Jittan, 17 A.L.J. 191; Hubbar v. Sajjad Ali, 22 O.C. 189; Srinivasa, 1933 M.W.N. 1290. See also Thakur Prasad, 37 Cr.L.J. 413, 139 I.C. 503, 16 P.L.T. 808, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 122; Fazal Ilahi v. Mohan Lal, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 346, 72 I.C. 383, 24 Cr.L.J. 383; Narotam Das v. Bhagwan Das, A.I.R. 1939 All. 79 (81), 1938 A.L.J. 1196, 1938 A.W.R. (H.C.) 747. So is the Court of the Judicial Extra Assistant Commissioner subordinate to that of the District Judge for the purposes of this section—Mt. Umtul Quresh v. Ghulam Hassan, A.I.R. 1938 Pesh. 83, 1938 Pesh.L.J. 92. Any order passed by the Civil Judge under sec. 476, Cr. P. C., making a complaint for an offence against any person would be appealable to the District Judge and not to the High Court. The fact that the order appealed from has been made in connection with a case under the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act does not take it out of the purview of the above provisions of law. The Special Judge in making a complaint under sec. 476, Cr. P. C., does not pass an order under the U. P.

Encumbered Estates Act which would be appealable to the High Court under sec. 45 of that Act. It is merely an order under sec. 476, Cr. P. C., by a Civil Court and the question of the forum of appeal from that order has to be decided in the light of the provisions of sec. 476B read with sec. 195, Cr. P. C. In accordance with those provisions the appeal would lie in the Court of the District Judge and not to the High Court—Akbar Husain Khan v. Emp. 41 Cr.L.J. 227, 185 I.C. 700, A.I.R. 1940 All. 7, 1939 A.L.J. 962, 1939 A.W.R. (H.C.) 783, 1939 A Cr.C. 197, I.L.R. 1939 All. 975.

A Munsiff's Court is subordinate to the District Judge's Court—Bure Khan, 1898 P.R. 16; Munshi v. Gandomal, 1900 P.R. 25; Miran v. Belt Ram, 1916 P.L.R. 67; Sundar Singh v. Phuman, 2 Lah.L.J. 415; but not to the Subordinate Judge's Court, although appeals from the Munsiff's Court are generally transferred by the District Judge to the Subordinate Judge—Ram Chandra v. Tirupulla, 39 Cal. 774. See also Hari Mandal v. Keshab, 40 Cal. 37, 16 C.W.N. 645. But when under the law or by a notification certain appeals from the Munsiff's decrees lie to a first class Subordinate Judge, the Munsiff will be deemed as subordinate not to the District Judge but to the 1st class Subordinate Judge—Labhu Ram v. Nand Ram, 1918 P.R. 29, 19 Cr.L.J. 975; Ramayya v. Sukayya, 28 M.L.J. 486; Dina Nath v. Md. Abdulla, 2 Lah. 57; Jwala Singh v. Madan Gopal, 27 Cr.L.J. 75 (Lah.); Ramchandra, 8 Pat. 428, 30 Cr.L.J. 834; Jagrup Shukul, A.I.R. 1918 All. 332, 42 I.C. 915, 19 Cr.L.J. 4, 40 All. 21, 15 A.L.J. 844; Shiva Prasad v. Pahlad Singh, A.I.R. 1935 All. 696, 161 I.C. 322, 58 All. 85, 1935 A.L.J. 943; Narotam Das v. Bhagwan Das, A.I.R. 1939 All. 79 (81), 1938 A.L.J. 1196. See also Lokman v. Halku, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 236, 36 Cr.L.J. 851, 155 I.C. 863, 1934 Cr.C. 1089, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 261 where an appeal from an order of Small Cause Court Judge at Sangor was held to lie in the Court of Additional District Judge at Sangor and not to the District Judge, Jubblepore.

The Deputy Commissioner's Court at Santhal Parganas is subordinate to the Court of the Commissioner of Bhagalpur, and not to the High Court—Munna Lal v. Padman, 30 Cal. 916.

A first class Magistrate is not subordinate to the District Magistrate but to the Sessions Judge—Mithi Lal v. Lareti, 5 A.L.J. 562, 7 Cr.L.J. 304; Narotam, 6 All. 98; Malu Ram, 1902 P.R. 7, 44 P.L.R. 1902 (overruling Soba Singh v. Lal Chand, 1901 P.R. 30); Aly Mohd, 1912 P.R. 2, 12 Cr.L.J. 539; Badiuddin, 47 Bom. 102; Mofizuddin v. Basanta, 16 Cr.L.J. 640 (Cal.); Sant Ram v. Dewan Chand, 24 Cr.L.J. 913.

A single Judge on the Original Side of the High Court is subordinate to the Divisional Bench on the Appellate Side hearing appeals from the judgment of the single Judge—Munisamy v. Rajaratnam, 45 Mad. 928 (F.B.); Abdul Latif v. Haji Tar Mohamed, 47 Bom. 270; Ramjan v. Moolji, 56 Cal. 932, 33 C.W.N. 329 (331), A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 521, 118 I.C. 889, 30 Cr.L.J. 974, 1929 Cr.C. 184.

Where no appeals lie, the original Civil Court will be deemed to be subordinate to the principal Court of original civil jurisdiction. Thus, the Provincial Small Cause Court is subordinate to the District Judge—Chidda Lal v. Bhajan Lal 39 All. 657 (F.B.), 42 I.C. 167, A.I.R. 1917 All. 405; Lokman v. Halku, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 236, 1934 Cr.C. 1089, A.L.R. 1934 Nag. 261; Abdul Ghani v. Ram Mohan, 36 Cr.L.J. 950, 156 I.C. 593, 1935 A.L.J. 573, A.I.R. 1935 All. 573, 1935 Cr.C. 594, 1935 A.L.R. 594, 8 R.A. 3; Ram Sarup, A.I.R. 1935 All. 446, 1935 A.L.J. 476; Lalji, 4 P.L.J. 609 (623) (F.B.); Nibaran v. Akshoy, 21 C.W.N. 948; Ram Dayal v. Dwarka, 20 O.C. 223; Panchu v. Jumman, 6 O.W.N. 848, 1929 Cr.C. 589; Iyavoo v. Thayammal, 18 Cr.L.J. 977 (Bur.); Abdul Hussein v. Mohamed Ibrahim, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 526. The cases of Ambica Tewari, 1 P.L.J. 206, and Sukhdeo, 2 P.L.J. 1, in which it was held that this clause did not apply to a Provincial Small Cause Court, have been overruled by Lalji Tewari, 4 P.L.J. 609 (F.B.) cited above. A similar opinion (obiter) expressed by Chamier, J., in—Ajudhia v. Ram Lal, 34 All. 197 (200, 201) has been disapproved of in 39 All. 657 (F.B.) and 4 P.L.J. 609 (F.B.). But a Provincial Small Cause Court is not subordinate to the High Court—In re Ram Prasad, 37 Cal. 13 (22), 4 I.C. 6, 10 Cr.L.J. 454; Lalji, supra. The Mamlatdar's Court is subordinate to the District Judge —Gurunath v. Narasimha, 5 Bom.L.R. 206; Narayan v. Tukaram, 9 Bom.L.R. 896. The Presidency Small Cause Court is subordinate to the High Court in its Appellate Side. The words "principal Court of original civil jurisdiction," when applied to the High Court, do not mean only the Original Side of the High Court, but apply to the Appellate Side also—Jamnadas v. Sabapathi, 36 Mad. 138; Kalyanjee v. Ram Deen, 48 Mad. 395, 48 M.L.J. 290, 26 Cr.L.J. 801. The Village Munsiff is subordinate to the District Judge—Sundar Lal, 6 A.L.J. 796, 10 Cr.L.J. 437. A Village Panchayet when it is exercising jurisdiction in civil matters is a Civil Court, and is subordinate to the principal Court of original civil jurisdiction, viz., the District Judge, (though in many other respects it is subordinate to the Collector)—Salig Ram, 52 All 1018, 32 Cr.L.J. 558 (559), 130 I.C. 488, 1930 A.L.J. 1520, 1931 Cr.C. 200, A.I.R. 1931 All. 141, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 280; Charyan, 35 Cr.L.J. 1050, 149 I.C. 1239, 1934 A.L.J. 339, A.I.R. 1934 All. 216, 1934 Cr.C. 326. See also Lakshmaniah, 1933 M.W.N. 1423. It should be noted that the latter part of sub-section (3) is now restricted to civil Courts only, whereas under the old law, it applied to any Court and the words used were "the principal Court of original jurisdiction" which included a Criminal and a Revenue Court; and therefore it was held that in respect of an execution proceeding in a Revenue Court under the Agra Tenancy Act from which no appeal lay, the principal Court of original jurisdiction was not the District Judge but the Collector—Ajudhia v. Ram Lal, 34 All 197 (202). See also Lalji, 5 P.L.J. 609 (621). The present law has made no provisions for such cases.

632. Clause (a):—Where appeals lie to more than one Court, the Appellate Court of inferior jurisdiction would be the Court to which the original Court must be deemed to be subordinate—Ram Krishna v. Mohan Lal, 8 N.L.R. 57, 13 Cr.L.J. 498. Thus, the Subordinate Judge would be held to be inferior to the District Judge and not to the High Court, even though the appeal in the particular instance would lie to the High Court—Lakshman, 2 Bom. 481; Anant Ramchandra, 11 Bom. 438. So also the Recorder's Court at Rangoon is subordinate to the High Court for the purpose of the execution, though in the particular case the appeal may lie to the Privy Council—Maduray v. Elderton, 22 Cal 487.

633. Clause (b):—"Or proceeding":—These words have been added in deference to the opinion expressed by Chamer, J., in Ajudhia Prosad v. Ram Lal, 34 All 197 (200). In this case a suit was brought in the Court of the Assistant Collector for arrears of rent exceeding Rs. 100, and in execution proceeding thereof certain false statements were made. The suit being one for rent exceeding Rs. 100 was appealable, but the execution proceeding was not appealable according to the provisions of the Agra Tenancy Act. The question arose—to which Court was the Assistant Collector subordinate and to determine this question it was necessary to decide whether clause (b) or clause (c) of sub-section (7) of the old section was applicable. It was contended that since the 'case' being one for rent exceeding Rs. 100 was appealable (though the execution proceeding was not), clause (b) would apply; but the Judges held that the word 'case' in clause (b) included execution proceedings, and since the execution proceeding in the present case was not appealable, clause (b) could not apply, as that clause applies only where an appeal lies. The case was therefore governed by clause (c) of sub-section (7).

634. Sub-section (4)—Abetment:—A distinction has been drawn between the abetment of an offence mentioned in clause (b) of sub-section (1) and the abetment of an offence mentioned in clause (c). Since clause (c) speaks only of offences committed by a party to the proceeding, it follows that no complaint by Court is necessary in respect of an abetment of an offence mentioned in clause (c), if the abettor was not a party to the proceeding—Ghansham, 32 All. 74. See Note 629, ante. But in the case of offences mentioned in clause (b), an abettor cannot be prosecuted without a previous complaint by the Court, even though he was not a party to the proceeding, because no mention is made of a 'party' to the proceeding in clause (b)—Ram Bilas v. Lachmi Narain, 45 All. 140.

Under sub-section (4) of this section an "offence" under the Section includes abetments and attempts, so that if a complaint of the Court is necessary in the case of the substantive offences it is also necessary in the case of abetment—Assudomal Ramandas v. Jhamandas Hotchand, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 100 (101).

Under this sub-section the previous sanction of the Magistrate is necessary for a prosecution under sec. 193|120B, I. P. Code—Mathuranath, 33 Cr.L.J. 657, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 850, 1932 Cr.C. 881, Ind Rul. 1932 Cal. 561. It would be violating the spirit underlying sec. 196A, Cr. P. C., if a person were allowed to be convicted of an offence under sec. 120B, I. P. C., even though his prosecution under that section is neither sanctioned by the District Magistrate nor was within the contemplation of the officer making the complaint under sec. 476—Bhikhari, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 561 (563), 15 P.L.T. 523.

634A. Sub-section (5)—Withdrawal of complaint:—Sub-section (5) applies only where a complaint has been made by a public servant, and not by a Court. Where a Magistrate has made a complaint in respect of an offence under sec. 211, I. P. Code, the complaint is deemed to have been made sub-section (1), clause (b), by a Court and not by a public servant. Consequently, sub-section (5) does not apply, and the District Magistrate has no power to order the withdrawal of the complaint—Ram Prasad, 49 All. 752, 25 A.L.J. 639, 28 Cr.L.J. 543. The District Magistrate could direct the withdrawal of the complaint if an appeal had been made to him under sec. 476B.

A Sub-Divisional Magistrate passing an order under sec. 144, Cr. P. Code and making a complaint for the prosecution of the accused under sec. 188, I. P. Code for disobedience to that order, acts as a public servant under sub-sec. (1), clause (a) of this section, and not as a Court. Consequently sub-section (3) of this section does not apply. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate is subordinate to the District Magistrate and not to the Sessions Judge (see sec. 17). An application for withdrawal of the complaint under sub-section (5) is to be made to the District Magistrate, and not to the Sessions Judge—Maini Misser, 6 Pat. 39, 28 Cr.L.J. 353; Nagu Servai, 57 Mad. 1101, A.L.R. 1934 Mad. 544, 67 M.L.J. 195, 35 Cr.L.J. 1134, 150 I.C. 773, 1934 M.W.N. 483, 1934 Cr.C. 799, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 473, 40 M.L.W. 90. An application for withdrawal of a complaint under this section is not by way of appeal but is one by way of revision. An order of dismissal should not be passed to the applicant's prejudice without his being heard either personally or by pleader—Nagu Servai, supra.

No appeal lies against the refusal of a public servant to file a complaint under sec. 188, I. P. Code—Maruda Pillai v. Narayanaswami Pillai, 40 Cr.L.J. 568, 181 I.C. 557, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 336, 1939 M.W.N. 119, 49 M.L.W. 387, 11 R.M. 830. No appeal lies to the District Judge from an order of a Munsiff declining to make a complaint in respect of an offence under sec. 183, I. P. C., which is mentioned in clause (1) (a) of this section—Bajrang Marwari v. Durga Prasad, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 31 (32), 1936 P.W.N. 747, 166 I.C. 870, 38 Cr.L.J. 292, 9 R.P. 350, 3 B.R. 226. But in such a case the District Judge may make a complaint as an administrative order and since the District Judge is apparently entitled, under the provisions of section 195 (1) (a), to make such a complaint, the fact that Subordinate Judge has refused to make a complaint does not appear to affect the matter—Ramesh Chandra v. Hari Mohan, 42 C.W.N. 531. A Munsiff refused to make a complaint in respect of an offence under sec. 186, I. P. Code. On appeal the District Judge directed the prosecution. Held that when an Appellate Court in the exercise of its authority under section 195 (1) (a), Cr. P. C., directed the institution of a complaint under sec. 186, I. P. C., the order was not open to appeal—Yusuf Ali v. Lachmi, A.I.R. 1931 All. 630, 53 All. 591, 1931 Cr.C. 926, 132 I.C. 419, 1931 A.L.J. 366; or to revision under sec. 115, Cr. P. Code—Ramesh Chandra v. Hari Mohan, 42 C.W.N. 531. But the question involved is one which can properly be raised by a Rule to show cause why the order of the Magistrate taking cognizance of the complaint by the Judge should not be set aside for want of jurisdiction (Per Patterson, J.)—Ramesh Chandra v. Hari Mohan, supra. See also Note 1257.

The ruling reported in 27 Cr.L.J. 1247, 98 I.C. 63, 3 O.W.N. 757, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 51 (Emp. v. Ram Nath) seems to suggest that the Court making a complaint can request the Magistrate to allow its withdrawal in accordance with the provisions of sec. 248, Cr. P. Code.

Ordinarily the High Court will not entertain a revision against what purports to be no more than a complaint—Abdul Jalil Khan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1936 All 354 (356), 1936 A.L.J. 373, 1936 A.W.R. 210, 1936 Cr.C. 418, 162 I.C. 755, 1936 A.L.R. 468, 37 Cr.L.J. 713.

634B. Miscellaneous:—Dismissal for default :—There is no provision in the Cr. P. C., which warrants the Court in rejecting or dismissing the application of the Public Prosecutor because of his failure to appear at the time the application is called on for dismissal. The Court is bound to consider the application on its merits, even though the party who makes it is not there to help the Court—Gopal Siddeshwar, 32 Bom. 203 (205).

Review:—The Court has no power to review its order under this section, because the Cr. P. C., contains no provision giving jurisdiction to a Court to review orders passed under it—Gopal Siddeshwar, 32 Bom. 203 (204). See also Notes 1248 and 1255A.

Revival of proceedings:—When the public servant concerned withdrew the proceedings originally instituted by him, it is definitely undesirable that they should be revived by a person who was not a public servant—Madhu Sudan v. Haridas, 44 C.W.N. 1011 (1013).

Costs:—The powers of the Civil Procedure Code as to costs cannot be imported into a criminal proceeding. The proceeding under sec 195, Cr P C, though taken in a Civil Court, relates to a criminal matter taken under the Cr P. Code and the Court has no power to give costs under sec 195, Cr P Code—Bholanath v. Purna Chandra, 25 C.W.N. 661, following Mahomed Dustagir Sahib v. Mahomed Karimuddin, 2 Weir 196 and Bishen Das v. Rahamat Khan, 5 PR 1915, 28 I.C. 329, 16 Cr.L.J. 281. See also 13 I.C. 99, 13 Cr.L.J. 6; 14 Cr.L.J. 422, 20 I.C. 406; 17 Cr.L.J. 184, 33 I.C. 824.

See Note 1255A.

Malicious prosecution:—Proceedings relating to the granting of sanction under sec 195, Cr P C, come within the meaning of the term "prosecution" for the purposes of a suit for damages for malicious prosecution—Robindra v. Jogendra, 33 C.W.N. 79, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 691, following Narendra v. Jyotish, 27 C.W.N. 387, 49 Cal. 1035, 67 I.C. 705. See also Nagarmull v. Jaharmull, 35 Cr.L.J. 925, 148 I.C. 1129, 60 Cal. 1022, A.I.R. 1933 Cal 909.

196. No Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under Chapter VI or IXA of the Indian Penal Code (except section 127), or punishable under section 108A, or section 153A, or section 294A, or section 295A, or section 505 of the same Code, unless upon complaint made by order of, or under authority from, the Provincial Government, or some officer empowered by the Provincial Government in this behalf.

Amendments:—The words "or IXA" have been added by sec. 3 of Act XXXIX of 1920 (Election Offences and Inquiries Act).

The words "or section 295A" have been added by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1927 (XXV of 1927).

The words "the Provincial Government or some officer empowered by the Provincial Government" have been substituted for "the Governor-General in Council, the Local Government or some officer empowered by the Governor-General in Council" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

634C. A complaint of an offence under section 171E (falling under Chapter IXA) of the I. P. Code requires a sanction under this section—Ponnuswamy, 42 M.L.J. 139, 23 Cr.L.J. 148

A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to inquire into a complaint in respect of a false return of election expenses, unless the complaint is made by order of the Government—Labh Singh v. Narinjan, 6 Lah. 188, 26 P.L.R. 379, 26 Cr.L.J. 1234.

635. Object and scope of section:—The object of this section is to prevent unauthorised persons from intruding in matters of State by instituting State prosecutions, and to secure that such prosecution shall only be instituted under the authority of the Government—Bal Gangadhar Tilak, 22 Bom. 112 (125).

This section does not control the powers of a Magistrate under the Code, but only prevents a Court from taking cognizance of certain offences without there being a complaint made by order of or under authority from the Governor-General in Council, the Local Government or some officer empowered by the Governor-General in Council in this behalf—Brahma Nand v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 All. 682 (683), 1939 A.L.J. 779, I.L.R. 1939 All. 924.

636. Complaint:—A complaint which did not set forth the concrete facts relied on as constituting the offences but merely copied out the words of the sections of the Penal Code was held to be defective—Pulin, 16 C.W.N. 1105, 13 Cr.L.J. 609, 15 C.L.J. 517. But a complaint is not defective merely because it does not set out the speeches or the dates of the speeches, and the alleged seditious words which are the subject-matter of the charge. Even if it were defective, this is at most an irregularity curable by sec. 537—Chidambaram, 32 Mad. 3 (11), 5 M.L.T. 11, 1 I.C. 22, 9 Cr.L.J. 108; Narayana, 25 Cr.L.J. 401, 77 I.C. 481, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 106. It is not necessary that the complaint must consist of allegation made on oath or reduced to writing. An application by the Superintendent, C. I. D., coupled with his oral allegations was a sufficient complaint—Apurba, 35 Cal. 141 (151), 7 C.L.J. 49.

A letter of the Local Government according sanction for prosecution of a certain person under sec. 121, I. P. C., is not a complaint, though it may be taken as an authority to make a complaint—Shamal Khan, 1890 P.R. 16. The person who signs the letter of authority is not the complainant, and it is not necessary to take his examination under the law. The person who acted with the authority makes the application to the Court for the apprehension of the accused is the complainant and his examination is to be taken—Apurba Krishna Bose, 35 Cal. 141, 7 C.L.J. 49 (Bande Mataram case).

637. Order or authority:—Form and contents :—This section does not prescribe any particular form of order and does not even require the order to be in writing. No special mode is laid down in the Code whereby the order or sanction of Government is to be conveyed to the officer who puts the law in motion—Bal Gangadhar Tilak, 22 Bom. 112 (124,150). What the Court has to see is whether the complaint has been made by the order or under the authority of the Government—Chidambaram, 32 Mad. 3 (9). A telegram sent by the Government expressly authorising the Public Prosecutor to file a complaint against the accused for an offence under sec. 124A, I. P. C., is a perfectly valid authority—Varadarajulu Naidu, 42 Mad. 180 (182).

A sanction under this section should be expressed with sufficient particularity and with strict adherence to the language of the section. The sanction should not be given in the abstract which may float about the world like a bit of thistle-down until it comes in contact with some possible prosecutor—Apurba Krishna, 35 Cal. 141 (149, 151). But the sanction need not yet be very particular about its contents, provided its meaning and intention are clear. Where the letter of authority sanctioning prosecution for sedition did not specify the name of the accused, but simply described as the "printer of the newspaper Bande Mataram," and his name was supplied at the commencement of the Police Court proceedings, it was held that this was a sufficient compliance with the section as the accused was sufficiently indicated from the first—Apurba Krishna, 35 Cal. 141 (150), 7 C.L.J. 49. A sanction for the prosecution of the accused in the alternative for offences under sec. 121 or under sec. 121A is not defective on the ground that it does not specify with sufficient clearness the section or the offences in respect of which it is given—Puthen Vectil Kunhi, 42 M.L.J. 108, 23 Cr.L.J. 203. Where the persons to be prosecuted were named, the offences and the period of their activity specified and the particular sections of the Penal Code set out, the mere circumstance that these persons were not described as the members of the Revolutionary Society the existence of which was sought to be proved at the trial, did not affect the validity of the section—Pulin Behary Das, 16 C.W.N. 1105, 13 Cr.L.J. 609, 15 C.L.J. 517, 16 I.C. 257. The section does not lay down any particular form in which the sanction should be accorded; sanction must be deemed sufficient if it names the persons to be prosecuted and specifies sections under which they are alleged to have committed the offence, as also the period of their activity. The sanction is not defective if it does not contain the objectionable utterances for which the accused are prosecuted under sec. 124A, I P. Code—Kishen Singh, 25 Cr.L.J. 279, 16 I.C. 871, AIR 1923 Lah. 333. In a prosecution of sedition, if the sanction contains the name of the printer, publisher, editor, etc., of the newspaper, the name of the newspaper, the offence committed and the particular section of the Penal Code, and refers to "certain articles" appearing in the newspaper, the fact that the sanction does not specify the exact article complained of does not make the sanction insufficient or invalid—Bal Gangadhar Tilak, 22 Bom 112 (124, 150). The intention of the Legislature is to ensure that no prosecution for an offence specified in sec. 196 should be launched except on a complaint authorised by the Government, and if this intention is given effect to, it is immaterial whether or not all the facts on which the complaint was to be based were stated in the authority with meticulous precision. It is not necessary to set out any fact other than the fact that the accused had committed an offence under a certain section of a certain Act—Nga Aung, 2 Bur L.J. 196, 25 Cr.L.J. 193, AIR 1924 Rang 65 (66). Where the sanction contained a misdescription of the newspaper article on which the prosecution was based, and this was rectified by a subsequent sanction filed in the course of the trial, it was held that the petitioner was not prejudiced and the defect was cured by sec. 537—Apurba, 35 Cal. 141 (152), 7 C.L.J. 49.

It is not necessary that the actual words of the complaint should be sanctioned—Varadarajulu, 42 Mad 180 (182); Chidambaran, 32 Mad 3 (9). Where the order of the Government directing the prosecution (for sedition) states the persons to be prosecuted, the sections under which the institution of the criminal proceedings is authorised, and, in general terms, the times when the seditious speeches were delivered, it is not necessary that the actual words of the complaint must be expressly authorised by the Local Government—Chidambaran, supra; Varadarajulu, 42 Mad. 180 (184).

Where the telegram sent by the Local Government expressly authorised the Public Prosecutor to file a complaint against V, under sec. 124A, I P. C., and to act immediately if the District Magistrate thought it advisable after consulting him, and formally enjoined the District Magistrate to submit the complaint prepared "for issue of supplemental sanction," held that the last sentence must be read apart from the first portion of the telegram and did not limit the authority given, and a complaint filed in pursuance of that telegram but without any supplemental sanction was not illegal. Further, the words "if the District Magistrate thought it advisable after consulting him" do not mean that consultation was essentially necessary before the filing of the complaint—Varadarajulu Naidu, 42 Mad. 180 (182).

Where the authority to prosecute was not given to any determinate person, but the order sanctioning the prosecution was communicated to the District Magistrate, the Public Prosecutor and the senior special Judge, and a prosecution was initiated by the Additional Public Prosecutor, held that the fact that the order of authorisation was not given to any determinate person did not affect the legality of the trial, and that the alleged defect in the order was curable by sec. 537—Kutty Moopan, 44 M.L.J. 166; Apurba, 35 Cal. 141 (151).

Signature :—The authority under sec. 196 need not, in the case of a Local Government, be signed personally by the Lieutenant-Governor; it is enough, if it is signed by one of his accredited or Gazetted officers (e.g., the Chief Secretary in this case)—Apurba, 35 Cal. 141 (152), 7 C.L.J. 49. The sanction must be signed by the Chief Secretary to the Government. An order signed by the Deputy Secretary on behalf of the Chief Secretary is not legal—Oziulla v. Beni Madhab, 50 Cal. 135.

Provincial Government :—The sanction must, in order to satisfy the section, have been the act of the Local (now Provincial) Government, and not of a single member of such Government. A telegram conveying sanction of Government purporting to come from the Chief Secretary is not sufficient, because an individual member of Government cannot purport to act in the name of the Government—Varadarajulu Naidu, 42 Mad. 885 (890, 896).

Where a sanction was duly given by the de facto Local (now Provincial) Government under this section, and no objection was made thereto at the trial, it was not open to the person convicted at the trial to challenge the sanction in appeal before the High Court, on the ground that the Local (now Provincial) Government granting the sanction was not legally constituted and had no authority to sanction the prosecution—Pulin Behari Das, 16 C.W.N. 1105 (1113), 13 Cr.L.J. 609, 15 C.L.J. 517, 16 I.C. 257.

In the case of a sanction to prosecute under this section, the Governor is certainly not required to exercise his individual judgment; but that does not mean that in exercising his individual judgment he is acting unlawfully and that his act can be called in question in a Court of Law. There is nothing in the Government of India Act, 1935 (26 Geo 5, Ch 2), which imposed a legal obligation upon His Excellency the Governor to consult his Ministers before sanctioning the prosecution of the accused—Battiwala, 39 Cr.L.J. 938 (941), 1938 M.W.N. 529, 48 M.L.W. 170, 177 I.C. 747, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 758, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 416, 11 R.M. 375.

638. Want of sanction and complaint :—Absence of sanction under this section vitiates the whole proceedings—Barindra, 37 Cal. 467 (493). Even a sanction given after the filing of the complaint does not fulfil the requirements of this section—Varadarajulu Naidu, 42 Mad. 885 (888), A.I.R. 1920 Mad. 928, 51 I.C. 343, 20 Cr.L.J. 455, 37 M.L.J. 81; Barindra, 37 Cal. 467 (492), 11 Cr.L.J. 453, 7 I.C. 359, 14 C.W.N. 1114; Venkataramiah, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 130, 1937 M.W.N. 996, 46 M.L.W. 709, (1937) 2 M.L.J. 862. Where the law clearly says that it is a condition precedent to the prosecution that a sanction shall be obtained from the Local Government, it is not open to any subordinate authority to override the provision of the law by saying that the offence falls under another section of the Penal Code and that no sanction is necessary for the prosecution under that section—Ram Nath, 47 All. 268, 22 A.L.J. 1106, A.I.R. 1925 All. 230, 84 I.C. 714, 26 Cr.L.J. 362. For the contrary view see Maganlal, 35 Cr.L.J. 1097, 150 I.C. 623, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 71, 1934 Cr.C. 276, where all the cases on the point were discussed.

But where the accused was prosecuted upon a sanction of the Local Government without a formal complaint, and no objection was taken to the absence or irregularity of the complaint at the trial, the defect did not affect the trial, and the irregularity or insufficiency of the complaint was cured by sec. 537—Swami Dayal, 1908 P.R. 8, 7 Cr.L.J. 353; Pulin Behari, 16 C.W.N. 1105 (1112).

Defective sanction :—If the sanction is defective in certain particulars, e.g., if the sanction for prosecution under sec. 124A, I. P. Code, only refers to "certain articles" appearing in a newspaper, without specifying those articles, but no objection is taken by the accused as to the irregularity of the sanction during the commitment proceedings, the Judge presiding at the High Court Sessions can, in his discretion under sec. 532, accept the commitment—Bal Gangadhar Tilak, 22 Bom 112 (124, 125), following Morton, 9 Bom. 288 (FB). It should be noted that the case of 9 Bom. 288, which was followed in Tilak's case, was one relating to sec. 197 and not sec. 196, Jenkins, C.J. (in Barindra, 37 Cal. 467, 492), therefore, doubted whether it was correct to follow a case under sec. 197 while giving a decision under sec. 196.

Complaint:—In Reg. v. Vinayak Detatar, 8 Bom.H.C.R. 32 (Crown Cases) an order sanctioning prosecution of a highly placed Magistrate directed that the complaint should be filed by a responsible I. C. S. Magistrate specifically named. It was held in that case that it was clear that the Government intended that that particular I. C. S. gentleman should file the complaint and no other, that the Government clearly thought it advisable that this particular gentleman should consider the case against the accused and select such act of his as he deemed suitable and proper for the subject of a charge, and that it was not the intention of the Government that this power of discrimination should be delegated to some other person of a lower rank. But where the order of the Government sanctioning the prosecution for sedition was: "The Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Railways and C. I. D., is requested to depute an officer of the Special Branch, C. I. D., of the rank not lower than that of Inspector of Police, to prefer a complaint in the Court of the District Magistrate of Nellore," and the Superintendent, Special Branch, C. I. D., for the Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Railways and C. I. D., deputed an Inspector of Police, Special Branch, C. I. D., to file the complaint, it cannot be said that the prosecution is not properly filed because the Inspector was not deputed by the Deputy Inspector-General himself. The Government clearly had no intention that any particular officer should file the complaint—Balluvala, 39 Cr.L.J. 938, 1938 M.W.N. 529, 48 M.L.W. 170, 177 I.C. 747, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 758, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 416, 11 R.M. 375.

639. Prosecution for other offences not mentioned in sanction:—

Where an order under section 196 authorised a particular officer to prefer a complaint of "offences under sections 121A, 122, I.P.C., or under any other section of the said Code which may be found applicable to the case" and the Magistrate prosecuted the accused and committed him in respect of an offence under sec. 121, I.P.C., it was held that since the offence under sec. 121 required a sanction under this section, and it was not specifically mentioned in the sanction, the commitment in respect of an offence under sec. 121 was illegal—Barindra Kumar, 37 Cal. 467 (491). The reason is that the power and discretion of determining whether cognizance shall be taken in respect of an offence mentioned in this section cannot be delegated by the Local Government to any other body of persons, and if the Magistrate is allowed to prosecute a person for an offence referred to in this section when such offence was not specifically mentioned in the sanction, it means a delegation of power to the Magistrate which cannot be sustained. In the words of Jenkins, C.J.: "The policy of the safeguard contained in sec. 196 is manifest: the maintenance of this control is of the highest importance; and it is beyond the competence of the Local Government to delegate to any other body or person, this controlling power and the discretion which it implies. It would be opposed to the true intentment of sec. 196 for the Local Government by its order to give its legal or other advisers a roving power to determine under what section of the Charter proceedings should be taken, and to abandon to them the discretion and responsibility that properly belongs to itself"—Barindra Kumar, 37 Cal. 467 (489, 490, 491), 14 C.W.N. 1114, 11 Cr.L.J. 453. Where sanction is granted by the Local Government for the prosecution of certain persons for an offence in respect of an act which is precisely defined in the order granting the sanction, the order cannot be treated as an authority for a prosecution in respect of an offence which is absolutely distinct and is alleged to have been committed on an occasion different from that specified in the order—U. Pathada, 3 Bur.L.J. 178, 26 Cr.L.J. 245 (246). So also, where the Local Government gave sanction to prosecute a person for an offence under sec. 121, I.P. Code, the Court has no power to charge and convict him for an offence under sec. 124A, I.P. Code—U. Uyan, 4 Rang. 131, 27 Cr.L.J. 1075. But a sanction under section 124A authorises a prosecution under secs. 124A and 114, I. P. Code—Chidambaram, 32 Mad. 3.

When the letter from a Deputy Secretary to the Government of Bengal sanctioned prosecution for an offence under sec. 4 of the Explosive Substances Act (VI of 1908) read with sec. 120B, I. P. C., for an offence under sec. 436, I. P. C., read with sec. 120B, I. P. C., and for such other offence or offences as may be disclosed in the evidence and the accused was also charged with and tried for an offence under sec. 5 of the Explosive Substances Act, held that the conviction under sec. 5 of the Explosive Substances Act was legal—Madhu, 37 C.W.N. 934 (936). See also Nathu Ram, A.I.R. 1934 All. 982, 4 A.W.R. 672, 1934 A.L.J. 1088, 1934 Cr.C. 1302.

So also, it is not illegal to prosecute without a sanction a person for an offence for which no sanction is necessary; thus, where a person has committed an offence under sec. 122, I. P. C., and by the same act abetted the offence of dacoity; the fact that the Government refused sanction for the former offence would be no bar to his prosecution for the minor offence of abetting dacoity, for which no sanction is necessary—Anant Puranik, 25 Bom. 90 (94).

Prosecution for certain classes of criminal conspiracy.

196A. No Court shall take cognizance of the offence of criminal conspiracy punishable under section 120B of the Indian Penal Code,

- (1) in a case where the object of the conspiracy is to commit either an illegal act other than an offence, or a legal act by illegal means, or an offence to which the provisions of section 196 apply, unless upon complaint made by order of, or under authority from, the Provincial Government or some officer empowered by the Provincial Government in this behalf, or
- (2) in a case where the object of the conspiracy is to commit any non-cognizable offence, or a cognizable offence not punishable with death, transportation or rigorous imprisonment for a term of two years or upwards, unless the Provincial Government, or a Chief Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate empowered in this behalf by the Provincial Government has, by order in writing, consented to the initiation of the proceedings:

Provided that where the criminal conspiracy is one to which the provisions of sub-section (4) of section 195 apply, no such consent shall be necessary.

Amendment:—The words “the Provincial Government or some officer empowered by the Provincial Government” and “Provincial Government” have been substituted for “the Governor-General in Council, the Local Government or some officer empowered by the Governor-General in Council” and “Local Government” respectively by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

640. Scope:—This section applies only to a prosecution for conspiracy punishable under sec. 120B of the Penal Code, and not for abetment by conspiracy punishable under sec. 109 of that Code—Abdul Salim, 49 Cal. 573, 26 C.W.N. 680, 34 C.L.J. 279, 23 Cr.L.J. 657, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 107, 69 I.C. 145; Abdul Rahman, 3 Rang. 95, 26 Cr.L.J.

-1329 (1332). This section only prohibits the entertainment of certain kinds of complaints for conspiracy punishable under sec. 120B, I. P. C., without the sanction of Government, but it does not alter the former law, for instance, complaints for the principal offence committed by a co-conspirator in pursuance of the conspiracy or for abetment by him of any such offence committed by one of the other co-conspirators under sec. 109, I. P. Code—Muhammad Bachal, 35 Cr.L.J. 812, 148 I.C. 678, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 4, 1934 Cr.C. 89. This section deals only with the case of criminal conspiracy and not with that of abetment of an offence or an attempt to commit that offence—Bhikari, A.I.R. 1934 Pat 561 (563), 15 I.C. 282, 13 Pat. 729, 15 P.L.T. 523, 1934 Cr.C. 1215, 36 Cr.L.J. 17. Where there is no allegation of criminal conspiracy in the complaint, nor does the complaint disclose any charge of criminal conspiracy, but the allegation in the plaint merely incidentally involves a charge of conspiracy, no sanction is necessary under this section—Nune Panakalu v. Ravulu, 52 Mad. 695, 30 Cr.L.J. 191 (198).

- Where the accused was charged under sec. 404, as well as sec. 404 read with sec. 120B, I. P. Code, but the Magistrate overlooked the fact that the offences under sec. 404 read with sec. 120B required sanction of the Local Government under sec. 196A, Cr. P. Code, and proceeded with the trial without sanction, held that the proceedings under sec. 404|120B must be dropped, and the case should proceed only under sec. 404—Sukumar v. Mofizuddin, 25 C.W.N. 357 (359), 22 Cr.L.J. 455. But where there were two accused, and one of them was charged and convicted under secs. 384 along with 120B, I. P. C., and the other under secs. 384|114 along with 120B, and no sanction of the Local Government was obtained, held that the requirement of sanction could not be evaded by treating the first accused as convicted under sec. 384 only and the second accused as convicted under secs. 384|114 only. The charges requiring sanction and the charges not requiring sanction could not be separated in this way. The convictions must be set aside. But it would be open to the prosecution to proceed afresh against the first accused under section 384, I. P. C., and against the second accused under secs. 384|114, without requiring any sanction—Nibaran, 57 Cal. 99, 33 C.W.N. 834 (835, 836), 31 Cr.L.J. 995. Initiating a prosecution under sec. 120B, I. P. C., without the sanction of the authority referred to in sec. 196A, Cr. P. Code, is ab initio illegal, and the subsequent addition of charges which do not require such sanction cannot cure the illegality—Abdul Rahman, supra. If proceedings are taken on a charge of criminal conspiracy punishable under secs. 467 and 471, I. P. Code, without the sanction of the Local Government, and the case proceeds to the stage in the Sessions Court when the opinions of assessors are taken, the whole proceedings from the commitment up to the trial are illegal, and the Sessions Judge cannot pass judgment. The only course is to obtain the sanction of the Local Government, to frame a new complaint, and to recommence the inquiry under Chap. XVIII—Hari Charan, 12 Pat. 353, 14 P.L.T. 281, 1933 Cr.C. 755 (757), 34 Cr.L.J. 938, 145 I.C. 368, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 273.

The proviso lays down that a sanction under this section for prosecution for criminal conspiracy to commit a non-cognizable offence (e.g., fraudulently using as genuine a forged document or dishonestly making a false claim) is not necessary where the Court before which the forged document was used or false claim was made makes a complaint in respect of the offence under sub-section (4) of section 195—Kali Singh, 50 Cal. 461, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 53, 24 Cr.L.J. 949, 75 I.C. 533. But sub-section (4) of sec. 195 relates back to offences specified in clause (c) of that section, and that clause speaks of certain offences committed by a "party to the proceedings." If the offender is not a party to the proceedings, clause (c) and sub-sec. (4) of sec. 195 do not apply, and a sanction of the Local Government is necessary under sec. 196A—Abdul Rahman, supra; Nand Lal, 39 Cr.L.J. 765, 40 P.L.R. 815, 176 I.C. 654, 11 R.L. 211, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 526.

If the object of the conspiracy is to commit forgery, there can be no prosecution without the sanction of the Local Government. Where, however, the main charge is that of cheating, in which it is not necessary at all to mention forgery as the object of the conspiracy (the forgery being committed not for his own sake but in order to cheat a person and obtain money from him) the entire charge does not fail in consequence of the elimination of the head of forgery as an object of the conspiracy charged. Where the trial starts for an object of the conspiracy, which is beyond the cognizance of the Court, the omission of one head which is beyond the cognizance of the Court cannot affect the jurisdiction as regards the rest of the charge. The matter would be different, if commitment is made on a charge of committing criminal conspiracy for the purpose of forging documents, and subsequently on discovering that such a charge requires sanction, another object, that of cheating, is substituted—Bishambhar Nath, 2 O.W.N. 760, 26 Cr.L.J. 1602 (1604, 1606). If cheating is carried out by means of forgery, it does not follow that the provisions of sec. 196A would apply—Ibid. When the object of a criminal conspiracy is to commit a cognizable offence not requiring sanction under this section and the subsidiary object is also to employ all the necessary machinery for the concealment of the said offence, involving commission of non-cognizable offences, sanction under this section is not necessary—Parti Venkata, 35 Cr.L.J. 631, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 88, 1933 M.W.N. 1409, 148 I.C. 281, 39 M.L.W. 91, 66 M.L.J. 193, 1934 Cr.C. 118. The jurisdiction of the Court to take cognizance of an offence of conspiracy under sec. 120B, I. P. C., depends according to the terms of sec. 196A (2), Cr. P. C., upon the object of the conspiracy. If the object is to commit non-cognizable offence, undoubtedly sanction under that section is essential to give jurisdiction to the Court. The object of the conspiracy has to be determined at the initial stage not only by reference to the sections of the penal enactment referred to in the complaint but also upon the facts narrated therein and the evidence tendered before the Magistrate. There is recognizable difference between the object of a conspiracy and the means adopted to realize that object. If they are separable, then, even if the object is sought to be attained by resort to non-cognizable offences, no sanction is necessary. It does not matter if the object is erroneously mixed up with the statement of method of attaining it in the body of the complaint. It is perfectly open to the Magistrate upon the evidence to dissect the facts in order to decide the question of sanction—Ramchandra Rango Sawkar v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 579 (585), 181 I.C. 870, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 129, 41 Bom.L.R. 98, 12 R.B. 356.

If the sanction is obtained after the arrest of the accused, and after the examination of some prosecution witnesses but before the framing of the charge the requirements of this section are fulfilled. Where proceedings were taken on 14th August in respect of an offence under sec. 9 of the Opium Act, and warrants were issued on 18th August in respect of that offence only, but after the examination of some prosecution witnesses on 25th November, the Excise Superintendent produced an order of Government dated 12th September, and then a charge under sec. 9, Opium Act read with sec. 120B, I. P. Code, was framed on 18th December, held that the Magistrate took cognizance in respect of the conspiracy, only when he framed the charge on 18th December, i.e. after the date of sanction, and the requirements of sec. 196A, Cr. P. Code were therefore complied with—Ali Mia, 54 Cal. 155, 28 Cr.L.J. 466 (467).

The fact that this section has been inserted in the Cr. P. C., shows that the Legislature is anxious that prosecution under sec. 120B, I. P. C., should not be started indiscriminately. It would be violating the spirit underlying this section if a person were allowed to be convicted of an offence under sec. 120B, I. P. C., even though his prosecution under that section is neither sanctioned by the District Magistrate nor was within the contemplation of the officer making the complaint under sec. 476, Cr. P. C.—Dhikari, 36 Cr.L.J. 17 (19), 152 I.C. 282, 15 P.L.T. 523, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 561, 1934 Cr.C. 1215, 13 Pat. 729. But it was with a view to safeguarding citizens against persecution on frivolous charges of criminal conspiracy that sec. 196A, Cr. P. C., was enacted at the same time as sec. 120B, I. P. C., insisting upon the previous approval of Government or of some senior and specially empowered Magistrate before such proceedings can be even initiated. If this safeguard is ignored by Magistrate, they should be suitably admonished. But when a case has been initiated and has ended in conviction, it is obvious that there never was any innocent person to be protected from persecution. In other words, sec. 196A was designed to safeguard persons from frivolous accusations of criminal conspiracy, not as a loophole of escape for persons committed after full magisterial inquiry on a charge of criminal conspiracy or convicted after full trial of criminal conspiracy—Venkataramiah, A.I.R. 1938 Mad 130, 1937 M.W.N. 996, 46 M.L.W. 709, (1937) 2 M.L.J. 862.

When the charge is of criminal conspiracy to commit a cognizable offence which is punishable with death, transportation, or rigorous imprisonment for a term of two years or more, no consent of the Local Government, etc., is necessary—Ram Das, 35 Cr.L.J. 1349 (1352), 151 I.C. 442, 1934 A.L.J. 852, A.I.R. 1934 All 61, 1934 Cr.C. 139; Ramjanam, A.I.R. 1935 Pat 357, 16 P.L.T. 348, 155 I.C. 866, 36 Cr.L.J. 856; Mohammad Yakub, 33 Cr.L.J. 373, 137 I.C. 73, A.I.R. 1932 All 73, 1932 Cr.C. 93, Ind. Rul 1932 All 270.

The offence of being in possession of arms without a license is a cognizable offence and the fact that the sanction of the District Magistrate is necessary to constitute proceedings in respect of a specific offence itself, is no bar to the institution of proceedings in respect of an offence of criminal conspiracy to commit the substantive offence itself—Maganlal, 35 Cr.L.J. 1097 (1101), 150 I.C. 623, A.I.R. 1934 Nag 71, 1934 Cr.C. 276.

One cannot compel the prosecution to get charges framed which require sanction—Chandra Shekhar, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 91 (93), following Abdul Salim, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 107, 69 I.C. 145, 49 Cal 573, 26 C.W.N. 680, 34 C.L.J. 279, 23 Cr.L.J. 657. There is no reason why, because the accused might have been charged with an offence for the prosecution of which the sanction of the Government is required, they should not be charged with, and tried for, offences in respect of which no sanction is required—Abdul Salim, supra, following Amrita Lal, 42 Cal 957 (988), 19 C.W.N. 676.

Where, on examining the complainant, the Magistrate summoned the accused under secs 120B, 193, 182 and 211, I.P.C., examined witnesses, framed charges against the accused under secs. 193/120B, I.P.C., and proposed to draw up a fresh charge against them under sec 193 read with 109, I.P.C., as soon as charges were framed against the accused under sec. 120B read with 193, I.P.C., and the accused presented a petition claiming that as no sanction from Government had been granted in respect of sec. 120B they were entitled to an acquittal, held that if the facts disclosed in the evidence show a prima facie case only under sec 120B, I.P.C., then clearly the whole proceedings were void ab initio having regard to the provisions of sec 195A, Cr. P.C., but if the facts disclosed show a prima facie case under sec 109, I.P.C., the proceedings were competent and it made no difference that the Magistrate summoned the accused under the wrong sections. The whole test is not under what sections the accused were summoned but whether the proceedings were competent or not—Birao Sardar v. Y. C. Ariff, 26 Cr.L.J. 302, 84 I.C. 446, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 579.

640A. "Empowered in this behalf by the Local Government":—These words qualify the whole sentence beginning with "a Chief Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate" and not merely the words "District Magistrate". What the section does is to confer the power on the Local Government, but to enable the Local Government to delegate that power, if they so think fit, to a Chief Presidency Magistrate or to a District Magistrate. If the Local Government do not exercise their power of delegation, then they alone can give consent under the section. The Chief Presidency Magistrate, when not so empowered, has no power to give consent—Alexander George Gray, 35 Cr.L.J. 1330 (1331), 151 I.C. 476, 36 Bom.L.R. 320, 1934 Cr.C. 666, A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 183, 58 Bom. 480.

640B. Transfer:—The consent that is necessary for the purpose of cl. (2) of sec. 196A has to be obtained only to ensure that a charge of conspiracy is not launched in respect of a conspiracy which is not of a sufficiently serious nature, or in other words, to save an accused person from unnecessary harassment. To deter-of the conspiracy (the forgery being committed not for his own sake but in order to cheat a person and obtain money from him) the entire charge does not fail in consequence of the elimination of the head of forgery as an object of the conspiracy charged. Where the trial starts for an object of the conspiracy, which is beyond the cognizance of the Court, the omission of one head which is beyond the cognizance of the Court cannot affect the jurisdiction as regards the rest of the charge. (2) of sec. 195A has to be obtained only to ensure that a charge of conspiracy is not launched in respect of a conspiracy which is not of a sufficiently serious nature, or in other words, to save an accused person from unnecessary harassment. To determine whether consent should be given what the Magistrate is to see is not whether allegations made on behalf of the prosecution are true but whether if the allegations are true they would make out a case of such a nature as would require a trial on a charge of conspiracy in the interest of public justice. To hold under such circumstances that the Magistrate, by reason of the fact that he has made the order, has done something which makes it expedient for the ends of justice that the case should not be tried by him, is impossible—Hiralal, 35 Cr.L.J. 714, 148 I.C. 558, 6 R.C. 468, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 391, 1934 Cr.C. 532, 38 C.W.N. 581.

640C. Belated sanction:—When on September 14, the Police put forward a charge upon which the accused were subsequently tried on October 5, and a sanction in due form as required by section 196A was given by the Local Government on October 30, held that this was an unsubstantial technicality which was no ground for interference by the High Court by reason of the non-compliance, strictly speaking, with the provisions of section 196A. The provisions of this section are designed to provide a safeguard against initiation of vexatious prosecution for criminal conspiracies of the kind indicated in the section. The section is certainly not intended to provide a means of escape for persons who have been convicted on charges brought against them, even though those charges relate to the kind of offences indicated in the section. If it can be shown that any one of the accused persons has been prejudiced in his defence by reason of the defect complained of, the matter might be otherwise—Abdul Rahman, 36 Cr.L.J. 982 (1986), 156 I.C. 678, 62 Cal. 749, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 316, 1935 Cr.C. 467; Ali Mia, 54 Cal. 155, 28 Cr.L.J. 466 (467); Venkataramiah, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 130, 1937 M.W.N. 996, 46 M.L.W. 709, (1937) 2 M.L.J. 862. But see Ramjiwan v. Lachmi, 28 Cr.L.J. 780, 104 I.C. 108, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 202, 10 N.L.J. 21 and Jethmal Jeyraj, 9 Bom. 27 which were cases of offences under the Indian Stamp Act.

When no objection is taken on the ground of sec. 196A, sub-sec. (2), at any stage of the inquiry or trial, the verdict of the jury and a conviction based thereon cannot be held to be illegal merely because the previous consent of the Local Government had not been taken before the prosecution started—Hanif, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 786, 34 Cr.L.J. 56, 140 I.C. 723, 1932 Cr.C. 829.

It is not necessary for the prosecution to obtain the sanction of the Local Government under sec. 7 of the Explosive Substances Act (VI of 1908) while the case is in the stage of an inquiry—Nathu Ram, A.I.R. 1934 All. 982, 4 A.W.R. 672, 1934 A.L.J. 1088, 1934 Cr.C. 1302, following Kallappa, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 21, 99 I.C. 37, 28 Cr.L.J. 5, 50 Bom. 695.

640D. Effect of charge without sanction:—Where the trial proceeded almost to a conclusion on the assumption that the charge under sec. 120B|467, I. P. C., had been validly framed, evidence as to conspiracy had been led by the prosecution and been considered by the defence and the charge under sec. 120B|467, I. P. C., was cancelled at the time of argument as it was discovered that no sanction under sec. 196A, Cr. P. C., had been granted, the legal consequence was merely as if the charge under sec. 120B|467, I. P. C., had never been framed. The accused could not be acquitted or convicted of the offence punishable under sec. 120B, I. P. Code. The Public Prosecutor could not withdraw under sec. 494, Cr. P. C., from the prosecution under sec. 120B, I. P. C., because there was no valid prosecution—Syed Yawar Bakht v. Emp., 41 C.W.N. 474 (478), 41 Cr.L.J. 719, 189 I.C. 173.

196B. In the case of any offence in respect of which the provisions of section 196 or section 196A apply, a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate may, notwithstanding anything contained in those sections or in any other part of this Code, order a preliminary investigation by a police-officer not being below the rank of Inspector, in which case such police-officer shall have the powers referred to in section 155, sub-section (3).

This section has been added by sec. 49 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923).

"This new section is designed to meet the difficulty which arises from the fact that cases under sections 196 and 196A cannot be properly investigated by the Police before complaints are made. Doubts have arisen as to whether investigation can be ordered under section 155 (2) by a Magistrate without his taking cognizance of the case. The new section will provide for preliminary investigation. We recognise that it does not altogether meet the case where the desirability of adding a new charge arises in the Sessions Court. It has been suggested that this difficulty might be met to some extent by substituting the words 'proceed to the trial' for the words 'take cognizance' in section 196 and 196A. But, on the whole, we prefer not to make this change and to leave the sections unaltered"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922).

197. (1) When any Judge or any public servant not removable from his office without the sanction of the Government of India or the Local Government, is accused as such judge or public servant of any offence, no Court shall take cognizance of such offence except with the previous sanction of the Government having power to order his removal or of some officer empowered in this behalf by such Government or of some Court or other authority to which such Judge or public servant is subordinate, and whose power to give such sanction has not been limited by such Government.

197. (1) When any person who is a Judge within the meaning of section 19 of the Indian Penal Code, or when any Magistrate, or when any public servant who is not removable from his office save by or with the sanction of a Provincial Government or some higher authority, is accused of any offence alleged to have been committed by him while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty, no Court shall take cognizance of such offence except with the previous sanction—

- (a) in the case of a person employed in connection with the affairs of the Federation, of the Governor General exercising his individual judgment; and
- (b) in the case of a person employed in connection with the affairs of a Province, of the Governor of that Province exercising the individual judgment.

(2) The Governor General or Governor, as the case may be, exercising his individual judgment, may determine the person by whom, the manner in which, the offence or offences for which, the prosecution of such Judge, Magistrate or public servant is to be conducted, and may specify the Court before which the trial is to be held.

Power of Government as to prosecution.

(3) In relation to the period elapsing between the commencement of Part III of the Government of India Act, 1935, and the establishment of the Federation, the references in this section to the Federation and to the Governor General exercising his individual judgment shall be construed as references to the Governor General in Council.

Change:—The whole of sub-section (1) has been re-drafted by sec. 50 of the Crim. Pro. Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. "It has been pointed out to us that difficulties with regard to section 197 have recently come to light. There are certain public servants who are only removable from office by the Secretary of State, and it is unreasonable that they should obtain no protection under the section. Further, in view of section 2 (2) of the Code, the word "Judge" has to be interpreted according to the definition given in section 19 of the Indian Penal Code, with the result that Magistrates acting in certain capacities under Code, e.g., when holding inquiries, obtained no protection. We have therefore, proposed a re-draft of sub-section (1) of section 197 to meet these difficulties. We have confined the operation of the section to public servants removable by a Local Government or some higher authority and have provided that the sanction required for a prosecution will be the sanction of the Local Government"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922).

'While acting... official duty':—These words have been substituted for the words "as such Judge or public servants" occurring in the old section in order to amplify the words and to make the sense clear—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914).

In sub-section (1) the words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for "Local Government" and the words "previous sanction"—

- (a) in the case of a person employed in connection with the affairs of the Federation, of the Governor-General exercising his individual judgment; and
- (b) in the case of a person employed in connection with the affairs of a Province, of the Governor of that Province exercising his individual judgment" for "previous sanction of the Local Government" and in sub-section (2) the words "The Governor-General or Governor, as the case may be, exercising his individual judgment" have been substituted for "Such Government" and sub-section (3) has been added by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

640E. Object and scope of section:—"The object of this section is to guard against vexatious proceedings against Judges, Magistrates and public servants, and to secure the opinion of superior authority whether it is desirable that there should be a prosecution"—Woodroffe, (Crim. Pro., p 229). But it is no part of British policy to set an official above the common law. If he commutes a common offence, he has no peculiar privilege. But if one of his official acts is alleged to be an offence, the State will not allow him to be prosecuted without its sanction, for the obvious reason that otherwise official action would be beset by private prosecutions. Judges would be charged with defamation, policemen with wrongful restraint, and distrainers with theft—Kamisetty Raja Rao v Ramaswamy, 50 Mad 751, 52 M.L.J. 647, 28 Cr.L.J. 539.

If a public servant, purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty, commits an offence in a place outside British India (e.g., Chandernagar), and proceedings are taken under this Code for his prosecution, a sanction of the Local Government under this section would be necessary. But it is doubtful whether the Local Government would give a sanction under this section, as the offence has been committed in a Foreign State. The most convenient course would be to start proceedings either by information laid by the Advocate-General or by an application to the High Court in its Original Jurisdiction for an order to hold an inquiry—Sasadhar v. Tegart, 35 C.W.N. 782 (784, 785). The most convenient remedy of the complainants would be to prosecute the offenders in the place (foreign territory) where the offences were committed.—Ibid.

It is the status of the accused at the time of the commission of the alleged offence and not his status at the time of the complaint or of the order issuing process which is material for the purpose of this section—Suganchand v. Seth Naraindas, A.I.R. 1932 Sind 177, 1932 Cr.C. 792, 34 Cr.L.J. 171, 141 I.C. 530. The protection conferred by this section would be largely illusory if it were open to people to wait until the public servant had ceased to hold that position and then lodge their complaint, for generally there is no question of limitation in criminal proceedings. A public servant who is on the verge of retirement would have no protection whatever. This section, therefore, protects a person who is a public servant at the time of the alleged incident, even if he ceased to be a public servant before the prosecution starts—S. Y. Patil, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 293, 172 I.C. 669. According to the Allahabad High Court this section, however, requires that for the section to apply the accused must be a public servant at both these periods. It is not sufficient that the accused should be a public servant at the time of the offence. The accused must also be a public servant at the time when he is accused, that is at the time when the accusation is made against him either by a complaint or a Police report—Suraj Narain Chaube v. Emp. 39 Cr.L.J. 925, 11 L.R. 1938 All. 776, 1938 A.Cr.C. 60, 11 R.A. 201, 177 I.C. 462, 1938 A.L.R. 751, 1938 A.L.J. 649, 1938 A.W.R. (H.C.) 453, A.I.R. 1938 All. 513.

Section 270 of the Government of India Act, 1935—See Note 2A where it has been quoted. There appears to be a fundamental difference between section 270 of the Government of India Act, 1935 and section 197, Cr. P. Code. Section 270 creates a bar to the "institution" of proceedings, that is to say, to the act of a complainant making a complaint or of a police-officer making a report as well as to the act of a Magistrate taking cognizance upon such complaint or report. What is barred by section 197, Cr. P. C., appears to be not the making of a complaint or the submitting of a police report but the act of a Magistrate in taking cognizance of the offence on such complaint or such report or in any other way—Arjan Singh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 479 (485), 40 Cr.L.J. 65, 184 I.C. 680.

641. Judge:—Section 19 of the Indian Penal Code gives the following definition:—

"The word Judge denotes not only every person who is officially designated as a Judge, but also every person who is empowered by law to give, in any legal proceeding, civil or criminal, a definitive judgment, or a judgment which, if confirmed by some other authority, would be definitive; or who is one of a body of persons, which body of persons is empowered by law to give such judgment.

Illustrations:—A Collector exercising jurisdiction under the Tenancy Act; a Magistrate exercising jurisdiction in respect of which he has power to pass sentence, or to commit for trial; a member of a panchayat who has power to try and determine suits."

A village Magistrate exercising jurisdiction and trying an offender under Regulation IX of 1816 is a Judge within the meaning of this section; but a village Magistrate who is merely preventing an altercation and suppressing a riot (and not trying any offender) is not a Judge—Kandasami v. Soli Goundan, 23 Mad. 540. But a Magistrate is now specifically mentioned in the present section. A village Magistrate while entering in his register particulars of a case or complaint filed before him, clearly purports to act as a Judge within the meaning of this section—Subba Reddi v. Swami Reddi, 1937 M.W.N. 870. A village Munsiff trying a civil suit and ordering attachment before judgment is acting as a Judge—Sankaralinga v. Avudai, 17 Cr.L.J. 394 (Mad.). But in sending his report under sec. 45, Cr. P. C., the Village Munsiff is not acting in his capacity as Magistrate, being there called specifically a Village Headman, nor is he a public servant removable only by or with the sanction of a Local Government—Pregada Balanagu v. Krosuru Kotayya, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 578, 45 M.L.W. 697, 1937 M.W.N. 638, 1937 M.Cr.C. 188, 170 I.C. 481, 38 Cr.L.J. 950. A Magistrate of a Village Panchayet constituted by Madras Act II of 1920 is a Judge—Ponnusamy, 42 M.L.J. 139, 23 Cr.L.J. 148. Members of a Village Panchayet Court are judges within the meaning of this section—Sivaramakrishna v. Seshappa, 115 I.C. 248, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 172, 30 Cr.L.J. 396, 52 Mad. 347, 56 M.L.J. 263, 29 M.L.W. 17, 1929 M.W.N. 53; Lakshmi v. Chinnappa, 32 Cr.L.J. 969, 133 I.C. 3, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 492, 1931 Cr.C. 566, 1930 M.W.N. 1109; Kamla Patel v. Bhagwandas, 37 Cr.L.J. 294, 160 I.C. 423, 18 N.L.J. 177. The President of a Panchayat Court is also a Judge within the meaning of this section—Chellaperumal Padayachi v. Velayudha Padayachi, 1937 M.W.N. 216; Subbiah v. Ramachariu, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 604, 49 M.L.W. 781, 40 Cr.L.J. 853, 184 I.C. 112, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 117.

The amendment of 1923 has widened the scope of the section and now protects the persons referred to in it, not only in respect of offences committed while acting in the particular capacity referred to in the section, but in respect of offence committed while acting, or purporting to act, in the discharge of his official duties also. There can be no doubt that while exercising the functions referred to in Part IV of the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act (VI of 1876) relating to the settlement of debts, the Manager is a Judge within the meaning of sec. 19, I. P. Code. That being so, sec. 197, Cr. P. C., debars his prosecution on a charge of any of the offences alleged to have been committed by him while acting, or purporting to act, in the discharge of his official duty—Hemendra Nath Gupta v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 94, 165 I.C. 966, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 160, 17 P.L.T. 932, 3 B.R. 114, 9 R.P. 243.

An Election Officer in removing names from the electoral roll is acting as a Judge within the meaning of sec. 19, I. P. C., and cannot be prosecuted without the sanction of the Local Government under this section—Hanumantha Rao v. Lakshmajja, 1937 M.W.N. 740.

A police patel of a village is a Judge within the definition of sec. 19, I. P. C., and therefore comes within the protection afforded to Judges and public servants under this section—Shankar Sayaji Dalvi, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 489, 40 Bom.L.R. 1106, 178 I.C. 682, 40 Cr.L.J. 116.

642. Public servant:—Section 4, sub-section (2) of the Cr. P. C., provides that all words and expressions used in the Cr. P. C., and defined in the I. P. C., but not defined in the Cr. P. C., shall be deemed to have the meaning respectively attributed to them by the I. P. Code. The term "public servant" is not defined in the Cr. P. C., and, therefore, must be deemed to have the same meaning as given in the definition of that term in the I. P. C., (Vide section 21, I. P. C.). If, for the purposes of the I. P. C., sec. 59A of the Court of Wards Act (IX of 1879) makes a servant of the Court of Wards a public servant, it would appear to follow that he must also be a public servant within the meaning of the term as used in the Cr. P. Code—Angelo v. Kandan Manjhi, 41 Cr.L.J. 221 (223). Any person whether receiving pay or not, who chooses to take upon himself the duties and responsibilities belonging to the position of a public servant and performs those duties and accepts those responsibilities, and is recognised as filling the position of a public servant, must be regarded as such. A volunteer in Tahsildar's office is a public servant—Parmeswar, 8 All 201. So also, a member of the District Board—Krishna Kant, 28 O.C. 155, 12 O.L.J. 498, 26 Cr.L.J. 1157; Rae Bajrang Bahadur, 9 O.W.N. 875, 1932 Cr.C. 848 (849). The Chairman of a Municipality is a public servant—Chairman of Municipal Council, Ellore, 1 Weir 243. The President of a Municipal Committee is a public servant—U. Maung Gale, 4 Rang. 128, 27 Cr.L.J. 1088. The President of the Taluka Local Board is a public servant as defined in sec. 21, I. P. C., and sec. 135, Bombay Local Boards Act VI of 1923—Rudragouda Rachangouda Patel, 38 Cr.L.J. 654, 168 I.C. 956, 39 Bom.L.R. 70, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 160, I.L.R. 1937 Bom. 256, 9 R.B. 413. So also a Chairman of a Union Panchayet—Sk. Abdul Kadir, 1916 M.W.N. 384, 17 Cr.L.J. 168. So again, a President of a Taluk Board—Sivasankaram, 52 Mad. 446, 30 Cr.L.J. 164 (166); Hidayatullah, 27 S.L.R. 3, 34 Cr.L.J. 191 (192). The Chairman of a District School Board under the Bombay Presidency Education Act (Bombay IV of 1923) is a public servant—Nhanesaheb Ahmedsaheb, 38 Cr.L.J. 16, 165 I.C. 901, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 453, 38 Bom.L.R. 956, 1936 Cr.C. 1104, I.L.R. 1937 Bom. 78, 9 R.B. 176. A Municipal Commissioner is a public servant—Bakshi Ram v. Divan, 1890 P.R. 14; Kishen v. Girdhari, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 310, 23 Cr.L.J. 750; Jotindra v. Radha, 36 Cr.L.J. 285, 152 I.C. 1029, 1934 Cr.C. 1193, 15 P.L.T. 507, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 518; see also illustration to sec. 21, I. P. Code. But a Municipal Secretary is not a public servant; and so, if a Municipal Commissioner acts as the Honorary Secretary of the Municipality, and commits an offence in his capacity as Secretary, no sanction is necessary—Kishen v. Girdhari, supra. So also Municipal Engineer—Jotin v. Radha, supra. So also clerks of the District Board—Anwar Ullah, 35 Cr.L.J. 617, 148 I.C. 218, 1933 A.L.J. 1628, A.I.R. 1934 All. 173, 1934 Cr.C. 229; So also a Karnam—Erranhi, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 270, 34 Cr.L.J. 526, 143 I.C. 102, 1933 Cr.C. 373, 1932 M.W.N. 1075 but he is a public servant when he is acting as the Village Magistrate—Ibid. A Receiver appointed by the High Court is not a public servant—Khim Chand v. Devkaram, 52 Bom. 898, 30 Cr.L.J. 465, 30 Bom.L.R. 1273, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 493, 115 I.C. 387; Lukmanji v. Valibhai, 35 Cr.L.J. 1403, 151 I.C. 707, 1934 Cr.C. 1038, 36 Bom.L.R. 649, A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 306; Jnanendra Nath v. Nilmony, 43 C.W.N. 582, I.L.R. (1939) 1 Cal. 587, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 701, 41 Cr.L.J. 52, 184 I.C. 603, 12 R.C. 249, distinguishing Santok Chand v. Emp., 46 Cal. 432, 46 I.C. 836, A.I.R. 1919 Cal. 647, 22 C.W.N. 910, 29 Cr.L.J. 820, 28 C.L.J. 115; Maung Saw Maung v. Ma Me Shwe, 40 Cr.L.J. 648, 182 I.C. 262, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 202, 11 R.R. 519, 1939 Rang.L.R. 117; Nagendra v. Jogendra, 13 Cr.L.J. 491, 15 I.C. 491. (Absence of leave of the Court which appointed the receiver may not be a bar to jurisdiction, but it is certainly relevant on the question of the propriety or desirability of criminal proceedings when leave was specially asked for and not specifically granted—Jnanendra Nath v. Nilmony, supra). A Vatandar Patil is a public servant—Bhimaji, 42 Bom. 172 (177). The Chairman of a Co-operative Credit Society is not a public servant—Shridhar Mahades, 36 Cr.L.J. 532, 154 I.C. 600, A.I.R. 1935 Bom. 36, 36 Bom.L.R. 1133, 1935 Cr.C. 70.

643. "Not removable from his office, etc.":—The words "not removable from his office" etc., have reference only to the expression "public servant" and not to "Judge." This is now made clear by the wording of the present section. So the sanction of the Government is necessary for the prosecution of any Judge, if a complaint is made against him as Judge, whether he is or is not removable from the office without the sanction of the Government—Anonymous, 6 B.H.C.R. App. 21.

The principle is well established that where an authority has a power to sanction the appointment, the persons so appointed cannot be removed without the sanction of that authority. Where, therefore, under the rule a manager of the Court of Wards, whose monthly salary is over Rs. 200, can only be appointed by the Court with the previous sanction of Government, it necessarily follows that he cannot be dismissed

A village Magistrate exercising jurisdiction and trying an offender under Regulation IX of 1816 is a Judge within the meaning of this section; but a village Magistrate who is merely preventing an altercation and suppressing a riot (and not trying any offender) is not a Judge—Kandasami v. Soli Goundan, 23 Mad 540. But a Magistrate is now specifically mentioned in the present section. A village Magistrate while entering in his register particulars of a case or complaint filed before him, clearly purports to act as a Judge within the meaning of this section—Subba Reddi v. Swami Reddi, 1937 M.W.N. 870. A village Munsiff trying a civil suit and ordering attachment before judgment is acting as a Judge—Sankaralinga v. Avudai, 17 Cr.L.J. 394 (Mad.). But in sending his report under sec. 45, Cr. P. C., the Village Munsiff is not acting in his capacity as Magistrate, being there called specifically a Village Headman, nor is he a public servant removable only by or with the sanction of a Local Government—Pregada Balanagu v. Krosuru Kotayya, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 578, 45 M.L.W. 697, 1937 M.W.N. 638, 1937 M.Cr.C. 188, 170 I.C. 481, 38 Cr.L.J. 950. A Magistrate of a Village Panchayet constituted by Madras Act II of 1920 is a Judge—Ponnusamy, 42 M.L.J. 139, 23 Cr.L.J. 148. Members of a Village Panchayet Court are judges within the meaning of this section—Sivaramakrishna v. Seshappa, 115 I.C. 248, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 172, 30 Cr.L.J. 396, 52 Mad. 347, 56 M.L.J. 263, 29 M.L.W. 17, 1929 M.W.N. 53; Lakshmi v. Chinnappa, 32 Cr.L.J. 959, 133 I.C. 3, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 492, 1931 Cr.C. 566, 1930 M.W.N. 1109; Kamla Patel v. Bhagwandas, 37 Cr.L.J. 294, 160 I.C. 423, 18 N.L.J. 177. The President of a Panchayat Court is also a Judge within the meaning of this section—Chellaperumal Padayachi v. Velayudha Padayachi, 1937 M.W.N. 216; Subbiah v. Ramacharlu, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 601, 49 M.L.W. 781, 40 Cr.L.J. 853, 184 I.C. 112, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 117.

The amendment of 1923 has widened the scope of the section and now protects the persons referred to in it, not only in respect of offences committed while acting in the particular capacity referred to in the section, but in respect of offence committed while acting, or purporting to act, in the discharge of his official duties also. There can be no doubt that while exercising the functions referred to in Part IV of the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act (VI of 1876) relating to the settlement of debts, the Manager is a Judge within the meaning of sec. 19, I. P. Code. That being so, sec. 197, Cr. P. C., debars his prosecution on a charge of any of the offences alleged to have been committed by him while acting, or purporting to act, in the discharge of his official duty—Hemendra Nath Gupta v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 94, 165 I.C. 966, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 160, 17 P.L.T. 932, 3 B.R. 114, 9 R.P. 243.

An Election Officer in removing names from the electoral roll is acting as a Judge within the meaning of sec. 19, I. P. C., and cannot be prosecuted without the sanction of the Local Government under this section—Hanumantha Rao v. Lakshmajja, 1937 M.W.N. 740.

A police patel of a village is a Judge within the definition of sec. 19, I. P. C., and therefore comes within the protection afforded to Judges and public servants under this section—Shankar Sayaji Dalvi, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 489, 40 Bom.L.R. 1106, 178 I.C. 682, 40 Cr.L.J. 116.

642. Public servant:—Section 4, sub-section (2) of the Cr. P. C., provides that all words and expressions used in the Cr. P. C., and defined in the I. P. C., but not defined in the Cr. P. C., shall be deemed to have the meaning respectively attributed to them by the I. P. Code. The term "public servant" is not defined in the Cr. P. C., and, therefore, must be deemed to have the same meaning as given in the definition of that term in the I. P. C., (vide section 21, I. P. C.). If, for the purposes of the I. P. C., sec. 59A of the Court of Wards Act (IX of 1879) makes a servant of the Court of Wards a public servant, it would appear to follow that he must also be a public servant within the meaning of the term as used in the Cr. The Chairman of a Municipality is a public servant—Chairman of Municipal Council, Ellore, 1 Weir 243. The President of a Municipal Committee is a public servant—U. Maung Gale, 4 Rang. 128, 27 Cr.L.J. 1088. The President of the Taluka Local Board is a public servant as defined in sec. 21, I. P. C., and sec. 135, Bombay Local Boards Act VI of 1923—Rudragouda Rachangouda Patel, 38 Cr.L.J. 654, 168 I.C. 956, 39 Bom L.R. 70, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 160, I.L.R. 1937 Bom. 256, 9 R.B. 413. So also a Chairman of a Union Panchayet—Sk. Abdul Kadir, 1916 M.W.N. 384, 17 Cr.L.J. 168. So again, a President of a Taluk Board—Sivasankaram, 52 Mad. 446, 30 Cr.L.J. 164 (166); Hidayatullah, 27 S.L.R. 3, 34 Cr.L.J. 191 (192). The Chairman of a District School Board under the Bombay Presidency Education Act (Bombay IV of 1923) is a public servant—Nhanesaheb Ahmedsaheb, 38 Cr.L.J. 16, 165 I.C. 901, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 453, 38 Bom L.R. 956, 1936 Cr.C. 1104, I.L.R. 1937 Bom 78, 9 R.B. 176. A Municipal Commissioner is a public servant—Bakshi Ram v. Diwan, 1890 P.R. 14; Kishen v. Girdhari, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 310, 23 Cr.L.J. 750; *Jotindra v. But a Municipal Secretary is not a public servant; and so, if a Municipal Commissioner acts as the Honorary Secretary of the Municipality, and commits an offence in his capacity as Secretary, no sanction is necessary—*Kishen v. A Receiver appointed by the High Court is not a public servant—Khim Chand v. Devkaram, 52 Bom. 898, 30 Cr.L.J. 465, 30 Bom.L.R. 1273, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 493, 115 I.C. 387; *Lukmanji v. (Absence of leave of the Court which appointed the receiver may not be a bar to jurisdiction, but it is certainly relevant on the question of the propriety or desirability of criminal proceedings when leave was specially asked for and not specifically granted—Jnanendra Nath v. Nilmony, supra.) A Vatandar Patil is a public servant—Bhimaji, 42 Bom 172 (177). The Chairman of a Co-operative Credit Society is not a public servant—Shridhar Mahades, 36 Cr.L.J. 532, 151 I.C. 600, A.I.R. 1935 Bom. 36, 36 Bom L.R. 1133, 1935 Cr.C. 70.

643. "Not removable from his office, etc.":—The words "not removable from his office" etc., have reference only to the expression "public servant" and not to "Judge." This is now made clear by the wording of the present section. So the sanction of the Government is necessary for the prosecution of any Judge, if a complaint is made against him as Judge, whether he is or is not removable from the office without the sanction of the Government—Anonymous, 6 B.H.C.R. App. 21

The principle is well established that where an authority has a power to sanction the appointment, the persons so appointed cannot be removed without the sanction of that authority. Where, therefore, under the rule a manager of the Court of Wards, whose monthly salary is over Rs. 200, can only be appointed by the Court with the previous sanction of Government, it necessarily follows that he cannot be dismissed without the sanction or approval of Government—Angelo v. Kandan Manjhi, 41 Cr.L.J. 221 (223).

A Police Patel in Bombay is a public servant removable without the sanction of the Government, and no sanction is necessary in respect of his prosecution—Bhagwan, 4 Bom. 357; so also, a Sub-overseer in the Madras Presidency—Reddy Venkayya, 12 M.L.T. 251, 13 Cr.L.J. 770, 17 I.C. 402. A Forest Ranger in the C. P. is removable without the sanction of the Local Government—Kripa Singh, 23 Cr.L.J. 397 (Nag). But a Revenue Patel is a public servant not removable from his office without the sanction of the Local Government—Kalu, A.I.R. 1927 Bom 432, 102 I.C. 342, 29 Bom.L.R. 707, 28 Cr.L.J. 534; so is also an officiating Kulkarni—Gurushidayya v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Bom 63, 40 Bom.L.R. 1286, 40 Cr.L.J. 269, 179 I.C. 686, 1 I.R. 1939 Bom. 119, 11 R.B. 287. But a Municipal Chairman Delegate does not fall under this section, because he is removable at the will of the Chairman; no sanction is necessary for his prosecution for acts done in his capacity as a Chairman Delegate (though being also Municipal Councillor, he will be protected under this section for acts done in his capacity as Councillor)—Venkatesalu v. Heeraman, 22 Weir 225.

The words "not removable . . . Government" cannot be applied to a body corporate such as the Municipal Corporation of Calcutta which cannot be removed or dismissed; and so sanction of the Local Government is necessary for instituting a criminal case against the Municipal Corporation—Municipal Corporation, Calcutta, 3 Cal. 758 (761, 762). Those words can be applied only to certain individual persons in the service of the Corporation—Ibid.

The elected Chairman of a Municipality is a public servant not removable from his office except with the sanction of the Local Government, under the Bengal Municipal Act—Ram Narayan v. Parswa Nath, 56 Cal 227, 32 C.W.N. 1035 (1037); Kali Prasad Singh v. Srikrishnan, 39 Cr.L.J. 774, 176 I.C. 725, 4 B.R. 755, 11 R.P. 98, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 543. So is also a Municipal Commissioner—Jatindra Nath v. Nadha Krishna, 15 P.L.T. 507, 152 I.C. 1029, 36 Cr.L.J. 285, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 548, 1934 Cr.C. 1193; including the Vice-Chairman—Hiralal Das, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 636, 69 C.L.J. 567, (1939) 2 Cal. 321, 40 Cr.L.J. 959, 12 R.C. 219, 184 I.C. 236, but not a Municipal Engineer—Jatindra Nath v. Radha Krishna, supra. The functions of the Committee appointed under sec. 21 (1), Bengal Municipal Act (Act XV of 1932 B.C.) are covered by the expression "official duty" in sec. 197, Cr. P. C., and as no person could be appointed to such a Committee unless he was in the first instance a Commissioner, an office from which his removal could be effected only by or with the sanction of the Local Government, sec. 197 operates as a bar to any prosecution of the members of the said Committee for anything done while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of their official duty except with the previous sanction of the Local Government—Nur Ahmad v. Jogesh, 36 Cr.L.J. 385 (388), 153 I.C. 657, 39 C.W.N. 20, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 838, 1934 Cr.C. 1359, 63 Cal. 275. It is impossible to divorce the position of the accused as Vice-Chairman from his position as Commissioner. He was still a Commissioner while acting as Vice-Chairman and, indeed, unless he was a Commissioner, it would be impossible for him to be appointed to that office. In fact however in discharging the duties of that office, the accused was working as a Commissioner. Therefore, even in his capacity as Vice-Chairman, he cannot be prosecuted without the sanction of the Local Government under sec. 197, Cr. P. C.—Hira Lal Das, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 636, 69 C.L.J. 567, 40 Cr.L.J. 959, 184 I.C. 236.

Under Burma Rural Self-Government Act, 1921, members of a District Council are public servants not removable from office save by or with the sanction of the Local Government. But the Secretary of a District Council, though he is a public servant, does not fall within sec. 197, Cr. P. C., as sec. 21 of the said Act shows that the dismissal or removal of a Secretary of a District Council from his post shall be subject to confirmation by the Commissioner—U Tun Kywe v. The King, 40 Cr.L.J. 243, 179 I.C. 679, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 17, 1939 Rang.L.R. 72, 11 R.R. 337.

A member of a non-City Municipality, who is removable by the Commissioner under sec. 40, U. P. Municipalities Act, cannot be described as a person not removable from his office save by or with the sanction of a Local Government or some higher authority and cannot therefore claim any protection under this section—Sohan Lal v. Mubarak Ali Khan, A.I.R. 1939 All. 705, 1939 A.L.J. 610, 41 Cr.L.J. 137, 185 I.C. 224, I.L.R. 1939 All. 868, 1939 A.W.R. (H.C.) 569.

A Deputy Superintendent of Police, who is appointed by the Local Government, comes within the purview of sec. 197 (1), Cr P. C.—U Ba Hla v Maung Tun Sem, 28 Cr.L.J. 945, 170 I.C. 516, 10 R.R. 96, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 312.

The President of Taluka Local Board is a public servant removable from his office by Government and sanction is necessary for his prosecution under this section—Rudragonda v. Rachan Gonda Patil, 38 Cr.L.J. 654, 168 I.C. 956, 39 Bom.L.R. 70, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 160, I.L.R. 1937 Bom. 256, 9 R.B. 413.

The Administrative Officer of a School Board appointed under sec 9 (1) of the Bombay Primary Education Act (IV of 1934 Bom) can be removed from his office without the previous sanction of the Local Government and is not entitled to the benefit of this section—Shurke, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 527, 33 Cr.L.J. 78, 134 I.C. 1240, 1931 Cr.C. 959, 33 Bom.L.R. 1177, Ind Rul 1932 Bom. 24. But the Chairman of a District School Board is a public servant not removable from office save by or with the sanction of Government, so that he cannot be prosecuted for any offence alleged to have been committed by him while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty without the previous sanction of the Local Government under sec 197, Cr P. C.—Nhane-saheb Ahmedsaheb, 38 Cr.L.J. 16, 165 I.C. 901, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 453, 38 Bom.L.R. 956, 1936 Cr.C. 1104, I.L.R. 1937 Bom. 78, 9 R.B. 176. A Chairman of a Union Committee who can, under certain circumstances, be removed by the Commissioner, is not a person removable from his office only by the Local Government, and no sanction of the Local Government is necessary for his prosecution—Mahmad Yasin, 52 Cal. 431, 29 C.W.N. 650, 26 Cr.L.J. 1178. The Chairman of a Union Panchayet is a public servant not removable from his office without the sanction of the Local Government, even though the power to remove him has been delegated by the Government to the President of the District Board. The delegation of the power of removal means only that the Local Government itself performs that act through the medium of a particular officer (President of the District Board) as the channel through which it is done. It is an ordinary case of qui facit per alium facit per se—Abdul Kadir, 1916 M.W.N. 384, 17 Cr.L.J. 168 (169), 33 I.C. 648, A.I.R. 1917 Mad. 344; Narayana, 1934 M.W.N. 370; Kyaw Htin v Ah Yoo, 36 Cr.L.J. 77, 152 I.C. 366, 12 Rang. 530, 1934 Cr.C. 1039, A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 238 (the case of an Excise Sub-Inspector); Maung Hla Maung, 36 Cr.L.J. 957, 156 I.C. 574, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 135, 1935 Cr.C. 627 (the case of a Police-Inspector). But see Niaz Muhammad v. Emp, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 148, I.L.R. 1939 Kar. 652, 12 R.S. 18, 40 Cr.L.J. 695, 182 I.C. 513, where it has been laid down that an Inspector of Police is included within the definition of "subordinate ranks" in amended sec 3 (1), Bombay District Police Act, and cannot claim that he is removable from office only with the previous sanction of the Local Government. Where an authority delegates the power to remove a public servant to a subordinate authority, the public servant for the purposes of this section nevertheless continues to be removable by the original authority. Therefore, under the provisions of this section, sanction of the Local Government, which might have delegated its power of removal to a special officer, is necessary to his prosecution—Newbould, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 781 (783), 37 Cr.L.J. 1056, 165 I.C. 61, 1936 Cr.C. 793. Where the power has been delegated the sanction of the Local Government is necessary—Tun Ya, 39 Cr.L.J. 614 (617), 175 I.C. 442, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 181, 1938 Rang.L.R. 104, 10 R.R. 505. But where the delegation of powers was ultra vires of the Local Government, which was not the authority empowered to punish (as in the case of a Sub-Inspector of Police in Burma regarding whose appointment the General Police Act confers powers on certain designated officers), the sanction of the Local Government is not required—Tun Ya, supra. See also Pichai v. Balasundara, 36 Cr.L.J. 1241, 157 I.C. 24, 1935 Cr.C. 619, 53 Mad. 787, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 442, 41 M.L.W. 558, 1935 M.W.N. 547, 68 M.L.J. 608.

where a police constable and a Sub-Inspector have been held not to be public servants who are not removable from office save by or with the sanction of the Local Government or some higher authority as the former was removable by the District Superintendent of Police and the latter by Deputy Inspector-General, Police. The expression "any public servant who is not removable from his office save by or with the sanction of the Local Government or some higher authority" in this section will not include public servants whom some lower authority has by law or rule or order been empowered to remove—Magbool Husain v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 695 (696), 188 I.C. 846, 1910 O.W.N. 494 (the case of a Sub-Inspector of Police), following Pichai v. Balasundara, supra. Where the power to appoint assistant accountants within his district and by implication the power to remove or dismiss them from their office was transferred to the Deputy Commissioner, sanction under this section was not necessary for their prosecution—Maung Bo Maung, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 263, 36 Cr.L.J. 1272, 157 I.C. 1034, 13 Rang. 540, 1935 Cr.C. 964 (F.B.). But the Allahabad High Court is of opinion that where the Local Government has delegated the power of removal of a public servant to some other authority, as for instance, where the Government by a notification has delegated to the Excise Commissioner the power to suspend, remove or dismiss any Excise Inspector, held that the sanction of the Local Government is not necessary for the prosecution of an Excise Inspector—Jalaluddin, 48 All. 264, 24 A.L.J. 230, 27 Cr.L.J. 345, 92 I.C. 857, A.I.R. 1926 All. 271 (dissenting from Abdul Kadir, supra). In a Lahore case, it has been held that where the accused, a public servant (viz., a Zilladar) was appointed at a time when the powers of appointment and removal of a Zilladar were vested in the Local Government alone, and subsequently the Local Government delegated the power of appointment, suspension and removal of the Zilladars to the Chief Engineer, the prosecution of the Zilladar instituted without the sanction of the Local Government but with the sanction of the Chief Engineer, was illegal. The sanction of the Local Government was necessary under sec. 197—Lala Khan Chand, 24 Cr.L.J. 411, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 337 (338).

In sending his report under sec. 45, Cr. P. C., the Village Munsif is not acting in his capacity as Magistrate, being there called specifically a Village Headman, nor is he a public servant removable only by or with the sanction of a Local Government—Pregada Balanagu v. Krosuru Kotayya, 38 Cr.L.J. 950, 170 I.C. 481, 45 M.L.W. 697, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 578, 1937 M.W.N. 638, 10 R.M. 206.

A distinction should be made between removal from office and ceasing to hold office. Thus, the mere fact that if a President of a Board fails to attend a certain number of meetings he ceases to be a President according to Rules made by Government, does not lead to the conclusion that he is removable from the office without the sanction of the Government. It stands more or less on the same footing as resignation from the office—Hidayatullah, 27 S.L.R. 3, 34 Cr.L.J. 191 (194).

644. "Acting in the discharge of official duty":—These words have been substituted for the words "as such Judge or public servant" occurring in the old section; and from a comparison of the old and the new section it seems that the language of the present section has been made simpler. Before the Amendment, the language used in the section was "as such Judge or public servant" and it indicated that the offence charged must involve as one of its elements that it was committed by a person filling that character; and, therefore, where a Magistrate used insulting and defamatory language towards a pleader in the course of a trial, no sanction was held to be necessary for the prosecution of the Magistrate, as the position of his being a Magistrate was not a necessary element in the offence of defamation—Nando Lal v. N. N. Mitter, 26 Cal 852, 3 C.W.N. 539. Where a Judge or Magistrate or public servant commits an offence which could be committed by anybody and which entails consequences neither in the way of penalty nor anything else in the least difference from what it would entail if committed by anybody else, sanction is not required under this section for his prosecution. Therefore, where the Chairman of a Union Panchayet was prosecuted for the offence of criminal breach of trust in respect of Union funds, held that the offence was not one which was committed by him in his capacity of a public servant, and no sanction was necessary for his prosecution—Abdul Kadir, 1916 M.W.N. 384, 33 I.C. 648, A.I.R. 1917 Mad. 344, 17 Cr.L.J. 168 (170). But the President of a Panchayet Court cannot be prosecuted without the sanction of the Local Government under this section for criminal breach of trust in respect of a sum of money paid to him as such President—Chellaperumal Padayachi v. Velayudha Padayachi, 1937 M.W.N. 216. A public servant guilty of criminal breach of trust was neither "acting nor purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty," for he was acting not as an official but as a thief. No sanction is necessary for his prosecution—Maung Bo Maung, 157 I.C. 1034, 1935 Cr.C. 964, 36 Cr.L.J. 1272, 13 Rang 540, 8 R.Rang. 131, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 263 (265), 13 Rang 540 (F.B.); Manzur Ali v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 1, 179 I.C. 778, 40 Cr.L.J. 252, I.L.R. 1939 Lah. 227, 41 P.L.R. 154; Gurushidayya, I.L.R. 1939 Bom. 119, 179 I.C. 686, 11 R.B. 287, 40 Cr.L.J. 269, 40 Bom.L.R. 1286, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 63. But see Newbould v. Emp., A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 781, 165 I.C. 61, 1936 Cr.C. 793, 37 Cr.L.J. 1056, 38 P.L.R. 1061, 9 R.L. 207; Dr. Hari Ram Singh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 F.C. 43, 40 Cr.L.J. 468, 181 I.C. 317; Arjan Singh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 479. Such is also the case when he is charged with an offence under sec. 411, I.P. Code—Erranki, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 270, 1932 M.W.N. 1075, 1933 Cr.C. 373, 143 I.C. 102, 34 Cr.L.J. 526. Where a Magistrate used abusive language towards another Magistrate while both of them were trying a case as members of a Bench, it was held that no sanction was necessary to prosecute the former, because the offence was not committed as Magistrate, i.e., the fact of his being a Magistrate was not a necessary element of the offence—Harlekar, 2 Bom.L.R. 1079. So, also, where the Superintendent of the Gun Carriage Factory in Madras caused timber to be brought within the city of Madras without a license as required by sec. 341 of the Madras Act I of 1884 (City of Madras Municipal Act), held that no sanction was necessary to prosecute him, as the offence was not one which could be committed by a public servant only, nor did it involve as one of its elements that it had been committed by a public servant—Municipal Commissioners v. Major Bell, 25 Mad. 15. Where a Union Chairman, while removing an obstruction to a public thoroughfare caused by the complainant, used insulting and abusive language towards the latter, no sanction was held to be necessary for the prosecution of the Chairman, as it could not be said to be part of the function of a Union Chairman to use abusive language in a public street—Abdul Rahman, 4 L.W. 556, 17 Cr.L.J. 462. A Magistrate or a judicial officer who was holding a trial could not be said to be acting in a judicial capacity, if he abused or defamed a witness or a legal practitioner before him—Baishnab Charan v. Sukhomoy, 25 C.W.N. 957, 22 Cr.L.J. 585.

These cases, though correctly decided under the old Codes, would be of no authority now, as the language of the present section materially differs from the language of the old law. Under the present section it will not be necessary to decide whether the fact of the accused being a Judge or a public servant was a necessary element in the offence or whether the offence was one which could not have been equally committed by a private person. These nice questions would no longer arise; if it is found that the Judge, Magistrate or public servant has committed an act at a time when he was doing an official duty, this will be sufficient to attract the provisions of this section. In other words, the Legislature has now given a greater protection to the officers concerned than it did under the old section. This view has been endorsed by the Madras High Court in Gangaraju v. Venki, 52 Mad. 602, 30 Cr.L.J. 864 (865), 118 I.C. 102, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 659, 30 M.L.W. 116, 57 M.L.J. 31, 1929 M.W.N. 787, Ind. Rul. 1927 Mad. 742, followed by the Sind Court in Hidayatullah, 27 S.L.R. 3, 34 Cr.L.J. 191 (195); Harumal v. Haji Imambux, 27 S.L.R. 36, 1933 Cr.C. 529; Abdul Hadi v. Mishra, 36 Cr.L.J. 1092 (1093), 157 I.C. 120, A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 52, 18 N.L.J. 28, 1935 Cr.C. 270. This is also the view of Sir J. G. Woodroffe (Criminal Procedure, p. 229). The policy of the Legislature is to afford a reasonable protection to the public servants in the discharge of their official function and this policy cannot be defeated by having resort to the view that "At the time of committing the offence the public servant cannot be said to be discharging public duty—Kali Prasad Singh v. Sirikrishun, 39 Cr.L.J. 774, 176 I.C. 725, 4 B.R. 755, 11 R.P. 98, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 543.

This section has been completely redrafted. The Legislature has now given a greater protection to the officer concerned than it did under the old section. Ex-hypothesi the officer concerned should be accused of having committed an offence and the offence is obviously a wrongful act which must prima facie be beyond his rights and duties and, therefore, if the safeguard of a sanction is not available to the officer then the protection offered by this section and the wisdom underlying the protection would vanish. All that the Court should see is whether the officer concerned has been accused of having committed the offence complained of when he was acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty. Where the Magistrate was acting or at least purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty and used insulting language to the complainant who was in the witness-box, a sanction for his prosecution was necessary under this section—Sukhdeo, 36 Cr.L.J. 331, 153 I.C. 403, A.I.R. 1934 All. 978, 1934 Cr.C. 1302, 57 All. 385. Sanction under this section is also necessary to prosecute a Deputy Magistrate who was engaged in realising taxes, had threatened the defaulters and immediately turned round and, engaging himself with the complainant, took him to task for being near him in a particular manner—Ram Singh v. Rizvi, 36 Cr.L.J. 650, 155 I.C. 126, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 52, 15 P.L.T. 775, 1935 Cr.C. 83, 14 Pat. 299. See also Mukti Narayan v. Emp, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 97 (101), 1939 P.W.N. 871, 20 P.L.T. 947, 41 Cr.L.J. 349, 186 I.C. 627.

But in some other Madras cases it has been held that this section does not apply to any and every offence committed by a public servant while he is in office; the 'acting' refers to the specific action which comprises the offence. An offence arising out of abuse of official position by an act not purporting to be official, does not necessitate sanction under sec. 197. And so, a complaint against the Chairman of a Municipal Council of having threatened a voter with injury to his property with intent to induce such voter to vote for any candidate or to abstain from voting, is not one in respect of which sanction is necessary under sec. 197, in as much as the act complained of is not committed in the discharge of his official duty, although the incident of his official position might have given him the opportunity to do it—Kamisetty Rama Rao v. Ramaswamy, 50 Mad. 754, 52 M.L.J. 647, 28 Cr.L.J. 539, 102 I.C. 347, 25 M.L.W. 608, 1927 M.W.N. 423, 38 M.L.T. 338, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 566 (following 25 Mad. 15 and 1916 M.W.N. 384 cited above); Nune Panakalu v. Ravulu, 52 Mad. 695, 30 Cr.L.J. 191 (194), 113 I.C. 625, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 1158, 57 M.L.J. 331, 1928 M.W.N. 801. The phrase "while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty" means "doing or purporting to do the sort of act which the law or rules framed under the law allow him to do by virtue of his office." It is only in respect of acts done under colour of his office that a Village Munsif is entitled to and is given protection under the section. His official duty does not permit him to do anything of the nature of causing hurt or applying torture to persons confined by him lawfully or under pretext of law and sanction is not necessary for his prosecution in such a case—Ganapathy Goundan, 33 Cr.L.J. 557, 138 I.C. 133, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 214, 35 M.L.W. 61, 1932 M.W.N. 65, 62 M.L.J. 223, 1932 Cr.C. 156, Ind. Rul. 1932 Mad. 518. If a public servant is actually engaged in the discharge of his duties, or is purporting or pretending to be so engaged, and commits an offence, the sanction of the Local Government is clearly required before a Court can take cognizance thereof. It is not enough for a public servant to be in an official position, which he may abuse, in order to bring him under the section: he must be purporting or pretending to act in pursuance of his official duties. To say that a member of a District Council is acting in purported discharge of his duties when he accepts a bribe in order to influence his decision at a meeting of that body is to display the gravest misapprehension of what those duties could possibly be. It is an independent act committed by one whose position gives him the opportunity to commit it; but it is in no way bound up with the performance of his duties. No sanction is, therefore, necessary for prosecuting him for acceptance of the bribe—U Tun Kywe v. The King, 40 Cr.L.J. 243, 179 I.C. 679, AIR 1939 Rang 17, 1939 Rang.L.R. 72, 11 R.R. 337. Where the charge is taking illegal gratification for the purpose of doing something other than the duty or, in other words, the allegation is that the accused persons have turned their backs on their duty and agreed to keep their backs turned on their duty for an illegal gratification, it cannot be said that they are accused of an offence alleged to have been committed by them while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of their official duties. Sanction under this section is not necessary in such a case—Khurshed Ahmed v. Amanulla, 44 C.W.N. 735, AIR. 1940 Cal 405, 71 C.L.J. 475. The Calcutta High Court also holds that in order to make section 197 applicable it is essential that the act constituting the alleged offence should have itself taken place as an official act, or at least under the cloak of what purported to be an official act, i.e., something in the nature of an official character should have attached to the act itself; it is not enough that his capacity of a public servant put him in a position to commit the offence. Therefore, where certain moneys were paid to a Deputy Collector as selami for certain khas mahal lands, but no settlement was given, and the Deputy Collector misappropriated the moneys, held that this section did not apply—Amanat, 33 C.W.N. 1058 (1060), 1929 Cr.C. 360, AIR. 1929 Cal. 724, 122 I.C. 627, 31 Cr.L.J. 430, Ind Rul. 1930 Cal 259. In these cases it has been remarked that the Amendment has not made any change in the policy of the Code nor given any great protection to the public servants, but has simply altered the language to make the sense clear, which was formerly subject to misinterpretation. This view has been recently followed by the Bombay High Court. Thus, a liquidator who misappropriates money coming into his custody as liquidator cannot be said to be acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty—Gulabmiya, 32 Bom.L.R. 1134, 32 Cr.L.J. 281 (283), 52 Bom 832, AIR 1930 Bom. 487, 1930 Cr.C. 1023. Where an official Kulkarni collected money on account of land revenue and, instead of sending it to the treasury, used it for his own purposes, sanction of Government was not necessary for his prosecution—Gurushidayya v. Emp., AIR. 1939 Bom 63, 40 Bom.L.R. 1286, 40 Cr.L.J. 269, 179 I.C. 686, distinguishing Kalu, AIR 1927 Bom 432, 102 I.C. 342, 28 Cr.L.J. 534, 29 Bom.L.R. 707 and Rudragonda Rachangonda Patil, AIR 1937 Bom 160, 168 I.C. 956, 38 Cr.L.J. 654, 11 R. 1937 Bom 256, 39 Bom.L.R. 70 where, in addition to the offence of embezzlement, the accused purported to have done some thing in his official capacity which involved him in the commission of other offences. So also, acts of force, abuse and intimidation committed by police patels in collecting subscriptions authorised by Government are not acts done in the discharge of official duty—Narayana Janu, 32 Bom.L.R. 1493, 32 Cr.L.J. 575 (576), 130 I.C. 580, AIR 1931 Bom. 192, Ind Rul 1931 Bom 260, 1931 Cr.C. 225. Where a Kulkarni and Revenue patel forcibly removed an alleged encroachment without making any report to their superior officers for orders for removal of the encroachment, and assaulted the persons who had encroached, held that such abuse of official position by public servants could not be said to be acts done in the discharge of their official duties, and no sanction was necessary—Hanmant, 31 Bom.L.R. 789, 31 Cr.L.J. 353 (356), AIR 1929 Bom. 375, 122 I.C. 118, 1929 Cr.C. 322, Ind Rul 1930 Bom 118. Cf Narayan v. Yeshwant, 52 Bom 832, 30 Cr.L.J. 278 (F.B.).

According to Nagpur High Court sec 197 applies to acts committed by a public officer although these acts were not part of his public duty. If he committed the act under the cloak of his official position, then he is protected. To hold otherwise would be to narrow down the protection almost to vanishing point—S. Y. Patil, AIR. 1937 Nag 293, 172 I.C. 669.

Thus the reported decisions on the application of this section are not by any means uniform. In this connection Varadachariar, J., of the Federal Court observes: "It does not seem to me necessary to review in detail the decisions given under sec. 197 of the Criminal Procedure Code, which may roughly be classified as falling into three groups, so far as they attempted to state something in the nature of a test. In one group of cases, it is insisted that there must be something in the nature of the act complained of that attaches it to the official character of the person doing it: Cf. In re Sheikh Abdul Kadir Sahib, 33 I.C. 648, A.I.R. 1917 Mad. 344, (1916) 1 M.W.N. 384, 17 Cr.L.J. 168; Raja Rao v Ramaswamy, 50 Mad 754, 102 I.C. 347, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 566, 28 Cr.L.J. 539; Amanat Ali v. Emp., A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 724, 122 I.C. 627, 1929 Cr.C. 360, 33 C.W.N. 1058, Ind. Rul. 1930 Cal. 259, 31 Cr.L.J. 430; and Gurushiddaya, A.I.R. 1939 Bom 63, 179 I.C. 686, 40 Bom.L.R. 1286, 11 R.B. 257, 40 Cr.L.J. 269. In another group, more stress has been laid on the circumstance that the official character or status of the accused gave him the opportunity to commit the offence. It seems to me that the first is the correct view. In the third group of cases, stress is laid almost exclusively on the fact that it was at a time when the accused was engaged in his official duty that the alleged offence was said to have been committed (see Jujjavarupu Gangaraju v. Kandiboyina Venki, 52 Mad. 602 (605), 118 I.C. 102, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 659, 30 Cr.L.J. 864, 57 M.L.J. 31, Ind Rul. 1929 Mad. 742, 1929 M.W.N. 787, 30 M.L.W. 116), quoting from Mitra's Commentary on the Criminal Procedure Code. The use of the expression "while acting", etc., in section 197 of the Criminal Procedure Code (particularly its introduction by way of amendment in 1923) has been held to lend support to this view. While I do not wish to ignore the significance of the time factor, it does not seem to me right to make it the test. To take an illustration suggested in the course of the argument, if a medical officer, while on duty in the hospital, is alleged to have committed rape on one of the patients or to have stolen a jewel from the patient's person, it is difficult to believe that it was the intention of the Legislature that he could not be prosecuted for such offences except with the previous sanction of the Local Government"—Dr. Hari Ram Singh v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 468 (481), A.I.R. 1939 F.C. 43 (56), 1939 M.W.N. 497, 181 I.C. 317, 1939 O.L.R. 366, 1939 P.W.N. 429, 1939 M.Cr.C. 148, 50 M.L.W. 95, 20 P.L.T. 539, (1939) 2 M.L.J. Sup. 23, 41 P.L.R. 680, C.W.N. 1939 F.C. 50.

A Sub-Magistrate took small police force with him for the purpose of preventing a breach of the peace which was apprehended. What he did or is said to have done after reaching the place where the breach of the peace was feared, was done in his official capacity as a Magistrate and in the performance of what he considered to be his duty as a Magistrate. Even if he exceeded his powers and even if he thereby committed any offence, no complaint in respect of any such offence could be entertained by any Court without the sanction of the Local Government—Rajagopala v. Palaniswami, A.I.R. 1935 Mad 319, 37 Cr.L.J. 154, 159 I.C. 692, 68 M.L.J. 526, 41 M.L.W. 668, 1935 Cr.C. 382, 1935 M.W.N. 590. Where a village Magistrate uses his authority and position as a public servant to constrain a person to give a bribe, sanction is necessary for his prosecution—Mangapathi Naidu, 2 Weir 221. But see U Tun Kywe v The King, supra. Where it was part of the duty of an Excise-Sub-Inspector, who could only be appointed and dismissed by the Local Government, to sign certificates in respect of goods imported in bond into Afghanistan and he signed the certificates knowing that the goods to which they referred had never been so imported and was enabled to do this not only by his official position but it was essential to the success of the alleged conspiracy that he should purport to do so in his official capacity and that he should lead the Treasury Officer to believe that he had done so, he purported to act in discharge of his official duty in signing certificates in the manner alleged by the prosecution and could not be prosecuted for doing so without the sanction of the Local Government—Fazal Rahman, 38 Cr.L.J. 1042 (1046), 170 I.C. 772, A.I.R. 1937 Pesh. 52, 10 R.Pesh. 23. Where a Judge used defamatory language to a witness during the trial of a suit, a complaint against the Judge could not be entertained without a sanction under this section, as the Judge was then acting in his official capacity—Ghulam Muhammad, 9 Mad. 430. It is only where offences are committed by a Judge that the necessity for protection comes in and the protection is limited to cases where the offences are committed while the Judge purports to act in his official capacity though undoubtedly he has outstepped the limits of his duties. Where, therefore, the President of a Panchayat Court, on objection to dictation of judgment to him by his clerk raised by the complainant in the case before him, is said to have got up from his seat abusing the complainant and slapped him on the cheek twice and, on his protest, unlaced his shoe, took it up in his hand and raised it saying "I will beat you with my shoe" Held that these are acts which must be deemed to have been done when he purported to act in discharge of his official duties, though it is not part of his official duties to abuse or assault, that the circumstances clearly show that throughout the President was acting as a Judge and that therefore the protection which is meant to be given to persons in his position must be available to him—Subbiah v Ramachariu, AIR 1939 Mad 604, 49 M.L.W. 781, 40 Cr L.J. 853, 184 IC 112, 1939 M.W.N. 741, (1939) 2 MLJ 117, 12 RM 412 Where the Administrator-General of Bengal was appointed administrator to the estate of a deceased person, and was charged with an offence under the Calcutta Municipal Act for not removing the privy on certain premises belonging to that estate, held that the offence was committed in his private capacity as administrator to the estate of a private person and not in his public capacity as Administrator-General, and no sanction was necessary for his prosecution—Corporation of Calcutta v. Administrator-General, 30 Cal 927. If a Magistrate or a Judicial officer, in order to examine a witness, detains him until the time of his re-examination comes or until he makes inquiries as to the failure of the witness to appear before him, his acts are purely judicial, and if any offence is committed by the Magistrate exceeding his powers in doing those acts, it is necessary that there should be a sanction for his prosecution—Baishnab Charan v Sukhomoy, 25 CWN 957, 22 Cr L.J. 585. These cases though decided under the old law would still hold good.

The question whether a person committed an act while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty, is a question of fact Where it was alleged that a member of a Municipal Committee and a Sub-committee, by exercising undue influence on a sub-overseer, stopped him from purchasing bricks of a certain person and compelled him to give his assent to the purchase of bricks from the accused himself, but there was no allegation in the complaint that the accused obtained this advantage to himself, acting or purporting to act as a member of the Municipal Committee, and in fact the suggestion in the complaint was that taking advantage of his position he went outside his official duty altogether to obtain the contract himself, held that the sanction of the Local Government was not necessary for his prosecution The case would have been otherwise if the accused in obtaining the contract held himself out to be acting as a member of the Municipal Committee or Sub-committee—Md Ismail, 8 Lah 647, 29 Cr L.J. 511 (512), 109 IC 239, AIR 1928 Lah. 72, 29 PLR 69 If an officer conducting an auction sale himself purchases a thing in the name of his servant for his own benefit, it is an act done by him in the discharge of his official duty—Krishna Kana, 28 OC 155, 26 Cr L.J. 1157. Where the President of a Municipal Committee received brokerage or commission on goods ordered by the Municipality, held that he could not be prosecuted for that offence without the sanction of the Local Government, as he was acting in the discharge of his duty as public servant—U. Maung Gale, 4 Rang 128, 27 Cr L.J. 1088, AIR. 1926 Rang. 171, 97 IC. 64. If a Mukhtiarkar, whose duty it is to keep the Government building and office in a sanitary condition, keeps the office and compound in an insanitary condition, he is acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty; and sanction of the Commissioner is necessary for his prosecution under sec. 131, Bombay District Municipal Act—Karachi Municipality v. Mukhtiarkar, 24 SLR. 385, 31 Cr L.J. 597 (598). A member of the District Board presenting a petition against a candidate for the chairmanship of the Board, the petition containing some damaging imputations against the character of the candidate, is not acting in the discharge of his official duty as a member of the Board—Rae Bajrang, AIR. 1932 Oudh 308, 34 Cr L.J. 253, 141 IC. 819, 9 O.W.N. 875, 1932 Cr C. 848 (851). No sanction is necessary for prosecuting a member of the Nagpur Municipal Committee for having taken a contract from the Committee in partnership with others in violation of law—Dulloomiya v Tularam, AIR 1932 Nag. 173, 28 N.L.R. 218, 1932 Cr.C. 908, 34 Cr L.J. 66, 140 IC. 431; Hazarimal v. Emp., AIR. 1910 Nag. 81 (82), 1939 N.L.J. 567, I.L.R. 1940 Nag. 133, Sanction is necessary under this section for prosecution of an Executive Engineer for words uttered by him in reply to a request to provide with a more liberal supply of water, inasmuch as those words could not have been uttered except in his official capacity—Harumal v. Imambux, 34 Cr.L.J. 819, 144 I.C. 477, 27 S.L.R. 36, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 165, 1933 Cr.C. 529.

Where a village Magistrate prepared a false record (in order to provide evidence for use in future) to the effect that a certain person was convicted of theft and sentenced by him to detention for 2 hours, where, as a matter of fact, such person was never convicted or sentenced for any such offence, and that person thereupon made a complaint for the prosecution of the village Magistrate for making the false record, it was held that as the village Magistrate was not bound to make a record, he was not acting "as a Judge" when he made the record; the act was merely purported to be done by him as Judge, and no sanction was, therefore, necessary—Palaniandy v. Arunachellam, 32 Mad. 255. But the case would now fall under the present section by reason of the words "purporting to act" occurring in the section. These words would include not only the cases where the official has jurisdiction to take cognizance of a matter and in professedly exercising that jurisdiction commits an offence or acts ultra vires, but also cases where the initial jurisdiction is wanting and a jurisdiction is assumed by an official who in such assumed capacity acts to the prejudice of a person. See Subbia Pillai, 1920 M.W.N. 7, 21 Cr.L.J. 223, in which the correct view of the law was taken, though it was decided under the old section. See the recent case of Sivaramakrishna v. Seshappa, 52 Mad. 347, 30 Cr.L.J. 369 (399), 115 I.C. 248, A.I.R. 1929 Mad 172, 56 M.L.J. 263, 29 M.L.W. 17, 1929 M.W.N. 53, Ind Rul. 1929 Mad. 408, in which it is laid down that fabrication by a Judge of the records of a suit is an offence committed by him while acting or purporting to act in his official duty.

The accused who was a Sub-divisional Officer of the Public Works Department went to supervise the work which was done by the complainant on a road. The accused got into a boat and, finding that the western bank had collapsed, made certain remarks and gave to the complainant two blows on the left knee. Held that although he had gone to discharge some official duty in connection with earth works, he was not still purporting to act in the discharge of that duty when he got on the boat, lost his temper and assaulted the complainant, that it was no part of the official duty to beat the complainant and that no sanction was necessary in this case for prosecuting him under sec. 323, I. P. Code—Ganga Prasad v. Brindaban, A.I.R. 1935 Cal 176, 39 C.W.N. 288, 37 Cr.L.J. 103, 159 I.C. 421.

To say that a public officer when giving evidence in a Court purports to be acting in the discharge of his official duty, would be straining the language used. In giving evidence he does not perform any official duty in connection with his department. He gives evidence because he receives a summons to do so and he is obliged to obey the summons, even though such obedience entails actual neglect of his official duties. No sanction under this section is, therefore, necessary for his prosecution for perjury alleged to have been committed in the course of such evidence—Supdt. & Rembr., L. A. Bengal v. Jadu, 44 C.W.N. 596 (597), A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 274, 41 Cr.L.J. 659, 188 I.C. 681, I.L.R. (1940) 1 Cal 590.

Where the allegation is that the Manager of a Court of Wards, whilst acting as agent of the landlord, made illegal demands and thereby committed an offence under sec. 63 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (VI of 1908), he is accused of an offence alleged to have been committed by him while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty and the accusation is precisely the one contemplated in this section. That being so, previous sanction of the Government is necessary before the Magistrate can take cognizance of the offence—Angelo v. Kandan Manjhi, 41 Cr.L.J. 221 (225).

A Government officer, e.g., a Tahsildar, who is appointed by the Chairman of a Municipal Council as a Polling Officer does not, while he is acting as a Polling Officer, act in the discharge of an official duty as Tahsildar. No sanction is necessary for his prosecution for an offence committed by him while acting as a Polling Officer—Jagannadhasuami v. Manikyam, 51 Mad 259, 28 Cr.L.J. 1038 (1039).

See also Note 2A.

645. "Taking cognizance":—This section prohibits taking cognizance of an offence committed by the Judge or public servant in his public capacity, without a sanction. But the preliminary examination of the complainant is not "taking cognizance" and, therefore, such examination is not invalid in the absence of sanction—Narayan-sami, Petitioner, 7 M.H.C.R. 182 (187); Satya Charan v. Chairman, 3 C.W.N. 17 (18). But summoning the accused or taking any evidence against him amounts to taking cognizance and this should not be done until the necessary sanction has been obtained—Parsham, 7 B.H.C.R. 61. So also, recording the statement of the complainant and forwarding the same to a subordinate Magistrate for inquiry amounts to taking cognizance; and this cannot be done without sanction—Bhagurath v. Ali Ahmad, 8 O.W.N. 157, 32 Cr.L.J. 991 (992). The Magistrate examined the complainant in verification of the complaint and issued warrants against the two accused, one of whom took an objection that the proceedings were illegal for want of proper sanction. The Magistrate then proceeded to obtain the necessary sanction from the Local Government and in due course it was obtained. Then the case was duly transferred to a First Class Magistrate who issued fresh warrants, proceeded to inquire into the case, recorded evidence and committed it to the Sessions Court where it was tried by the Additional Sessions Judge. Held that to satisfy the formal requirements of the law, the First Class Magistrate before recommending the proceedings should have again examined the complainant and verified his complaint instead of merely taking on record the complaint verified by his predecessor but this cannot be regarded as anything but a purely technical irregularity which does not vitiate the proceeding—Desaibhai Khushalbai, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 50 (53), 39 Bom.L.R. 1056.

There can be no question that a preliminary enquiry under sec. 476, Cr. P. C., can be held without the sanction of the Local Government for it does not entail taking cognizance of any offence, and if the enquiry is held before the Local Government is approached, the Local Government will be in a much better position to be able to decide what action to take under sec. 197, Cr. P. Code—U Ba Hla v. Maung Tun Sein, 38 Cr.L.J. 945 (947), 170 I.C. 516, 10 R.R. 96, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 312.

See also Notes 2A and 647.

The question whether a sanction is necessary under this section must be determined with reference to the allegations in the complaint—Ganga Prasad v. Brindaban, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 176, 39 C.W.N. 288. See also Note 2A.

646. Sanction:—Who can give sanction :—Under the previous law (i.e. before the Amendment of 1923), sanction could be given by the Government or by the officers empowered by the Local Government, or by the Court or the authority to which the Judge or public servant was subordinate. Thus, sanction for prosecution of a Tahsildar could be given by the District Magistrate—Indar Singh, 1919 P.R. 4. The President of the Taluk Board could give sanction for the prosecution of the Chairman of a Union Panchayet—Abdul Kadir, 1916 M.W.N. 384, 17 Cr.L.J. 168 (171). The Inspector-General of Registration could sanction the prosecution of a Sub-Registrar—Profulla, 30 Cal. 905 (908). The Executive Engineer could give sanction for prosecution of an overseer—Narayan, Ratanlal 32. These cases are no longer of any authority. Under the present law, sanction can be given only by the Local Government. Under the old law the Local Government could empower an officer (e.g. the District Magistrate or Additional District Magistrate), to give sanction. The present section, however, contemplates no such delegation.

Offence must be specified in sanction :—The sanction must be granted with reference to some specific offence, and the authority empowered to grant sanction cannot delegate to another the task of determining which offence the sanction should relate to. Thus, an order passed by the Board of Revenue sanctioning the prosecution of a Deputy Tahsildar for "bribery or other charges as the District Magistrate thinks likely to stand investigation by a Criminal Court," was held to be invalid because the order ought to have specified what other offences the accused should be charged with, and to leave this matter to the District Magistrate means a delegation of power not intended by the Legislature—Savariet, 16 Mad. 468, 3 M.L.J. 227, 2 Weir 220. But where the order granted sanction for an "offence under sec. 161, I. P. C., or any other section of the Code that may be found applicable with respect to the offence briefly described in the schedules hereto annexed," it was held that the order was no delegation, because the order granting sanction had specified the acts committed by the accused, and had also specified the offence and the section of the I. P. C., and it merely left it open to the Court to convict the accused under any other section if in the opinion of the Court some other section of the I. P. C., was more relevant than sec. 161—Girdhari Lal, 146 P.L.R. 1911, 12 Cr.L.J. 217, 10 I.C. 156 (159) (distinguishing 16 Mad. 468). Where the sanction did not designate the offence with which the accused was to be charged, but sufficiently set out the facts constituting the offences, held that the sanction was not invalid—Abdul Khadir, 1916 M.W.N. 384, 17 Cr.L.J. 168 (172). Where the preamble to the Government resolution in which the sanction is given sets out the whole of the facts, sanction is given for an offence punishable under sec. 477, I. P. C., or such other section or sections of the Code as may be applicable to the facts of the case and the accused is prosecuted under that section and no other section, the sanction is valid—Desaibhai Khushalbhai, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 50 (53), 39 Bom.L.R. 1056. See also Lakshman Sakharam, 2 Bom. 481.

Sanction for abetment :—Where a sanction has been granted to prosecute a person for a substantive offence, no fresh sanction is necessary to prosecute him for abetment of that offence, when the conviction for abetment is based on the same facts as those on which the charge for the substantive offence is founded—Profulla, 30 Cal 905 (908).

Form of sanction :—The Code does not prescribe any particular form of sanction under this section—Kalagava, 27 Mad. 54. Non-specification of the place in which and the occasion on which the offence was committed does not affect the validity of the sanction—Kalagava, 27 Mad. 54 (58). The order granting sanction need not specify the offence with the same precision as is necessary in a charge—Girwardhari Lal, 13 C.W.N. 1062 (1065); Jehangir, 29 Bom.L.R. 996, 28 Cr.L.J. 1012 (1014), A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 501, 106 I.C. 100, 8 A.I.Cr.R. 324. Thus, where the Kulkarni and the Patel of a village were charged with cheating inasmuch as they conspired to levy extra amounts of money from three persons who come to pay the land assessment, and the sanction was given for prosecution for 'cheating or for such other offence with which it may be necessary to prosecute them in connection with obtaining money from the ryots,' it was held that the sanction was not invalid for vagueness, inasmuch as it had sufficiently designated the offence or offences which might be established in connection with obtaining money from ryots—Madhav, 43 Bom. 147, A.I.R. 1918 Bom. 117, 48 I.C. 871, 20 Bom.L.R. 607, 20 Cr.L.J. 71. Where the offence is otherwise properly described and specified, the sanction is not bad merely because a mistake has been committed in specifying the date of the offence by one day (e.g., where the sanction stated the offence to have been committed on 29th February, whereas the correct day was 1st March)—Jehangir Cama, 29 Bom.L.R. 996, 28 Cr.L.J. 1012 (1014). A sanction for prosecuting a Municipal Commissioner under sec. 168, I. P. Code, for having interest in contracts with the Municipal Council, is not bad on the ground that it does not specify the particular contracts, when there is nothing to show that the sanction might relate to some contracts other than that for which the accused was prosecuted—Kalagava, 27 Mad. 54 (59).

Since the action of the sanctioning authority is more of the nature of executive than of judicial action the sanction need not state any reasons—Chinna Chendrayya v Subbarayudu, 1923 M.W.N. 77, 24 Cr.L.J. 116.

There is no provision in this section for a sanction to be addressed to any particular officer. A sanction is an order directing the prosecution of a certain person and in the ordinary way that order is conveyed to the authorities who are responsible for initiating prosecutions in the locality in question—Rudra Dat, 34 Cr L J 1208, 146 I.C. 149, A I R 1933 All. 543, 1933 Cr C. 874, 1933 A L J. 1559, 55 All. 798 There is nothing in the section which requires that the sanction should be addressed to any particular Court or officer or that orders under the second part of the section should necessarily be passed in every case—Desai bhai Khushal bhai, A I R. 1938 Bom 50 (54), 39 Bom L.R. 1056.

Notice to accused —A sanction under this section is not void for want of notice to the accused to show cause why it should not be given The giving of such opportunity is entirely at the discretion of the Government—Kalagava, 27 Mad 54 (57).

Inquiry by Government before sanction —There is no provision of law empowering the Government or an officer of the Government to hold a judicial inquiry in order to ascertain whether or not he ought to grant sanction under this section; and any inquiry which he may hold for this purpose is merely a departmental inquiry; consequently, no oath can be administered to any person examined in course of such inquiry, nor can such person be prosecuted for giving false evidence therein—Venkataramanna, 23 Mad. 223.

The Government granting sanction under sections 196 and 197 acts purely in its executive and not judicial capacity, and the sanction need not be based on legal evidence There is nothing in the significance of the word 'sanction' to import a judicial element into the act of the executive—Kalagava, 27 Mad 54 (57).

647. Want of Sanction:—The sanction required by this section must be obtained before any proceedings are taken Proceedings taken without sanction (or before the sanction is obtained) are illegal and without jurisdiction. Even a sanction obtained subsequently will not validate the proceedings—Morton, 9 Bom 288 (293); Bhimaji, 42 Bom 172 (177), 20 Bom.L.R. 89, 19 Cr L J. 342, 44 I C 454, A I R 1917 Bom 33. See also Mohammad Mehdi v Emp, A I R 1934 All 963, 1934 Cr C 1291, 152 I C. 667, 36 Cr.L.J 137, 1934 A L J 965 (F B) The Lahore High Court has taken a different view and has laid down that the object of sanction is that a public servant should not be unduly harassed and that the word "institution" should not be given a very narrow meaning In one sense it is true, a Court takes cognizance of a matter as soon as it makes any order, however formal, but, even if such formal orders are considered to have been made without jurisdiction, this flaw will not affect orders made after the defect has been removed and the Court is properly seised of the case In dealing with all technical objections of procedure the final test is whether or not the accused has in any way been prejudiced by the alleged irregularity. It has been repeatedly held that a sanction under sec. 197, Cr. P. C., can be put in at any stage of the proceedings Where this was done before the actual proceedings, namely the evidence in the case began to be recorded, the accused was in no way prejudiced and the trial was not vitiated—Manzur Ali v Emp, A I R. 1939 Lah. 1, 179 I C 778, 40 Cr L J. 252, 12 R L. 631, I L R. 1939 Lah 227, 41 P L R 154. In Arjan Singh v Emp, A I R 1939 Lah 479 (486), 41 Cr L J. 65, 184 I C 680 the same view was taken by Blacker, J, who observed "It seems to me therefore to follow from this that if a Magistrate has purported to take cognizance of an offence before the necessary sanction is received, it is only what he has done up till that time is void and cannot be revived This however does not mean that after the sanction has been received he cannot again commence to take valid cognizance. The complaint or police report not being invalidated by the absence of the sanction under this Section is still in legal existence and can form the legal basis for the taking of fresh cognizance under sec. 190. In this view all that is to be seen is whether sec. 537, Criminal Procedure Code, is applicable to the circumstances of the particular case Where for instance the sanction has not been received till after some of the evidence has been recorded and the Magistrate does not record that evidence again he would clearly be basing his judgment partly on evidence which has no legal existence as it was taken at a time when he had no jurisdiction to take it. This would clearly amount to failure of justice and the irregularity would not be cured by sec. 537. In the present case however, all that he did before the sanction was received was to issue process against the accused and secure their attendance. His acts may well have been void for want of jurisdiction but it cannot be said that his omission to issue fresh process to the accused after the sanction had been received which enabled him to take valid cognizance of the offence has caused any failure of justice. I would therefore have been ready to find in this particular case, had it only required a sanction under sec. 197, that cognizance taken after the sanction had been received was perfectly valid and that the omission of the Magistrate to go back and issue fresh process against the appellants was merely an irregularity curable under sec. 537 of the Code." Tek Chand, J., however took a different view in the same case. See also Dr. Hari Ram Singh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 F.C. 43, 181 I.C. 317, 40 Cr.L.J. 468 and Note 2A. Where no sanction has been granted by the Local Government, the Magistrate cannot proceed with the case, merely relying on a Government Resolution and yielding to the wishes of the parties—Bhimaji, 42 Bom. 172 (178), 20 Bom.L.R. 89, 19 Cr.L.J. 342, 44 I.C. 454, A.I.R. 1917 Bom. 33; Kalu Mahadu, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 432, 102 I.C. 342, 28 Cr.L.J. 534, 29 Bom.L.R. 707. In the earlier Bombay case (which was a High Court Sessions case), although the proceedings taken by the committing Magistrate were invalid for want of sanction, still as the sanction was obtained after the commitment, and no objection was taken by the accused as to the want of sanction in the commitment proceedings, the Judge presiding at the High Court Sessions, acting under sec. 532, accepted the commitment and proceeded with the trial—Morton, 9 Bom. 288 (296). See also Desaihbhai Khushal-bhai, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 50, 39 Bom.L.R. 1056 in Note 645. Where sanction, which is required, has not been obtained, the case should be dismissed under sec. 203, Cr. P. Code—Kyaw Htin v. Ah Yoo, 36 Cr.L.J. 77, 152 I.C. 366, 12 Rang. 530, 1934 Cr.C. 1039, A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 238.

If three persons were prosecuted jointly and if one of them raised a valid objection under sec. 197, Cr. P. C., after the trial was carried to a conclusion, the whole trial against all the accused was without jurisdiction as the trial Magistrate was not empowered to take cognizance in it. The proceedings in a joint trial cannot be differentiated into separate proceedings against each accused person—Fazal Rahman, 38 Cr.L.J. 1042, 170 I.C. 772, A.I.R. 1937 Pesh. 52, 10 R.Pesh. 23; Rudragonda Rachangonda Patil, 38 Cr.L.J. 654, 168 I.C. 956, 39 Bom.L.R. 70, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 160, I.L.R. 1937 Bom. 256, 9 R.B. 413. See also Ramchandra Rango v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 579 (587), 181 I.C. 870, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 129, 41 Bom.L.R. 98. Where the Court has acted without jurisdiction with regard to a part of the trial, the whole proceedings are vitiated by the illegality committed and any conviction based on such proceedings cannot stand—Rudragonda Rachangonda Patil, supra.

648. Sub-section (2)—Government's direction as to prosecution:—

The Local Government has power under this section to authorise some particular person to prefer charges against a public servant, and when it has limited the manner in which the prosecution is to be launched, the specification be adhered to. And so, where the Government directed that a particular person should prefer a complaint against a public servant, a complaint preferred by a person other than the one specified was illegal, and the result would be the same if the authorised person had delegated the function to some other person—Vinayak, 8 B.H.C.R. 32.

Specification of Court:—The power given by sec. 197 (2) overrides the general rule contained in sec. 177 that an offence shall be ordinarily tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it was committed. Where the Local Government sanctioned the prosecution of a person who committed an offence in Upper Burma, and specified a Court in Lower Burma for the trial of such person, it was held that the Court in Lower Burma was competent to take cognizance of the offence and was wrong in holding that it had no power to receive the complaint—Maung Ka, 4 L.B.R. 265, 8 Cr.L.J. 70. This shows that the Local Government can specify any Court irrespective of local jurisdiction.

Where the Local Government sanctioned the prosecution of a Sub-Judge and specified the Sessions Court of Tellicherry as the Court which should try the offence and appointed Mr. Irvine as the Officiating Sessions Judge, and subsequently by another order of Government Mr. Irvine was appointed as the Additional Sessions Judge, and he tried the case, it was held that the trial was not invalid, for though Mr. Irvine was appointed as the Additional Sessions Judge still his appointment did not constitute an Additional Sessions Court. His Court was still the Sessions Court of which he was an Additional Sessions Judge, and since an Additional Sessions Judge is competent to try those cases which the Local Government may direct and since Mr. Irvine was directed by the Local Government to try the case when he was first appointed as officiating Sessions Judge, he was competent to try the case—Kunjan, 1 M L J 397 (F B)

When the Local Government has specified a particular Court, such specification will supersede all power of transfer conferred on the High Court under sec 526—Nando Lal v. Mitter, 25 Cal. 852 (862). See sub-section (7) of sec. 526

649. Revision:—Under the old law, if an offence was committed by an Honorary Magistrate a sanction for his prosecution could be granted by the Chief Presidency Magistrate, and the High Court has power under sec. 15 of the Charter Act (though not under sec. 439 of this Code) to interfere with an order granting or refusing sanction under sec. 197—Nando Lal v. Mitter, 25 Cal 852 But under the present law, the power of granting or refusing sanction lies only with the Local Government, and the High Court will have no power to interfere even under the Charter Act.

Even under the old law, it was held in a Lahore case that the granting of sanction being an executive rather than a judicial act, the High Court had no power to interfere with the proceeding of a District Judge granting sanction for the prosecution of a Sub-Judge—Ali Hussain Khan v. Hacharan, 2 Lah 305, 1922 P L R 35, 23 Cr L J 113

198. No Court shall take cognizance of an offence falling under Chapter XIX or Chapter XXI of the Indian Penal Code or under sections 493 to 496 (both inclusive) of the same Code, except upon a complaint made by some person aggrieved by such offence:

Prosecution for breach of contract, defamation and offences against marriage.

of the Indian Penal Code or under sections 493 to 496 (both inclusive) of the same

Provided that, where the person so aggrieved is a woman who, according to the customs and manners of the country, ought not to be compelled to appear in public, or where such person is under the age of eighteen years or is an idiot or lunatic or is from sickness or infirmity unable to make a complaint, some other person may, with the leave of the Court, make a complaint on his or her behalf.

Chapter XIX (comprising sections 490-492) of the I. P. Code relates to criminal breach of contracts of service Chapter XXI (comprising sections 499-502) relates to Defamation Sec 493—Inducing a woman to believe that she is married to the accused and to cohabit with him. Sec 494—Bigamy. Sec 495—Bigamy with concealment of former marriage Sec. 496—Going through the false marriage ceremony.

Change:—The proviso has been added by sec 51 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923.

650. Magistrate's power to add or alter charge:—When a plaint presented to the Magistrate contained only charges under secs. 352 and 504, I. P. C., but did not contain a charge under sec. 500, I. P. C. (defamation), but that charge was subsequently added by the Magistrate on statements made by the complainant, it was held that the Magistrate could not add the charge of defamation or take cognizance of it, as there was no formal complaint in respect of it, such as is required by this section—Deoki Nandan, 10 All. 39. So also, the Magistrate cannot alter a charge under sec. 501, I. P. C., to one under sec. 500, I. P. C., when there was no formal complaint by the person aggrieved in respect of the latter offence—Uma Shankar, 18 P.R. 1889.

But a more liberal view has been taken in the cases noted below. Thus, in a Punjab case, where a complaint was made to the Magistrate under sec. 211, I. P. C., that the accused had made a false charge against him (complaint) of poisoning his daughter-in-law, with a view to injure his reputation, but the Magistrate treated the case as one under sec. 500, I. P. C., and tried it so, it was held that having regard to the substance of the complaint, the Magistrate was competent to alter the complaint under sec. 211, I. P. C., to one under sec. 500, I. P. C., when in fact that complaint was preferred by the aggrieved person—Nur Aslam, 24 P.R. 1884. The principle is that a complaint need not state precisely the section of the Penal Code under which the accused shall be charged; it is enough if the complaint lays before the Magistrate the facts which if proved would warrant a commitment under any of the sections referred to in this section—Alli, 25 All. 209 (211). A complaint need not quote any section of the Indian Penal Code but must contain a statement of the facts relied on as constituting the offence, and it is for the Magistrate to determine on these facts what offence has prima facie been committed; the nature of the charge will be determined by him. All that is necessary for him to see is that the inquiry into the charge is within his competency, and that in the case of certain offences, the complaint has been made by the proper person. Therefore, though the complainant referred specifically to secs. 193 and 211, I. P. C., and did not complain in so many words of having been defamed and did not mention sec. 500, I. P. Code, still if it contained a statement of the facts constituting the offence of defamation and he asked the Court to take action under that section or under any other section which the facts disclosed might justify, the Magistrate was competent to frame a charge of defamation and to try the offence—Naurat, 6 Lah. 375, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 631 (632). Where the husband of a woman who had committed bigamy (sec. 494, I. P. C.) made a complaint alleging facts which seemed to constitute an offence under sec. 498, I. P. C., but in the subsequent inquiry it appeared that an offence under sec. 494, I. P. C., was committed, it was held that the Court could take cognizance of the offence under sec. 494, I. P. C., without a fresh complaint formally preferred under that section—Alli, 25 All. 209 (211), 1903 A.W.N. 7. But where a complaint was made by the husband for offences under secs. 363, 342 and 506, I. P. C., but the Magistrate came to the conclusion on evidence, but not from the facts stated by the husband in his complaint or in his deposition in Court, that the facts did not disclose an offence under any one of those sections but disclosed an offence under sec. 494, I. P. C., it was not competent for the Magistrate to force upon the complainant this character of an aggrieved husband which he did not wish to assume—Gulab, 39 Cr.L.J. 686, 176 I.C. 98, 11 RS 16, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 141. This section is clearly designed to prevent Magistrates from inquiring on their own motion into a case connected with marriage unless the husband or other person authorised moves them to do so, but when the case is once properly instituted before the Magistrate, he can proceed in respect of any other offence proved or against any other person implicated—Ujjala, 1 C.L.R. 523.

Power of Appellate Court to alter charge :—An Appellate Court can under sec. 423 alter a conviction under one section into one under another section, and in doing so it is not bound by such restriction as, for instance, a complaint by the aggrieved person. Thus, it can convert a conviction under sec. 182, I. P. C., into one under sec. 500, I. P. C., notwithstanding that there was no complaint in respect of the latter offence by the aggrieved person as required by this section—Gur Narain, 25 All. 534 (536). But in a case falling under the next section, the Oudh Chief Court has held that the Appellate Court cannot alter a conviction of rape into a conviction for adultery, when there was no formal complaint preferred by the husband in respect of the latter offence, as required by sec. 199—Baji, 10 O.W.N. 107, 1933 Cr.C. 318 (320).

651. Abetment:—A Magistrate taking cognizance of abetment of the offences mentioned in this section must be deemed to have taken cognizance of the substantive offences, and, therefore, a complaint by the aggrieved person is a condition precedent to the taking cognizance of the abetment—Jitmal, 4 P R. 1888. But the Allahabad High Court holds that sec. 198 does not apply to a charge of abetment of the offences mentioned therein. Section 195 provides in express terms that a complaint is needed for a prosecution for the abetment of the offences mentioned therein or for an attempt to commit them. No such provision is contained in sec 198, and it cannot, therefore, be said that the charge of abetment of the offences referred to therein is excluded from cognizance without a complaint by the person aggrieved by such abetment—Mumtaz, 21 A.L.J. 155, 27 Cr.L.J. 101, 91 IC 533

652. Person aggrieved:—The general rule is that a complaint may be made by anybody whether he be an aggrieved person or not. But sec 198 modifies the general rule by providing that the offence of defamation, etc., should not be taken cognizance of by any Court except upon a complaint made by the person aggrieved by the defamation, etc.—Naurati, 6 Lah 375, AIR 1925 Lah 631 (632).

Defamation —The question as to whether the complainant is the person 'aggrieved' by the offence alleged, within the meaning of this section, is to be determined by the nature of the offence and the special circumstances of each case—Daem Sardar v. Batu Dhall, 3 C.L.J. 38 (40, 41), 3 Cr.L.J. 187. In the case of a married woman, it was held in an earlier Punjab case that since under sec 499, I P C, the reputation to be harmed must be the reputation of the very person concerning whom the imputation is made, a husband could not be considered to have been harmed in his reputation by a defamatory statement concerning his wife—Daood, 22 P R 1884. But the other High Courts are of opinion that the reputation of the husband is so intimately connected with that of his wife that it would be unreasonable to hold that the defamation of his wife (e.g., imputation of unchastity) would ordinarily be not as hurtful to his feelings as it is to those of his wife. Therefore, the husband is undoubtedly a person aggrieved by the defamation of his wife—Chellam v. Ramasami, 14 Mad 379; Chotalal v. Nathabai, 25 Bom 151 (FB); Lachman, 20 P R 1882; Appanna v. Akkanna, 27 M.L.J. 746, 26 Cr.L.J. 521; Gurdit Singh, 5 Lah 301, 25 Cr.L.J. 342, AIR 1924 Lah 559. If, however, the husband is a lunatic and the woman is living in the house and under the protection of her father-in-law, any allegation against the daughter-in-law seriously affects the reputation and status in society of the father-in-law, and he is a person aggrieved within the meaning of this section and is competent to institute a complaint—Daem Sardar v. Batu Dhall, 3 C.L.J. 38, 3 Cr.L.J. 187. (This is now expressly provided by the new proviso). Where a Hindu lady is living with her father, brother or son, she is a member of that family and her reputation is bound up with the reputation of the person in whose house and under whose charge she is living, and any imputation as to her character will affect as much the relative with whom she is living as herself. Therefore, the brother of a Hindu widow, with whom she has been living, is an aggrieved person in respect of an imputation of unchastity made against the woman—Thakur Das v. Adhar Chandra, 32 Cal. 425. Under the proviso newly added by the Amendment Act of 1923, any friend or relative of the female will be able to make the complaint with the leave of the Court. The adopted son is a person aggrieved by the defamation of his adoptive mother—Surajmal v. Ramnath, 28 Cr.L.J. 996 (Nag).

Where certain allegations made in a newspaper against A and certain others were true as regards A but untrue as regards the others, it was held that A was not the person aggrieved by the publication of the allegations—Subraya v. Kader Routhen, 1914 M.W.N. 351, 15 Cr.L.J. 357.

The complaint in respect of defamation must be made by the person aggrieved and cannot be preferred by his official superior. Thus, where a police officer has been defamed, a complaint by his official superior on the ground that the good name of the police force has been attacked, cannot be entertained—Gaya, 26 O.C. 44, 23 Cr.L.J. 641;

A.I.R. 1923 Oudh 4, 69 I.C. 81. Where a newspaper published statements, which were alleged to be defamatory, or specific acts of negligence on the part of the Health Officer and his subordinates, it was held that the President of the Municipality was not a person aggrieved within the meaning of this section merely because he had a control over those officers, and that by the imputation made against his subordinates, his own conduct and administration had not been impugned—Beauchamp v. Moore, 26 Mad 43, 12 M.L.J. 413.

It is reasonable to suppose that the intention is that only such person as has directly or indirectly suffered in his reputation by the defamation complained of, can set the machinery of the law Courts into motion. In short, the aggrievement of the complainant should not merely be the one shared by every member of an organized society—Hossainbhoy Ismailji, 36 Cr.L.J. 408, 153 I.C. 443, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 188, 1934 Cr.C. 1396. A prosecution by the husband or father for defamation of the wife or daughter, as the case may be, is not permissible unless the conditions laid down by the proviso are complied with. Likewise, where the person defamed is an adult and a male who is neither insane nor idiotic nor incapable of attending Court, owing to sickness or other physical infirmity, no other person may institute a prosecution on his behalf. The mere fact that the feelings of the complainant have been injured in consequence of a defamatory statement made against his religious head affords him no ground under the law to prosecute the accused—Hosseinbhoy Ismailji, 36 Cr.L.J. 975, 156 I.C. 567, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 98, 1935 Cr.C. 516.

Death of complainant in defamation:—The death of the complainant, during the course of the criminal proceedings for defamation, necessarily terminates those proceedings—Ishar Das, 10 P.R. 1908, 7 Cr.L.J. 290.

Person aggrieved by bigamy:—In the case of an offence of bigamy committed by the wife, the husband is the only person aggrieved by such offence, and he alone can make the complaint. The father of the husband is not the "person aggrieved"—Lala, 32 All. 78; so also, the brother of the husband is not the person aggrieved—Imtiazan, 25 All. 132; Bai Rukhmoni, 10 Bom. 340; Hanuman, 11 O.C. 148, 7 Cr.L.J. 457. A hereditary Kathief Levvai (priest) is not an aggrieved person within the meaning of this section so as to entitle him to bring a case under sec. 496, I. P. C.—Muhammad Lervai, 32 Cr.L.J. 1116, 134 I.C. 57, 1930 M.W.N. 694, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 247, 1931 Cr.C. 367, Ind. Rul. 1931 Mad. 809.

Prior to the present amendment, it was held that if the husband of the girl who committed bigamy was a minor, his mother was not competent to make a complaint, as she was not the person aggrieved—In re Sessions Judge, 2 Weir 231; it was also held that if the husband was a lunatic, his brother could not make a complaint on his behalf—Dy. Leg. Rem. v. Sarna, 26 Cal. 336. These two cases are now rendered obsolete by the new proviso.

652A. Effect of non-compliance:—Where the Magistrate who took cognizance of the complaint had no jurisdiction by reason of sec. 198, Cr. P. C., to do so, the trial and conviction of the accused must be held to be void in view of the mandatory provisions of sec. 198, Cr. P. Code. Want of objection with regard to jurisdiction in the trial Court cannot confer jurisdiction on the Magistrate who tried the accused—Jagadish v. Shams Ara Begum, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 6, 36 Cr.L.J. 116, 152 I.C. 478, 11 O.W.N. 1389, 1934 O.L.R. 878, 7 R.O. 228, 1935 Cr.C. 11, 10 Luck. 277.

199. No Court shall take cognizance of an offence under section 497 or section 498 of the Indian Penal Code, except upon a complaint made by the husband of the woman, or, in his absence, made with the leave of the Court, by some person who had care of such woman on his behalf at the time when such offence was committed:

Prosecution for adultery or enticing a married woman.

Provided that, where such husband is under the age of eighteen years, or is an idiot or lunatic, or is from sickness or infirmity unable to make a complaint, some other person may, with the leave of the Court, make a complaint on his behalf.

Section 497, I. P. Code—Adultery. Section 496—Enticing or taking away or detaining with criminal intent a married woman

Change:—The italicised words have been added by sec 52 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923

Object of section:—The restriction imposed in this section (empowering only the husband or the guardian to make the complaint) is not to afford immunity or protection to the offender, but to prevent a person unconnected with the woman from giving publicity to a matter which neither the husband nor the guardian is willing to agitate—Rathna Padayachi, 17 Cr L J 363 (364) (Mad)

653. Scope of section:—The only offences referred to in this section are offences under secs. 497 and 498, I P C., but a charge of house-trespass with intent to commit adultery with a woman is not contemplated by this section, and such an offence may be inquired into upon complaint made by the woman, without complaint by the husband of the woman, although a prosecution for the offence of adultery must be instituted by the husband alone—Anonymous, 1 Weir 531. Where the complainant charged the accused with house-trespass with intent to commit theft, but it appeared and the accused admitted that he committed house trespass with intent to commit adultery with the complainant's wife, he could be convicted of the latter offence, although the complainant had not made a formal complaint for that offence—Kangla, 23 All 82 (84). Contra—Anonymous, 7 M H C R App 5, 1 Weir 531

But where the complainant charged the accused with house-trespass with intent to commit theft but the accused stated that he had gone there to have sexual intercourse with a woman other than the complainant's wife, and the accused was convicted for house-trespass with intent to commit adultery, held that the conviction was injudicious, in the absence of a complaint by the husband of that woman—Harcharan, 1886 A.W.N. 42

654. Complaint:—The complaint referred to in this section means a complaint as defined in sec 4 (h). A Magistrate is not competent to entertain a case under sec 498, I P C., on the report of a police officer, and in the absence of a complaint by the husband or guardian of the woman alleged to have been enticed away by the accused—Bhana, 1910 PR 32, 12 Cr L J 50. Information lodged by the complainant before the police is not a complaint—Tara Prosad, 30 Cal 910 (915) (FB), 8 CWN 17; Arumuga, 43 M L J 564, 23 Cr L J 592, AIR 1923 Mad 59. But where the Police took up the proceeding, in which the husband appeared as a witness and in his deposition he said that he intended to prosecute the accused and to get him punished, it was held that there was a complaint within the meaning of sec. 4 (h), in as much as he made an allegation before the Magistrate that the offence should be inquired into—Bhauani, 38 All 276 (279), 14 A L J 233, 17 Cr L J 72.

If a petition contains an allegation of facts which, if proved by evidence, would constitute a particular offence, then it may be regarded as a complaint of that offence. But the necessary averments must be present—Ramnarayan v. Emp., 38 Cr L J. 769 (774), 11 L R. 1937 Bom 244, 39 Bom L R. 61, 169 I C. 526, 10 R B. 34, A.I.R. 1937 Bom 186

Where a complaint is made of an offence other than the offences mentioned in this section, can the Court convict the accused for an offence mentioned in this section on the strength of certain statements made by the complainant in Court? This has been the subject of conflicting decisions which are cited below

Thus, if the husband brings a complaint of any other offence (rape) and from certain statements in his deposition it appears that an offence mentioned in this section (adultery) has been committed by the accused, it has been held that no conviction for the latter offence can be sustained, because the husband has not made a formal complaint of that offence; the provisions of sec. 238 (3) are strict in this respect. Even the circumstance of the husband appearing as a witness in the case would not be regarded as amounting to the institution of a complaint for adultery—Kali, 5 All. 233 (235); Cheman, 29 Cal. 415 (416), 6 C.W.N. 677; Rahmatulla, 1883 P.R. 10; Nga Po, 14 Cr.L.J. 284 (286). Similarly, where the accused was charged with offences under secs 366 and 379, I. P. C., but from statements in the deposition of the complainant (husband of the woman concerned) an offence under sec. 498, I. P. C., was made out, and the Judge convicted him of that offence, it was held that the conviction was illegal in the absence of a formal complaint by the husband in respect of that offence; and the statements made by the husband in his deposition could not be said to be a complaint under sec. 4 (h) of this Code—Imamkhan, 14 Bom.L.R. 141, 13 Cr.L.J. 287 (288), 14 I.C. 671; Isap Mahomed, 31 Bom. 218, 5 Cr.L.J. 164, 9 Bom.L.R. 148; Ramnarayan v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 769 (774), 169 I.C. 526, 39 Bom.L.R. 61, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 186, I.L.R. 1937 Bom. 244, 10 R.B. 34.

In other words, there must be a formal complaint of the specific offence mentioned in this section, and not a complaint of any offence. Where a person was charged with kidnapping or with abduction, and the Judge convicted the accused, on the evidence, of an offence under sec. 498, I. P. C., held that the conviction was wrong as there was no specific complaint of an offence under sec. 498, I. P. C.—Banguru Asari, 27 Mad 61 (62). Where the accused was charged only with the offence of kidnapping a minor girl (complainant's daughter) and theft of jewels, and there was no complaint that the accused's purpose was to have illicit intercourse with the girl (sec. 498, I. P. C.), and even the sworn statement of the complainant did not contain any allegation in respect of that offence, held that the Magistrate could not convict the accused of an offence under sec. 498, I. P. C.—Arunachalam, 45 M.L.J. 543, 24 Cr.L.J. 837, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 323. Where a husband charged the accused persons with theft and theft only, they could not be convicted of an offence under sec. 498, I. P. C., as there was no complaint preferred by the husband under this section in respect of the latter offence—Roda Singh, 1918 P.R. 2, 19 Cr.L.J. 300. The Court cannot add a charge of an offence referred to in this section without a formal complaint in respect of that charge by the person specified. Where the accused was committed to the Sessions on charges under secs 363 and 366, I. P. C., and at the conclusion of the evidence, to establish these charges the Sessions Court added a charge under sec. 498, I. P. C., and convicted the accused on all the three charges, held that the procedure contravened the provisions of sec. 238, as there was no complaint by the husband in respect of the additional charge under sec. 498, I. P. C., and that the conviction must be set aside—Isap Md., 31 Bom. 218 (220). What is intended by this section is that there should be a complaint by the husband followed by this ordinary procedure of enquiry before a Committing Magistrate. Otherwise no charge under this section should be enquired into or should be heard by the Sessions Court—Abdul Aziz, 53 C.L.J. 346 (349), 32 Cr.L.J. 1135, 134 I.C. 314, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 524, 1931 Cr.C. 676, Ind Rul. 1931 Cal. 810. Where the husband's complaint was one not merely of offences involving the use of force but was also a specific complaint of the offence punishable under secs 497 and 498, I. P. C., there was nothing to prevent the addition of charges under the aforesaid sections by the Sessions Judge in the manner indicated in sec. 226 and the following sections of the Cr. P. Code—Rajani v. Idris, 34 C.L.J. 51, 48 Cal. 1105, 25 C.W.N. 615, 22 Cr.L.J. 760, 64 I.C. 280.

But a more liberal view has been taken in several cases. Thus, in Sheikh Mahomed Ratanlal 584 (585), it was held that the word 'complaint' must be taken as including not only a written complaint but also the examination of the complainant, at any rate, prior to the issue of process; therefore, where the written complaint specifically mentioned section 497, I. P. C., only, but did not mention an offence under sec. 498, I. P. C., but the complainant's examination made out such an offence, the Magistrate had jurisdiction to frame a charge under sec. 498, I. P. C., and to try such offence. So also, upon a complaint in respect of an offence under sec 366, I P. C., a conviction under sec 498, I P. C., could stand, even in the absence of a complaint by the husband, if his evidence was such as to justify the conviction for the latter offence—Jtra Shekh v. Reazat, 20 Cal. 483 (486); Bhavani, 38 All 276 (279), 17 Cr.L.J. 72. For the purposes of this section the complaint need not specify precisely the section under which the accused is to be charged so long as it sets forth matter which, if proved, would warrant a conviction, and a desire is expressed that the accused be punished for what he has done. If the complaint described in its heading as one under secs 366 and 368 fulfils all the requirements of a complaint under sec 497, and clearly makes an accusation of an offence under that section, then, if the adultery complained of is proved, a conviction under that section will not be illegal on the ground that there has been no complaint as required by sec. 199, Cr. P. C.,—Sain, 36 Cr.L.J. 789, 155 I.C. 595, AIR 1934 Lah 945, 36 P.L.R. 204, 1934 Cr.C. 1333, following Mohan Singh, 36 Cr.L.J. 404, 153 I.C. 697, AIR 1934 All 472, 1934 Cr.C. 555. In the absence of a complaint under this section no charge under sec. 498, I P. C., can be framed—Ramjanam, AIR 1935 Pat 357, 16 P.L.T. 348, 155 I.C. 866, 36 Cr.L.J. 856. Nor can a conviction under sec. 376, I P. C., be converted into one under sec. 497, I P. C., in such a case—Baji, 34 Cr.L.J. 496, 143 I.C. 73, 10 OWN 107, AIR 1933 Oudh 163, 1933 Cr.C. 318, Ind Rul 1933 Oudh 153. Where the accused were charged under sec 366A, I P. C., but were convicted under sec. 498, I P. C., without a complaint as required by this section, the conviction was illegal—Jagdamba, 34 Cr.L.J. 1227, 145 I.C. 922, AIR 1933 All 626, 1933 Cr.C. 1005, 1933 ALJ 701. Though the offence charged in the complaint made by the husband was one under sec 371, I P. Code, still if the facts set forth in the complaint were sufficient to support a conviction under sec 498, I P. C., the Magistrate had jurisdiction to frame a charge under the latter section—Puran Ditta, 23 P.R. 1895. Where the complaint by the husband was under sec 494, I P. C., but the facts disclosed an offence under sec 498, I P. C., a conviction on the latter charge was not illegal, though there was no formal complaint in respect of the latter offence. The complainant need not state precisely the section of the Penal Code under which the accused should be charged. It is sufficient if he lays before the Magistrate facts which would be sufficient to establish an offence under that section. It cannot be said that there was no complaint under that section merely because the husband also alleged certain additional facts which he was unable to prove and which if proved would have amounted to another offence—Brahma Dat, 24 O.C. 232, AIR 1921 Oudh 149, 22 Cr.L.J. 742.

655. Who can complain:—The only person who can prefer a complaint of an offence referred to in this section is the husband of the woman. The husband is entitled to make the complaint even though the marriage has been dissolved before the complaint, if the offence was committed before the marriage was dissolved—Dhanna Singh, 106 P.L.R. 1919, 23 Cr.L.J. 462, AIR 1922 Lah. 477.

In the absence of the husband, the complaint may be made by any person having the care of the woman. Thus, the mother of the husband, who was in charge of the wife during the absence of the husband, is competent to prefer a complaint of an offence under sec 498, I P. C., against the person who abducts the wife—Madhub Ali, 24 Cr.L.J. 780 (Lah.). So also, where at the time of the offence the wife was under the care of her father during the absence of her husband, the father was competent to prefer the complaint under sec. 498, I P. C.—Rathna, 17 Cr.L.J. 363 (364) (Mad.). But when the father of the girl with whom she was residing filed a complaint under sec. 498, I P. C., on the allegation that the husband of the girl was ill and so he had to be the complainant and there was nothing on the record in proof of the allegation, held that the complaint was in contravention of this section and the proceedings were without jurisdiction—Mahendra v. Gopal, 34 Cr.L.J. 290, 142 I.C. 150, AIR 1933 Cal. 144, 1933 Cr.L.J. 205, Ind Rul. 1933 Cal. 241. Where the husband was alive, but in prison and the wife lived with her father, the husband's brother, who had neither de facto nor constructive care of her and did not represent his brother or hold any authority from him, was not competent to lodge a complaint under secs 497 and 498, I. P. Code—Rabnawaz Khan, 37 Cr.L.J. 345, 160 I.C. 726, A.I.R. 1933 Pesh. 32, 1936 Cr.C. 113.

If the prosecution succeeds in making out its case that the complainant had the husband's authority to take care of the wife on his behalf, so that the complainant stood in the place of the husband for the time being, while the husband was residing quite independently in another place, it would be difficult to say that the requirements of sec. 199, Cr. P. C., are not satisfied. But the words 'on his behalf' must be given some meaning. It is not enough that a person should take care of the wife instead of the husband because the husband will not take care of her and there is no one else to do it. Where, therefore, the husband had obviously washed his hands of the wife, for the time being at any rate, and having nowhere else to go she went to her parent's house where her father and brother treated her as though she were still subject to the paternal authority or, to the authority of the senior members of the Hindu joint family, they were acting on their own authority or assumed authority and not by the authority or on behalf of the husband and that being so, the complaint made by the brother was not competent under sec 199, Cr. P. Code—Ramnarayan v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 769 (772), 169 I.C. 526, 39 Bom.L.R. 61, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 186, I.L.R. 1937 Bom. 244, 10 R.B. 34.

Where the complaint was preferred by the nephew of the husband, when the latter was bed-ridden with paralysis, it was held that the Court could not take cognizance of the offence, as it could not be said that the husband was absent—Tikiomal, 3 S.L.R. 15, 1 I.C. 941. But this ruling is no longer correct in view of the words "sickness or infirmity" occurring in the proviso newly added.

It has been held in the above Madras case that the words "in his absence" refer to the original entrustment and not to the time of filing of the complaint. In other words, a complaint may be made by the guardian if the husband was absent at the time of the offence, even though he is present at the time of filing the complaint; and the fact that the husband is present and stands by and is unwilling to complain will not prevent the guardian from making the complaint—Rathna, supra.

The complaint may be preferred by any person having the care of the woman, during the absence of the husband, even though the absence be temporary, e.g. for two days. It may sometimes be absolutely necessary that when the husband is away, a complaint should be promptly filed, whether the absence be for two days or more, when there is a probability that unless prompt action is taken the accused may entirely vanish with the woman that he has enticed, and it may not be possible to trace their whereabouts—Sahibrai, 27 Cr.L.J. 414, 93 I.C. 78, A.I.R. 1926 Sind 159.

The words "some person who had care of such woman" mean a person who had the care of the woman on her husband's behalf during the latter's absence; such person can make the complaint without any express delegation by the husband to lodge the complaint in his absence. And the Court must grant leave to the complainant. But it is not necessary that the Magistrate must expressly record that leave was granted to the complainant to proceed with the complaint. Where the record shows that the deposition of the complainant was recorded before issuing process, and that the Magistrate interrogated that person and satisfied himself that in the absence of the husband that person was competent to file the proceedings, held that the Magistrate substantially accorded leave to the complainant and the provisions of sec 199 were substantially complied with—Sahibrai, 27 Cr.L.J. 414 (415), 93 I.C. 78, A.I.R. 1926 Sind 159.

If the husband be a minor, he can be represented by another in a prosecution for adultery. See the proviso. Thus, if the husband is a minor, the complaint may be lodged by the husband's father; but if at the time of the offence the minor husband was absent (i.e. not living with the wife under the same roof) and the wife was living with her maternal uncle, then the only person who could make the complaint was the maternal uncle (as having charge of the woman on her husband's behalf) but not the husband's father—Wallia, 23 Cr L.J. 613 (Lah).

The husband can, even though he is a minor, make the complaint, and there is nothing in law to prevent him from doing so—Wallia, 23 Cr L.J. 613 (Lah). Even the proviso newly enacted will not debar the minor husband himself from lodging the complaint, for the proviso is not a restricting but an enabling provision.

When the wife's father lodged a complaint under sec 498, I. P. C., without the leave of the Court for which an application was made but it was never granted, the proceedings were illegal—Luqman, 35 Cr L.J. 1032, 140 IC 1106, A.I.R. 1934 Lah 86, 1934 Cr C 168. Where there is nothing on the record to show that the leave was either asked for or granted or that the requirements of sec. 199, Cr. P. C., were ever present to the Magistrate's mind, a conviction under section 498, I. P. C., on the complaint of a person other than the husband cannot stand. It cannot be regarded merely as an irregularity which can be cured by sec. 537, Cr. P. C.—Akshoy, 34 Cr L.J. 1092, 38 C.W.N. 113, A.I.R. 1933 Cal 880, 1933 Cr C 1530, 145 IC 874. When the proceedings show that the Magistrate did accord leave to the complainant, the provision of this section will be deemed to have been complied with although the leave was not expressly recorded—Shibrai, 27 Cr L.J. 414, 93 IC 78, A.I.R. 1926 Sind 159.

656. Miscellaneous:—Death of husband—Effect of—The law only requires that the prosecution on a charge of adultery should be instituted by the husband. But it cannot be said that the death of the husband after institution of the prosecution but before trial necessarily puts an end to the prosecution, although it is desirable that the charge should be withdrawn by the prosecution on the death of the aggrieved party—Anonymous, 2 Weir 235, 4 M.H.C.R. App 55; Nur Mahomed, 1 S.L.R. 72, 8 Cr L.J. 190. Where proceedings were dropped during the life time of the husband, it is not open to any person after the husband's death to revive the proceedings—Rukmani, 16 Cr L.J. 466 (Mad).

Appellate Court's power to alter charge—The Oudh Chief Court has held that it is not in the power of the Appellate Court to alter a conviction of rape into a conviction of adultery, when there was no formal complaint preferred by the husband before the Magistrate in respect of the latter offence—Baji, 10 O.W.N. 107, 1933 Cr C 318 (320). But in a case falling under the preceding section, the Appellate Court converted a conviction under sec 182, I. P. C., into one under sec. 500, I. P. C., although there was no complaint in respect of the latter offence preferred by the aggrieved party—Gur Nataan, 25 All 534 (536). See Notes 650 and para 654.

Acquittal for want of proper complaint—Fresh complaint—Where the brother of the husband of the woman instituted a complaint under sec 498, I. P. C., alleging that he had authority from the husband to prefer the complaint, but after taking evidence the Magistrate held that the complainant had no authority and acquitted the accused, and subsequently the husband himself instituted the complaint, it was held that the previous acquittal was no bar to a fresh trial—Umeruddin, 31 All 317; Tskaram, 17 Bom L.R. 678, 16 Cr L.J. 657.

199A. When in any case falling under section 198 or section

199, the person on whose behalf the complaint is sought to be made is under the age of eighteen years or is a lunatic, and the person applying for leave has not been

Objection by lawful guardian to complaint by person other than person aggrieved appointed or declared by competent authority to be the guardian of the person of the said minor or lunatic, and the Court is satisfied that there is a guardian so appointed or declared, notice shall be given to such guardian, and the Court shall, before granting the application, give him a reasonable opportunity of objecting to the granting thereof.

This section has been added by sec. 53 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923.

"We have added a new section 199A in order to safeguard the rights of a legally appointed guardian"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916.

CHAPTER XVI.

OF COMPLAINTS TO MAGISTRATES.

It is most desirable that Magistrates should follow the procedure which is quite clearly laid down in this chapter dealing with complaints to Magistrates—Balai Lal v. Pasupati, 21 C.W.N. 127, 17 Cr.L.J. 395.

Magistrates should also be prompt in disposing of complaints under this chapter. They have no right whatever to keep complaints instituted before them without passing orders for several months. Such action is in the highest degree improper and shows want of proper understanding as to what their duties are—Salimullah v. Brijhan, 18 Cr.L.J. 271 (All).

200. [* * *] A Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence on complaint shall at once examine the complainant upon oath, and the substance of the examination shall be reduced to writing and shall be signed by the complainant, and also by the Magistrate:

Examination of complainant.

Provided as follows:—

(a) when the complaint is made in writing, nothing herein contained shall be deemed to require a Magistrate to examine the complainant before transferring the case under section 192;

(aa) when the complaint is made in writing, nothing herein contained shall be deemed to require the examination of a complainant in any case in which the complaint has been made by a Court or by a public servant acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duties;

(b) where the Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate, such examination may be on oath or not as the Magistrate in each case thinks fit, and where the complaint is made in writing, need not be reduced to writing; but the Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, before the matter of the complaint is brought before him, require it to be reduced to writing;

(c) when the case has been transferred under section 192 and the Magistrate so transferring it has already examined the complainant, the Magistrate to whom it is so transferred shall not be bound to re-examine the complainant.

Change:—This section has been amended by sec 54 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923. The words "subject to the provisions of section 476" which occurred at the very beginning of the old section have been omitted, and proviso (aa) has been newly added. "We would add to this clause a provision that in the case of a complaint under sec. 476, the examination of the complainant shall be dispensed with"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916

The words "where the complaint is made in writing" have been inserted in proviso (b), by the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, II of 1926. The reason has been thus stated:—"At present a Presidency Magistrate need not record the substance of an examination even if the complaint is not in writing. It is desirable that where there is no complaint in writing the Magistrate should record the examination in writing"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (Gazette of India, 1925, Part V, p. 214).

657. Taking cognizance:—A Magistrate is bound to take cognizance of an offence upon complaint; see Note under sec. 190, arte "A Magistrate is bound to receive all complaints, whether they may be preferred orally or in writing"—Cal. G. R. & C. O., p. 8.

If a pardanashin lady sends a complaint to a Magistrate, he is entitled to take cognizance of it, but before he takes cognizance he must be satisfied that it is her complaint. It is comparatively unimportant by what means the complaint reaches the Magistrate if it is really her complaint—Abhoyeswari v. Kishori Mohan, 42 Cal. 19 (23), 18 C.W.N. 1020, 15 Cr.L.J. 348, 23 I.C. 700

When a Magistrate gets the statement of a complainant recorded by the Readers of the Court in open Court, he takes cognizance of the offences mentioned in the complaint under this section, because it is only when the Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence on complaint that he is bound under this section to examine the complainant on oath—Bhagvath v. Ali Harid, 32 Cr.L.J. 991, 132 I.C. 783, 8 O.W.N. 157, AIR 1931 Oudh 392, 1931 Cr.C. 824, Ind Rul 1931 Oudh 335, 14 C.L.J. 20

See Lilaram Ladakmal v. Wadhmal Assudomal in Note 13.

658. Complaint:—See Notes under sec 4 (h)

It is clear from the wording of sections 200 and 201 that a complaint need not be in writing—J. R. Das, 1 Rang 549.

Presentation of complaint.—Since the complainant is to be examined "at once" it follows that ordinarily a complaint must be presented in person and a complaint shall not be accepted which is not signed by the complainant and is not preferred by a person duly authorised to prefer that specific complaint—Abhoyeswari v. Kishori, 42 Cal. 19 (23), 15 Cr.L.J. 348, 18 C.W.N. 1020, 23 I.C. 700. But a complaint not presented in person is not bad in law and if a complaint is not so presented, the Magistrate may call upon the complainant to appear before him on a date to be fixed by him, and may examine him on that day—Chukermal, 23 S.L.R. 285, 30 Cr.L.J. 732 (733).

See Note 487 where the questions as to whether a complaint can be treated as the first information by the police to whom it may be sent by the Magistrate for investigation and whether the police can, after investigation, submit charge-sheet on the basis of the same, have been discussed

659. Examination of complainant:—The object of requiring the Magistrate to examine the complainant possibly is that the facts constituting the offence may be ascertained when in a written complaint they are not given—Sukumar v. Mofizuddin, 25 C.W.N. 357 (360), 22 Cr.L.J. 455. The object of the examination is further to see whether there is a prima facie case against the accused, and to prevent the issue of process in cases where the examination of the complainant would show that the complaint was false, frivolous and vexatious and intended merely to harass the accused—Girdhari Lal, 1911 P.R. 11, 12 Cr.L.J. 217, 10 I.C. 156. The object of the examination is to find out whether there is any matter which calls for investigation by a Criminal Court—Baij Nath v. Raja Ram, 10 A.L.J. 79, 13 Cr.L.J. 704.

The examination of the complainant is not to be a mere form but an intelligent inquiry into the subject-matter of the complaint, carried far enough to enable the Magistrate to exercise his judgment as to whether there is or there is not sufficient ground for proceeding—Cal G. R. & C. O., p. 9.

A Magistrate cannot refuse to take cognizance of an offence on receipt of a complaint, but he is bound to do so and examine the complainant—Umer Ali v. Safer Ali, 13 Cal. 334 (335). It is not a proper course for a Magistrate, when a complaint is made before him of an offence of which he can take cognizance, to refer the complainant to a police-officer instead of examining him. Such a course would foster abuses and defeat the purpose of the law, which is to give to persons injured an access to justice independent of the police—Jankidas, 12 Bom. 161 (163).

A Magistrate did not examine the complainant completely on the first date. But on a later date when he found the defect in the oral examination he examined her once again and issued process. The Magistrate should have examined the complainant in full on the first day. But his negligence to do so does not amount to an irregularity which vitiates the trial. The procedure, although open to criticism, is not illegal—Makhan v. Khuki, 37 C.W.N. 319, A.I.R.-1933 Cal. 552, 1933 Cr.C. 912, 34 Cr.L.J. 1063, 145 I.C. 700.

Mode of examination :—On presentation of a complaint the Magistrate shall examine the complainant on oath; the substance of the examination must be reduced to writing, and must be distinct from the complaint itself. Mere calling upon the complainant to attest the complaint is not a sufficient compliance with this section—Kesri v. Md Baksh, 18 All 221. If, however, the complaint is made in writing and written with a great deal of care, and the Magistrate, instead of examining the complainant on oath, asks him to swear to and attest the petition of complaint, this is tantamount to examination of the complainant, and the requirements of this section are substantially complied with—Murphy, 9 All 666 (668, 670) (explained in 18 All 221). See also Mirabai, 6 Bom.L.R. 662; Mahomed v. Mahomed, 26 Cr.L.J. 1101 (Sind). But if the written complaint is obscure and vague, the Magistrate would be bound to examine the complainant at sufficient length for the purpose of clearly ascertaining the allegations on which the complaint is made—Mirabai, 6 Bom.L.R. 662. If the Magistrate merely cross-examines the complainant on the depositions recorded by a Sub-Magistrate whom the Magistrate had ordered to make an inquiry under sec. 159, it does not amount to an examination of the complainant required by this section—Lokenath v. Sanyasi, 30 Cal. 923 (925).

The substance of the examination of the complainant on oath should be read over to him (following the principle underlying sec. 350), so that the accuracy of the record of the examination may be vouchsafed, particularly, if it is to be used as a basis for a possible prosecution for perjury in future—Bhagirathi Bai, 26 Cr.L.J. 1401 (Nag.).

If the complainant is a pardanashin lady, she may be examined by commission under sec. 503. The terms of that section are very wide. They refer not only to an inquiry and a trial but to any other proceeding. That section authorises the examination of any witness, and a complainant is certainly a witness—Abhayesvari v. Kishori Mohan, 42 Cal. 18 (24). Contra—Sarb Dayal, 1896 P.R. 10, where it is laid down that in the preliminary stage of a proceeding the complainant is not a witness but a mere complainant, and cannot be examined by commission. In an Allahabad case, it has been held that although a complainant is certainly a witness, still, where in a case of defamation which gives a civil as well as a criminal remedy, a pardanashin lady has chosen to set the criminal law in motion instead of bringing a suit, this fact materially alters her position as a witness, and the Court can require her personal appearance in order to know that the prosecution is bona fide, and that it has been instituted by her of her own free will, and not at the instigation of other persons. In such a case the Magistrate should allow her to be examined in a separate room, or make other arrangements to preserve her privacy—Farid-ud-nissa, 5 All. 92 (93, 94).

For the procedure to be followed when the written complaint is signed by two persons, see 43 C.W.N 527 quoted in Note 13A.

Signature of Complainant :—If the complaint is in writing, it must be signed by the complainant; a complaint cannot be accepted if it is not signed by him—Abhoyeswari v. Kishori Mohan, 42 Cal 19 (23); Jitan, 1 P.L.T. 564

The substance of the examination must be signed by the complainant. Unless it is signed, the Magistrate cannot take cognizance of the complaint—Mahim Chandra, 3 B.L.R. 67. Such is the vitiating effect of want of signature that a conviction on the alternative charges of making two statements, one in the examination under this section of the accused as a complainant, and the other in his examination subsequently as a witness, both the statements contradicting each other, is bad, if the statement recorded under this section does not bear the signature of the complainant—Bajoo, 6 C.W.N. 840. The examination of the complainant being taken on oath and signed by him can be used as a basis for a prosecution for perjury. The evident object of getting the substance of the examination of the complainant signed by him is to make use of it, in case of need, as against the complainant's subsequent deposition as a witness, for starting against him a prosecution for perjury on the ground that the two statements contradict each other—Bhagirthibai, 26 Cr.L.J 1401 (Nag).

660. Omission to examine—Effect:—The examination of the complainant is not a mere matter of formality, and when a Magistrate dismisses a complaint without making the examination under sec 200, the order of dismissal is illegal and must be set aside—Ningappa, 48 Bom 360 (362), 26 Bom LR 183, 81 IC 608, AIR 1924 Bom 321, 25 Cr.L.J 960; Janakidas Guru, 12 Bom 161; Ganesh Narayan, 13 Bom. 590 (597); Mangu Koeri, 1 P.L.T. 346, 51 IC 465 (468); Moolchand v. Kessoomal, 15 S.L.R. 200, Loke Nath v. Sanyasi, 30 Cal 923 (926); Fazlar Rahman v. Abidar Rahaman, 23 C.W.N 392 (393), Haladhar, 9 C.W.N 199; Satya Charan v. Chairman, 3 C.W.N 17; Ramaswami, 43 M.L.J 710, 23 Cr.L.J 691, AIR 1932 Mad 443 (444). No investigation can be ordered under sec 202 without examining the complainant—Jitan, 1 P.L.T. 564; Mahadeo, 27 Cal 921 (924); Budh Nath, 4 C.W.N 305; Virabhadrayya v. Vyncherla, 2 Weir 244; Ali Muhammad, 2 PR 1912, 12 Cr.L.J 539. (This is now expressly provided in the proviso to sec 202). No process can be issued against the accused unless and until the Magistrate has examined the complainant—Abhoyeswari v. Kishori Mohan, 42 Cal. 19 (23).

But in several cases it has been held that the omission to examine the complainant on oath before issuing process to the accused is a mere irregularity and does not invalidate the conviction where there has been no failure of justice or any prejudice to the accused by reason of such irregularity (sec 537)—Phagu Shahu, 1 P.L.J 592 (595); Bharat v. Judhistr, 9 Pat 707 (FB), 30 Cr.L.J 1056 (1058); Heman Gope, 21 Cr.L.J 779, 1 P.L.T. 349, 58 IC 459 (460), Bhairab 46 Cal 807 (818), AIR. 1919 Cal. 433, 53 IC 698, 20 Cr.L.J 794, 29 CLJ 318, 23 C.W.N 484; Monu, 11 Mad 443; Molaiappa, 55 M.L.J 715, 30 Cr.L.J 432; Bateshar, 37 All 628, AIR. 1915 All 417, 30 IC. 653, 16 Cr.L.J 669, 13 A.L.J. 840; Gopichand, 1 Rang 517; Chiragh Din, AIR 1924 Lah. 258, 76 IC. 189, 25 Cr.L.J 125, 4 Lah. 359 (362); Muso, 8 S.L.R 41, 15 Cr.L.J. 649, Daroga, 36 Cr.L.J 200 (202), 152 IC 847, AIR. 1934 Pat. 573, 1934 Cr.C 1237, 15 P.L.T. 756; Anil v. Badam, AIR 1929 Cal 175, 116 IC. 722, 30 Cr.L.J. 706; Ram Gir v. Ravisaran, AIR. 1935 All 883, 156 IC. 948; Raghunandan, AIR 1934 Pat. 156, 35 Cr.L.J. 1309, 151 IC. 320, 15 P.L.T. 17; Baldewa, 1933 A.L.J 1418, 1933 Cr.C 1415, AIR 1935 All. 816; Ranjas v. Puruha Municipality, 37 Cr.L.J, 289, AIR. 1936 Pat. 145, 160 IC. 343; Devaibhai Khushalbai, AIR. 1938 Bom. 50 (53), 39 Bom.L.R. 1056; Tara Singh v. Emp, 39 Cr.L.J. 840, 176 IC. 960, AIR. 1938 All 449, 1938 A.L.J 528, 11 R.A. 158, 1938 A.L.R 689, 1938 A.Cr.C. 45, 1938 A.W.R. (H.C.) 361. Thus, where the complainants made a complaint to the Police that the accused beat them causing grievous hurt but the police did not send the case, and the complainants applied to the Magistrate, who sent for the police papers and summoned the accused without examining the complainants, it was held that the irregularity did not vitiate the proceeding—Bateshar, 37 All. 628, 13 A.L.J. 840. The omission to examine the complainant under sec. 200 is a mere irregularity and not an illegality. The person prejudiced by such an irregularity is the complainant, and when the case ends in a conviction he has no grievance. The accused cannot in general complain of the irregularity, as the omission to take a sworn statement from the complainant cannot prejudice the accused—Ambayara v. Panchamuthu, 19 L.W. 461, 25 Cr.L.J. 730, A.I.R. 1924 Mad 587. But although the omission to examine the complainant may not vitiate the trial if the accused has not been prejudiced by such irregularity and no failure of justice has been occasioned thereby, still the procedure of this section ought to be strictly complied with. It is a valuable safeguard which the Legislature has provided and it must be scrupulously observed, because non-compliance with this provision leads to much confusion and waste of public time—Heman Gope, supra; Bateshar, supra; Saheb Tewari, 20 Cr.L.J. 247 (Pat.).

It is the business of the complainant to be present in Court, if he desires to have his statement taken on oath. In a case where the complainant does not choose to be present, he cannot be heard afterwards to say that the matter should be sent back to the Magistrate for further enquiry—Ram Prosad, 29 Cr.L.J. 798, 111 I.C. 126, 48 C.L.J. 90, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 569.

661. Complaint by Court or public servant:—Under the new proviso (aa), when a complaint is preferred by a Court or public servant, the examination of the complainant may be dispensed with. Thus, where the complainant is a conservancy overseer purporting to act in the discharge of his official duties under the Calcutta Municipal Act, he is a public servant, and it is not necessary to examine him before issuing process—Nandi v. Corporation of Calcutta, 34 C.W.N. 449 (450), 32 Cr.L.J. 138, 128 I.C. 335. Where a complaint made before a District Magistrate under the Child Marriage Restraint Act (XIX of 1929) was referred to a local Magistrate for inquiry, and the latter made a report that the complainant also should be prosecuted, held that the report of the local Magistrate amounted to a complaint, and the District Magistrate need not examine him on oath—Sukha Sahu, 13 P.L.T. 791, 34 Cr.L.J. 237 (238), 141 I.C. 810, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 87, 1933 Cr.C. 211, Ind. Rul. 1933 Pat. 81. Even before this amendment, it was held in several cases that the omission to examine the Court or the public servant did not vitiate the proceedings. Thus, where the complainant, who was a bailiff and who was resisted by the accused in the execution of a civil process, was not examined but his report was brought on the record through the Nazir, it was held that the fact of the complainant not being examined would not justify the setting aside of the conviction, because there were other witnesses who gave a full account of the matter—Muso, 8 S.L.R. 41, 15 Cr.L.J. 649. Where the complaint in writing and signed was preferred by a responsible public official and was accompanied with a sanction of the Local Government for the prosecution of one of its servants, it was held that the failure by the Magistrate to examine the complainant on oath had not in any way prejudiced the accused or caused a failure or miscarriage of justice—Girdhari Lal, 1911 P.R. 11, 12 Cr.L.J. 217, 10 I.C. 156 (158). Where a Sub-Inspector preferred a complaint for the prosecution of a certain person and the Magistrate, without examining the complainant, recorded the evidence, and convicted the person complained against, held that the omission to examine the complainant (Sub-Inspector) was cured by sec. 537 (a)—Chiragh Din, 4 Lah 359, 25 Cr.L.J. 125; Bharrab, 46 Cal 807 (812). Where the District Judge made a complaint to the District Magistrate by means of a letter, and the Magistrate ordered a police investigation without examining the District Judge on oath in support of his statement in his letter, it was held that the omission to examine the Judge was a mere irregularity curable by sec. 537 (a)—Aparao, 20 Bom.L.R. 1018, 20 Cr.L.J. 42. Under the present law, no question of irregularity would arise. See also Tara Singh v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 840, 176 I.C. 960, A.I.R. 1938 All. 449, 1938 A.L.J. 528, 11 R.A. 158, 1938 A.L.R. 689, 1938 A.Cr.C. 45, 1938 A.W.R. (H.C.) 361. If a police officer makes a report in a non-cognizable case, upon investigation without the order of a Magistrate under sec. 155 (2), the report is not a complaint but a police report all the same and falls under clause (b) of sec 190 and not under clause (a), and a Magistrate taking cognizance of the case on the police report is not bound to follow the procedure prescribed by sec 200 (which applies only when the Magistrate takes cognizance on complaint). See Note 582 under sec. 190. Even if the report be treated as a complaint, the new sub-section (aa) of sec 200 relieves the Magistrate from the necessity of examining the police officer on oath—Ratnavelu, 49 Mad 525, 27 Cr L.J. 1031 (1037) (F B.), overruling Perumal, 22 L.W. 209, 26 Cr L.J. 1550; Shivasami, 51 Bom 498, 28 Cr L.J. 939 (941). See also Kewal Ram, 36 Cr L.J. 1354 (1359), 158 I.C. 324, 16 PLT 693, AIR 1935 Pat 515; Prag Datt Tiwari v. Emp, AIR 1928 All. 765, 111 I.C. 858, 29 Cr L.J. 938, 51 All. 382.

Proviso (b):—A special procedure is prescribed in proviso (b) for Presidency Magistrates. The complainant need not be examined in detail; he may verify the complaint on oath before the Presidency Magistrate, and this will amount to an examination of the complainant—Velu Nathan, 35 Mad 606 (607). Even assuming that a more detailed examination is necessary, the omission to do so is a mere irregularity of procedure covered by sec. 537—Ibid. The Legislature has given a greater latitude to Presidency Magistrates in the matter of examination of complainants than to Magistrates in the mofussil; perhaps, it considered that they would be officers of greater experience, and therefore, reposed greater confidence in them. When the Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate, the examination of the complainant need not be reduced to writing; so that when the written complaint does not contain an allegation of facts constituting the offence, and the Magistrate does not reduce the examination to writing, there may be no written record of the facts constituting the offence. But it must be presumed that the Magistrate, before he issued process, had before him an allegation of facts (disclosed by the examination of the complainant) which constituted the offence—Sukumar v. Mofizuddin, 25 CWN 357 (360), 22 Cr L.J. 455.

The Municipal Magistrate of Calcutta is a Presidency Magistrate and in cases of complaints to him, he is, as Presidency Magistrate, required to examine the complainant subject to the provisions of this clause—Ambica v. Corporation of Calcutta, 30 Cr.L.J. 231, 114 I.C. 82, 32 C.W.N. 1091, 48 C.L.J. 190.

201. (1) If the complaint has been made in writing to a Magistrate who is not competent to take cognizance of the case, he shall return the complaint for presentation to the proper Court with an endorsement to that effect.

Procedure by Magistrate not competent to take cognizance of the case.

(2) If the complaint has not been made in writing, such Magistrate shall direct the complainant to the proper Court.

661A. If a complaint in respect of an offence of murder is presented to a second-class Magistrate, the proper procedure is to return the complaint under sec. 201 for presentation to the proper Court with an endorsement to that effect—Bengali Gope, 5 Pat. 447, 27 Cr L.J. 701.

This section does not cover the case of a Magistrate who is entitled to take cognizance of some of the charges named in the complaint, but is not entitled to take cognizance of a charge not named in the complaint, but which could possibly be made out from the allegations in the complaint. He can take cognizance in such a case—Sirpat, 32 Cr L.J. 360, 129 I.C. 257, 1930 A.L.J. 1422, AIR. 1931 All. 10, 1931 Cr.C. 10, Ind Rul. 1931 All. 129.

This section refers back to sec. 100, Cr. P. C., and to Part A of Chap. XV. There is a very great difference between the terms 'taking cognizance', 'hearing' and 'trying'. A Third Class Magistrate cannot take cognizance of any complaint, but that does not mean that he cannot hear the case if sent to him for hearing by a Court competent to do so under either sec. 192 or 528, Cr. P. Code—Painda v. Gulab Khatun, 40 Cr.L.J. 515, 181 I.C. 49, I.L.R. 1938 Lah. 619, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 122, 41 P.L.R. 221.

Magistrates, when verifying complaints, should enquire so far as they can, as to the scene of the offence so as to find out as soon as possible whether the complaint is or is not within their jurisdiction and thus save their own time and the time of the superior Courts—Ismail Abdul Karim v. Nural Yar Muhammad, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 31, 166 I.C. 622, 38 Cr.L.J. 291, 9 R.S. 148.

202. (1) If the Chief Presidency Magistrate or any other Presidency Magistrate whom the Local Government may from time to time authorize in this behalf or any Magistrate of the first or second class, is not satisfied as to the truth of a complaint of an offence of which he is authorized to take cognizance, he may, when the complainant has been examined, record his reasons, and may then postpone the issue of process of compelling the attendance of the person complained against, and either inquire into the case himself or direct a previous local investigation to be made by any officer subordinate to such Magistrate, or by a police-officer, or by such other person, not being a Magistrate or police-officer, as he thinks fit, for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsehood of the complaint.

(2) If such investigation is made by some person not being a Magistrate or a police-officer, he shall exercise all the powers conferred by this Code on an officer in charge of a police-station, except that he shall not have power to arrest without warrant.

202. (1) *Any Magistrate on receipt of a complaint of an offence of which he is authorised to take cognizance, or which has been transferred to him under section 192, may, if he thinks fit, for reasons to be recorded in writing, postpone the issue of process for compelling the attendance of the person complained against, and either inquire into the case himself or, if he is a Magistrate other than a Magistrate of the third class, direct an inquiry or investigation to be made by any Magistrate subordinate to him, or by a police-officer or by such other person * * * * as he thinks fit, for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsehood of the complaint:*

Provided that, save where the complaint has been made by a Court, no such direction shall be made unless the complainant has been examined on oath under the provisions of section 200.

(2) If any inquiry or investigation under this section is made by a person not being a Magistrate or a police-officer, such person shall exercise all the powers conferred by this Code on an officer in charge of a police-station, except that he shall not have power to arrest without warrant,

(2A) Any Magistrate inquiring into a case under this section may, if he thinks fit, take evidence of witnesses on oath.

(3) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

(3) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

Change:—This section has been amended by sec. 55 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923.

The main changes introduced are the following :—

"(1) Third class Magistrates have been given power to make preliminary inquiries personally. (2) Authority to make a preliminary inquiry has been given in any case in which the Magistrate thinks fit for reasons to be recorded in writing. The only ground contemplated by the old section was "if the Magistrate is not satisfied as to the truth of the complaint." This is thought to be undesirably narrow. (3) The words 'inquiry or investigation,' have been substituted for the expression 'previous local investigation,' and power is given to take evidence upon oath in the case of such a preliminary inquiry. (4) Presidency Magistrates are enabled to act under this section without special authorisation"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

'Or which has been transferred to him under section 192' —"We have made a small amendment in sec. 202 (1) to cover cases which have been transferred to a Magistrate under sec. 192 as well as cases of which he has taken cognizance himself"—Report of the Select Committee (1916).

The present proviso to sub-section (1) has been substituted by the Cr P Code Amendment Act II of 1926 in place of the old proviso which was added by the Amendment Act of 1923, and which ran thus —

"Provided that no such direction shall be made —(a) unless the complainant has been examined on oath under the provisions of sec. 200, or (b) where the complaint has been made by a Court under the provisions of this Code."

Thus, this proviso laid down that a Magistrate receiving a complaint need not direct an inquiry or investigation if the complaint was made by a Court. "This has caused difficulties in the case of a Court complaining under sec. 476 of the Code. Under that section, the Court has only to record a finding that it is expedient that an inquiry should be made into an offence which appears to have been committed, and it seems clear that cases will arise in which an inquiry or investigation should be made before a person is put on his trial. The difficulty was brought to light by the Bombay High Court, and the Local Government; and the other High Courts have all agreed that some provision is required. This clause gives effect to this proposal"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (Gazette of India, 1925, Part V, p. 214).

The present proviso lays down by implication that an inquiry or investigation may be directed in any case, including a case of a Court complaining under sec. 476, but that in such a case the examination of the complainant is not necessary before the inquiry or investigation.

662. Scope and application of section:—This chapter deals with the procedure to be followed by a Magistrate upon taking cognizance of an offence upon complaint, i.e., when he takes cognizance under sec. 190, clause (a), and not when he takes cognizance upon a Police report or other information mentioned in clauses (b) and (c) of sec. 190. See Ranga Chari, 2 Weir 241 (242). This section applies only to cases where there is a "complaint" as distinguished from a mere information. A Magistrate acting upon second-hand information cannot be said to be acting upon complaint—Narain, 1888 P.R. 24. So also, a Magistrate taking cognizance of a case upon a police report cannot proceed under this section and refer the case to a subordinate Magistrate for local investigation—Abdulla, 40 Cal. 854; Sarba Mahton, 17 C.W.N. 824 (825); Tiloki, 2 P.L.T. 220, 22 Cr.L.J. 735. A Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence under sec. 190, cl. (c) cannot direct an inquiry under sec. 202—Shoukatmal, 7 S.L.R. 75, 14 Cr.L.J. 600 (601).

An inquiry cannot be directed under this section before the Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence—Shoukatmal, supra.

Under the old section, the inquiry or investigation could be made only in those cases where the Magistrate was not satisfied as to the truth of a complaint—Jhumuck v. Pathuk, 27 Cal. 789; Ranga Chari, 2 Weir 241 (242); Mahadeo, 27 Cal. 921 (924). Under the present section, the Magistrate can direct inquiry or investigation, if he thinks fit, i.e., on any reasonable ground. See Notes under "Change" above. Thus, if the complainant is not speaking from personal knowledge, a Magistrate taking cognizance would exercise a wise discretion in making the inquiry under this section—Sukumar v. Mofizuddin, 25 C.W.N. 357 (360).

The Magistrate can direct an inquiry or investigation only if he himself thinks fit, but not merely in obedience to the District Magistrate's instructions—Nga Tha, (1910) 1 U.B.R. 73, 11 I.C. 249 (250), 12 Cr.L.J. 385.

If the complaint is made against some individuals jointly, the Magistrate has discretion to issue processes against some and postpone issue of processes against the others. The fact that the Magistrate has issued processes against two of the accused persons would not deprive him of his power to make a preliminary enquiry in respect of the offence alleged against the third accused under sec. 202, Cr. P. Code—Haroon v. Gajadhar Sukhdeo Marwadi, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 128, 41 Cr.L.J. 312, 186 I.C. 459, 1940 N.L.J. 43.

This section applies to a complaint of an offence. A petition for maintenance under sec. 488 is not a complaint of an offence; and, therefore, this section is inapplicable to proceedings in maintenance. The Magistrate to whom a maintenance petition is preferred has no power to refer it to a Subordinate Magistrate for inquiry and report, but must inquire into it himself—Sardaran v. Amir Khan, 1905 P.R. 29.

This section does not in terms authorise a Magistrate to refer a petition under sec. 107 to a police officer for investigation, as a petition under sec. 107 does not allege the commission of an offence and does not amount to a complaint. But as the Magistrates have control over the police whose assistance they can seek in the discharge of their duties, it is perfectly open to a Magistrate to avail himself of the help of the police apart from sec. 202, and to refer the matter of the petition under sec. 107 to a police officer for investigation—Sanjivi v. Koneri, 49 Mad. 315, 50 M.L.J. 460, A.I.R. 1926 Mad 521. See Note 230.

The provisions of secs. 200 to 203 which relate to the procedure to be employed by a Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence do not apply to sec. 552, Cr. P. C., where no offence is alleged—Thakoredas v. Bhugwandas, 4 Bom.L.R. 609; Tulsidas v. Chetandas, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 374, 16 N.L.J. 310, 1933 Cr.C. 1573.

If the Magistrate on taking cognizance of an offence under sec. 211, I. P. C., issues notice to the accused to show cause why he should not be prosecuted for making a false charge, and makes over the proceeding to a subordinate Magistrate, the procedure does not strictly fall under sec. 202, but it is not an illegal procedure, because a prosecution for making a false charge should not be commenced until the person who made the charge is offered an opportunity of substantiating the charge—Bhairab Chandra, 46 Cal. 807 (813), following Sham Lal, 14 Cal. 707 (F.B.).

The Court taking cognizance of an offence under the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929 (Act XIX of 1929) shall, unless it dismisses the complaint under sec. 203, Cr. P. C., either itself make an inquiry under sec. 202, Cr. P. C., or direct a Magistrate of the first class subordinate to it to make such inquiry. Vide sec. 10 of that Act. Omission to comply with this mandatory provision of that Act is an illegality which vitiates his action—Mangal v. Kalu, 130 I.C. 783, 12 Lah. 383, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 56,

It is only in very rare cases that the Court will be justified in throwing out a complaint without giving an opportunity to the complainant to substantiate his allegations, but in certain cases it is the duty of the Court to protect the accused from unnecessary harassment and worry—G. A. St. George v. Uma Dutt Sharma, 40 Cr.L.J. 917 (1920), 184 I.C. 313, A.I.R. 1939 All. 602, 1939 A.L.J. 574

663. Recording reasons:—The Magistrate is bound to record his reasons before directing a local investigation—Baidyanath v. Muspratt, 14 Cal 141; Ram Pershad v. Moti, 11 A.L.J. 754, 14 Cr.L.J. 403; Madho v. Rashid, 15 A.L.J. 642, 18 Cr.L.J. 765; Moraji, 36 Cr.L.J. 483, 154 I.C. 325, A.I.R. 1935 Bom. 76, 36 Bom.L.R. 1213, 1935 Cr.C. 137; if he refers a case to the police for inquiry without recording any reasons and then on receiving the report from the police, dismisses the complaint under sec. 203, the order of dismissal must be set aside—Virabhadrayya v. Vryicherla, 2 Weir 244; Balai Lal v. Pasupati, 21 C.W.N. 127 (129), 17 Cr.L.J. 396. If the Magistrate has any doubt as to the truth of the allegations in the petition of complaint as supported by the solemn affirmation of the complainant, he ought to record an order to that effect in the order sheet, so that the superior Courts may be satisfied that the Magistrate had any justification whatsoever in refusing to issue summons to the accused as required by law—Mukti Narayan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 97 (98), 1939 P.W.N. 871, 20 P.L.T. 947, 41 Cr.L.J. 349, 186 I.C. 627. But in some cases it has been held that omission to record the reasons is at most an irregularity which will be cured by sec. 537 unless it has occasioned a failure of justice—Anonymous, 2 Weir 244 (245); Alagirisami, 25 Mad 546; Ram Saran v. Md. Jan Khan, 7 P.L.T. 36, 26 Cr.L.J. 1394; Finan, 55 Bom. 770, 1931 Cr.C. 956 (957); Dharmadas v. Pulcher, 32 Cr.L.J. 926, 1931 Cr.C. 731, A.I.R. 1931 Sind. 113, 132 I.C. 479; Ajoy Krishna v. S. G. Bose, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 176 (177), 49 C.L.J. 164, 33 C.W.N. 369, 116 I.C. 721, 30 Cr.L.J. 705.

664. "Postpone the issue of process":—The procedure prescribed by this section can be adopted when no process has been issued to compel the attendance of the accused. A Magistrate who after issue of process directs an inquiry and report acts in contravention of the procedure prescribed by law—Khurram, 1896 A.W.N. 140. Once a process has been issued against the accused, the Magistrate cannot exercise his option of holding a preliminary inquiry. He must proceed with the trial—Gaji v. Jumanshah, 6 S.L.R. 83, 13 Cr.L.J. 749. Thus, it is illegal to order a preliminary inquiry after the accused has been brought before the Court under a warrant—Ramkant v. Jadub, 21 W.R. 44. When a Magistrate has accepted a complaint and issued process upon it and taken evidence for the complainant, he or his successor cannot refer the case to the Police for inquiry and report—Sadapachariar v. Ragavachariar, 9 Mad. 282. The Magistrate cannot go back beyond the stage reached by his predecessor. A necessary preliminary to an enquiry under this section is postponement of issue of process. Where that was not done by the first Court, which in fact procured the attendance of the accused, the stage for holding enquiry under this section had passed and would not be revived subsequently—Qamarali v. Tulsi, 39 Cr.L.J. 981, 178 I.C. 54, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 433. Where a subordinate Magistrate has taken cognizance of a case and has issued process, the District Magistrate has no power to interfere and order an inquiry—Jhumuck v. Pathuk, 27 Cal. 798. On the other hand, if a Magistrate directs a local inquiry, he cannot issue process before he receives the report of the inquiry—Krishna Bala v. Nirodabala, 41 C.L.J. 170, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 989 (990). But where after the Magistrate had issued processes against two accused persons, one of them appeared and laid a cross-complaint, and then the Magistrate rescinded the order of issue of process and sent forth the cases to a subordinate Magistrate for local inquiry and report, held that the action of the Magistrate was right and proper—Lalit v. Nani Lal, 27 C.W.N. 651, 25 Cr.L.J. 464, 39 C.L.J. 329.

Complaints may generally be made by any person aware of the commission of an offence, and not necessarily by the person injured. The person making a complaint need not himself have personal knowledge of the facts constituting the complaint, but before issuing process on such allegations the Magistrate should satisfy himself on proper materials that a case for issue of process has been made out—S. D. Vardon v. R. Hearsey, 36 Cr.L.J. 75, 152 I.C. 344, A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 167, 1934 Cr.C. 784.

Counter case:—Section 202, Cr. P. C., gives the Magistrate a discretion to postpone the issue of process in a case till the disposal of the counter-case—Allahdino, 34 Cr.L.J. 891, 144 I.C. 943, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 254, 1933 Cr.C. 810. Reading section 344, Cr. P. C., in conjunction with sec. 202, Cr. P. C., it seems that the Magistrate undoubtedly has jurisdiction to postpone his enquiry; and even, apart from this section, the Court must be held to have inherent jurisdiction to make such an order—Ram Golam v. Sarat, 31 Cr.L.J. 262, 121 I.C. 414, 49 C.L.J. 388, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 281.

665. If the accused appears:—This section speaks of postponement of issue of process. If, however, the accused appears of his own accord without a summons he is entitled to require that the complaint shall be proceeded with or dismissed. If no evidence is offered against the accused, he must be formally discharged—Lakshman, 25 Bom. 552.

666. Inquiry and investigation:—Under the old section, the inquiry was to be conducted by the Magistrate himself who tried the case; he could not direct the inquiry to be held by a subordinate Magistrate or a police-officer. These persons could only hold a local investigation. See Haricharan v. Girish Chandra, 38 Cal. 68 (72); Gangadhar, 43 Cal. 173 (176), 20 C.W.N. 63; and if the Magistrate taking cognizance of the case thought it proper to refer the case to some other Magistrate for inquiry (not investigation), he would have to transfer the case to such Magistrate under sec. 192 not for report but for disposal—Hari Charan v. Girish, 38 Cal. 68 (73); Gangadhar, 43 Cal. 173 (176). The present amendment now empowers the subordinate Magistrate and the police-officer to hold an inquiry as well as an investigation. See also Amrit Majhi, 46 Cal. 854 (859), 23 C.W.N. 623, in which the order referring the complaint to a subordinate Magistrate for inquiry and report was held to be legal.

It is entirely in the discretion of the Magistrate whether or not he would send the case to the Police for inquiry and report under this section—U Po Yone, 34 Cr.L.J. 1184 (1186), 146 I.C. 196, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 271, 1933 Cr.C. 1015.

An inquest report made under sec. 176, Cr. P. C., cannot be treated as a report made after an inquiry which is contemplated by this section—Surendra v. Police Sergeant, 35 C.W.N. 1032, 1932 Cr.C. 106, 33 Cr.L.J. 218, 135 I.C. 878, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 121, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 174.

The Magistrate taking cognizance of a case can either direct a subordinate Magistrate to make a local inquiry and report under sec. 202; or he can transfer the case to a subordinate Magistrate under sec. 192 for disposal. But he cannot confuse the two sections by ordering a subordinate Magistrate "to make a local inquiry and then dispose of the case." Such an order is invalid—Mahomed Imamuddin v. Debendra, 18 C.W.N. 95 (97). See also Shco Balak Singh v. Sant Bux Singh in Note 603.

Where the Magistrate makes the inquiry himself, it is not necessary that he should examine the witnesses or hold an investigation into the case. It is open to the Magistrate to make the inquiry in order to ascertain the truth or falsity of the complaint, in any way he thinks proper. Thus, where an investigation has already been made by the police and witnesses have been examined by the investigating police-officer, the Magistrate can merely look into the police papers for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsehood of the complaint. This section does not contemplate any particular form of inquiry; and so if upon looking into the police papers the Magistrate is satisfied that this is not a fit case in which process should issue, he can dismiss the complaint—Ramanand v. Ali Hassan, 26 Cr.L.J. 129 (131) (Pat.).

Under this section, the Magistrate has the option of only one of two alternatives, viz, either to inquire into the case himself or to direct a local investigation. He cannot have recourse to both the alternatives; and if he, after partially inquiring into the case himself, makes an order directing local investigation, the procedure is irregular—Durga Prosad, 44 All 550, 20 A.L.J. 355, 23 Cr.L.J. 279. He cannot inquire into the case himself and at the same time order a local investigation by a police-officer—Madho Gir v. Rashid, 15 A.L.J. 642, 18 Cr.L.J. 765. So also, he cannot, after a local investigation has been made by the police or by a subordinate Magistrate, proceed to inquire into the case himself—Ram Pershad v. Moti, 11 A.L.J. 754, 14 Cr.L.J. 493 (494). Such a procedure will cause much inconvenience and annoyance to witnesses who will have to leave their avocations and attend the police-officer and Court three times over—Ibid. But in a Calcutta case it has been observed that if the Magistrate, on receiving the report of the local investigation held by the police, is dissatisfied with the materials obtained, he can personally make an inquiry or direct a further local investigation—Hari Charan v. Girish, 38 Cal 68 (72). In Madho Gir v. Rashid, supra, the procedure rose to a climax; the Magistrate taking cognizance held an inquiry; he also directed a local investigation by the police; he was then transferred and the new incumbent referred the case to the District Magistrate who then directed the Magistrate to proceed to the spot and hold a full investigation, the result was that there were several investigations held by Magistrates independently of each other. The High Court condemned the procedure.

The police inquiry contemplated by this section cannot take the place of evidence. Therefore when the Magistrate decides to record the evidence himself, he should complete the inquiry and determine upon the evidence adduced how far the complaint is borne out. It is not a proper procedure for the Magistrate to examine some of the witnesses and then direct a police inquiry—Mahadeo v. Ram Sahai, 22 O.C. 321, 52 I.C. 888 (889), 20 Cr.L.J. 728.

This section makes no provision for the manner in which the evidence in an inquiry should be recorded. Where the Magistrate had before him the report of the police containing a detailed account of the statements of witnesses examined by the police, and the witnesses repeated the same statements before the Magistrate, the omission on his part to record the depositions of the witnesses was not an error of law—Tilakdhari v. Misra, 26 Cr.L.J. 1346 (1347) (Pat.).

An inquiry or investigation under this section is designed to afford the Magistrate an opportunity of either confirming or removing such hesitation as he may feel in respect of issuing process against the accused. The nature of the inquiry varies with the circumstances of each case, and it is certainly not contemplated that it should always be exhaustive. Frequently all that is required is the elucidation of some minor point or the summary determination of the sufficiency of the available evidence, but least of all is the inquiry in a preliminary trial of the accused at which he is entitled to adduce his evidence before process can issue upon him—Parmanand, 30 Cr.L.J. 554, 116 I.C. 46, 10 P.L.T. 618, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 30, Ind. Rul. 1929 Pat. 286.

In an enquiry under this section dilatory and protracted proceeding should be deprecated. It is never intended that such an enquiry should be dragged out for months—Ajit Nath Das v. Satish Chandra Kayal, 67 C.L.J. 577 (578), 40 Cr.L.J. 213, 179 I.C. 489, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 33.

667. Local investigation:—The words "local investigation" occurred in the old section; after the amendment of 1923, these words have been replaced by the simple word "investigation" so that the scope of the investigation has now been extended.

A local investigation can be ordered when there is a quarrel about boundaries or any matter of that kind. Otherwise, the Magistrate taking cognizance should make an inquiry himself—Baij Nath v. Raja Ram, 10 A.L.J. 79, 13 Cr.L.J. 704.

But the Patna High Court held that the words "local investigation" are not restricted to the investigation of the physical features only but they mean an inquiry into the truth or falsity of the allegations made in the complaint-petition. The word

"local" is used with a view to hold the investigation in the locality for the convenience of the parties and their witnesses, and also it may in certain cases necessitate an inspection of the place of occurrence, but certainly it is not confined only to the inspection of the locality—Munshi Mian, 19 Cr.L.J. 126 (Pat.). Under the present section it is not even necessary to hold the investigation in the locality, since the word "local" has been omitted.

668. Who can make the inquiry or investigation:—This section can be applied by a Magistrate in two cases; first, on receipt of a complaint of an offence of which he is authorized to take cognizance; and second, on receipt of a complaint of an offence which has been transferred to him under sec. 192, Cr. P. Code. The first part of this section cannot apply to a transfer, and the second part deals only with a transfer under sec. 192, Cr. P. C., and, therefore, excludes the case of a transfer under sec. 528, Cr. P. Code. Where, therefore, the first Magistrate had examined the complainant and had summoned the accused, who appeared before him, and the second Magistrate, to whom the case was transferred under sec. 528, Cr. P. C., re-examined the complainant, directed a preliminary enquiry and thereafter dismissed the complaint under sec. 203, Cr. P. C., held that it was not open to the second Magistrate to order enquiry under sec. 202 and to dismiss the case under sec. 203, Cr. P. Code—Qamarali v. Tulsi, 39 Cr.L.J. 981, 178 I.C. 54, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 433, 11 R.N. 197.

See also Sheo Balak Singh v. Sant Bux Singh in Note 603

If the offence is one triable only by a Court of Session, the local investigation must be directed to some Magistrate who is competent to deal with a case triable by the Court of Session. It should not be directed to a second class Magistrate—Budhu Nath, 4 C.W.N. 305. But see Surjya, 6 C.W.N. 295, where it has been held that a Magistrate holding a local investigation under this section need not be competent to entertain the complaint which he is asked to investigate.

A local investigation must be directed to a subordinate Magistrate. A 1st class Magistrate is not subordinate to the District Magistrate. Both are first class Magistrates, and the latter cannot direct the investigation to be held by the former—Aly Mohd, 1912 P.R. 2. A Deputy Magistrate attached to the sub-division is subordinate to the Sub-Divisional Officer—Munshi Mian, 19 Cr.L.J. 126 (Pat.). The Sub-Divisional Magistrate is not subordinate to a Deputy Magistrate who is in charge of the district during the absence of the District Magistrate. The Deputy Magistrate cannot therefore make over a case to the Sub-divisional Magistrate for investigation. If the case is made over to the Sub-divisional Magistrate, it will be deemed to have been transferred to him under sec. 192; he will have full seisin of the case and will be entitled to continue the proceeding up to the necessary order of acquittal, conviction or discharge. And the Deputy Magistrate who transferred the case will cease to have jurisdiction in the case—Bhiku Hossein, 39 Cal. 1041 (1046, 1047), 18 C.W.N. 885.

The Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate has jurisdiction to make an order sending a complaint to a Presidency Magistrate for enquiry and report in terms of this section. The latter has no power to issue summons on the accused in such a case but his duty is only to make a report to the Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate and it will be for him to deal with the complaint in accordance with law—Kanayalal v. Kanmull, 35 Cr.L.J. 729, 148 I.C. 691, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 405, 59 C.L.J. 201, 38 C.W.N. 560.

It is desirable that the inquiry should be held by some Magistrate who has not been concerned with the case—Fanindra v. Rahat Ali, 37 C.W.N. 709 (712). The investigation may be made by any person subordinate to the Magistrate, even though he be a clerk—Kanchun v. Ram Kishen, 36 Cal. 72. It is illegal to order the local inquiry to be made by a pleader in the nature of a commission in a civil case—Mohar Khan v. Gayzuddin, 18 C.W.N. 339 (401).

It is not only irregular but illegal for a Magistrate to whom a complaint is made to call upon the person accused for a report as to the truth or falsity of the charge.

preferred against him—Harnarain Halwai v. Kariman Ahir, A.I.R. 1920 Pat. 655, 57 I.C. 285, 21 Cr.L.J. 621, 5 P.L.J. 61, 1 P.L.T. 609, Mukti Narayan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 97 (100), 1939 P.W.N. 871, 20 P.L.T. 947, 41 Cr.L.J. 349, 186 I.C. 627, distinguishing Ram Saran Singh v. Mohammad Jan Khan, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 34, 89 I.C. 706, 26 Cr.L.J. 1394, 7 P.L.T. 36 and Mahabir Baitha v. Emp., A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 302, 1931 Cr.C. 723, 133 I.C. 172, 32 Cr.L.J. 1023, 12 P.L.T. 710. See also Baidya Nath v. Muspratt, 14 Cal. 141.

Investigation by Police:—It is not a proper course to make indiscriminate use of police agency for investigating complaints. The object of law is to give persons who have been injured an access to justice independent of Police, and it is improper for the Magistrate, when a complaint is made to him, to refer the complaint to a Police-officer. Such a course would foster abuses and defeat the purpose of the law—In re Jankidas, 12 Bom. 161. These observations apply with greater force when the complaint is not only against an ordinary individual but when it is said that such individual has acted in collusion with a Police-officer. This is a fit case in which the Magistrate should take evidence himself and on such evidence decide for himself whether or not process should issue against the accused, and if he holds, that the case is false he should decide whether proceedings should be taken against the complainant or any of his witnesses—Mohlamal v. Gianchand, 35 Cr.L.J. 24, 146 I.C. 263, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 339, 1933 Cr.C. 1136. In petty cases of assault and the like, the Police ought not to be directed to make inquiries, because in petty matters the Police are under a strong temptation of making money out of the complaint. In such matters the proper course for the Magistrate is to take action at once upon the complaint—Ganesha, 1894 P.R. 19. "Magistrates are cautioned against the indiscriminate use of Police agency for the purpose of ascertaining matters as to which a Magistrate is bound to form his own opinion upon evidence given in his presence. This caution is specially needful in respect of all cases regarding offences not cognizable by the Police"—Cal. G. R. & C. O., p. 9.

If the complaint is made against a police-officer, it is improper for the Magistrate to call for a report from the police-officer who is himself the accused person—Baidya Nath v. Muspratt, 14 Cal. 141, or from some other police-officer—Jalaluddin v. Md. Khalil, 1884 A.W.N. 47; Mewa Lal, 18 A.L.J. 620, 21 Cr.L.J. 461; or even from a superior police-officer or the District Superintendent of Police (who, as the head of the police, might not be in as impartial a position for discovering the truth as an officer unconnected with the police)—Haladhar, 9 C.W.N. 199 (201); Shama v. Eza, 19 A.L.J. 731, 21 Cr.L.J. 649, Jalyindar v. Agha Sabdar, 29 Cr.L.J. 958, 111 I.C. 878, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 88. In such cases the inquiry should be held by the Magistrate himself—Kanappa, 20 Mad. 387; Bhiku, 39 Cal. 1041 (1046); Maniruddin v. Abdul, 40 Cal. 41 (44); Shama v. Eza, supra; Mewa Lal, supra; Mahadei v. Ram Sahai, 22 O.C. 321, 52 I.C. 888 (889), 20 Cr.L.J. 728, or entrusted to some subordinate Magistrate—Haladhar, supra, preferably a Magistrate of the first class—Maniruddin v. Abdul, supra. These authorities however are not based upon any provision of the statute, but upon general ground of policy. The statute still remains and under that statute it is not illegal to send such a complaint for inquiry or investigation by a Police-Officer. Before, therefore, this would be a ground for revision it would have to be found in the words of sec. 435, Cr. P. C., that this particular order was in fact incorrect or improper—Kaniya Ram v. Chanan Mal, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 208 (209), 42 P.L.R. 134, 41 Cr.L.J. 618, 188 I.C. 524.

Where after examination of the complainant under sec. 200 Cr. P. C., the Magistrate, instead of issuing process against the accused or proceeding under sec. 202 Cr. P. C., and directing a Subordinate Magistrate or the Police to make an enquiry into the allegations made by the complainant, directed that the Police should produce the accused before him for the purpose of having an oral held that the procedure was quite irregular and illegal—Barju Prasad v. Ram Lal, 35 Cr.L.J. 415, 147 I.C. 387, 11 O.W.N. 34, 1934 Cr.C. 258, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 88.

The Calcutta High Court holds that a police investigation held under this section under the order of a Magistrate is something different from the investigation referred to in sec. 156 (3). A Magistrate, after he has taken cognizance of a case under sec. 200, cannot order a police inquiry under sec. 156 (3) and direct the police to submit a charge-sheet. That is, a Magistrate, after he has acted under Chapter XVI, cannot proceed under Chap. XIV—Isaf Nasya, 54 Cal. 303, 28 Cr.L.J. 557. The Bombay High Court is also of opinion that the police are not entitled, after investigation, to arrest the accused and send him up for trial under a charge-sheet, as if they had taken cognizance of the case under their ordinary powers of investigation. The only action they can take is to make a report—Nur Mahomed, 53 Bom 339, 30 Cr.L.J. 781 (782). But see 2 Pat. 379, 34 Mad. 598 and other cases cited in Notes 487 and 670

669. Proviso—Examination of complainant:—Before directing a local investigation, the complainant must be examined either by the Magistrate who receives the complaint or by some other Magistrate to whom the case might have been transferred—Bai Kashi, Ratanlal 368. Unless the complainant is duly examined, an inquiry and report under this section cannot be called for, and, if made, are without jurisdiction and cannot form the basis of any further action—Mahadeo, 27 Cal 921; Budh Nath, 4 C.W.N. 305; Ningappa, 48 Bom. 360 (362) 81 I.C. 608, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 321, 26 Bom.L.R. 183, 25 Cr.L.J. 960; Bhagwan Das, 36 Cr.L.J. 860, 58 All 129, A.I.R. 1935 All 745, 155 I.C. 1070; Jalan, 1 P.L.T. 564. A complainant challenging the police investigation must be examined on oath before his complaint is dismissed—Kartick Pathak, A.I.R. 1921 Pat. 250, 2 P.L.T. 142, and the complainant who was not examined under this section could not be prosecuted in respect of his complaint (if it was false) which was dismissed on a report called for under this section—Aly Mohd., 1912 P.R. 2; Mahadeo, 27 Cal. 921; Ram Sarup, 4 O.C. 127; Bhagwan Das, supra.

670. Power of the investigating officer:—A Magistrate making an order under sec. 202, Cr. P. C., for a preliminary inquiry, does not deprive himself of jurisdiction; he merely postpones the issue of process until the report is received but continues to have jurisdiction. The Magistrate to whom the case is sent under sec. 202 is to submit report and has no power either to issue process or pass any other order. The situation would be entirely different in the case of a transfer under sec. 192 or sec. 528, Cr. P. C., when the Magistrate to whom the case is sent assumes jurisdiction. The Magistrate has therefore jurisdiction to stay the criminal proceedings which were in fact still pending before him—Rewatmal v. Sajanmal, 36 Cr.L.J. 94, 152 I.C. 382, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 143, 1934 Cr.C. 1150. See also Udit Narayan Patwari v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 778, 176 I.C. 715, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 369, 19 P.L.T. 336, 1938 P.W.N. 542, 4 B.R. 750, 11 R.P. 100. A Magistrate conducting a local investigation can exercise all the powers of a Magistrate including the power to administer oath (see the new sub-section 2A) Such a proceeding is a judicial proceeding within the meaning of sec. 476, and the investigating Magistrate can direct the prosecution of the complainant under sec. 476 if the complaint turns out to be false—Kanchan v. Ram Krishun, 36 Cal. 72. Contra :—Kachi Madar, 21 M.L.J. 795, 12 Cr.L.J. 323, where it was held that a preliminary investigation made by a Magistrate under this section was not a judicial proceeding because the depositions made by witnesses in the investigation could not be taken on oath. This ruling is no longer correct.

The inquiry or investigation is not intended to supersede a regular trial but only to ascertain the truth or falsehood of the complaint; therefore if the investigating officer finds that there is some evidence in support of the complainant's case, his function is fulfilled. He need not carry the investigation further by calling upon the accused and examining the witnesses on both sides, in the manner of a regular trial—Nga Tha, (1910) U.B.R. 73, 11 I.C. 249 (250).

The hands of the Inquiry Magistrate are not tied in the matter of questioning the witnesses when they are produced under sec. 202, Cr. P. C. It would be dangerous to lay down hard and fast rules as to how far the Magistrate should go in trying to elicit the truth from the witnesses when he is conducting an enquiry behind the back of the accused. It is commendable on the part of the Magistrate to show keenness in finding out the truth or falsity of the case before he gives the accused person the trouble of appearing before him in response to a criminal charge. The anxiety of the trial Magistrate to get at the truth and his intensive cross-examination of the witnesses for that purpose are no grounds in law for directing a further enquiry—Gul Muhammad v. Habibullah Karim Ullah, 40 Cr L J 674, 182 I.C. 522, AIR 1939 Pesh. 16, 12 R Pesh. 1.

The Magistrate holding the investigation is not disqualified thereby from afterwards trying the case, when there is nothing to indicate that he initiated or directed the proceedings or took any personal interest in the matter of the complaint presented before him—Anand v. Basu Meah, 24 Cal. 167. The fact that the investigating Magistrate expressed an opinion in submitting the report is no bar to his holding the trial—Mani Madhab v. Rosaraj, 4 C.W.N. 604. But where a Magistrate took an active part in forwarding the police inquiries and collecting evidence against the accused, he is disqualified from trying the accused—Sudhana, 23 Cal 328. So also, where a Magistrate, during a local investigation, himself discovered the evidence of crime, and collected or ascertained the evidence in support of it, and thereafter directed, recommended or invited the institution of criminal proceedings, it is undesirable that he should try the case—Bhop Singh v. Kermoti, 8 NLR 1, 13 Cr L.J. 236.

In a Patna case it has been held that if a Magistrate sends a cognizable case to the police to investigate under this section, the police-officer making the investigation can arrest and send up a charge sheet. The Magistrate's order under this section does not debar the police from exercising their general powers of arrest and investigation in regard to the same matter as formed the subject of the complaint. In fact, in such a case, the police would be failing in their duty if they did not arrest an offender against whom a cognizable offence has been made out. Much more so would this be the case where the Magistrate after recording the complaint finds that regular police investigation would be more suitable and intentionally keeps the complaint pending in order that the police may exercise their powers of investigation and arrest independently of the Magistrate—Bhola Bhagat, 2 Pat 379 (382, 383), 4 PLT. 521, 24 Cr L.J. 375; followed in Gopal v. Alagrisami, 54 Mad 598, 60 MLJ 520, 32 Cr L.J. 690, 131 I.C. 176, 33 MLW 460, 1931 MWN 368, AIR 1931 Mad 770, 1931 Cr C 1026, Ind Rul 1931 Mad 512; Rashim Ahmad, 14 Lah 194, 33 P.L.R. 840, 1932 Cr C 807 (809), 139 IC 139, 33 Cr L.J. 737, AIR 1932 Lah 579; Ghulam Nabi, 27 SLR 67, 1933 Cr C. 334 (335), 144 IC 409, AIR 1933 Sind 136, 34 Cr L.J. 763, Ind. Rul 1933 Sind 185; Atmaram, 35 Cr L.J. 891, 148 I.C. 985, AIR 1934 Sind 20, 1934 Cr.C. 218. But the Calcutta and Bombay High Courts hold the contrary view in Isaf Nasya, 54 Cal 303, 28 Cr L.J. 577, and Mir Mahomed, 53 Bom. 339, 30 Cr L.J. 781 (782); Arula Kotiah, 12 Cr L.J. 463, 11 IC 999, 10 MLT. 120, 1911 MWN. 74. See also Note 487.

671. Position of the accused:—A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to require the presence of the accused at an inquiry or investigation, under sec. 202, into a complaint of which he is empowered to take cognizance under sec. 190 or which has been transferred to him under sec. 192—Appa Rao v. Janakiammal, 49 Mad. 918 (F.B.), 51 MLJ. 605, 28 Cr L.J. 129. This section does not contemplate the accused taking part in the inquiry, and there is no necessity to give notice to him—Dhana Reddy, 8 Rang 1, 31 Cr L.J. 824 (826). He cannot be called upon to submit any explanation or produce witnesses during the investigation—Bhiku, 39 Cal. 1041 (1046). Magistrates are in the habit of giving a person against whom a charge is formulated at least an option to come before him if he so desires at the earliest stage. Such a procedure is entirely unwarranted by the Code. The object of this section is to prevent accused persons being harassed at all or asked to appear if in the opinion of the Magistrate no prima facie case is made out, and the Code never contemplated that at that stage they should be either asked or permitted to state their cases—Appa Rao v. Janakiammal, supra. In a proceeding under this section the Magistrate acts illegally in sending for the accused person and calling for a report from him as to the truth or falsity of a charge preferred against him—Hannarain v. Kariman, 21 Cr.L.J. 621, 5 P.L.J. 61; Baidyanath v. Muspratt, 14 Cal. 141. An accused person is not to be called upon under sec. 202 to appear unless and until the Magistrate has satisfied himself from the complainant and his witnesses that there is a prima facie case against him. It is highly irregular for a Magistrate, when a complaint is put in and sworn to, without hearing the complainant's case or his witnesses, to issue notice to the accused to appear and show cause against the issue of process, hear what the accused has to say, examine any witnesses he wishes to have examined and then decide whether the complaint shall be received or not—Varadarajulu v. Kuppusami, 49 Mad. 926, 51 M.L.J. 602, 28 Cr.L.J. 113; Chandicharan v. Manindra, 27 C.W.N. 196, 24 Cr.L.J. 333; Sheikh Mectan v. Ramavelu, 37 Mad. 181 (183). The Bombay High Court holds that the practice of issuing notice to the accused during the inquiry under sec. 202 is undesirable but not illegal. But the Magistrate should not dismiss the complaint upon the mere statement of the accused. The scope of the inquiry under this section is restricted only to the ascertainment of the truth or falsehood of the complaint, ie., whether the material facts alleged by the prosecution are true or false, and the provisions of this section are not intended to allow the accused to make his defence at this stage or to supersede a regular trial—Finan, 55 Bom. 770, 1931 Cr.C. 956 (958), A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 521, 33 Bom.L.R. 1177, 134 I.C. 1233, 33 Cr.L.J. 72. In another Bombay case it has been held that the Magistrate may, if he deems it desirable, give opportunity to the accused to appear in the inquiry and state what he has to say about the accusation, and the Magistrate may even accept and consider the documentary evidence which the accused produces—Vibhan, 52 Bom. 448, 30 Bom.L.R. 642, 29 Cr.L.J. 975, 112 I.C. 63, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 290. It is not illegal to call on the person complained against to show cause—Tukaram Udaram, 6 Bom.L.R. 91, 1 Cr.L.J. 102. See also Gobardhan, 35 Cr.L.J. 1239, 151 I.C. 108, 11 O.W.N. 822; Dharamdas v. Pilchar, 32 Cr.L.J. 926, 132 I.C. 479, 1931 Cr.C. 731, A.I.R. 1931 Sind 113. According to the Lahore High Court it is incongruous to call on a person accused of an offence to show cause against process being issued against him when proceedings under this section are in contemplation. At the same time this alone would not induce it to interfere on revision unless there was reason to believe that it had occasioned a miscarriage of justice—Moti Lal v. Emp., 29 Cr.L.J. 39, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 97, 106 I.C. 455, 9 Lah.L.J. 508, 9 A.I.C.R. 328 and 399. The Patna High Court likewise holds that the general practice of conducting the preliminary inquiry in the presence of the accused or automatically issuing notice to the accused to show cause why he should not be prosecuted, is strongly to be condemned because it is in effect a complete rehearsal of the real trial; but there may be occasional cases in which it may be desirable or even necessary to allow the accused to appear, and there is nothing illegal in such cases in calling the accused to the inquiry and to hear him—Mahabir, 12 P.L.T. 710, 32 Cr.L.J. 1023 (1024) (following 52 Bom. 448); Ram Saran v. Md Jan, 7 P.L.T. 36, 26 Cr.L.J. 1934. The Calcutta High Court is of opinion that the Magistrate does not act illegally if he examines or questions the accused or his witnesses; but he acts illegally if he examines the accused and hears his pleaders for the purpose of deciding whether he will accept the complainant's story or the accused person's story—Fanindra v. Rahat Ali, 37 C.W.N. 708 (711), 143 I.C. 606, 34 Cr.L.J. 604, 57 C.L.J. 259, 1933 Cr.C. 766, A.I.R. 1933 Cal 447, 60 Cal 1051. The Burma Court holds that it is unfair and improper, in the inquiry under sec. 202, to call upon the accused, and to examine the complainant's witnesses in the absence of the accused, and to examine the accused's witnesses in the absence of the complainant—Nga Tha, (1910) U.B.R. 73, 11 I.C. 249 (250). But in S. D. Vardon v. R. Hearsey, 36 Cr.L.J. 75, 152 I.C. 344, A.I.R. 1934 Rang 167, 1934 Cr.C. 784, it was held that in such enquiries the accused had no right to be present and the

Magistrate must make up his mind from the examination of the complainant and, if necessary, from further examination of his witnesses

A person complained against does not become an 'accused' person or a 'person against whom any proceedings have been instituted' within the meaning of sec. 340, until it has been decided to issue process against him under Chapter XVII; sec. 340, therefore, does not entitle him to be represented by a pleader during the preliminary inquiry held under sec. 202—Shaikh Chand v. Mahomed Hamji, 4 N.L.R. 81; Golaq Jan v. Bholanath, 38 Cal. 880 (887); or during the proceeding when the Magistrate is considering the report of the local investigation ordered by him—Balai Lal v. Pasupati, 21 C.W.N. 127 (129), 17 Cr.L.J. 396 (397), 35 I.C. 828. If he chooses to attend the proceedings he may do so like any other member of the public, but he has no locus standi as a party, the purpose of the law being clearly to exclude him until sufficient ground for joining him has been made out by the complainant. Therefore, the Magistrate can refuse him permission to cross-examine the complainant's witnesses—Shaikh Chand v. Md. Hanif, 4 N.L.R. 81. The accused has no right to be present when a Magistrate is holding an inquiry under sec. 202. Proceedings under this section are not inter partes, but merely to satisfy the Magistrate whether there is or is not any ground for issuing process. Allowing a legal practitioner to attend the proceedings is only as a matter of grace and not of right—Atmaram v. Topandas, 20 S.L.R. 43, 27 Cr.L.J. 494. A preliminary inquiry should not be held in the presence of the person complained against and he should not be allowed to cross-examine the complainant's witnesses—Bhimlal, 40 Cal. 444, 17 C.W.N. 290; Navsher v. Hazratulla, 49 C.L.J. 422; Ram Manihari v. Raj Kishore, 19 Cr.L.J. 527 (Pat.). It is extremely illegal for the Magistrate to permit the accused to be represented by lawyers at the preliminary inquiry and to allow them to argue that the complaint should be dismissed—Fanindra v. Rahat Ali, 37 C.W.N. 709 (711), 143 I.C. 606, 34 Cr.L.J. 604, 57 C.L.J. 259, 1933 Cr.C. 766, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 447, 60 Cal. 1051; J. K. Sinha v. Hemanta, 33 Cr.L.J. 636, 138 I.C. 639, 35 C.W.N. 674, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 473, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 697, 1932 Cr.C. 652. But when the complainant has asked for and obtained an order for the seizure of the opposite party's books, and also an order restraining the opposite party from operating on his banking account, that party can appear immediately and ask that such orders be vacated—J. K. Sinha v. Hemanta, supra. In Sheikh Akbar v. Prance, 12 Cr.L.J. 207 (Cal.), it was held that the accused should be permitted to watch the proceedings, and his pleader should be allowed to act as amicus curiæ.

Statements made by the person complained against during an inquiry under this section cannot be regarded as having been recorded under sec. 164 or sec. 364. Such person does not stand in the position of an accused person during the inquiry, and such statements cannot be admitted in evidence against him—Sat Narain, 32 Cal. 1085. But admissions made by the parties in proceedings under this section are relevant provided they are duly proved. Statements of witnesses in such proceedings can also be used for the purpose of contradiction or corroboration only after the procedure for proving these statements had been complied with and the provisions of sec. 145 of the Indian Evidence Act had been followed—Mt. Rahonte v. Mandu, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 286.

672. Evidence in the inquiry:—The Magistrate conducting the preliminary inquiry need not confine himself to the evidence of the complainant alone; but he may examine such witnesses as he thinks fit—In re Kankuchand, Ratanlal 669. There is nothing in sec. 202 to prevent the investigating officer from making a full inquiry by obtaining information from the complainant and his witnesses, and from the defendant and his witnesses, if any—Debi Bux v. Jutmal, 33 Cal. 1282.

673. Submission of report:—The officer who conducted the investigation must submit the report of his investigation to the same Magistrate who had originally ordered him to investigate; he is not authorised to submit it to another Magistrate for the purpose of dismissing the complaint and declaring that no offence had in reality been committed—Thakur Singh v. Kirpal, 1918 P.L.R. 53, 19 Cr.L.J. 436.

674. Revision:—The High Court in its revisional jurisdiction will not as a matter of discretion interfere when it is of opinion that if the Magistrate had confined himself to materials which he might legitimately consider the proper order for him to make was an order under sec. 203 dismissing the complaint—J.K. Sinha v. Hemanta, supra. If an irregularity in procedure has not resulted in any miscarriage of justice, the High Court will not make an order which can result only in harassment and waste of public time. In a case in which a preliminary inquiry has been made by the Police and the report considered in a perfunctory manner by the Magistrate, the High Court will interfere and insist on the provisions of this section being strictly enforced. But where the inquiry has been carefully made and carefully considered, the High Court will refuse to re-open the matter—Sheonandan, 4 P.L.W. 114, 19 Cr.L.J. 263. The High Court will not ordinarily interfere with the details of an inquiry or investigation under this section and particularly will not do so on the ground that it was inadequate—Parmanand, 30 Cr.L.J. 554, 116 I.C. 46, 10 P.L.T. 618, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 30, Ind. Rul. 1929 Pat. 286. It is settled practice that if the Magistrate, having followed the procedure laid down in the Code, has exercised a judicial discretion as to whether he ought to issue process or not, the High Court will respect his decision, and will be slow to disturb the order that he has passed—Subal Chandra v. Ahadulla, 53 Cal. 606, 30 C.W.N. 546 (551), 27 Cr.L.J. 788, 44 C.L.J. 144; Ram Gir v. Ravisaran, A.I.R. 1935 All. 883, 156 I.C. 948

674A. Copy:—The report of the police under sec. 202, Cr. P. C., is a part of the record and there seems to be no reason to refuse copy—M. Muthukumara, 32 Cr. L.J. 689, 131 I.C. 174, 1931 M.W.N. 325, 33 M.L.W. 570, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 429, 1931 Cr.C. 477, Ind. Rul. 1931 Mad. 510

203. The Magistrate before whom a complaint is made or to whom it has been transferred, may dismiss the complaint, if after examining the complainant, and considering the result of the investigation (if any) made under section 202, there is in his judgment no sufficient ground for proceeding. In such case he shall briefly record his reasons for so doing.

203. The Magistrate before whom a complaint is made or to whom it has been transferred, may dismiss the complaint, if after considering the statement on oath (if any) of the complainant and the result of the investigation or inquiry (if any) under section 202, there is in his judgment no sufficient ground for proceeding. In such case he shall briefly record his reasons for so doing.

This section has been amended by sec. 56 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. The word "the investigation or inquiry (if any)" have been substituted recently by the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act II of 1926, for the words "any investigation or inquiry" occurring in the Amendment of 1923. See Note 677 below

675. Dismissal of complaint:—Where on a complaint made against several persons the Magistrate proceeded against only one of them and convicted him, but refused to issue process against the others, held that the order of refusal was to all intents and purposes an order of dismissal of complaint against those persons under sec. 203—Girish Chandra, 29 Cal. 457, 6 C.W.N. 638; Hari Lal, 20 Cr.L.J. 835 (Pat.). Where, on a complaint being filed, the Magistrate called for a police report, and subsequently on a consideration of that report passed the order "Enter mistake of law" and refused to issue processes, held that the order must be regarded as an order dismissing a complaint—Shaik Siddik v. Chakuri, 17 C.W.N. 451, 14 Cr.L.J. 123, 17 C.L.J. 608. When a Magistrate passes an order under this section, he should say plainly that he dismisses the complaint. The practice of Magistrates passing an order "Notice is discharged" is to be deprecated—Virbhan, 52 Bom. 448, 30 Bom L.R. 642, 29 Cr.L.J. 975 (976). There is no provision in sec. 203, Cr. P. C., for the issue of a "C" summary. Where the Magistrate intends to dismiss the complaint under this section but there is no express order that he has done so, then it is a case wherein there should be a further inquiry and the Magistrate should act according to the provisions of Cr. P. C.—Jeomal Tikamdas v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 807, 183 I.C. 449, 12 R.S. 57, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 208, I.L.R. 1939 Kar. 277. When the Magistrate ordered the issue of summary "C", he intends to dismiss the complaint under this section and his order can be taken as such—Pherumal Lilaram v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 966, 177 I.C. 744, 11 R.S. 67, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 192. If the Magistrate, after examining the witnesses, does not believe the story told by the complainant and thinks that the case should be dismissed, he should pass an order of dismissal of complaint under this section; an order submitting the case to the District Magistrate is illegal—Minal Kanti, 6 C.W.N. 843 (844); Fani Bhushan v. Kemp, 10 C.W.N. 1086, 4 Cr.L.J. 230. Where a Magistrate came to the conclusion that no criminal action would lie, he ought to dismiss the complaint under this section without issuing a search warrant to recover the subject-matter of dispute—S. R. Bagnall v. Mrs Dean, 37 Cr.L.J. 991, 164 I.C. 521, 62 C.L.J. 270.

An application under sec. 107 does not fall within the definition of a 'complaint,' and, therefore, sec. 202 does not apply to it; but the Magistrate has inherent power of refusing the application if he is satisfied after making an inquiry that the apprehension of a breach of the peace complained of does not exist—Shamsuddin v. Ram Dayal, 25 Cr.L.J. 89, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 630.

Section 203, Cr. P. C., has nothing to do with proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. C.—Subhan, A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 15, 1938 O.W.N. 1099, 1938 A.Cr.C. 137, 1938 O.L.R. 475, 40 Cr.L.J. 33, 178 I.C. 252, 1938 A.W.R. (C.C.) 99, 1938 O.A. 904.

A complaint filed under the Merchant and Shipping Act (XXI of 1923) has to be enquired into in accordance with the provision of that Act and it cannot be dismissed under this section—Jafar Ali v. James Finlay & Co., Ltd., 35 Cr.L.J. 25, 146 I.C. 333, A.I.R. 1933 Cal 647, 1933 Cr.C. 1057, 37 C.W.N. 1185, 58 C.L.J. 116.

Where the accused was summoned and appeared when the Magistrate dismissed the complaint, the order of dismissal is under sec. 253 (2) and not under this section which contemplates a case in which the complaint is dismissed without process being issued to the accused—Bhagwan Das v. Chandra Ban, 35 Cr.L.J. 418, 147 I.C. 335, A.I.R. 1934 All 51; Jotindra v. Radha, A.I.R. 1934 Pat 548, 15 P.L.T. 507; Jnanendra Nath v. Nilmoney, 43 C.W.N. 582 (583), I.L.R. (1939) 1 Cal 587.

Dismissal when can be made—This section gives very large powers to the Magistrate to dismiss a complaint without issuing process, but certain conditions are laid down, and those conditions must be strictly fulfilled in making an order under this section. A Magistrate may dismiss a complaint (1) if upon the statement of the complainant reduced to writing under sec. 200 he finds that no offence has been committed; (2) if he distrusts the statement made by the complainant; (3) if he distrusts that statement, but his distrust not being strong enough to warrant him to act upon it, he directs further inquiry as provided by sec. 202 and after considering the result of the investigation he finds that there is no sufficient ground for proceeding—Baidyanath v. Muspratt, 14 Cal. 141; Ganesh Narain, 13 Bom 600 (603); Subul Chandra v. Akadulla, 53 Cal 605, 30 C.W.N. 546, 27 Cr.L.J. 788.

A Magistrate should not dismiss a complaint without hearing the witnesses of the complainant present in Court. The complainant should be given an opportunity of establishing the truth of his allegations by having his witnesses' evidence tested by the Magistrate—Purosattam v. Ram Das, 26 Cr.L.J. 561, 85 I.C. 705, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 1031. A complaint should not be dismissed without giving an opportunity to the complainant to substantiate the charge by adducing evidence—Mahim v. A. W. Watson, 30 Cr.L.J. 407, 115 I.C. 35, 55 Cal. 1280, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 191, Ind. Rul. 1929 Cal. 291. Where there has been no sufficient inquiry into the complaint and the facts of the case have not been sufficiently investigated there ought to be a further inquiry—Debendra v. Bhagurathi, 38 C.L.J. 158, 22 Cr.L.J. 167, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 552, 76 I.C. 391.

The Magistrate should exercise his own independent judgment when he receives the report of the investigation or inquiry that he has ordered and he does not exercise his independent judgment when he merely accepts without giving reason the opinion of the Police Prosecutor. It is not for the Magistrate to surrender his discretion or his judgment to that of the Police Prosecutor—Jeomal Tikamdas v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 807 (808), 183 I.C. 449, I.L.R. 1939 Kar. 277, 12 R.S. 57, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 208.

There can be no dismissal of complaint under sec. 203, after process has issued. This section refers to cases falling within Chapter XVI where there has been no issue of process. Where the accused has been summoned to answer a charge, there is a proceeding within the meaning of Chapter XVII and the complaint cannot be dismissed under sec. 203—Budhanbhai, Ratanlal 544. See also Bhagwan Das v. Chandra Bhan, 35 Cr.L.J. 418 (419), 147 I.C. 335, A.I.R. 1931 All. 51. Even an order directing withdrawal of process issued against the accused will not amount to an order of dismissal of complaint—Panchoo v. Khoosdel, 12 C.W.N. 68. But see Lalit Mohan v. Nani Lal in Note 664.

Who can dismiss complaint :—When a case has been transferred to a subordinate Magistrate and is pending on his file, the District Magistrate has no power to pass an order of dismissal of complaint—Sheikh Kutab Ali, 3 C.W.N. 490. The Magistrate who receives the complaint and examines the complainant should himself pass the order dismissing the complaint or issuing summons, as the case may be, and should not send it to the District Magistrate for orders. If there is a direction by the District Magistrate that in particular classes of cases the Magistrate taking cognizance should not pass any order under secs. 203 and 204 but should submit the case to the District Magistrate, such direction is illegal—Fani Bhushan v. Kemp, 10 C.W.N. 1086, 4 Cr.L.J. 230. A complaint was originally made before a Deputy Magistrate. The Deputy Magistrate sent the case to the District Magistrate with a view to the District Magistrate transferring it to another Court, but the District Magistrate instead of transferring the case to another Court, examined the record, and came to the conclusion that the complaint was wholly without foundation, and so he dismissed it; held that the District Magistrate was sufficiently seised of the case and the order passed by him was not without jurisdiction—Govind v. Ram Das, 25 Cr.L.J. 555, A.I.R. 1924 All. 666.

The village Munsiff is not a recognised tribunal under this Code, and the dismissal of a complaint by a village Munsiff does not fall under this section—Rama Naidu, 53 M.L.J. 102, 28 Cr.L.J. 507.

Duty of Magistrate before dismissal :—Before a Magistrate can dismiss a complaint, he must, according to the words of sec. 200, examine the complainant, and consider the result of the investigation (if any) made under sec. 202. In other words, a Magistrate cannot dismiss a complaint without complying with the provisions of law as laid down in secs. 200 and 202. Where there was no previous local investigation ordered under sec. 202 nor any examination of the complainant as directed by sec. 200, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to dismiss the complaint under this section—Lokenath v. Sanyasi, 30 Cal. 923. See also Jeomal Tikamdas v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 807, 183 I.C. 449, I.L.R. 1939 Kar. 277, 12 R.S. 57, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 208.

If a Magistrate holds an inquiry under sec. 202, he should not dismiss the complaint without giving the complainant an opportunity to adduce evidence in support of his case—Dr. Sandyal v. Kunjeswar, 16 C.W.N. 143, 13 I.C. 781, 13 Cr.L.J. 125. It is improper for a Magistrate to dismiss a complaint while sitting in his private room, and without giving the complainant or his pleader an opportunity of being heard—Fani Bhushan v. Kemp, 10 C.W.N. 1086.

676. Examination of complainant :—By the Amendment Act 1923, the words "after examining the complainant" have been changed into "after considering the statement on oath (if any) of the complainant." This shows that it is no longer necessary for the Magistrate to examine the complainant under this section before he dismisses the complaint. The examination of the complainant is imperative only under sec. 200, when the Magistrate takes cognizance of the complaint.

Once the Magistrate has examined the complainant under sec. 200, it is not obligatory on him to examine the complainant again before dismissal of complaint unless he considers it desirable to do so—Hashim v Booth, 25 SLR 468, 33 Cr.L.J. 330 (331), 136 IC 767, AIR. 1932 Sind 58, 1932 Cr.C. 199, Ind. Rul 1932 Sind 63. What the Magistrate is required to do under sec. 203 is to consider the statement on oath of the complainant, which is certainly different from the examination of the complainant; and even this requirement is modified by the words "if any," which show that it is discretionary with the Magistrate.

If the complainant was not examined at all, when the Magistrate took cognizance of the case under sec. 200, a dismissal of the complaint without examination of the complainant would be illegal—Ningappa, 48 Bom 360 (362); Ganesh Narayan, 13 Bom. 590 (597); Lokenath v Sanyasi, 30 Cal 923 (926); Haladhar, 9 C.W.N. 199 (201).

677. "Investigation or inquiry (if any)":—This section empowers a Magistrate to dismiss the complaint without any investigation under sec. 202, if after examining the complainant he considers there is no sufficient ground for proceeding—Nawazi v. Jadu Dhaak, 19 Cr L J 228 (Pat). The Amendment of 1923 contained the words "any investigation or inquiry" and the words 'if any' were omitted. This led to the view that an investigation or inquiry under sec. 202 was compulsory before dismissing a case under sec. 203. Thereafter another amendment was made in 1926 by which the words 'if any' have been restored. "The Calcutta High Court in a recent decision (in the case of Sush Chandra Bose v. Madan Lal Surena) has held that under sec. 203 an investigation or an inquiry under sec. 202 is necessary in all cases, because the words 'if any' have been omitted from sec. 203 after the words 'investigation or inquiry'. No such change was intended by the amendment made by Act XVIII of 1923, and the proposed addition is to make this matter clear"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (Gazette of India, 1925, Part V, p. 215). See also Dukhiram v. Jamuna, 6 P.L.T. 727, 26 Cr L J. 921.

Where an investigation has been ordered under sec. 202, the Magistrate is not bound, after receipt of the report of such investigation, to examine any witnesses or hold any inquiry before he dismisses the complaint. It is sufficient that he takes into consideration the result of the investigation arrived at by the subordinate officer—Munshi Mian, 19 Cr L J 126 (Patna). This section does not say that the Magistrate dismissing the complaint must have himself recorded the evidence in the preliminary enquiry—Virumal Manghanmal v Muhammad Khan, AIR. 1936 Sind 146 (147), 37 Cr L J. 1086, 164 IC 1020, 30 SLR 217, 1936 Cr.C. 862.

The provisions of Cr P. C., contemplate that the Magistrate should exercise his own independent judgment when he receives the report of the investigation or inquiry that he has ordered and he does not exercise his independent judgment when he merely accepts without giving reasons the opinion of the Police Prosecutor. It is not for the Magistrate to surrender his discretion or his judgment to that of the Police Prosecutor—Joomal Tikandas, 40 Cr L J 807, 183 IC. 449, AIR 1939 Sind 208, ILR. 1939 Kar. 277. See also Pherumal Lalaram v. Emp., 39 Cr L.J. 966, 177 I.C. 744, 11 R.S. 67, AIR. 1938 Sind 192.

678. Grounds of dismissal:—A complaint can be dismissed if the Magistrate thinks that there is not a sufficient ground for proceeding. The expression "sufficient ground" in this section points exclusively to the facts which the complainant brings to the knowledge of the Magistrate and to their establishing a prima facie case against the accused. In exercising his discretionary power of summary dismissal of a complaint, the Magistrate should not allow himself to be influenced by considerations arising apart from the facts adduced by the complainant in support of the charge, see supra a.

deration of the motive by which the complainant is actuated. What he has to consider is whether there is a prima facie evidence of a criminal offence which in his judgment calls upon the alleged offender to answer—Ganesh Narayan, 13 Bom. 590 (598). The decision whether there is sufficient ground must be reached by the exercise of discretion based upon judicial consideration. That the Magistrate considered the probable result of the proceeding undesirable or the motives and conduct of the complainant discreditable, is not a relevant consideration—Ganga v. Samarapathi, 38 Mad. 512. In the absence of any finding that the complaint was false or unsustainable on the evidence likely to be available, the passing of an order of dismissal under this section constitutes an irregularity with which the High Court can interfere in revision—Ganga Reddi v. Samarapathi, 38 Mad. 512, 25 M.L.J. 510, 14 Cr.L.J. 633. The reasons for dismissing a complaint should be based on inference of facts arising from or disclosed by (1) the complaint, (2) the examination of the complainant, and (3) the investigation, if any, made under sec. 202. This provides a wide field. Anything outside it is extra-judicial and must be discarded—Mustafa v. Motilal, 9 Bom L.R. 742, 6 Cr.L.J. 85.

Where all the allegations set out in the complaint and in the examination of the complainant do not constitute an offence, the complaint should be dismissed—Maung Ba Yone v. Ma Hla Kia, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 297, 146 I.C. 402, 1933 Cr.C. 1128, 35 Cr.L.J. 52.

A complaint in respect of a dispute of civil nature ought to be dismissed in limine, even when dressed up in criminal garments—Murugappa Chettiar v. Morangamuthu Raja, 1937 M.W.N. 1238.

A Magistrate ought to dismiss a complaint where the subordinate Magistrate to whom the case was made over for inquiry and report under sec. 202 held an elaborate inquiry, examined a number of witnesses and submitted a report that there was no case against the accused. In such a case the trying Magistrate acts wrongly in disregarding the report and ordering issue of summons against the accused—Abdulla, 40 Cal. 854 (857). See also Mahabir v. Giribala, given in Note 600.

What are not proper grounds of dismissal:—If the allegations contained in the complaint disclose a criminal offence, a Magistrate should not dismiss the complaint simply because the case is of a civil nature—Niratan v. Jogesh, 23 Cal 983 (986). A complaint cannot be dismissed on the ground that the entertainment of the complaint would encourage hundreds of such complaints and would stir up old religious feelings of animosity between the Hindus and Mussalmans—Ram Chandra, Ratanlal 562; or on the ground that a more responsible person ought to have preferred the complaint—Boddhoo v. Ram Dayal, 18 W.R. 55; or on the ground that the inquest report made by a different Magistrate does not support the prosecution case—Surendra v. Police Sergeant, 35 C.W.N. 1032, 1932 Cr.C. 106, 33 Cr.L.J. 218, 135 I.C. 878; or on the ground that the complainant is a man of low caste, and the alleged offence is theft of a goat which is merely a harm under sec. 95, I. P. C., rather than an offence—Pochun, 2 W.R. 35; or on the ground that the complainant is actuated by a malicious feeling and that the alleged offence was committed six years ago and is, therefore, difficult to prove, and that if the act of the accused was held criminal, a large part of the population would go to jail—Manji, Ratanlal, 549; Chamru v. Bharron, 35 Cr.L.J. 1215, 150 I.C. 1120, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 135, 1934 Cr.C. 568; or on the ground that the complainant had no personal knowledge of the facts alleged in the complaint (in such a case the Magistrate should allow the complainant to bring forward evidence to prove facts)—Kankuchand, Ratanlal 669; or on the ground that the person complained against has been exonerated in a previous departmental inquiry into the facts alleged in the complaint—Ralia v. Ahsan, 1887 P.R. 33; or on the ground that the accused will possibly be able to defend himself under some provision of law—Sheodan Pathak v. Budheshwar Dubey, 1939 P.W.N. 828. A complaint should not be dismissed on the result of a previously made Police enquiry—Maung Ko v. Maung Set, 31 Cr.L.J. 1064, 126 I.C. 534, A.I.R. 1930 Rang. 226. This should not be done without giving the complainant an opportunity of arguing his case on the said police papers and of inducing the Magistrate to examine the prosecution witnesses and deciding for himself how far they were speaking the truth.

—Manghanmal, 35 Cr.L.J. 222, 146 I.C. 924, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 395, 1933 Cr.C. 1435, 6 R.S. 102, 28 S.L.R. 1.

679. Recording reasons:—The Magistrate is bound to record his reasons for dismissing the complaint, for if that is not done, it would be impossible for the High Court to consider whether the discretion vested in the Magistrate under this section has been properly exercised or not—Baidyanath v. Muspratt, 14 Cal. 141; Kartik Pathak, 2 P.L.T. 142, A.I.R. 1921 Pat. 205; Harnandan v. Atul, 7 P.L.T. 481, 26 Cr.L.J. 1502. An order of a Magistrate dismissing a complaint under this section without recording reasons for dismissal but merely stating that he agrees with the police report is improper and will be set aside—Ahmed v. Ameena, 7 M.L.T. 175, 11 Cr.L.J. 331, 21 M.L.J. 1092, 5 I.C. 926.

The words in this section are "he shall record"; i.e., the provisions of this section are imperative, and a failure to record reasons is a direct disobedience of law and not a mere irregularity—Maniruddin v. Abdul Rauf, 40 Cal. 41 (43), 13 Cr.L.J. 482, 15 I.C. 482. Where a Magistrate did not record his reasons for dismissing a complaint, but directed that the complainant should be prosecuted under sec. 211, I. P. Code, held that the order of dismissal was without jurisdiction and altogether bad, that there must be a further inquiry, and there cannot be any proceeding under sec. 211, I. P. Code, until such further inquiry has been made—Maniruddin v. Abdul Rauf, supra.

680. Effect of dismissal:—A dismissal of a complaint after hearing the complainant and after considering the result of an investigation ordered under sec. 202 amounts to a legal determination of the complaint, and the complainant can be prosecuted for making a false charge under sec. 211, I. P. C.—Surya, 6 C.W.N. 295. Until a complaint is dismissed under this section or is otherwise disposed of, no proceedings can be taken under sec. 211, I. P. C., against the complainant—Gunamony, 3 C.W.N. 758, followed in Gat; Mandal, 4 C.L.J. 88. Where a complaint has been illegally dismissed (e.g., without examining the complainant), the complainant cannot be prosecuted under sec. 182 or 211, I. P. C., for bringing a false charge—Ningappa, 48 Bom. 360 (362), 26 Bom.L.R. 183; Mahadeo, 27 Cal. 921; Aly Mohd, 1912 P.R. 2; Ram Sarup, 4 O.C. 127.

When a complaint has been dismissed under this section, before the issue of process to the accused, no compensation to the accused (sec. 250) can be awarded—Bhagwan v. Harmukh, 29 All. 137; Azam v. Mir Abdulla, 1897 P.R. 14; Harphul v. Manku, 1906 P.R. 3, 4 Cr.L.J. 36. It can be awarded only when the accused being summoned to attend Court is discharged or acquitted, and the complaint is found to be frivolous or vexatious—Harphul v. Manku, 1906 P.R. 3.

So also, no suit for malicious prosecution will lie against the complainant when the complaint is dismissed under this section, because there has been no prosecution of the accused. Prosecution commences only after the issue of process, and not where the complaint has been dismissed without any issue of process—Sheik Meeran Saib v. Ratnavelu, 25 M.L.J. 1, 21 I.C. 703 (704).

681. Power to rehear complaint or hear fresh complaint:—
(a) Rehearing of complaint by the same Magistrate:—A dismissal under this section is a dismissal without a trial; it is, therefore, open to a Magistrate to rehear a complaint which he has dismissed under sec. 203, though the order of dismissal has not been set aside by a higher Court. Neither section 369 nor sec. 403 operates as a bar to such procedure—Chinna Kaliappa, 29 Mad. 126 (131, 132, 136) (F.B.); Jyotindra v. Hemchandra, 36 Cal. 415 (417), 2 I.C. 293, 9 Cr.L.J. 563, 13 C.W.N. 193; Allah Ditta v. Karam Baksh, 12 Lah. 9, 127 I.C. 15, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 879, 1930 Cr.C. 923, 32 P.L.R. 208, Ind. Rul. 1930 Lah. 815, 31 Cr.L.J. 1180 (1181). Where a Magistrate dismisses a complaint under this section, it is open to him at a later stage to issue summons and revive the proceedings. The fact that in the meanwhile the Sessions Judge has in revision refused to direct further inquiry is immaterial—Janakdhari, 8 Pat. 537, 1929 Cr.C. 353, 120 I.C. 632, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 469, 31 Cr.L.J. 146, 10

P.L.T. 725, Ind. Rul. 1930 Pat. 56; Jyotindra v. Hemichandra, 36 Cal. 415 (417), 13 C.W.N. 193, 9 Cr.L.J. 563, 2 I.C. 293, where a complaint, which was dismissed for absence of the complainant's witnesses, under this section, was revived by the Magistrate who dismissed it, even when the District Magistrate refused to direct a further enquiry. In Idoo, 40 Cal. 71, 15 I.C. 488, 16 C.W.N. 983 an accused had been discharged in the Sessions Division of the High Court on a nolle prosequi entered by the Public Prosecutor. The accused was subsequently placed on his trial on the same facts before a Magistrate. It was held that the Magistrate was wrong in declining jurisdiction which he undoubtedly had to hear the case. See also Lallain, cited below in cl. (d) of this Note.

(b) Entertainment of fresh complaint by the same Magistrate :—Similarly, where a Magistrate has dismissed a complaint, it is open to him to entertain a fresh complaint on the same facts, because there is no difference between entertaining a fresh complaint and rehearing the original complaint—Chinna Kaliappa, 29 Mad. 126 (130, 136) (F B), 16 M.L.J. 79, 3 Cr.L.J. 274; Keymer, 22 I.C. 145, A.I.R. 1914 All. 179, 15 Cr.L.J. 1, 36 All. 53, 12 A.L.J. 1; Puran, 9 All. 85 (88); Makhatambi v. Hassan Ali, 1 N.L.R. 18; Amanat Kadar, 31 Bom.L.R. 146, 116 I.C. 251, 30 Cr.L.J. 594, Ind. Rul. 1929 Bom. 321, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 134. If the Magistrate has jurisdiction to entertain the second complaint, he has jurisdiction to transfer it to another Magistrate for trial—Kunji Lal, A.I.R. 1935 All. 60 (63), 35 Cr.L.J. 1485, 151 I.C. 714, 4 A.W.R. 252, 1934 A.L.J. 704. It is equally competent to dismiss an application to complain under sec. 476, Cr. P. C., and to re-entertain it—Kalastri Mudali, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 130, 61 M.L.J. 686, 1931 M.W.N. 1048, 34 M.L.W. 629, 1932 Cr.C. 109, 33 Cr.L.J. 272, 136 I.C. 313. The Magistrate can also entertain a second complaint made by a different person alleging different offences, grounded more or less on the same facts—Mehrban, 29 All. 7 (10), 3 A.L.J. 562, 4 Cr.L.J. 59, 1906 A.W.N. 245. But the Calcutta High Court holds in Kamal Chandra v. Gour Chand, 24 Cal. 285 (288) that the Magistrate cannot entertain the second complaint until the previous order of discharge is set aside by competent authority (following Nilratan v. Jogesh, 23 Cal. 983).

(c) Rehearing of same complaint by a different Magistrate :—The Calcutta High Court holds in Grish Chunder v. Dwarka, 24 Cal. 528 (532) that when a complaint has been dismissed by a Magistrate, another Magistrate of co-ordinate authority cannot rehear the complaint, sitting as it were on appeal from the order of the first Magistrate. A dismissed complaint cannot be reheard except on an order for further inquiry (under sec. 435).

(d) Entertainment of a fresh complaint by a different Magistrate :—When a Magistrate has dismissed a complaint, his successor or any other Magistrate can entertain a fresh complaint on the same facts, although the order of dismissal has not been set aside—Ram Bharos v. Baban, 36 All. 129 (131), 15 Cr.L.J. 158; Bipoo, 2 P.L.J. 34 (35), 18 Cr.L.J. 296; Sheogovind, 1 P.L.T. 293, 21 Cr.L.J. 660, 57 I.C. 820; Mahadco, 27 Bom.L.R. 352, 26 Cr.L.J. 991 (992), 87 I.C. 527, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 258. See also Lallain, 35 Cr.L.J. 1059, 150 I.C. 376, 1934 A.L.J. 241, A.I.R. 1934 All. 514, 1934 Cr.C. 614 where the previous rulings of the Allahabad High Court have been reviewed. A second complaint is entertainable even though the previous order of dismissal has been confirmed by a superior Court—Allah Ditta v. Karam Baksh, supra. See also Mohammad Din v. Hussain, 36 Cr.L.J. 62, 152 I.C. 155, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 435, 1934 Cr.C. 698; U Sein Ywet v. U Maung Fyi, 35 Cr.L.J. 802, 148 I.C. 845, A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 40, 1934 Cr.C. 263. In a recent Full Bench case the Madras High Court has gone so far as to say that a Magistrate of inferior jurisdiction can entertain a fresh complaint, when a previous complaint has been dismissed by a superior Magistrate—Ponnuswami, 55 Mad. 622, 33 Cr.L.J. 454 (455), A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 369, 1931 M.W.N. 1149, 137 I.C. 317, 1932 Cr.C. 353, 62 M.L.J. 469, 35 M.L.W. 478, Ind. Rul. 1932 Mad. 380 (F B). But in Nilratan v. Jogesh, 23 Cal. 983 (990), Adam, 22 All. 106 (108), Mahomed Abdul v. Panduranga, 28 Mad. 255 (256), Tirathibai v. Sugmbai, 23 S.L.R. 43, 112 I.C. 681, A.I.R. 1929 Sind 61, 29 Cr.L.J. 1097 (1098), it has been held that when a Magistrate has dismissed a complaint another Magistrate cannot entertain a fresh complaint on the same facts, so long as the order of dismissal is not set aside by a competent authority. The last case was followed in Chellomal v. Kewalmal Jeramdas, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 38, 40 Cr.L.J. 287, 179 I.C. 898. See also Shah Mahomed, 28 Cr.L.J. 57, 99 I.C. 89, A.I.R. 1928 Sind 49; Chandram, 23 Cr.L.J. 737, A.I.R. 1922 Sind 23, 15 S.L.R. 131, 69 I.C. 625; Nanda, 102 I.C. 344, A.I.R. 1927 All. 815, 28 Cr.L.J. 536; Rama Nand v. Sheri, 35 Cr.L.J. 1062, 150 I.C. 373, 1934 Cr.C. 150, A.I.R. 1934 All. 87, 56 All. 425, 3 A.W.R. 569, A.I.R. 1934 All. 546.

It should be noted that the Calcutta cases of Niratan v. Jogesh, 23 Cal. 983, Komal v. Gour Chand, 24 Cal. 286 and Gurish Chunder v. Dwarka, 24 Cal. 528 must be deemed as overruled by the Full Bench cases of Dwarka v. Beni Madhab, 28 Cal. 652, 5 C.W.N. 457 and Mir Ahwad v. Md. Askari, 29 Cal. 726, 5 C.W.N. 633; and the authority of the Madras case Mahomed Abdul v. Panduranga, 28 Mad. 255 has been shaken by the Full Bench ruling in Chinna Kaliappa, 29 Mad. 126, and must be deemed as overruled by the recent Full Bench decision of Ponnuswami, 55 Mad. 622, 1931 M.W.N. 1159.

Discussing the rulings mentioned above the Full Bench of the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court has laid down that sec. 437, Cr. P. C., is only an enabling section and does not take away by implication the jurisdiction vested in a Magistrate to hear the complaint again. It is, therefore, competent for a Magistrate who dealt with the first complaint, his successor-in-office or another Magistrate of co-ordinate jurisdiction to entertain a second complaint upon a statement of facts which constituted the first complaint which has been dismissed for default under sec. 203, Cr. P. C., or in which the accused have been discharged under sec. 259, Cr. P. C., the order of dismissal or discharge, as the case may be, not having been set aside by a higher Court. When entertaining a second, a Magistrate should keep in mind the default committed in the earlier proceedings, for this default may have a bearing not only upon any subsequent default committed but also upon the merits of the complaint—Harbai v. Raya Premji, 40 Cr.L.J. 745, 183 I.C. 283, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 193 (F.B.), overruling Tnithabai v. Sugmbai, supra and, by implication, Chellomal v. Kewalmal Jeramdas, supra.

The Courts now appear to be practically unanimous in holding that an order dismissing a complaint or discharging an accused person, does not operate as an acquittal under sec. 403, Cr. P. C., and does not bar the taking cognizance of a fresh complaint of the same offence, even though the order of dismissal or discharge has not been set aside in revision by a competent authority—Dhana Reddy, A.I.R. 1930 Rang 156 (157), 8 Rang 1, 31 Cr.L.J. 824, 125 I.C. 341, 1930 Cr.C. 588. But although a previous order dismissing the complaint or discharging the accused is no bar to the institution of a fresh case against the same accused still a new complaint in respect of the same offence should not be entertained, unless there are exceptional circumstances, e.g., unless new facts, which could not with reasonable diligence have been brought forward in the previous proceedings, would be adduced, or unless there was some manifest error or manifest miscarriage of justice in the previous proceedings, or unless the previous order was passed on an incomplete record or was manifestly absurd or foolish—U Shive v. Ma Sem, 26 Cr.L.J. 284 (Rang); Dhana Reddy, 8 Rang 1, 31 Cr.L.J. 824 (826); Allah Ditta v. Karam Baksh, 12 Lah. 9, 31 Cr.L.J. 1180 (1181); Mahomed Din v. Mehtab Din, 137 I.C. 520, 33 Cr.L.J. 493, 33 P.L.R. 318; Parsram, 30 Cr.L.J. 444, 115 I.C. 309, Ind. Rul. 1929 Sind 69; Chaman Lal, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 47, 37 Cr.L.J. 427, 161 I.C. 288, 1936 Cr.C. 63. In the absence of such exceptional circumstances, a second complaint should not be entertained on the same facts, even though it is lodged by a different complainant—Allah Ditta v. Karam Baksh, supra.

Where the second complaint is one essentially different from the first complaint, there is no bar to the entertainment of the second complaint and to its being dealt with according to law—Umar Ahmed v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Sind 15, 41 Cr.L.J. 248, 186 I.C. 95.

When a complaint has been dismissed by a Magistrate, and the complainant brings a second complaint on the same facts before another Magistrate, it is the duty of the complainant to inform the second Magistrate that he had previously filed a similar complaint which had been dismissed; because, when the second Court becomes aware that a similar complaint has already been dismissed, it must necessarily exercise greater care in considering how to deal with the case—Mahadev Laxman, 27 Bom.L.R. 352, 26 Cr.L.J. 991 (1992). But the second complaint cannot be dismissed merely on the ground that the complainant did not reveal in it the dismissal of his first complaint which he was, in all fairness, bound to do, without following the courses of action prescribed in sections 202 and 203, Cr. P. Code. Where secs. 202 and 203, Cr. P. C., prescribe a course or courses of action, the High Court cannot override the statute by dismissing a complaint when the facts as stated in the complaint disclose an offence, without any preliminary inquiry—Chin Hone On v. C. Ah Foo, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 35.

682. Further Inquiry:—Where a complaint has been dismissed under this section, the High Court or Sessions Judge may direct further inquiry. See sec. 436.

An order for further inquiry directed to a subordinate Court means that the case should be taken up again and that the question of dismissing the complaint or discharging the accused, as the case may be, should be again considered and an appropriate order made as a result of such fresh consideration. The effect of an order dismissing a complaint under sec. 203 is to restore the case to the stage under sec. 202, and the further inquiry directed should be taken up from that point. The accused should not forthwith be summoned without any further inquiry—Radha, 28 Cr.L.J. 857, 104 I.C. 633, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 12; Sitaram v. Kausila, 29 Cr.L.J. 572, 109 I.C. 508; Rambadra, 29 Cr.L.J. 1059, 112 I.C. 563, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 1198. A Magistrate has power to dismiss a complaint under sec. 203, Cr. P. C., after making a further inquiry directed by a Superior Court—Nibaran v. Sital, 25 C.W.N. 312, 22 Cr.L.J. 528, 62 I.C. 416, distinguishing Brijkishore v. Gopal, 11 C.W.N. 316. See Note 1183.

It has been held in some Calcutta cases that if an order of dismissal of complaint or discharge of accused is passed by a Presidency Magistrate, the High Court has no power to direct further inquiry under any of the provisions of this Code. Section 436 does not apply to orders of dismissal or discharge passed by a Presidency Magistrate; sec. 439 confers on a High Court all the powers of an Appellate Court under sec. 423 but that section does not enable a Court of Appeal to direct that further inquiry be made into a case in which an order of dismissal or discharge may have been passed, but it confers a power to direct further inquiry only in respect of a case of an appeal from an order of acquittal. Hence, it follows that the High Court cannot order further inquiry under this Code after discharge or dismissal of complaint by a Presidency Magistrate; but the High Court can do so only under sec. 15 of the Charter Act. And its powers of interference under the Charter Act are very limited. It cannot interfere on the ground of any error of law but only on a ground affecting jurisdiction, i.e., where the subordinate Court refused or failed to exercise jurisdiction or erred in the exercise of its jurisdiction—Charoobala v. Barendra, 27 Cal. 126 (129); Debi Bux v. Jutmal, 33 Cal. 1282 (1284). The High Court can revise the proceedings of Presidency Magistrate, under secs. 435 and 439, read with sec. 423 of this Code, as such Magistrates are under the Appellate jurisdiction of the High Court; and the High Court can set aside an erroneous order of discharge passed by a Presidency Magistrate. But the power to order further inquiry can be exercised not under this Code but under Clause 28 of the Letters Patent—Colville v. Kristo Kishore, 26 Cal. 746 (748). But in a later case it has been laid down that secs. 435 and 439 of this Code confer upon the High Court the power of sending for the records of Presidency Magistrates, and of reversing the order of the Magistrates and ordering a further inquiry in a case of dismissal of complaint or discharge of accused—Malik Pratap v. Khan Mahomed, 36 Cal. 994 (997); Dwarka v. Bem Madhab, 28 Cal. 652 (667) (per Ghosh, J.); and the High Court can direct further inquiry, if there are good reasons for doing so, although no question of jurisdiction arises in the case—Malik Pratap v. Khan Md., 36 Cal. 994 (997).

683. Death of complainant—Effect:—As there is no abatement of a criminal case on the death of the complainant, a fresh complaint on the same facts need not be made but the old complaint must be treated as pending and proceeded with to its disposal—Ramasamiar, 16 Cr.L.J. 713 (Mad.), 30 I.C. 1001. See also Madho v. Turab, 18 C.W.N. 1211, 15 Cr.L.J. 726, 26 I.C. 174.

CHAPTER XVII.

OF THE COMMENCEMENT OF PROCEEDINGS BEFORE MAGISTRATES.

204. (1) If in the opinion of a Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence there is sufficient ground for proceeding, and the case appears to be one in which, according to the fourth column of the second schedule, a summons should issue in the first instance, he shall issue his summons for the attendance of the accused. If the case appears to be one in which, according to that column, a warrant should issue in the first instance, he may issue a warrant, or, if he thinks fit, a summons, for causing the accused to be brought or to appear at a certain time before such Magistrate or (if he has not jurisdiction himself) some other Magistrate having jurisdiction.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the provisions of section 90.

(3) When by any law for the time being in force any process-fees or other fees are payable, no process shall be issued until the fees are paid, and if such fees are not paid within a reasonable time, the Magistrate may dismiss the complaint.

684. Magistrate taking cognizance:—This section applies not merely where cognizance is taken on a complaint, but also when cognizance is taken on a police report, submitted to the Magistrate either under sec. 173 or after an inquiry under sec. 202 made by the police—Raghunath, 12 P.L.T. 937, 33 Cr.L.J. 349 (353).

The process is to be issued by the Magistrate who took cognizance of the case, so long as the case is on his file; and the District Magistrate would have no power to pass any order for issue of process unless he removed the case to his own file—Mrinal Kanti, 6 C.W.N. 843 (844). See also Fani Bhusan v. Kemp, 10 C.W.N. 1086.

Where a Joint Magistrate who took cognizance of a case made over the case to a Deputy Magistrate for disposal, the former ceased to have any control over the case. The case having been transferred to the Deputy Magistrate, that officer alone had jurisdiction to deal with an application for summons, until the case was withdrawn from his cognizance. Therefore, if he refused to issue process as unnecessary, the Joint Magistrate has no jurisdiction to order for its issue—Ajab Lal, 32 Cal. 783.

"Offence" :—If the Magistrate has not before him the facts constituting the offence, he cannot issue process for the attendance of the accused—Durga Das v. Umesh, 27 Cal. 985 (988). Process can issue only for an offence already committed. It is not competent for the Magistrate to issue process in anticipation of an offence, where there is no complaint against any one. Such a case is for the interference of the Police and not of the Magistrate—Fateali, Ratanlal 90 (91).

A neglect to maintain a wife is not an offence; therefore, an application for maintenance under sec. 488 should not be dismissed under sub-section (3) of this section owing to the applicant's failure to comply with an order for the payment of process fees—Ponnammal, 16 Mad. 234.

Under section 10 of the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929 (Act XIX of 1929) a Court taking cognizance of an offence under that Act is bound to hold a preliminary enquiry under sec. 202, Cr. P. C., before directing issue of process for the attendance of the accused. An omission to comply with this mandatory provision is an illegality which vitiates the trial—Mangal v. Kalu, 32 Cr.L.J. 616, 130 I.C. 783, 12 Lah. 383, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 56, 31 P.L.R. 945, 1931 Cr.C. 120, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 351; Chand Mal Goenka, 35 Cr.L.J. 1436, 151 I.C. 830, 35 P.L.R. 8, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 155, 1934 Cr.C. 333, 15 Lah. 63, 7 R.L. 209.

686. Sufficient ground:—When a man files a complaint and supports it by his oath, rendering himself liable to prosecution and imprisonment if it is false, he is entitled to be believed, unless there is some apparent reason for disbelieving him; and he is entitled to have the persons, against whom he complains, brought before the Court and tried—Bhim, 40 Cal. 444 (451). The only condition requisite for the issue of process is that the complainant's deposition must show some sufficient ground for proceeding. Unless the Magistrate is satisfied that there is sufficient ground for proceeding with the complaint or sufficient material to justify the issue of process, he should not issue process—Jogesh v. Abdul, 18 Cr.L.J. 626, 39 I.C. 994 (Cal.). Where the complainant who instituted the prosecution had no personal knowledge of the allegations made in the complaint, the Magistrate should satisfy himself upon proper materials that a case had been made out for the issue of process—Thakur Prasad, 10 C.W.N. 1090, 4 Cr.L.J. 207; Chamroo, 11 C.W.N. 170, 5 Cr.L.J. 13.

It is not necessary that the opinion to the effect, that there is sufficient ground for issuing process within the meaning of this section, should be based on evidence in the case, nor that the reasons for such an opinion should be recorded. The petition of complaint, the sworn statement of the complainant and the report of the enquiring officer are sufficient materials for the purpose of issuing process—Hafizar Rahaman v. Aimal Hoque, 44 C.W.N. 1114 (1122).

Under this section, a wide discretion is given to Magistrates with respect to the grant or refusal of process. This discretion should be exercised with caution, and an accused person ought not to be dragged into Court to answer a charge merely because a complaint has been lodged against him. In determining whether process ought to issue, a Magistrate must proceed according to the provisions of the Code, and if he is of opinion upon the materials before him that a prima facie case (i.e., sufficient ground for proceeding) has been made out, he ought to issue process; and in such circumstances he is not entitled to refuse to issue process merely because he thinks that it is unlikely that the proceedings will result in a conviction—Subal Chandra v. Ahadulla, 53 Cal 606, 30 C.W.N. 546, 27 Cr.L.J. 788, 44 C.L.J. 144. But in a later case the same High Court has said that a Magistrate is not bound to issue process merely because the evidence discloses a prima facie case. Even though the evidence discloses a prima facie case, there is a discretion left in the hands of the Magistrate who may for good reasons refuse to issue process. He is bound to issue process only when he believes that the evidence is sufficient to prove the case against the accused—Sher Sing v. Jitendra, 59 Cal 275, 36 C.W.N. 16 (29), 33 Cr.L.J. 3, 134 I.C. 1045, 54 C.L.J. 253, 1931 Cr.C. 759, A.I.R. 1931 Cal 607. If the Magistrate comes to the conclusion that the facts alleged by the complainant disclose an offence, and in his opinion there is no ground for distrusting the complainant, the Magistrate would not be justified in refusing the issue of process merely because some other person has been tried and acquitted upon the same charge and upon the same facts—Subal Chandra v. Ahadulla, supra.

In exercising the discretion under this section as to whether a process should issue, the Magistrate must be guided by his own independent judgment and not by the judgment of others, e.g., an expression of opinion by the Police—Rangaswamy v. Sabapathi, 4 M H C.R. 162.

687. Issue of process:—Proceedings are said to commence under this Chapter when processes are issued against the accused; after the issue of process, a complaint cannot be dismissed under sec 203. See Note 675 under sec 203.

An order directing issue of process is not a judgment within the meaning of sec. 367, and, therefore, a Magistrate making the order of issue of process can rescind the order on sufficient grounds—Lalit Mohan v. Nani Lal, 27 C.W.N. 651, 25 Cr L J 464, 39 C.L.J. 329, 77 IC 816, AIR 1934 Cal. 662. In Lalit Mohan v. Nani Lal the process issued in the counter-case was cancelled and the case and the counter-case were sent for an inquiry under sec 202, Cr P C. There is nothing either irregular or improper in a Magistrate first issuing process for one and then changing his mind and issuing process for all the accused before taking further evidence—Alam, 29 Cr L J. 293, 107 IC. 778, AIR. 1928 Lah. 541. If the Magistrate issues a warrant in a case in which he ought to have issued a summons, he can cancel the warrant and issue summons instead—Janat, 1 SLR 69, 8 Cr L J 178; See also Zali Khan, 7 SLR. 40, 14 Cr L J. 604 (605).

A Magistrate issuing process on the ground that there seemed to be a prima facie case (i.e., sufficient ground for proceeding) against the accused, is not precluded from permitting the withdrawal of the prosecution under sec 494. The mere fact that he has found a prima facie case is not tantamount to saying that he has believed the case to be true or proved; and, therefore, if on reconsideration of the very same materials, after argument by the parties, he comes to the conclusion that the evidence is not likely to lead to conviction, he can allow the Public Prosecutor to withdraw from the prosecution—Sher Sing v. Jitendra, 59 Cal 275, 36 C.W.N. 16 (23), 33 Cr L J 3, 134 IC. 1045, 54 C.L.J. 253, 1931 Cr C 759, AIR 1931 Cal 607.

Where an investigation was ordered under sec 202, Cr. P C, the Magistrate should wait for the result of that investigation. He should not issue summons against the accused as the report had not arrived and because he thought that the case could no longer be kept pending—Krishna Bala v. Nirod, 41 C.L.J. 170, AIR 1925 Cal 989.

A notice to the accused in the inquiry held under sec 202 is merely an intimation that a complaint has been made against him, and that the Magistrate intends to take action upon the complaint; it does not amount to a summons to the accused to appear; and the accused cannot be said to have been prosecuted. So, if the complaint is dismissed after the inquiry, a suit by the accused against the complainant for damages for malicious prosecution is not entertainable—Sheik Meeran v. Ratnavelu, 25 M.L.J. 1, 21 IC. 703 (704).

The officer who signs the warrant must be the officer who presides in the Court at the time when the warrant comes to be signed and not necessarily the Magistrate who presided in the Court when cognizance was taken of the offence or passed the order for issue of the process against the accused—Kartick, AIR 1932 Pat. 175, 13 P.L.T. 167, 1932 Cr C. 351.

Refusal to issue process—Where the Police report is true, and the Magistrate has directed the case to be entered as such, he cannot refuse to issue process simply because there is no chance of conviction and no useful purpose would be served by an inquiry: the complainant is entitled to a process against the accused and for the attendance of his witnesses—Kuldip v. Budhan, 29 Cal 410; Fazlar Rahaman v. Abidar, 23 C.W.N. 392 (393).

When from the examination of the complainant, it appears that there is reason for the issue of process against all the accused, the Magistrate exercises a wrong discretion in issuing process against some of the accused and in refusing to issue process against the others. He must issue process against all—Bishan Dayal v. Chedi Khan, 4 C.W.N. 560.

But where two counter complainants preferred complaints before a Magistrate, and he issued process in one case and postponed the issue of process in the counter case until after the disposal of the first case, held that the action of the Magistrate was not illegal—Lalji v. Naurangi, 3 P.L.T. 764, 24 Cr.L.J. 120, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 618; Ramsarav v. Nikhad, 26 Cr.L.J. 1179, 88 I.C. 603, 6 P.L.T. 477, 3 Pat L.R. 134 (Cr.), A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 619. See Note 988 under the heading "Counter-cases."

688. Sub-section (3)—Process fee:—An application for maintenance under sec. 488 cannot be dismissed for default to pay process-fee. See Ponnammal, 16 Mad. 234 cited in Note 685 above.

This sub-section gives the Magistrate power to dismiss the complaint when the complainant fails to pay any process fees or other fees. The sub-section is, therefore, quite wide enough to include non-payment of witness batta for which a case may be dismissed—Modiboyina Raghavulu v. Oduvu Narasa Reddi, 38 Cr.L.J. 265, 166 I.C. 639, 9 R.M. 389, 45 M.L.W. 60, 11 L.R. 1937 Mad. 515, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 222, (1937) 1 M.L.J. 120, 1936 M.W.N. 1381. But if the case is adjourned the witnesses should be told to appear on the adjourned date, and the party should not be required to repeatedly summon his witnesses on payment of fresh process-fees. A dismissal of complaint on failure to pay such fees, in such a case, is not proper—Balmakund v. Nanak Chand, 1912 P.L.R. 60, 13 Cr.L.J. 176, 3 P.W.R. 1912, 60 P.L.R. 1912, 13 I.C. 928. See also Amitthammal v. Ratnaswamy, 1933 M.W.N. 1266.

The Nagpur High Court, however, holds that sub-sec. (3) of sec. 204, Cr. P. C., seems to apply only to the issue of process to the accused at the first instance—Nirpat Singh, 1939 N.L.J. 20.

Dismissal of complaint—Fresh complaint:—If a complaint is dismissed under sub-sec. (3) for failure to pay process-fee, the dismissal does not amount to an acquittal, and the complainant is not debarred from filing a fresh complaint before the Magistrate who passed the order of dismissal or before another Magistrate—Sheorajsai v. Dani, 27 N.L.R. 13, 32 Cr.L.J. 203 (204), 130 I.C. 825, 1931 Cr.C. 223, A.I.R. 1931 Nag 39. Cf. Note 681 under sec. 203.

688A. Revision:—There can be no doubt whatever that the High Court has the power to interfere at any stage of the case, and when it is brought to its notice that a person has been subjected to harassment of an illegal prosecution, it is its bounden duty to interfere—Chandi Pershad v. Abdur Rahman, 22 Cal. 131. On the other hand, it is its duty to allow proceedings in the subordinate Courts to go on and take their natural course, unless there is any exceptional ground for its interference. Without meaning to lay down any hard and fast rule, which it is impossible as it is undesirable to do upon a question like this, it may be said that one safe practical test would be this, namely, that a bare statement of facts of the case without any elaborate argument should be sufficient to convince the High Court that it is a fit one for its interference at an intermediate stage—Choa Lal v. Anant Pershad, 25 Cal. 233. It is inadvisable to interfere in a pending case, unless there is some manifest and patent injustice apparent upon the face of the proceedings and calling for prompt redress—Jagat Chandra, 26 Cal. 786. There can be little doubt that though the power has to be exercised with great care, the High Court has jurisdiction to interfere at any stage of the proceedings, if it considers that, in the interests of justice, it should do so. No hard and fast rule can be laid down as regards the class of cases in which the High Court will interfere—Kuppuswami v. Kumaraswami, 39 Mad. 561 (564). See also Q.-E. v. Nageshappa, 20 Bom. 543 and Hari Charan v. Girish Chandra, 38 Cal. 68 (74). See also Note 674.

205. (1) Whenever a Magistrate issues a summons, he may, if he sees reason so to do, dispense with the personal attendance of the accused, and permit him to appear by his pleader.

(2) But the Magistrate inquiring into or trying the case, may, in his discretion, at any stage of the proceedings, direct the personal attendance of the accused, and, if necessary, enforce such attendance in manner hereinbefore provided.

689. Scope of section:—Although this section speaks of issue of summons, it is not confined to summons cases only. In a warrant case also the Magistrate may in his discretion under sec. 204 issue a summons instead of a warrant and in that case he can dispense with the personal attendance of the accused—Basumati v. Budram, 21 Cal 588 (590).

Again, the section applies only where a summons has been issued to the accused; if, however, a warrant is issued to compel his attendance, his personal appearance cannot be dispensed with, unless he is too ill to attend the Court—Sashi Mukhi v. Asutosh, 13 C.W.N. cl. In a Patna case, where the accused had been arrested by warrant, the High Court held that it was illegal to dispense with his personal appearance and to allow him to be represented by a pleader even though he was ill—Abdul Hamid, 2 Pat. 793, 4 P.L.T. 648, 24 Cr.L.J. 872. Where the accused absconded after the charge had been framed against him, and he was convicted and sentenced in his absence, held that as in this case a warrant had been issued for his arrest in the first instance, the Magistrate could not dispense with his personal attendance—Sardar, 1917 P.R. 36, 18 Cr.L.J. 975. The Nagpur Court, however, holds that this section applies to all cases wherever a summons is issued in the first instance. And the fact that the accused (who disobeyed the summons) had to be produced by a warrant of arrest issued subsequently did not disentitle him to claim exemption from personal attendance—Saji v. Bhimji, 26 N.L.R. 50, 31 Cr.L.J. 284 (285), dissenting from Abdul Hamid, supra.

In sending a summons the Magistrate may either require appearance in person or appearance by pleader and he strikes out whatever words he does not desire to appear in the summons in Sch. V, Form No 1. All that is required in sec 205 (1) is that the Magistrate should consider that a summons is sufficient for the appearance of the accused in the case and if he is of that opinion he may then permit the accused to appear by pleader. If, on the other hand, a Magistrate considers that a warrant is necessary, then the Magistrate considers that there should be an order for some one to arrest the accused and bring the accused before him or admit the accused to bail to appear before him. If that is the opinion of the Magistrate, it is obvious that he will not at the same time dispense with the personal attendance of the accused. No one would hold those two contrary views at the same time. This is all that is implied by the reference to a summons in sec 205. The word "ever" implies different occasions and is in contrast to the words used in the previous sec 204 about issuing a summons in the first instance. In the case of a warrant having been issued and recalled and a summons then having been issued it would appear that sec. 205 will apply by virtue of the word "whenever". Where the accused appear before the Magistrate, it is not necessary for him to issue a summons for their appearance. He has them before him, but he has exactly the same powers as if they have appeared before him in obedience to a summons. In such case it is within his jurisdiction to allow the accused to appear by pleader—Jagadish Narain v. Emp., AIR 1940 All 178 (180), 1940 A.L.J. 104, 41 Cr.L.J. 500, 187 I.C. 682.

690. Pardanashin lady:—If the accused is a pardanashin lady, and the Magistrate has issued summons to her, instead of a warrant, in a warrant case, he should use his discretion under this section by dispensing with her personal attendance and allowing her to appear by a pleader, until he has before him clear, direct and prima facie proof of an offence committed by her—Rahim Bibi, 6 All 59 (60); Basumati v. Budram, 21 Cal 588 (590). In a warrant case, the Magistrate ought to issue a summons in the first instance, instead of a warrant, to a pardanashin lady accused. If he erroneously issues a warrant, instead of a summons, he can, on discovering his mistake, treat the warrant as a summons, and make an order exempting the female accused from personal attendance—Zali Khan, 1 S.L.R. 40, 14 Cr.L.J. 604 (605). In some other cases it has been held in similar circumstances, that the Magistrate can cancel the warrant and issue summons instead, and then dispense with the personal attendance of the female accused—Janat, 1 S.L.R. 69, 8 Cr.L.J. 187; Bachal, 7 S.L.R. 161, 15 Cr.L.J. 539 (540). See also Prem Kaur v. Mai Sham, 20 P.W.R. 1908, 8 Cr.L.J. 454 (455); Mahomed, 3 S.L.R. 167, 4 I.C. 1152 (1153). If the accused is a young woman of a fairly respectable class, and there is nothing in particular for which the Magistrate considers her personal attendance necessary, the Magistrate's order compelling her to appear in person is improper—Saji v. Bhimji, 26 N.L.R. 50, 31 Cr.L.J. 284 (285). If the accused is a female, the Magistrate should not refuse to excuse her personal attendance merely on his own impression that she is not a pardah lady—Mahomed, 3 S.L.R. 167, 4 I.C. 1152 (1153); Mt. Asu, 32 Cr.L.J. 665, 131 I.C. 137, 1931 Cr.C. 197, A.I.R. 1931 Sind 37; or on the ground that other ladies belonging to the same class who observed pardah had appeared in Court out of their own free will—Tirbeni v. Bhaguati, 28 Cr.L.J. 94 (All.). In a trial before a Magistrate, she may be permitted to appear by a pleader during the whole trial; in a Sessions case, she may appear by pleader before the committing Magistrate as well as before the Sessions Court; but in either case she will have to appear before the Court to hear the sentence in case of conviction—Raj Rajeswan, 17 C.W.N. 1248, 15 Cr.L.J. 281 (283); Kandamani, 45 Mad. 359, 52 M.L.J. 337, 23 Cr.L.J. 266. The personal attendance of pardanashin ladies may be dispensed with even at the stage of examination under sec. 342, or pleading (or refusing to plead) to a charge under sec. 255. The pleader who appears for them may answer the examination under sec. 342 or may plead to the charge under sec. 255, on their behalf—Jamal Khatun, 6 S.L.R. 206, 14 Cr.L.J. 272. In short, the provisions of sec. 205 should be liberally exercised in a country where so much prejudice exists against the appearance of females in public and where the procedural law is so frequently abused to gratify personal malice—Mahomed, supra.

691. Appearance by pleader:—In section 205, the word "appear" seems to convey a double meaning seemingly connoting, not merely authority to act and plead but also authority to personate the accused, but there is nothing to show that double meaning was intended by the Legislature. It is necessary that some one should be present at the trial to look after the interests of the accused; and all that sec. 205 provides is that, when the Magistrate sees fit, a person against whom a summons has been issued may be exempted from personal appearance, provided he engages a pleader to attend and see that the proceedings are properly and legally conducted. The law considers that the interests of the accused will be completely safeguarded if his pleader is in attendance—Hari Narayan, 29 Cr.L.J. 49 (53), 106 I.C. 545, 46 C.L.J. 368, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 27. Where, on service of summons the accused did not personally attend but appeared by a pleader, who asked the Magistrate to dispense with the personal attendance of the accused, held that such appearance was a valid appearance, and the Magistrate could not prosecute the accused under sec. 174, I. P. C., for non-appearance (disobedience to summons)—Durga Das v. Umesh Chandra, 27 Cal. 985 (989), 5 C.W.N. 131. If, in such a case the Magistrate required personal attendance, he should have told the pleader that he required the personal appearance of the accused on a fixed date, and in default, he would issue a warrant of arrest—Durga Das v. Umesh, 27 Cal. 985 (988). A Magistrate can, at the time of issuing a summons, direct that the personal attendance of the accused shall be dispensed with. He can also do this after the issue of summons, and if the person summoned does not attend in person but sends a pleader to represent him, the Magistrate can give him the necessary permission under this section—Dorab Shah, infra.

In a case where the Court has allowed an accused person to appear by a pleader, it must be taken that such appearance involves the performance of all acts that devolve upon the accused in the course of the trial, unless the Magistrate thinks it necessary or desirable that the accused himself should be present for any particular purpose. Therefore, under secs. 242 and 243, the pleader of the accused may make the necessary answers and plead guilty on his behalf—Dorab Shah, 50 Bom. 250, 28 Bom.L.R. 102, 27 Cr.J.J. 440. A Court should note upon its record that permission under this section has been given and should not leave such a point to mere implication. The omission to do this is a mere irregularity, not justifying High Court's interference—Dorab Shah, supra. The pleader appearing for the accused may perform all the acts which devolve upon the accused in the course of the trial; thus, he can answer the questions put to him by the Court in his examination under sec. 342; he can plead or refuse to plead to a charge under sec. 255—Jamal Khatun, 6 S.L.R. 206, 14 Cr.L.J. 272. Moreover, as an accused is not bound to make any statement in the examination under sec. 342, he can leave it to his pleader to make any statement, and the personal attendance of the accused to the examination under sec. 342 cannot be insisted upon—Maung Po v. Haka, 4 Rang. 506, 28 Cr.L.J. 226, A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 73, 99 I.C. 1026; Dorabshah Bomanji, 93 I.C. 232, 28 Bom.L.R. 102, 27 Cr.L.J. 440, 50 Bom. 250, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 218; Jaffar, 35 Cr.L.J. 1035, 140 I.C. 1132, 36 Bom.L.R. 433, A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 212.

Although the Magistrate can, under sub-section (2), revoke the permission to appear by pleader and enforce the personal attendance of the accused, still the Magistrate ought not to do so in a trivial case (e.g., a case under the Income Tax Act) and on a trivial ground, e.g., merely on the ground that the accused objects to the case being tried by that Magistrate and wants it to be transferred to some other Magistrate—Dwijendra, 38 C.L.J. 9, 24 Cr.L.J. 902, 75 I.C. 150. It is not open for the Sub-divisional Magistrate to cancel the order of a Bench of Magistrates dispensing with the personal attendance of the accused. If the complainant is aggrieved by the order, he can move the Revisional Courts under sections 438 and 439, Cr. P. Code—Nagoji v. Veeramma, 1937 M.W.N. 182.

Appearance by other persons—Where the accused having gone to another village was represented by her mother-in-law with the Magistrate's permission, and the Magistrate proceeded with the case and convicted the accused, the conviction was set aside by the High Court, as there was no proper representation of the accused in the case—Vithi, Ratanlal 205 (206). But in another case, where the accused being ill could not attend Court and her father-in-law appeared on her behalf, the Magistrate having given permission under sec. 205, the High Court refused to interfere, holding that the father-in-law was a "person appointed by the accused with the permission of the Court to act in the case" within the meaning of sec. 4, cl. (r)—Chandrabhaga, Ratanlal 206 (207).

Where an accused person is permitted to appear by pleader, it is open to the accused to appoint a private person to appear in his stead, under sec. 4 (r), and it is equally open to the Court to permit such private person to represent the accused. Where this is allowed, there should be clearly on record something (e.g., power of attorney) to show that the private person who represents the accused has been duly appointed by him, just as an ordinary pleader has to file a vakalatnama. The Court should also note on the record that he has given the requisite permission to such person to represent the accused, and should not leave the matter to mere implication. (The omission to record it is, however, a mere irregularity.) Where there is no power of attorney or letter of authority to show that a person has been appointed by an accused person to appear and plead on his behalf, the Court is not entitled to accept a plea of guilty put forward by such person and to convict the accused upon such plea—Dorabshah 50 Bom. 250, 28 Bom.L.R. 102, 27 Cr.L.J. 440. An accused person cannot be allowed to appear by another accused person—Ma Kim, 3 Bur.L.J. 182, 26 Cr.L.J. 845 (846).

CHAPTER XVIII.

OF INQUIRY INTO CASES TRIABLE BY THE COURT OF SESSION OR HIGH COURT.

692. Object of preliminary inquiry:—The object of the law in requiring an inquiry before a trial in the Court of Session is to prevent the commitment of cases in which there is no reasonable ground for conviction. This provision of law, while it saves the accused persons from the prolonged anxiety of undergoing trials for offences not brought home to them, also saves the time of the Court of Session from being wasted over cases in which the charge is obviously not supported by such evidence as would support a conviction—Lachman v. Juala, 5 All. 161 (162). A preliminary inquiry also affords the accused an opportunity of becoming acquainted with the circumstances of the offences imputed to him and enables him to make his defence—Rama Varma, 3 Mad. 351.

No accused can be committed to the Sessions without a preliminary inquiry under this chapter—Bai Mahalaxmi, 17 Bom L.R. 910, 16 Cr.L.J. 747.

206. (1) [* * * *] Any Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, or any Magistrate (not being a Magistrate of the third class) empowered in this behalf by the Provincial Government, may commit any person for trial to the Court of Session or High Court for any offence triable by such Court.

(2) But, save as herein otherwise provided, no person triable by the Court of Session shall be committed for trial to the High Court.

Change:—The words "Subject to the provision of sec. 443" occurring in the old section at the very beginning have been omitted by sec. 9 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act (XII of 1923), because the old sec. 443 which specified the Magistrates competent to inquire into or try a charge against an European British subject has now been repealed and substituted by an entirely new section. See Chapter XXXIII.

The italicised words have been added by sec. 57 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923). "This amendment is on the same lines as that of sec. 144 (1). We do not think that the powers under this section should be granted to a Magistrate of the third class"—Report of the Select Committee (1916).

The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

693. Committal by Magistrate without jurisdiction:—Where the committing Magistrate has authority to commit but has no territorial jurisdiction in the place where the offence is committed, the irregularity will be cured by sec. 531 unless it has occasioned a failure of justice—Rayan Kuti, 26 Mad. 640; Abbi Reddi, 17 Mad. 402

Committal to wrong sessions:—See Note 549 under sec. 177.

"Empowered":—If a Magistrate is invested with the powers described in sec. 206, i.e., "power to commit for trial," it means that he is empowered to carry into effect all the provisions of Chapter XVIII. In other words, he is not only empowered to commit, but has power to discharge the accused under sec. 209, if there are no sufficient grounds of committing—Ramsundar v. Nirodam, 6 All 477 (479).

694. "Offence triable by such Court":—The procedure to be adopted under this chapter is not confined to cases exclusively triable by the Court of Session, but is also applicable to cases which, in the opinion of the Magistrate concerned, ought to be tried by such Court, as for instance, a case under sec. 392, I P. C., which is not exclusively triable by a Court of Session but is also triable by a Presidency Magistrate and a Magistrate of the first class; and the Magistrate does not act illegally if he considers that the case ought to be committed to the sessions and holds an inquiry under this chapter—Ramsundar v. Nilotam, 6 All. 477 (479). So also, the Magistrate can commit a case to the sessions, in which he cannot inflict adequate punishment upon the accused, although the case is triable by a Magistrate—Kayemulla, 24 Cal 429; Pema Canchod, 4 Bom LR 85 (86). See Note 695 under sec. 207.

If the offence is one triable exclusively by the Court of Session, the Magistrate is bound either to discharge the accused or commit him for trial, but he cannot make over the case for trial to a Deputy Commissioner with special powers under sec. 30—Amir Khan, 7 C.W.N. 457; nor can he try it himself—Bhikki, Ratanlal 953.

Where a Magistrate is inquiring into a case which is triable both by the Court of Session and by himself, he has a discretion to commit the case to the Court of Session or to try it himself—B. N. Ry. Co v. Makbul, 7 P.L.T. 434, 27 Cr.L.J. 313. In the course of the trial the Sessions Judge cannot give him any direction in the matter. All he can do is to make a reference to the High Court if he thinks that an interference is necessary—Supdt. & Remem. of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. Nabin Chandra Hur, 39 Cr.L.J. 569, 175 I.C. 521, AIR 1938 Cal 416.

It is illegal to commit a summons case to the Sessions (e.g., a case under secs. 352 and 447, I. P. Code)—Dharam Singh, 3 ALJ 14, 3 Cr.L.J. 94.

207. The following procedure shall be adopted in inquiries before Magistrates where the case is triable exclusively by a Court of Session or High Court, or, in the opinion of the Magistrate, ought to be tried by such Court.

Procedure in inquiries preparatory to commitment.

694A. "Shall be adopted":—The accused was convicted in a case which was tried as a warrant case. The appellate Court set aside the conviction, observing that if the Magistrate wished to proceed further he might commit the accused to the Court of Session. Thereupon, the Magistrate, without holding any inquiry under this chapter, committed the accused to the Court of Session. Held that the order of commitment was wrong in law in as much as the Magistrate had not before making that order held an inquiry under this chapter—Nagendra, 33 Cr.L.J. 770, 139 I.C. 470, 36 C.W.N. 926, 1932 Cr.C. 636, AIR 1932 Cal 683, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal 628. But see Note 1144.

695. "Ought to be tried":—Under this section a Magistrate can commit an accused to the Court of Session where the case is triable exclusively by that Court, or where in his opinion the case ought to be tried by the Court of Session. In the latter case he must give reasons for his entertaining that opinion, for the order of commitment is a judicial order—Deo Narain, 29 Cr.L.J. 612, 109 I.C. 804, AIR 1928 Pat. 551. See also Ghousbaksh in Note 703. The words "ought to be tried" in this section and sec. 347, must be read with sec. 254. A case which ought to be tried by the Court of Session is one which the Magistrate is not competent to try or one in which, in his opinion, adequate punishment cannot be inflicted by him—Pema, 4 Bom.L.R. 85 (86); Abdul Rahiman, 16 Bom. 580, Ismail, 11 S.L.R. 79; Ducanichand, 15 Cr.L.J. 644, 8 S.L.R. 23; Kayemulla, 24 Cal 429, 1 C.W.N. 414. See also Jagmohan, 6 ALJ. 989, 11 CLJ. 54; Bindeshri, 41 All 454. If the case is one which he has jurisdiction to dispose of, i.e., if he can inflict adequate punishment, he should not send up the case for trial to the Court of Session—Ducanichand, 8 S.L.R. 23, 15 Cr.L.J. 664; Dharam Singh, 3 ALJ 14, 3 Cr.L.J. 94; Allahdad, 31 Cr.L.J. 596, 123 I.C. 702, AIR 1930 Sind 145. The Court of Session ought not to be overburdened with the weight of cases committed to them by Magistrates, where such Magistrates are themselves competent to decide the cases, and no over-riding reasons exist for committal to the higher Court.

—Asha Bhatli, 15 Bom L.R. 998, 14 Cr.L.J. 657 (658). In committing cases not exclusively triable by the Court of Session, Magistrates should exercise a proper discretion and give adequate reasons for making commitment to the Court of Session. Reasons should be such as to show whether the commitment is made in the sound exercise of the discretionary power vested in the Magistrate by law, and if he does not give adequate reasons the commitment may be quashed. The commitment should not be made merely with a view to avoid a conflict of decisions—Karam Singh, 31 Cr.L.J. 178, 120 I.C. 677, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 312, Ind Rul. 1930 Lah. 133. Distinguishing this case it was held that a commitment was proper when some of the offences were triable exclusively by the Court of Session—Ujagar Singh, 34 Cr.L.J. 314, 142 I.C. 200, 34 P.L.R. 360, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 500, 1933 Cr.C. 760, Ind. Rul. 1933 Lah. 174. If the Magistrate can try it himself, he should not commit the case on the sole ground that the accused had been committed in another case—Hanuman, 20 Cr.L.J. 97 (Nag.); or on the ground that the case is connected with another case in which he felt bound by law to commit, specially when the connection between the two cases is not of such a character as to embarrass or prejudice the accused, if the present case is tried separately—Asha Bhatli, supra. But in Ali, 1917 P.R. 13 and Bhagrathi, 42 Mad 83 (dissenting from the above cases) it has been held that the incompetency of the Magistrate to try the case or to pass adequate sentence is not the only ground for committal. The Magistrate may commit for any other sufficient reason. Thus, where the Magistrate committed certain persons to the Sessions on charges under sec. 147, I. P. C., not because he could not pass adequate punishment but because other persons on the other side have been committed to the Court of Session on charges under secs. 304, 325, 148 and 149, I. P. C., it was held that the committal was not illegal—Ali, 1917 P.R. 13, 18 Cr.L.J. 524. The fact that a case has been committed to the Court of Session is no ground whatsoever for committing the cross-case to the same Court when the offence involved in the cross-case is triable and can be adequately punished by a First Class Magistrate or one exercising enhanced powers under sec. 30, Cr. P. Code—Nathu, 33 Cr.L.J. 255, 136 I.C. 272, 32 P.L.R. 856, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 168, 1932 Cr.C. 154, Ind Rul. 1932 Lah. 224; Mir Alam, 35 Cr.L.J. 1459, 151 I.C. 970, 35 P.L.R. 300, 1934 Cr.C. 174, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 95; Chinnaswamy, 1933 M.W.N. 550; Paladagu Lakshminarayana v. Tadiboyina, 33 Cr.L.J. 765, 139 I.C. 343, A.I.R. 1932 Mad 502, 1932 M.W.N. 634, 63 M.L.J. 101, 1932 Cr.C. 506, 36 M.L.W. 390, Ind Rul. 1932 Mad 667; Gorrepaty Ramasubbayya, 39 Cr.L.J. 715, 176 I.C. 182, 47 M.L.W. 486, 1938 M.W.N. 417, 11 R.M. 45, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 529, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 403. There is thus a conflict of opinion on this point.

208. (1) The Magistrate shall, when the accused appears or is brought before him, proceed to hear the complainant (if any), and take in manner hereinafter provided all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution or in behalf of the accused, or as may be called for by the Magistrate.
- (2) The accused shall be at liberty to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution, and in such case the prosecutor may re-examine them.

(3) If the complainant or officer conducting the prosecution, or the accused, applies to the Magistrate to issue process to compel the attendance of any witness or the production of any document or thing, the Magistrate shall issue such process unless, for reasons to be recorded, he deems it unnecessary to do so.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to require a Presidency Magistrate to record his reasons.

695A. "Hear the complainant":—It is not the examination of the complainant that is necessary under cl (1) of this section, but only that he shall be heard—Santiram, 30 Cr.L.J. 942 (943), A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 229, 118 I.C. 572, Ind. Rul 1929 Cal. 668. The informant in a case which has been investigated by the Police is not necessarily the complainant—Kasem Molla, 42 O.L.J. 114, 26 Cr.L.J. 1560, 90 I.C. 440, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 410.

696. Remand of accused before taking evidence:—A person arrested under a warrant should be brought promptly before the Magistrate, and the Magistrate has then no authority to further detain him in custody or remand him to prison, without sufficient cause—Abdul Kadir v. Magistrate, 20 WR 23. If from the absence of the witnesses or from any reasonable cause, it becomes necessary or advisable to defer the inquiry, the Magistrate instead of immediately examining the complainant and his witnesses, as required by this section, may remand the accused person. If there is some evidence available and further evidence is forthcoming, it may be desirable to postpone the inquiry for a short period in order that when commenced it may be continuous. But the fact that there is or may be a great body of evidence forthcoming against the accused, is not a ground of detention for an inordinate period—Manikam, 6 Mad 63. Similarly, where there is no evidence at all to begin with, a Magistrate will not be justified in remanding the prisoner, in the expectation that evidence might turn up—Purna Chandra, 4 B.L.R. App 1.

697. Taking evidence produced:—In every inquiry into a Sessions case, it is the duty of the committing Magistrate to make a full and careful inquiry and to record the whole evidence in the case. He should do so even when the accused has made a confession, as confessions are in many cases retracted at the trial—Mahadu, Ratanlal 842. The Magistrate is bound to take all such evidence as may be produced (1) in support of the prosecution, (2) on behalf of the accused and (3) as may be called for by the Magistrate. If the Magistrate does not take that evidence, he errs, unless he can justify his procedure on the ground that the evidence of such and such witness is obviously irrelevant or that he considers that fact in issue proved one way or the other by the evidence already produced—Durga Dutt, 10 A.L.J. 144, 13 Cr.L.J. 433. The prosecutor is bound to produce all evidence in his favour directly bearing on the charge, and to call those witnesses who prove their connection with the transaction in question and are able to give important information, unless the prosecutor has a reasonable belief that they will not speak the truth—Dhunnoo, 8 Cal. 121 (124, 125). The prosecutor should not refuse to call or put into the witness box any witness for the prosecution merely because the evidence of such witness might in some respects be favourable to the defence—Durga, 16 All 84 (F.B.). The duty of the Public Prosecutor is to represent not the police but the Crown. It is his duty to call all witnesses who can throw any light on the inquiry, whether they support the prosecution theory or the defence theory—Brahmadeo, 1 P.L.T. 161, 54 I.C. 241, 21 Cr.L.J. 33. But if the prosecutor is of opinion that a witness is a false witness or is likely to give false testimony, he is not bound to call that witness—Durga, 16 All 84; Stanton, 14 All. 521; Bankhandi, 15 All 6. See Note 893.

If all the witnesses are not called for the prosecution without sufficient cause, the Court may properly draw an inference adverse to the prosecution—Dhunnoo, 8 Cal. 121 (125). But no corresponding inference will be drawn against the accused for non-production of his witness. He may rely on the witnesses for the prosecution or call his own witnesses or meet the charge in any other way he chooses—Dhunnoo, 8 Cal. 121 (125); Ashaf Ali, 21 C.W.N. 1152, 19 Cr.L.J. 81. Whether the defence produces no evidence, and the case has to be decided upon the evidence for the prosecution, it is the committing Magistrate's duty to make some investigation into the truth of the story of the accused, before he makes an order for commitment. In such a case, if the police does not send up all the material witnesses, it is the duty of the committing Magistrate to call and examine them himself in order to determine which side was speaking the truth—Ram Pershad, 26 Cr.L.J. 1589 (1592) (Pat.).

The Magistrate is competent to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses in order to consider whether the witnesses are credible or not—Bai Mahalaxmi, 17 Bom.L.R. 910, 16 Cr.L.J. 747.

"All such evidence":—It is not correct to say that the Magistrate has absolutely no option but to hear the entire evidence on both sides, and that he cannot commit the case to the Sessions unless he has done so. The prosecution can place before the Court all the evidence on which they wish to rely, but after evidence has been taken, which is sufficient to make out a prima facie case, it is not necessary to call further evidence. Similarly, if there is a mass of evidence tending to prove the same point it is not necessary that all such evidence should be produced in the Magistrate's Court before the charge is framed. Notice of all evidence to be produced in the Sessions Court ought, however, to be given to the accused at the trial, otherwise he would be prejudiced. The mere fact that some evidence is not produced till proceedings in the Court of Session can in no way prejudice the accused if he has notice of it—Jhabwala, 34 Cr.L.J. 957 (971), 145 I.C. 481, 1933 A.L.J. 799, A.I.R. 1933 All 690, 1933 Cr.C. 1202. See Chhedammi, 36 Cr.L.J. 175, 152 I.C. 428, 11 O.W.N. 308. The Lahore High Court dissented from the view expressed above. Rangi Lal, J. held: "Section 208 itself lays down that the Magistrate is bound to take not only all the evidence produced in support of the prosecution, but also that produced on behalf of the accused and is himself entitled to call for further evidence. The accused cannot be in a position to produce all this evidence until he has heard all the evidence against him. The Magistrate cannot be in a position to call for further evidence until the parties have placed all their evidence before him. It seems to me that the intention of the Legislature is that the Magistrate should make as full an inquiry as possible and not only a summary inquiry before committing a case to the Court of Session"—Sher Bahadur, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 667 (671), 15 Lah. 331, 36 Cr.L.J. 169, 152 I.C. 673, 1934 Cr.C. 990. This view of law seems to have been modified in Niamat, 37 Cr.L.J. 742, 162 I.C. 976, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 533, 17 Lah. 176, 38 P.L.R. 421, 1936 Cr.C. 586 (F.B.), where it has been held that a consideration of sub-sec. (3) of this section appears to show clearly that it is unnecessary to produce all the evidence in the Court of the Committing Magistrate. There are also, no doubt, many cases in which it is desirable that the prosecution should not be compelled to place before the Committing Magistrate's Court every detail of the evidence which they propose to lead in the Sessions Court. But there is no justification in law for abstaining from examining in the Committing Magistrate's Court the principal witnesses for the prosecution without whose evidence the case against the accused cannot be proved—Nandram, 36 Cr.L.J. 563 (564), 154 I.C. 455, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 31, 1935 Cr.C. 160, following Sher Bahadur, supra; Raban Lalu Shaikh v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 618, 175 I.C. 324, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 97, 10 R.S. 295, 32 S.L.R. 709, distinguishing Nur Khan v. Emp., 24 S.L.R. 96, 120 I.C. 520, A.I.R. 1930 Sind 99, 1930 Cr.C. 282, 31 Cr.L.J. 117, Ind. Rul. 1930 Sind 24. In a recent case a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court has held that a Magistrate who, under Chap. XVIII, Cr. P. C., is enquiring into a case triable by the Court of Session or High Court, and to whom, before the prosecution evidence is closed, it appears that the case is one which ought to be tried by the Court of Session or High Court, is not empowered under sec. 347, Cr. P. C. (subject to the production of defence witnesses under sec. 212), to commit the accused for such trial without completing the rest of the prosecution evidence, and that he is bound to record the rest of the evidence for the prosecution under sec. 208, Cr. P. C., and then commit—Asghar, 37 Cr.L.J. 337 (341), 160 I.C. 856, A.I.R. 1936 All 134, 1935 A.L.J. 1321, 1936 Cr.C. 134 (F.B.).

A Magistrate should not treat a prosecution witness as an accused person and should not record her evidence in jail instead of examining her in open Court or at his house if he found that more convenient—Ghirras, 34 Cr L J. 1009 (1012), 145 I.C. 470, 10 O.W.N. 1108, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 263, 1933 Cr.C. 592.

Evidence for the accused.—The Magistrate is not empowered to frame a charge or make an order for commitment until he has taken all such evidence as the accused may produce or is prepared to produce before him for hearing—Ahmadi, 20 All. 264; Muhammad Hadi, 26 All 177 (178); Jaswant Singh, 46 All 137, 21 A.L.J. 911, 81 I.C. 112, 25 Cr L.J. 624, A.I.R. 1924 All. 317. The provision in this section to take evidence on behalf of the accused is mandatory. It is essential that the defence evidence if tendered should be considered, because the Magistrate has got the power to cancel the charge if he considers that there are not sufficient grounds for committing the accused. Where the committing Magistrate failed to examine the witnesses named by the accused, held that the commitment must be quashed—Nga Khaing, 6 Rang. 531, 30 Cr L.J. 1, 112 I.C. 769, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 299.

Under Chap XVIII an accused person can offer defence at two stages, ie, under sec. 208 (1) as of right and under sec. 212 at the discretion of the Magistrate—Fazal v. Emp, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 389 (390), I.L.R. 1940 Lah. 151.

698. Sub-section (2)—Right of cross-examination:—Under this sub-section the accused has a right to cross examine the witnesses for the prosecution. Refusal by a Magistrate to allow the accused to cross examine the prosecution witnesses during the inquiry, is arbitrary and improper. The depositions of the prosecution witnesses during the inquiry are not to be deemed as “duly taken” under sec 288 if the accused had not an opportunity to cross-examine them, and cannot be treated as evidence at the Sessions trial—Sagai, 21 Cal 642.

The procedure of this chapter differs from the procedure of Chap XXI (trial of warrant cases). Under that chapter, cross-examination is allowed only after the frame of charge. See sec 256. But in commitment proceedings, the accused has the right to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses under this section, before the proceedings have reached the stage in which it may be necessary to draw up a charge—Surya Narain, 5 C.W.N. 110 (112); and the accused has no right to have his cross-examination conducted after the frame of charge—Baldeo, 19 O.C. 239, 18 Cr L.J. 105. It is not a proper procedure to refuse to allow cross-examination before a charge is drawn up. The Magistrate may refuse cross examination before frame of charge in proceedings under Chap XXI, but not in proceedings under this chapter—Durga Dutt, 10 A.L.J. 144, 13 Cr.L.J. 443 (445). And so, where an application for cross examination was made before the charge was framed and before the Magistrate had decided to commit the case to the Court of Session, he was bound to allow the accused to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses—Jyotsna Nath, 51 Cal 442 (445). The proper time for cross-examination of of a witness in an inquiry under this chapter is in the ordinary course immediately after the examination-in-chief of that particular witness. As each witness is examined he should then and there be cross-examined and re-examined and allowed to go home; and it is not a convenient procedure to allow cross-examination to be reserved until after the examination-in-chief of all the prosecution witnesses has been finished—Durga Dutt, 10 A.L.J. 144, 13 Cr L.J. 443 (445); Saadat Mian, 6 Pat 329, 28 Cr L.J. 709; Mohamed Kasim, 14 M.L.T. 532, 15 Cr L.J. 29 (30); Arnold, 5 Bur L.T. 239, 13 Cr L.J. 877 (882); Tambi, 11 Bur L.T. 144, 19 Cr.L.J. 327. A Magistrate does not act illegally if he asks the accused to cross-examine each prosecution witness after his examination-in-chief, and on the accused's refusal to do so, refuses the accused's prayer for cross-examination after the end of the examination-in-chief of all the prosecution witnesses—G. V. Raman, 57 Cal 44, 33 C.W.N. 535, 30 Cr L.J. 1107, 119 I.C. 808, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 593 (dissenting from Jogendra v. Motilal, 39 Cal 885, 16 C.W.N. 1135, where it was held that it was open to the Magistrate to allow cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses even after a charge was drawn up). See this last case cited under sec. 213 (2).

But the Magistrate, however, has the discretion to allow the accused to postpone the cross-examination of witnesses in suitable circumstances. Thus, where the accused have applied for copies of statements made by prosecution witnesses to the Police during the investigation, with a view to cross-examine the witnesses, and the Magistrate has ordered such copies to be furnished under the proviso to sec. 162 (1), the Magistrate is bound to postpone the cross-examination of the witnesses until such copies are furnished to the accused and to afford the accused an opportunity to cross-examine after receiving such copies. Omission to do so constitutes a direct violation of the statutory provisions of sec. 208 (2) and vitiates the commitment—Saadat Mian, 6 Pat 329, 28 Cr.L.J. 709 (712), 103 I.C. 597, 8 P.L.T. 780, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 243; Nabin Chandra v. Munshi Mander, 6 Pat. 606, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 248, 8 P.L.T. 590, 101 I.C. 707.

Where a case was at first begun as a warrant case and the accused had not cross-examined the witnesses, because in a warrant case he could reserve his rights to do so until after the framing of the charge, but after hearing the prosecution evidence the Magistrate came to the conclusion that the case was a Sessions case, and thereupon converted the proceeding into one under this chapter, held that the accused had a right to have the witnesses recalled for cross-examination, as he had been prejudiced by the sudden change of procedure—Dhamarcha, 19 A.L.J. 463, 23 Cr.L.J. 496. Similarly, where the prosecution started first of all as a warrant case, but the Magistrate then made up his mind that it was a Sessions case and proceeded to deal with the case from the beginning as though it were to end in a commitment, and allowed the defence to reserve cross-examination, but later on he committed the case to the Sessions without giving to the defence the promised opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses and adduce evidence, held that the commitment must be quashed—Nanooram v. Fulchand, 57 Cal. 945, 32 Cr.L.J. 182 (184), A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 754.

A Magistrate has no power to curtail the cross-examination of witnesses by directing the counsel for the accused not to put more than 6 to 8 questions to each witness—Durga Dutt, 10 A.L.J. 144, 13 Cr.L.J. 443 (445). But see Walidino, 23 S.L.R. 340, 117 I.C. 773, 30 Cr.L.J. 845, 1929 Cr.C. 337, A.I.R. 1929 Sind 137.

The procedure of this section is to be followed in cases under sec. 347. See sec. 347 as now amended, and Note 1003 thereunder.

699. Sub-section (3)—Summoning witnesses:—Before committing the accused to the Sessions, the Magistrate should, if so required by the accused, compel the attendance of witnesses for the defence. If he commits an accused to the Sessions without examining the witnesses applied for under this section, the order of commitment is invalid—Muhammad Hadi, 26 All. 177 (178). But the Magistrate has also a discretion to refuse to issue process, if he thinks it unnecessary to do so. Sub-section (1) contemplates the production of evidence by the prosecution or by the accused without the aid of the Magistrate; sub-sec. (3) contemplates the intervention of the Magistrate to secure the attendance of witnesses; and a Magistrate is not required to record the evidence of witnesses whom, in the exercise of the discretion given by sub-sec. (3) he has deemed it unnecessary to summon. He may refuse process where there has been an inordinate delay in asking for it, e.g., when the accused made the application for process not until the charge was about to be drawn up—Kangaya, 36 Mad. 321 (323, 324), 23 M.L.J. 368. The purpose of committal proceedings is not merely to place on record the case for the prosecution, but the purpose of the committal proceedings is to commit to the Court of Session for trial an offence which, after having heard the evidence for the prosecution and for the defence, the Magistrate appears to think, has been committed. But while it is intended that the prosecution should be allowed to adduce all material evidence in support of the prosecution case, so it is intended, to be fair, that the accused shall also be entitled to adduce all material evidence in their defence. It is true that under sec. 208 (3), Cr. P. C., a Magistrate can, for reasons to be recorded, refuse to issue process to compel the attendance of any witness. But it does not mean that the Magistrate shall refuse the application of the accused to call witnesses because these witnesses can be called hereafter in the Court of Session. While it is true that convenience and expedition are factors to be considered in the trial of a case, it must be remembered that beyond even these considerations is the even more important consideration that justice should be done, and the necessity for expedition should not be allowed to deprive the accused of a reasonable opportunity to call evidence in defence on a charge of an offence of which, at the outset of the proceedings, he had no knowledge he would be called upon to meet—Jashanmal Gulrajani v. Emp, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 222 (224), 40 Cr.L.J. 818, 183 I.C. 619, 12 RS 64. But the Magistrate may reject the application for summoning witnesses if it is made on the date fixed for passing the order of commitment—Sarath, 42 Cal. 608, 19 C.W.N. 335.

If the Magistrate refuses to issue process he must record his reasons for so doing; if he omits to record reasons, he acts illegally, and the order that is passed subsequently is unsustainable in law—Kanda Raja v. Sangaraja, 24 M.L.W. 713, 27 Cr.L.J. 1327, 98 I.C. 399, A.I.R. 1927 Mad 162, 38 M.L.T. 14. If he records his reasons for exercising his discretion in rejecting the application of the accused to summon the defence witnesses, the order of the Magistrate cannot be held to be illegal; and, therefore, the order of commitment cannot be set aside under sec 215, as no point of law arises—Saadat Mian, 6 Pat 329, 28 Cr.L.J. 709 (713). See also Swamunatha v. Kuppuswami given in Note 712.

But if the Magistrate issues process for the attendance of witnesses, he is bound to examine them and cannot refuse to do so. Therefore, where on the application of the accused the Magistrate summoned witnesses for the defence and consented to make a local inspection, but under a direction from the Sessions Judge committed the accused for trial without examining those witnesses and without making the local inspection, it was held that the direction of the Sessions Judge was an improper interference with the Magistrate's discretion, and that the commitment was illegal and should be set aside—Mathura, 1906 A.W.N. 306, 4 Cr.L.J. 452.

A Magistrate is, under this section, bound to take steps for the production of documents wanted by the accused unless he deems it unnecessary to do so—Golam, 34 Cr.L.J. 868, 144 I.C. 930, A.I.R. 1933 Cal 181, 1933 Cr.C. 230.

The provisions of this clause must be read subject to the provisions of sec 204 (3). In a private prosecution the complainant is under a legal obligation to pay the process-fees before summons is issued, and the Court has a right to insist upon those fees being paid in advance before issue of process—Ram Dulari v. Mushtaq, 3 Luck 363, 29 Cr.L.J. 664.

It is probable that the discretion given to the Magistrate under cl (3) of this section permits of refusal of process to compel the attendance of any witness if process-fees are not paid—Mg San Nyain, 27 Cr.L.J. 415, 93 I.C. 79, A.I.R. 1926 Rang 13, 4 Bur.L.J. 187.

209. (1) When the evidence referred to in section 208,

When accused person sub-sections (1) and (3), has been taken, to be discharged. and he has (if necessary) examined the accused for the purpose of enabling him to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him, such Magistrate shall, if he finds that there are not sufficient grounds for committing the accused person for trial, record his reasons and discharge him, unless it appears to the Magistrate that such person should be tried before himself or some other Magistrate, in which case he shall proceed accordingly.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prevent a Magistrate from discharging the accused at any previous stage of the case, if, for reasons to be recorded by such Magistrate, he considers the charge to be groundless.

700. Examination of the accused:—Cf Note 974 under sec. 342. The object of examining the accused is to enable a Judge to ascertain from time to time, particularly if the accused is undefended, what explanation he may offer regarding any facts stated by a witness appearing against him, so that these facts should not stand unexplained—Hussein Buksh, 6 Cal. 96. But the accused should not be examined for the purpose of making him confess his guilt or admit facts which may go to incriminate him—Bhairab, 2 C.W.N. 702; Rangi, 10 Mad. 295. He should not be examined for the purpose of filling up gaps in the evidence for the prosecution—Basanta Kumar, 26 Cal. 49, nor for the purpose of supplementing the evidence where it is deficient—Chimbash, 1 C.L.R. 436. Both under secs. 209 and 342, it is not proper for the Court in examining the accused to seek in any way to entrap him into admission which may fill up gaps in the prosecution case; but the answers given by the accused in answer to straightforward questions put by the Court may no doubt be taken into account under sec. 342 (3) for convicting the accused—Phurlai, 9 Pat. 504, 1930 Cr.C. 926 (927). The accused must be examined as an accused and not as a witness. Where on a complaint against two persons for an offence, the committing Magistrate inquired into the case against one of them and examined the other as a witness, the second accused could not be committed to the Sessions in the absence of a preliminary inquiry into his case and without examining him as an accused—Bai Mahalaxmi, 17 Bom L.R. 910, 16 Cr.L.J. 747. It is not left to the discretion of the committing Magistrate as to whether he should examine the accused or not; he is bound to examine the accused for the purpose of enabling him to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him. If the Magistrate commits the accused without examination, the commitment is irregular but it ought not to be quashed unless the irregularity has occasioned a failure of justice—Pandara, 23 Mad. 636 (637). It cannot be said that the omission to examine the accused in the committing Court is a disregard of an express provision of law and therefore illegal—Ajhar Mondal, 39 C.W.N. 289, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 605, 62 Cal 475, following Dinn, 83 I.C. 895 (Sind) and dissenting from Pandara, 23 Mad 636.

The accused should not be ordered to file any written statement—Chinnasami v. Veeriah, 2 Weir 255 (257); but if he chooses to make any statement the Court should not refuse to allow him to do so—Abdul Guffoor, 10 C.L.R. 54. If the Magistrate considers the written statement, it must be taken that he considered the statement as that of the accused's explanation of certain circumstances appearing in the evidence against him—Chinnasami v. Veeriah, supra.

701. Duty of Magistrate—'Sufficient grounds':—The words "sufficient ground of commitment" are ambiguous, and have led to a difference of opinion among the High Courts as to whether the Magistrate should weigh the evidence and decide whether the conviction of the accused is certain, or whether the Magistrate should merely see if a prima facie case has been made out and there is a possibility of conviction.

On the one hand, it has been laid down that in deciding whether there are sufficient grounds for commitment, the Magistrate is to see whether there are credible witnesses to facts which, if believed by a jury, would justify the conviction of the accused, but it is not the duty of the Magistrate to weigh the evidence. If he proceeds to weigh the evidence, to accept some statements and reject others, to deal with probabilities or to draw inferences as to knowledge or intention, and to decide whether the guilt of the accused has or has not been conclusively proved, he is in reality dealing with the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused and is usurping the functions of the trial Court. He must not in any way encroach upon the functions of the jury—National Bank v. Kothandarama, 14 M.L.T. 200, 14 Cr.L.J. 529; Akbar Ali v. Raja Bahadur, 24 A.L.J. 133, 27 Cr.L.J. 2 (4); Chinnammal v. Konda Reddi, 28 Cr.L.J. 120, 38 M.L.T. 135. The Magistrate has not to pronounce a definite judgment on the question whether the accused is guilty or innocent. That is a function reserved for the Court of Session. The only question he has to decide is whether there are sufficient grounds for committing the accused for trial, i.e. whether there is or is not sufficient legal evidence or reasonable ground of suspicion—Fattu v. Fattu, 26 All. 564 (568). The words 'sufficient grounds of commitment' do not mean sufficient grounds of conviction, but evidence which is sufficient to put the accused on his trial; and such a case arises when credible witnesses make statements which if believed would sustain a conviction. The weighing of their testimony with regard to improbabilities and apparent discrepancies is more properly a function of the Court which is to try the case than that of the committing Magistrate—Namdev, 11 Bom 372; Varjuandas, 27 Bom 84; Hazara v. Bushen Singh, 14 P.R. 1908, 8 Cr.L.J. 263. When the Legislature speaks of sufficient grounds for committing for trial, it should not be supposed to have spoken of sufficient grounds of conviction. The intention of the Legislature is to make a distinction between grounds of commitment and grounds of conviction. Satisfactory proof of the guilt of the accused is the ground for conviction. Satisfactory evidence to go to trial must be regarded as the ground for committing for trial. What the inquiring Magistrate has got to try and determine is not whether the case has been made out by the prosecution but only whether there is a case for trial. There is always a case for trial when the evidence is of such a nature that the guilt of the accused can be held to be proved or disproved only as the result of the valuing and the weighing of evidence. But if the evidence be of such a nature that no reasonable person and no tribunal, judge, or jury would ever on the evidence hold the accused guilty, it follows that there is no case for trial, and it is then a case for the inquiring Magistrate to discharge—Mania Manicka, 48 Mad 874, 49 M.L.J. 155, 26 Cr.L.J. 1570. What the Magistrate has to consider is not whether the conviction of the accused is reasonably certain, but whether there is evidence on which a conviction is possible in law—Virjuandas, 27 Bom. 84. Where the prosecution produced a good deal of direct evidence, it is no function of the Magistrate to weigh the evidence, but he should commit the accused person for trial. It is the duty of the Magistrate to commit when the evidence for the prosecution is sufficient to make out a prima facie case against the accused—Maulu, 4 Lah 69, 5 Lah.L.J. 276. If the Magistrate finds that there is some evidence against the accused, though there is other evidence on the record which is in his favour, the Magistrate should leave it to the Sessions Judge to decide whether the guilt of the accused has or has not been proved, instead of weighing the evidence and deciding whether the evidence is unreliable or insufficient—Muhammad Khan, 33 P.L.R. 1068, 34 Cr.L.J. 39. The test which should be applied to decide whether a committal ought or ought not to be made on the facts is this—assuming that the whole of the evidence telling against the accused is true, is there a case which a Judge at a trial could leave to a jury? If the evidence is such that a Judge would have been bound to rule that there was no evidence on which a jury could convict, then a committal ought not to be made. If there was any evidence which called for an answer, however great the preponderance in favour of the prisoner might be—then the committal was proper—Sheobux Ram, 9 C.W.N. 829 (839), 2 Cr.L.J. 534; Mihu Lal, A.I.R. 1940 All 396 (397), 1940 A.L.J. 357.

On the other hand, there are some cases in which it has been laid down that a Magistrate is competent to weigh the evidence and to decide whether it is credible or not. The power given to Magistrates under this section extends to weighing of evidence, and the expression "sufficient grounds" must be understood in a wide sense, so as to indicate such evidence as would justify a conviction—Lachman v. Juala, 5 All 161 (163). But the same High Court held that it was not a Magistrate making an inquiry into a case triable exclusively by the Court of Session to weigh the evidence or to give the accused the benefit of doubt—Alopi Din, A.I.R. 1935 All 366 (368), 157 I.C. 205, 1935 A.L.J. 653, 1935 Cr.C. 384, 36 Cr.L.J. 1103. Notwithstanding direct evidence adduced against the accused, it is not incompetent to a Magistrate to examine the credibility of the evidence to see whether the prosecution case is improbable and the evidence unreliable—Rash Behari, 12 C.W.N. 117; Bai Parbati, 35 Bom. 163; Munshi Mander v. Karu, 6 P.L.T. 146, 25 Cr.L.J. 1089, 81 I.C. 913, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 279; Tinkoweri, 1 P.L.T. 153, 21 Cr.L.J. 328; Naramban, 15 L.W. 552, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 195; Sultani, 1909 P.R. 10, 11 Cr.L.J. 18; Mir Abdulla, 1910 P.L.R. 215, 11 Cr.L.J. 751. See also Inoyia v. Harbans, 34 Cr.L.J. 1201, 146 I.C. 160, A.I.R. 1933 All. 482, 1933 Cr.C. 827, 1933 A.L.J. 1115. The Magistrate has discretion and power to weigh the evidence in order to see whether the case is a fit one for the jury to decide or whether there is no prima facie case for the accused to meet—Thiru Vandaya Trevan, 42 M.L.J.

49, 23 Cr.L.J. 209, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 43. It is open to the committing Magistrate to form his opinion with regard to the credibility of the witnesses called before him; but, of course, it is not his duty to closely criticize their evidence—Tarapada v. Kalipada, 51 Cal. 849 (852), 28 C.W.N. 587, 83 I.C. 677, 26 Cr.L.J. 117, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 639; Fattu v. Fattu, 26 All 564 (567). Where charges exclusively triable by a Court of Session are brought before a Magistrate and some evidence is offered in support thereof, it is not his duty in all cases to commit the accused to the Sessions. The Magistrate should exercise his discretion, and after weighing the evidence decide whether or not he should try the case himself—Hari Das, 37 C.L.J. 34, 24 Cr.L.J. 674, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 108; Kalyan Singh, 21 All 265. It is not the function of the Magistrate to act merely as machines for recording the evidence, and at the end of the record, to automatically commit the accused to the Sessions. It is his duty to sift the evidence and to see whether it is reasonably clear that upon the evidence the accused persons stands a chance of being convicted if committed to the Sessions Court—Chandrakasa, 1931 M.W.N. 116. A Magistrate is competent to consider the credibility and weigh the probabilities of the evidence, but in this consideration his discretion is limited, and in a matter of reasonable doubt, he must not rely upon his own opinion; in fact, he must not encroach upon the function of a Court of trial. Furthermore, he must keep before him the question whether there are fair grounds for concluding that the accused is guilty upon the evidence. In other words, where there is a prima facie case, upon evidence reasonably credible by a Court of trial, he should commit—Maung Hnin v. Maung Po, 4 Rang 471, 28 Cr.L.J. 219 (221). In this case the Judges have also expressed the opinion that it is impossible to lay down any general rule or rules which must be applied in every case and that it is extremely difficult to arrive at a formula which will be of assistance in all circumstances. Each case must be decided upon its own particular facts—Ibid. It is the function of the Magistrate conducting the enquiry to weigh the evidence produced before him and not merely to isolate that which is directed against the accused and act upon it without any analysis of the remaining evidence. It is not the correct view that a Magistrate conducting an enquiry into a case triable by a Court of Session should not weigh the evidence produced before him before deciding whether to commit or discharge—a view which appears to be in direct conflict with the mandatory provisions of sec. 209, Cr. P. C.—Fazal Razak, A.I.R. 1937 Pesh. 12, 167 I.C. 602, 38 Cr.L.J. 427, 1937 A.I.Cr.R. 115, 1937 Pesh. L.J. 12, 9 R.Pesh. 88.

The question of the duty of a Committing Magistrate, where he has doubts about the real nature of the offence, and the quality of the evidence, is really well-settled, and should cause in the vast majority of cases no difficulty whatever. One may place the classes of cases into three categories. There is the case where the evidence is prima facie so clear that nobody can entertain any doubt that the matter ought to be tried. There is, on the other hand, the class of cases where the evidence is so palpably tainted, absurd, incredible and, as it has been described on occasions, groundless, that nobody could doubt that it would be a hardship and unjust to an accused person to allow the matter to go any further. There is the third category, which, of course, provides debatable ground, where the evidence is conflicting, and lays itself open to suspicion, but where, on the other hand, it may be true, and may commend itself to certain tribunals, the Magistrate, even though he may have reason to doubt whether if he were trying the case, he should convict, has no right to substitute his judgment for the final judgment of the Court indicated by law for the trial, and to arrive at a final decision dismissing the case in the way in which he would do if he were the trial Court. If the evidence is balanced, however unevenly in his opinion, then it is a matter which has to be tried, and it is his duty to commit it for trial—Allah Mahr, 28 Cr.L.J. 281 (284), 100 I.C. 361, 25 A.L.J. 191, A.I.R. 1927 All 279, 49 All 443; Inoyia v. Harbans, 34 Cr.L.J. 1201, 146 I.C. 160, A.I.R. 1933 All 482, 1933 Cr.C. 827, 1933 A.L.J. 1115; Ishaq, 38 Cr.L.J. 659, 168 I.C. 958, 1937 A.L.J. 294, 1937 A.W.R. (H.C.) 261, 1937 A.Cr.C. 55, 9 R.A. 687, 1937 A.L.R. 431, A.I.R. 1937 All 373. It is competent to the committing Magistrate at any stage of the preliminary inquiry to discharge the accused if he considers the charge to be groundless for reasons to be recorded by him. The committing Magistrate is entitled to weigh and appreciate the evidence led on behalf of the prosecution and on behalf of the defence, and if on a consideration of this evidence he is of opinion that there are not sufficient grounds for committing the accused for trial, in other words, there is no case which would fairly justify or sustain a conviction at the trial or no evidence on which any reasonable person can hold the accused to be guilty, then it is his duty to discharge the accused. If after a charge is framed and a list of further witnesses put in by the accused and the Magistrate after examining any such witnesses thinks that there are not sufficient grounds for committing the accused for trial, it is his duty to cancel the charge and discharge the accused. The expression "sufficient grounds" means, when credible witnesses make statements which, if believed, would sustain a conviction—Ramchandra, 36 CrLJ. 643 (649), 155 IC 101, AIR. 1935 Bom. 137, 37 BomLR 16, 7 RB 405, 59 Bom 125, 1935 CrC. 288 (FB), distinguishing Parashram Phika, 57 Bom 430, 143 IC. 289, AIR 1933 Bom 158, 1933 CrC 470, 34 CrLJ. 564, 35 BomLR 245, Ind Rul 1933 Bom 266. It is the clear duty of the Committing Magistrate to weigh the evidence of the witnesses who appear before him. If he does not, his proceedings are farcical and cross-examination or the examination of defence witnesses might as well be forbidden. He should not, of course, require in cases triable exclusively by the Court of Session, the same high standard of proof for the prosecution which he would require in cases which he can himself finally dispose of. If there merely exists in his mind a reasonable doubt as to the truth or otherwise of the evidence before him, he should commit the accused for trial and leave the Sessions Court to appreciate the evidence for itself. But this is not to say that he is precluded from finding that the prosecution case is false. If that is the only conclusion to which the evidence leads him, he would be failing in his manifest duty if he did not record his finding and discharge the accused. It is an important part of the duty of Committing Courts to prevent false cases and frivolous cases from occupying the time of the Court of Session both in the interests of the accused himself and in the interests of the Court of Session—Endapalle Ella Reddi, 38 CrLJ. 703 (705), 169 IC 102, 9 RM 687, 1937 MWN 324, 45 MLW 643. See also Puttu Mudali v Emp, 1938 MWN 819, 48 MLW 327. In order to satisfy himself whether he should commit the accused for trial by a Sessions Court the Magistrate is entitled to go into the evidence. His duty is to consider whether a conviction is possible in the case, and in order to come to that conclusion he is entitled to appreciate the evidence. But he must appreciate the evidence from that point of view only, and it is not within his province to consider the evidence merely from the point of view of the probability of a conviction resulting. It may be that a conviction is improbable. But if it is possible for a Court to take such a view of the evidence as to be able to found a conviction upon it, then it is the duty of the Magistrate to commit the accused for trial. If he refuses to commit, the grounds of the refusal should be stated (very generally) that no conviction is possible. The duty of the Sessions Court is to appreciate the evidence from the point of view of the correctness of the Magistrate's order of discharge, in other words, in order to see whether the basis of the Magistrate's of discharge (namely, the impossibility of any conviction resulting) is correct or not—Akberally Tayaballi v. Alimohamed Abdul Hussain, AIR. 1939 Bom 372, 41 BomLR. 749, 40 CrLJ. 951, 184 IC 282, 12 RB 159. All Magistrates who have committal powers should clearly understand what the task is which they sit down to do. They are not to try the case, but to prepare for a trial elsewhere. A judgment is not required of him but only a brief statement of the reasons why the case is committed for trial. What is required, is a correct and careful preparation for the trial in the Court of Session: and of such preparation an important part is a well considered charge—Ghousbux, AIR 1935 Sind 34 (37), 28 SLR. 304. A Magistrate ought not to take upon himself the responsibility of trying a case which taking a reasonable view of the effect of the depositions must be regarded as involving the trial of the accused for a grave offence or one in which complicated or difficult questions of law or fact arise. The function of a Magistrate is to dispose of petty cases, and he ought to commit to Sessions, cases of a . . .

or serious nature which he is neither by training nor experience qualified to try—Maung Chit Sein, 34 Cr.L.J. 187, 141 I.C. 256, 10 Rang 495, A.I.R. 1932 Rang. 193, 1932 Cr.C. 935, Ind. Rul. 1933 Rang. 18.

702. When Magistrate should commit:—(1) Where there is credible evidence which if believed shows that there is a prima facie case which ought to be tried at the Sessions, the Magistrate should commit the case to the Sessions and not try it himself—Munisami, 15 Mad 39; Tarapada v. Kalipada, 51 Cal. 849 (852); Hazara v. Bishen Singh, 1908 P.R. 14; National Bank v. Kothandarama, 14 M.L.T. 200, 14 Cr.L.J. 529; Jamal Mahomed v. Moideen, 1911 M.W.N. 852, 12 Cr.L.J. 20; Anonymous, 2 Weir 652 (653); Namdev, 11 Bom. 372; Makhni v. Farzand Ali, 18 A.L.J. 232, 21 Cr.L.J. 318

(2) Where the question of discharge or commitment becomes a matter of weighing probabilities, the Magistrate ought rather to leave the decision to the Sessions Court, than to order a discharge of the accused on the ground that he ought to have the benefit of doubt—Fattu v. Fattu, 26 All 564 (570); Akbar Ali v. Raja Bahadur, 24 A.L.J. 133, 27 Cr.L.J. 2; Allah Mahr, 49 All 443, 25 A.L.J. 191, 28 Cr.L.J. 281; Makhni v. Farzand Ali, 18 A.L.J. 232, 21 Cr.L.J. 318; Bai Parvati, 35 Bom. 163; Namdev, 11 Bom. 372; Burjorji, 30 Bom.L.R. 639; Nga Hmyin, 19 Cr.L.J. 102; Aidas Tekchand v. Saban, 15 S.L.R. 1, 22 Cr.L.J. 570.

(3) Where a person is charged with a Sessions offence and there is some evidence to support it, the Magistrate ought to commit the accused to the Sessions, and should not disregard the graver charge (considering the prosecution story to be an exaggeration) and convict the accused of other minor offences immediately connected with the graver offence—Mir Moze Ali, 23 C.W.N. 1031, 21 Cr.L.J. 10. A Magistrate ought not to take upon himself the responsibility of trying a case which, regarding the effect of the depositions, must be regarded as involving a grave offence or an offence involving complicated questions of law and fact, which the Magistrate is neither by training nor by experience qualified to try—Maung Chit, 10 Rang. 495, 1932 Cr.C. 935 (936). In the case of doubt it would be more proper for the Magistrate to commit the case for trial to the Sessions Court which can fully decide and sentence the accused according to its decision on the points involved in the case—Mangal Singh v. Emp., 1 P.R. 1893 (Cr.) (F.B.). But under sec. 209, Cr. P. C., the Magistrate has jurisdiction to decide whether the offence is triable by the Sessions Court or is triable by himself. Where there is nothing to show that the Magistrate snatched at any jurisdiction or perversely held that the offence was one triable by himself in order to minimize the offence, it is more a case of an honest difference of opinion on a subject which is always open to doubt and difference of opinion and the Magistrate cannot be held to have been incompetent to try the case—Kirpal Singh v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 992 (994), 170 I.C. 780, 39 P.L.R. 444, 10 R.L. 148, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 217.

(4) Where the evidence discloses a circumstance of aggravation which makes the offence one cognizable by a higher Court, it becomes the duty of the Magistrate to use the proper procedure for sending the case to the higher Court and not to try it himself. It is an evasion of law to treat an aggravated offence as an ordinary offence, and thus to introduce a different jurisdiction or a lower scale of punishment—Gundaya, 13 Bom 502; Jamal Mahomed v. Moideen, 1911 M.W.N. 852, 12 Cr.L.J. 20; Paramananda, 10 Cal. 85; Ayyan, 24 Mad 675

703. When Magistrate should not commit:—(1) Where no prima facie case has been made out—Munisami, 15 Mad. 39 (40); Chinnasami v. Veeriah, 2 Weir 255; Maung Chit, 10 Rang 495, 1932 Cr.C. 935 (936).

(2) When the Magistrate is clearly of opinion that the evidence for the prosecution is on the whole untrustworthy and that there is no reasonable probability of the case ending in a conviction—Harbans v. Fakir Das, 7 C.W.N. 77; Tarapada v. Kalipada, 51 Cal 849; Fattu v. Fattu, 26 All 564 (570); Bai Parvati, 35 Bom 163; Lachman v. Juala, 5 All 161 (163); Thirumalai, 42 M.L.J. 49; Jamal v. Moideen, 1911 M.W.N. 852, 12 Cr.L.J. 20; Naramban 15 L.W. 552, A.I.R. 1922 Mad 195; Maulu, 4 Lah. 69; Dharam Singh v. Jyoti Prasad, 37 All. 355; Md. Abdul v. Baldeo, 44 All. 57; Akbar

Ali v. Raja Bahadur, 24 A.L.J. 133, 27 Cr.L.J. 2; Ganpat, 46 All 537 (538), 22 A.L.J. 411; Tinkowri, 1 P.L.T. 153, 55 I.C. 600; Aidas Tekchand v. Saban, 15 S.L.R. 1, 62 I.C. 586, 22 Cr.L.J. 570; Nga Hmyin, 1917 U.B.R. 3rd Qr. 29, 19 Cr.L.J. 102. If the Magistrate is satisfied that the charge is without foundation he is entitled, and indeed it is his duty, to discharge the accused, even though the statements of the prosecution if accepted at their face value might make out a prima facie case against the accused—Ganpat Lal, 46 All 537 (dissenting from Chitrang Lal v. Ram Lal, 1904 A.W.N. 5). Though in case of doubt the Magistrate may be justified in leaving the case for the jury to decide, still if he is convinced that the evidence is false, it is his duty to discharge the accused—Kasim Ali v. Sarada, 30 C.W.N. 336, 27 Cr.L.J. 509, 93 I.C. 973, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 528. But the Magistrate must exercise a proper discretion in ordering the discharge of any person charged with a sessions offence. It is not enough for the Magistrate merely to doubt some portions of the prosecution evidence. He must be satisfied that the prosecution will fail and rightly fail in the Sessions Court—Chhedda, 1 O.W.N. 402, 11 O.L.J. 664, 25 Cr.L.J. 1189.

(3) Where no evidence is forthcoming against the accused, owing to the absence of the prosecutor and the witnesses, and the case is not one in which the Magistrate ought to adjourn the inquiry the Magistrate should discharge the accused—Tuki Mahomed v. Kisto Lal, 15 W.R. 53.

(4) When the charge is not so serious as to justify a committal, the Magistrate should try the case himself instead of committing it to the Sessions—Maung Chit, 10 Rang. 495, 1932 Cr.C. 935 (936); Ahmed Shah, 1 S.L.R. 103. But if a Magistrate commits to the Court of Session a case which he himself has jurisdiction to try, he must give his reasons for so doing—Ghousbaksh, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 32, 167 I.C. 379, 38 Cr.L.J. 379, 9 R.S. 181, 31 S.L.R. 403; Sheomangal Pande v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 15, 40 Cr.L.J. 903, 184 I.C. 260, 1939 O.L.R. 596, 1939 O.W.N. 868. See also Note 718 (1) and Note 719, (4) and (5).

(5) It cannot be said that nose-cutting cases should, as a matter of course, be committed to the Court of Session for trial, although the Magistrate should always consider whether he ought not to commit—Ismail Umar v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 928, 177 I.C. 647, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 430, 40 Bom.L.R. 832, 11 R.B. 111.

704. Recording reasons:—A Magistrate discharging an accused person under this section should record his reasons for so doing. But if he omits to record reasons, it cannot be said that the order of discharge is illegal—Aung Min, 4 L.B.R. 362, 9 Cr.L.J. 370 (372). In all cases where a Magistrate discharges or commits, he should give his reasons for so doing, and it will be proper for the High Court to consider these reasons when deciding whether he has exercised his discretion correctly—Maung Htin v. Maung Po, 4 Rang. 471, 28 Cr.L.J. 219 (223). But the Magistrate is not authorised to write a judgment. All that he is empowered to do is to record reasons for a discharge, if he makes such an order, and to pass the order of discharge—Hait Ram v. Ganga Sahai, 40 All 615, 16 A.L.J. 486, 19 Cr.L.J. 706.

706. Sub-section (2)—Discharge at early stage:—Sub-section (2) relieves a Magistrate from the necessity of going on with an inquiry or trial when he is reasonably convinced on what has been already deposed to, that a criminal charge cannot be sustained—Dhanyibhai v. Pyarji, Ratanlal 201; Thirumalai Vandaya, 42 M.L.J. 49, 23 Cr.L.J. 209. The Magistrate can discharge the accused under this clause only if he considers the charge to be groundless. An order of discharge passed on the ground that no complaint has been made under sec. 195, is illegal. Since the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to take cognizance of the case without a complaint under sec. 195, he has no jurisdiction to pass an order of discharge under sec. 209 (2). Such an order is neither an order of discharge nor one of dismissal of complaint under sec. 203, and cannot be revised by the Sessions Judge under sec. 436. The order of the Magistrate amounts to an order that he declines to proceed with the case for want of jurisdiction—Subramania v. Swamikannu, 37 M.L.J. 547, 1933 Cr.C. 566 (569), 34 Cr.L.J. 800, 144 I.C. 519, 1933 M.W.N. 217, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 413, 1933 Cr.C. 366, Ind. Rul. 1933 Mad 424.

- When a Magistrate refuses to frame a charge under a particular section, it is in substance an order discharging the accused in respect of an offence under that section and is open to revision by the superior Courts under secs. 437 and 439, Cr. P. C.—Ramrao, 33 Cr.L.J. 558, 137 I.C. 904, A.I.R. 1932 Nag. 85, 15 N.L.J. 26, Ind. Rul. 1932 Nag. 72, 1932 Cr.C. 435.

"Groundless":—For the meaning of this word see Note 828 under sec. 253

707. Revision of order of discharge:—See secs. 436, 437 and the Notes thereunder. An order of discharge under this section is not a final order, and the offence against an accused person who has been discharged may be further inquired into by a Magistrate upon further evidence if it be forthcoming—Maung Htin v. Mg. Po, 4 Rang 471, 28 Cr.L.J. 219 (221). If an order of discharge is passed by a Presidency Magistrate, the High Court can interfere and direct a committal not merely by virtue of the power given by sec. 15 of the Charter Act but also by the powers conferred by sec. 439 of this Code—Varjivandas, 27 Bom. 84 (following Colville v. Krishore, 26 Cal. 746 and dissenting from Charoobala v. Barendra, 27 Cal. 126). Compare Note 682 under sec. 203.

707A. Fresh Complaint:—An accused was discharged under this section and the order of discharge was upheld by the Sessions Judge. The order of the Sessions Court, by which the application made by the Crown for a committal order, was dismissed, is a bar to the entertainment of a fresh complaint, since by accepting the complaint the Magistrate is virtually revising the orders of a Court of superior jurisdiction—Shah Mahomed, 28 Cr.L.J. 57, 99 I.C. 89, A.I.R. 1928 Sind 49. But see Abdul Ghani, 29 Cal. 412. See also Note 714.

210. (1) When, upon such evidence being taken and such examination (if any) being made, the Magistrate is satisfied that there are sufficient grounds for committing the accused for trial, he shall frame a charge under his hand, declaring with what offence the accused is charged.

(2) As soon as such charge has been framed, it shall be read and explained to the accused, and a copy thereof shall, if he so requires, be given to him free of cost.

Change:—The words "such charge" have been substituted for the words "the charge" by sec. 58 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. "We have made this verbal amendment to meet a suggestion of the Bengal Government"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916.

708. "Upon such evidence":—See sec. 208. It is illegal to frame a charge or make an order of commitment without taking all the evidence produced by the accused—Ahmadi, 20 All. 264. If the case is transferred from the Court of one Magistrate to another, the latter can commit the case to the Sessions, acting upon the evidence recorded by the former—Nanhua, 36 All 315, 12 A.L.J. 467, 15 Cr.L.J. 354

709. Sufficient grounds:—See Note 701 under sec. 209. The words "sufficient grounds for committing" mean not merely sufficient allegations as to the essentials of the offence, but such grounds as satisfy the Magistrate as being sufficient to form the basis of a conviction. And a Magistrate can hardly be said to be satisfied that sufficient grounds for committing are supplied by the evidence of witnesses, if he is unable to believe those witnesses. A District Magistrate cannot, therefore, order a Subordinate Magistrate to commit a case unless it appears that the latter had no good reason to discredit the prosecution witnesses and that their evidence was sufficient in law to form the basis of a conviction—Rauji, 9 Bom L.R. 225, 5 Cr.L.J. 213 (215, 216).

The discretion given to a Magistrate to decide whether there are sufficient grounds for commitment is a judicial discretion and must be exercised with care and on some proper ground. If the Magistrate thinks that a case not exclusively triable by the Court of Session must be committed, he must state his grounds in the order of commitment, so as to enable the High Court to judge whether the commitment is a sound exercise of discretionary power. It is an improper exercise of discretion to add a grave charge exclusively triable by a Sessions Court, without sufficient evidence for the mere purpose of committing the case to the Sessions—Mahammad Khan, 11 Bom L.R. 18, 9 Cr.L.J. 163.

711. Frame of charge:—See section 226 as to the procedure in case of commitment without any charge or with an erroneous or imperfect charge

The procedure of Chap XVIII differs from the procedure of Chap XXI in the point of time of framing the charge. Under Chap XXI, a charge can be framed long before the witnesses for the accused are examined and the prosecution witnesses are cross-examined; but under this chapter, a Magistrate cannot frame a charge until he has taken all the evidence produced by the complainant and the accused, examined all the witnesses, compelled to appear by process, examined the accused and allowed cross-examination on both sides—Durga Datt, 10 A.L.J. 144, 13 Cr.L.J. 443 (444) See also Suryya Narain, 5 C.W.N. 110 (111).

The framing of a charge does not amount to an order of commitment, and after the charge is framed the Magistrate does not become functus officio in respect of the case. He can amend the charge or can proceed with the case himself; he can consider whether he ought to commit or not—Venkatesh, 12 Bom L.R. 521, 11 Cr.L.J. 486. He can even cancel the charge and discharge the accused. See sec 213 (2) and Notes thereunder. But once an order of commitment is passed under sec 213, the Magistrate has no power to proceed any further with the case—Venkatesh, supra.

After frame of charge under this section, the accused has no right to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses or to examine any further defence witnesses—Ram Ghulam, 1931 A.L.J. 587, 32 Cr.L.J. 849 (850).

Though it is true that a framing of a charge under a minor section is tantamount to a discharge of the accused under a more serious section of the same type or family of offences, it is only true if the commission of a more serious offence has been alleged from the start and the Magistrate must visualize or have been invited to visualize the possibility of framing the more serious charge—Muhammad, 32 Cr.L.J. 1029, 133 I.C. 638, A.I.R. 1931 Lah 402, 1931 Cr.C. 642, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah 814.

211. (1) The accused shall be required at once to give in, orally or in writing, a list of the persons (if List of witnesses for defence on trial. any) whom he wishes to be summoned to give evidence on his trial.

(2) The Magistrate may, in his discretion, allow the accused to give in any further list of wit-Further list. nesses at a subsequent time; and, where the accused is committed for trial before the High Court, nothing in this section shall be deemed to preclude the accused from giving, at any time before his trial, to the Clerk of the Crown a further list of the persons whom he wishes to be summoned to give evidence on such trial.

Scope:—The purpose of this section is merely that the executive authorities should be able to compel the attendance of such witnesses as the accused wished to be summoned in order that when the trial of the case comes on in the Sessions Court the case may be heard from day to day and no time should be wasted—Niamat, 37 Cr.L.J. 742 (744), 162 I.C. 976, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 533, 17 Lah. 176, 38 P.L.R. 421, 1936 Cr.C. 568 (F.B.).

711. Magistrate's duty to require list:—Where the accused was never informed of the necessity of giving in his list of witnesses at any time or of the fact that he had a right to give in any such list, the provision of this section was not complied with and the accused was not given an opportunity to submit his list of witnesses—Muhammad Sharif, 35 Cr.L.J. 616, 148 I.C. 159, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 23, 1934 Cr.C. 32. The Magistrate is bound under this section to require the accused to give a list of the witnesses he desires to call. It is not enough to put him the question: "Have you any evidence?"; such a question is ambiguous, and might suggest to the accused only an inquiry as to whether he had witnesses ready in Court—Kondi, 7 Bom.L.R. 723, 2 Cr.L.J. 601.

Refusal of accused to give list of names of witnesses:—If an accused person, on being called upon under sec. 211, declines to give the list, he cannot compel the Magistrate, after committal, to issue any summons for witnesses on his behalf. He is, of course, entitled to call any witnesses in the Sessions Court, whom he may have in Court, whether or not he has caused such witnesses to be summoned. The Sessions Judge may then in his discretion cause any witnesses to be summoned on the application of the accused during the trial, and is bound to summon them if he considers that their evidence may be material—Shaikir Ali, 19 All. 502. The accused is entitled before the committing Magistrate to refuse to disclose the names of the witnesses he wishes to call at the trial (e.g., for fear that they may be tampered with), and the Magistrate cannot force him to disclose their names or the nature of the evidence they would be called upon to give—Hargovind, 14 All. 242.

Accused, who has complied with the requirements of this section, and has put in at once his list of defence witnesses, is entitled as of right to have the attendance of those witnesses at Sessions trial enforced in the event of their ignoring, or failing to comply with the summons. When processes have been issued by the Court it is the duty of the Court to enforce them. If the list is not filed at once the Magistrate will have a discretion to allow or not to allow any such application if it is made on any subsequent date. If, however, such an application is made and is allowed, then the application, whether under sub-sec. (1) or sub-sec. (2), will be governed by the same principle—Kali Bilash, 31 Cr.L.J. 695, 124 I.C. 513, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 188, 1930 Cr.C. 145. There is no section which gives an accused person an absolute right to have a witness summoned by the Crown, except under this section which applies to the list of witnesses handed in the Magistrate's Court—Misri Lal, 35 Cr.L.J. 591, 147 I.C. 1197, 1934 A.L.J. 67, 3 A.W.R. 241, 1934 Cr.C. 437, A.I.R. 1934 All. 372. Where a list is filed in compliance with the provisions of this section, the accused is as of right entitled to have the witnesses mentioned in the list summoned in the absence of a finding that they or any one of them were included in the list for the purpose of vexation or delay or of defeating the ends of justice—Kundanlal, 36 Cr.L.J. 889 (891), 156 I.C. 258, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 69. The Magistrate is perfectly justified, when the matter is brought to his notice, that certain witnesses were cited only for the purpose of causing vexation and delay, in ordering that they should not be compelled to appear in his Court, although he summoned them previously without scrutinising the list—Saminatha v. Kuppuswami, 29 Cr.L.J. 725, 110 I.C. 581, A.I.R. 1928 Mad 652.

The power to accept the supplementary list of witnesses in any case is a discretionary power and the discretion of the Magistrate is to be exercised in accordance with sec. 216, Cr. P. C., and subject to the provisos in that section—Musahru v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 355 (358), 21 P.L.T. 13, 1940 P.W.N. 83, 19 Pat. 413.

It is not desirable that the presentation of the list of defence witnesses should be postponed till the last minute when the Code contemplates that it should be done at the time when the charge is framed. But it is undoubtedly the Magistrate's duty to see to the obtaining of the list of defence witnesses. If the accused are not ready with their list of witnesses at the date of commitment it is convenient for the Magistrate to fix a day perhaps a fortnight hence up to which the list of witnesses will be received so as to prevent the matter escaping the notice of the accused or their legal advisers—Musahru v Emp, supra.

Where there is a perfect excuse for not naming the witness who is required to be summoned in the list before the Magistrate, the Sessions Judge ought to exercise his discretion in favour of the accused under sec 291, Cr P. C., and under the inherent jurisdiction of the Court—Misri Lal, supra. Where the accused asked to be given summonses to serve themselves and undertook to ask no further adjournment if they fail to serve the witnesses, the Sessions Judge should give them an opportunity to call their witnesses—Fazal Hussain, 35 Cr L.J. 1034, 149 I.C. 1046, 1934 Cr C 469, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 250. It is a fundamental principle of justice that no person shall be condemned unheard and the Courts have always endeavoured to ensure that as far as possible defence witnesses shall be produced and an accused given every chance of establishing his defence—Kundanlal, supra. See also Brijnandan, A.I.R. 1933 Pat 577, 35 Cr L.J. 85, 146 I.C. 527, 1933 Cr C 1344 cited under sec 219. Although an accused person may not as of right ask the Court to summon his witnesses, if he has not availed himself of the opportunity afforded to him under sec 211, Cr P. C., the Sessions Judge is not justified in refusing to exercise his discretion to summon defence witnesses merely and solely on that ground. He is bound to exercise his discretion in accordance with certain recognized principles and not in a capricious manner. The cause of justice demands that an accused person should have the fullest opportunity to lay his case before a Court which tries him. If an application for summoning witnesses is made at a late stage of the proceedings necessitating an adjournment and is made with the object of delaying the trial or is otherwise not bona fide, and if the evidence of witnesses who are sought to be summoned is not material to the case, the order rejecting the application would no doubt be justified—Hote, 37 Cr L.J. 108, 159 I.C. 587, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 216.

Where the Magistrate acting under sec 347, Cr P. C., amended the charge and committed the accused to the Court of Sessions, held that if the accused wished to produce fresh defence witnesses, whose names did not occur to him when he was asked for a list under sec. 211 (1), Cr P. C., the Magistrate had discretion to summon such fresh witnesses—Ram Ghulam, A.I.R. 1931 All 431, 132 I.C. 47, 1931 A.L.J. 587, 1931 Cr.C. 706, 32 Cr L.J. 849, 53 All 692. See also Notes 699 and 906.

212. The Magistrate may, in his discretion, summon and examine any witness named in any list given in to him under section 211.

Power of Magistrate to examine such witnesses

713. Discretion of Magistrate:—This section gives the Magistrate the widest possible discretion to summon and examine any of the witnesses named in any list given under sec. 211, even in cases where the accused has reserved his defence for the Sessions trial. The Magistrate is not bound to record reasons before exercising his powers. And the High Court will not interfere unless it is satisfied that a judicial discretion has not been used—In re Rudra Singh, 18 All. 380. The Magistrate is not bound to examine any witness named in the list. He has a discretion to summon any witnesses named in the list given to him under sec. 211 after the charge is framed. The accused has no right to have those witnesses summoned and examined—Saadat Mian, 6 Pat. 329, 28 Cr L.J. 709 (712); Kangaya, 36 Mad 321 (323). See also Fazal v. Emp, in Note 697.

If the Magistrate is of opinion that the witnesses were included in the list for the purpose of vexation, delay or of defeating the ends of justice, he ought to proceed under the second proviso of sec. 216—Rajeswar, 16 W.R. 14. But a Magistrate should not refuse an application for summons on the ground that the number of witnesses is very large—Hurendra v. Bhabani, 11 Cal 672 (766).

The discretion of the Magistrate ought not to be interfered with by the Sessions

Judge. Therefore, where the Magistrate intended to summon some witnesses for the accused and to make a local inspection, but had to commit the case to the Sessions at the discretion of the Sessions Judge, it was held that the Sessions Judge's direction was ultra vires as it unduly interfered with the discretion allowed to the Magistrate under sec. 212, and the commitment must be quashed—Mathura, 1906 A.W.N. 306, 4 Cr.L.J. 452.

213. (1) When the accused, on being required to give in a list under section 211, has declined to do so, or when he has given in such list and the witnesses (if any) included therein whom the Magistrate desires to examine, have been summoned and examined under section 212, the Magistrate may make an order committing the accused for trial by the High Court or the Court of Session (as the case may be), and (unless the Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate) shall also record briefly the reasons for such commitment.

(2) If the Magistrate, after hearing the witnesses for the defence, is satisfied that there are not sufficient grounds for committing the accused, he may cancel the charge and discharge the accused.

714. Commitment:—As to when the Magistrate should or should not commit, see Notes 702 and 703 under sec. 209.

Where one of the accused is absent when the proceedings are held in which the order of commitment is made, the order is illegal—Surjya Narain, 5 C.W.N. 110 (113); but where the accused was allowed to appear by an agent under sec. 205, a commitment made in the absence of the accused, but in the presence of the agent, is not illegal—Hurnath, 2 W.R. 50.

The order of commitment must be an act done by the Magistrate in the exercise of his own judicial discretion. And it is not in the power of the District Magistrate or Sessions Judge to fetter that discretion by any direction or suggestion—Muniswami, 15 Mad. 39 (40); Mathura, 1906 A.W.N. 306, 4 Cr.L.J. 452.

Commitment after discharge:—Where a Magistrate after examining four witnesses for the prosecution, discharged the accused, but subsequently becoming aware that there was a fifth witness, he cancelled his order of discharge, examined the witness and committed the accused to the Sessions, it was held that as there was nothing to show that the accused had been prejudiced, the commitment was not illegal—Anonymous, 7 M.H.C.R. App 40, 2 Weir 258 (259); Dolegobind, 5 C.W.N. 169. See also Notes in Note 707A.

Commitment to wrong Sessions:—See Note 549 under sec. 177.

Reasons for commitment:—The Magistrate shall briefly record the reasons for commitment. If a Magistrate commits a case triable by himself, he is bound to record his reasons for commitment, so as to enable the High Court to judge whether the commitment is a sound exercise of discretionary power—Mad. Khan, 11 Bom.L.R. 18, 9 Cr.L.J. 163; Nanji, 38 Bom. 114; he must specifically state that the case has been committed with a view to the infliction of a heavier sentence than he is competent to inflict—Kayemulla, 24 Cal. 429; he must state why the case was not disposed of by himself, and why the maximum punishment which he can impose would not be an adequate punishment for the offence—Diwani Chand, 8 S.L.R. 23, 15 Cr.L.J. 664 (665). The High Court has jurisdiction to quash the commitment, if the Magistrate gives no reasons whatever for the commitment—Nanji, 38 Bom. 114, 15 Bom.L.R. 999; or gives reasons which are bad in law—Achaldas, 28 Bom.L.R. 293, 27 Cr.L.J. 479; Bhimaji, 42 Bom. 172, 19 Cr.L.J. 342.

Commitment of some, trial of others :—Where several persons are jointly charged with the same offences, and it is considered necessary to commit one of them to the Sessions, the most convenient course is that all the prisoners should be committed, and not that one person should be committed and the others tried by the Magistrate himself. If, however, the Magistrate adopts the latter course, he does not act illegally—Kathu Chanchugadu, 2 Weir 258; Anonymous, 1 Weir 448 (449); Probodh v. Mohim, 22 Cr L.J. 480, 61 I.C. 1008 (Cal.).

Joint commitment :—Where several persons are jointly charged with having committed an offence, especially in cases of rioting, etc., where there are two hostile parties, each party should be charged and committed for trial separately and not all together, and the trial should also be separate—Sheikh Bazoo, 8 W.R. 47. But a commitment is not to be set aside as illegal, because all the accused, who were charged with distinct offences, were jointly committed. There is no section in Ch XVIII which requires a separate inquiry in such cases. The sections of the Code relating to joinder of charges, and the Privy Council ruling in Subramania Aiyar, 25 Mad 61, refer to trials only and not to commitments. In such cases the Sessions Judge should frame separate charges and try the accused separately, as if there had been separate commitments—Govindu, 25 Mad. 592; Salamatullah, 1900 A.W.N. 206; Sita, 7 Bom L.R. 457, 2 Cr L.J. 432 (433).

Expression of opinion by the Sessions Judge :—In the case of a commitment under this section it is not open to a Court of Session to express a view that the evidence produced is not sufficient to prove the charge against the accused persons before hearing the evidence produced in the case and thus to prejudice the whole matter—Afiki Lal, A.I.R. 1940 All 395 (397), 1940 A.L.J. 357.

715. Sub-section (2)—Scope :—A Magistrate is not bound to commit merely because he has framed a charge. He can cancel the charge if on taking evidence after the charge he finds that no case for commitment has been made out—Surjya Narain, 5 C.W.N. 110 (112). But it is not obligatory on the Magistrate to examine defence witnesses with a view to reconsidering the necessity for the charge and for a commitment—Musahru v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Pat 355 (359), 21 P.L.T. 13, 1940 P.W.N. 83, 19 Pat 413. Sub-section (2) is intended to provide for cases where the evidence recorded after the charge so changes the aspect of the case as to leave no reasonable doubt that a conviction is not sustainable; but it does not apply where the evidence for the defence merely casts some doubts on the case—Po Nyan, 1 L.B.R. 348. If the Magistrate after hearing the defence witnesses comes to the conclusion that their evidence rebuts the evidence produced for the prosecution or renders it so incredible or unreliable that a conviction will not follow, he may act upon his opinion and pass an order of discharge under this sub-section. He is not bound to commit merely because there was some prima facie evidence—Mid Abdul v. Baldeo, 41 All. 57, 19 A.L.J. 831, 22 Cr L.J. 703; Akbar Ali v. Raja Bahadur, 24 A.L.J. 133, 27 Cr L.J. 2. This discretion must, however, be carefully exercised, and whenever there is a possibility that different Courts might take different views of the evidence, the Magistrate, even though he may himself not think the evidence sufficient for a conviction, should leave it to the Sessions Court to pronounce finally upon the matter—Akbar Ali v. Raja Bahadur, supra.

Where the Magistrate, erroneously following the procedure for warrant cases, drew up the charge at an early stage, before the cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses took place, he could cancel the charge, if after the cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses he found that no case was made out—Surjya Narain, 5 C.W.N. 110 (112). The words "witnesses for the defence" in sub-section (2) are wide enough to cover evidence extracted by cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses; and, therefore, it is open to a Magistrate, after he has drawn up a charge, to allow the accused to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution, and, as a result, to cancel the charge—Jogendra v. Matilal, 39 Cal 885, 16 C.W.N. 1155, 13 Cr L.J. 774. This case has been disapproved of in Raman, 57 Cal 44, 33 C.W.N. 535, 1929 Cr.C. 222.

214. * * * * *

This section has been omitted by sec. 10 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act (XII of 1923). It provided that if an European British subject and an Indian subject were jointly accused of an offence triable by a Court of Session, the Magistrate must commit the case to the High Court and not to the Sessions Judge.

215. A commitment once made under section 213 or section 214 by a competent Magistrate or by a Court of Session under section 477 or by a Civil or Revenue Court under section 478, can be quashed by the High Court only, and only on a point of law.

215. A commitment once made under section 213 * * by a competent Magistrate * * or by a Civil or Revenue Court under section 478, can be quashed by the High Court only, and only on a point of law.

Change:—The words "or section 214" occurring in the old section have been omitted by sec. 11 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, XII of 1923. This is consequential to the repeal of sec. 214. The words "or by a Court... 477" have been omitted by sec. 59 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act XVIII of 1923. This is consequential to the repeal of sec. 477.

716. Scope of section:—This section applies only to commitments made under the two sections specified; therefore, an order of commitment under sec. 436 (now sec. 437) cannot be quashed under this section—Jogeshwar, 31 Cal. 1; such commitment can be quashed only under the revisional powers of the High Court—Putki Chand v. Sampatia, 7 C.W.N. 327; and in that case the High Court can quash the commitment on point of law and not of fact—Rash Behari, 12 C.W.N. 117, 6 Cr.L.J. 406; Tambi, 12 Bur.L.T. 62, 9 L.B.R. 208, 19 Cr.L.J. 801. Similarly, an order of commitment made by the Sessions Judge under sec. 423 cannot be quashed under this section, but can be dealt with by the High Court under its revisionary powers—Ng Thet She, 1 Bur.L.J. 520. But a commitment made under an order of the High Court under sec. 526, clause (iv) can neither be quashed under this section nor under the High Court's revisional powers, as the High Court cannot quash a commitment ordered by itself—Kalagava, 27 Mad. 54 (56).

This section does not apply to a commitment which is ab initio void, e.g., a commitment made by a Magistrate having no jurisdiction over the offence. No reference to the High Court is necessary to set aside such a commitment—Alim Mundle, 11 C.L.R. 55. An illegal commitment, e.g., a commitment in a case falling under sec. 196A without the sanction of the Local Government, need not be set aside by the High Court. In such a case, the Magistrate can entertain a fresh complaint, after the sanction has been obtained, and again proceed with the inquiry under Ch. XVIII—Hari Charan, 12 Pat. 353, 14 P.L.T. 281, 1933 Cr.C. 755 (757).

717. Quashing commitment:—This section refers only to a commitment actually made. Where a Sessions Judge under sec. 436 (now sec. 437) set aside a Magistrate's order of discharge, and directed a commitment to be made, the High Court could interfere in its revisional powers, and could consider the facts as well as the question of law involved—Muthia Chetty, 30 Mad. 224, 16 M.L.J. 529.

A commitment once made stands, unless quashed by the High Court, and if the High Court is not moved to quash the commitment, the trial of the persons must take place in pursuance thereof. If a trial has already taken place, it serves no purpose to impugn the commitment, and it is futile to contend in appeal or in revision that the commitment was illegal—Nazir, 7 Lah.L.J. 423, 26 P.L.R. 767, 27 Cr.L.J. 134.

When commitment cannot be quashed.—A commitment cannot be quashed after the accused has been put on his trial and has pleaded to the charge before the Sessions Judge—Sagambar, 12 C.L.R. 120; Haji, 1 S.L.R. 6, 9 Cr.L.J. 250; Arokia Padayachi, 2 Weir 262; Kasim Molla, 42 C.L.J. 114, 26 Cr.L.J. 1560 (1561), 90 I.C. 440, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 410. An illegality in commitment does not vitiate the trial—Kasim Molla, supra. In such a case, the Judge should proceed according to law and dispose of the case, or the Public Prosecutor may, with the consent of the Court withdraw the prosecution under sec. 494—Arokia, 2 Weir 262. In Shubo Behara, 6 Cal 584, and Hari Charan, 12 Pat 353, 1933 Cr.C 755 (757), 34 Cr.L.J. 938, 145 I.C. 368, 14 P.L.T. 281, A.I.R. 1933 Pat 273, however, it has been held that the High Court can quash a commitment at any stage of a criminal proceeding.

'Only by the High Court'—A commitment can be quashed only by the High Court. A Magistrate cannot quash the commitment and discharge the accused even though the complainant wishes to compound the case—Jangbir, 4 All. 150. A Sessions Judge cannot set aside the commitment and direct the Magistrate to try the case himself—Bheema, 16 M.L.J. 525, 5 Cr.L.J. 99 (100).

The Judicial Commissioner, when sitting in the Sessions division, is not divested of his capacity as a High Court Judge, and he has full power to make an order under sec. 215 even when sitting as a Sessions Judge—Ullibai, 17 S.L.R. 188, 26 Cr.L.J. 148.

Where the commitment is made to the High Court (Original Criminal Jurisdiction), the Appellate Criminal Bench of the High Court cannot quash the commitment. In such a case the practice is to apply to the Judge exercising original criminal jurisdiction in the High Court—Phanindra, 36 Cal 48. That is, the Judge of the High Court sitting in Sessions has power to quash a commitment made to him by a Magistrate—Girish Chandra, 34 C.W.N. 13 (28), 1929 Cr.C 468, 50 C.L.J. 408, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 756, 57 Cal 1042, 123 I.C. 433, 31 Cr.L.J. 506, Ind. Rul. 1928 Cal 321 (F.B.); M. J. Mamsa v The King, 39 Cr.L.J. 470, 174 I.C. 824, 10 R.R. 433, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 105; Girish, 56 Cal 785, 1929 Cr.C 521, A.I.R. 1929 Cal 777, 120 I.C. 813, 31 Cr.L.J. 184. See Maniram, 34 Cr.L.J. 14, 140 I.C. 485, A.I.R. 1932 Sind 157, 26 S.L.R. 407, 1932 Cr.C 693, Ind. Rul. 1932 Sind 189. But in Bhagavathi, 42 Mad 83 (84), the Madras High Court held that an application to quash such a commitment should be made to the Appellate Side of the High Court and not to a Judge exercising original criminal jurisdiction. A similar opinion was expressed in Colin M Mackey, 53 Cal 350, 30 C.W.N. 276, 27 Cr.L.J. 385, 93 I.C. 33, A.I.R. 1926 Cal 470, 43 C.L.J. 310 (F.B.). If an order of commitment is made by the Original civil side of the High Court under sec. 478, an appeal against the order of commitment may be preferred to the Appellate Side of the High Court—Venkatagiri v N M. Firm, 43 Mad. 361.

Effect of order quashing commitment—The primary effect of an order quashing the commitment is to supersede any action taken by the Magistrate under sec. 210 and his proceedings subsequent thereto; and it is necessary for the Magistrate to go back to the point at which he took cognizance of the complaint. There is no need for a fresh complaint, but it is necessary for the Magistrate to treat the case as a warrant case and not as a subject matter of an inquiry under Ch. XVIII. The Magistrate is to begin the trial afresh under sec. 252—Girish Chandra, 34 C.W.N. 13 (30), A.I.R. 1929 Cal 756, 1929 Cr.C 468, 123 I.C. 433 (F.B.). The effect of quashing of commitment under sec. 215, Cr. P. C., is that the case should start again from the beginning. It must go on from the point at which the Magistrate took cognizance of the complaint. No fresh complaint, however, need be made—Ghousbaksh, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 32 (33), 167 I.C. 379, 9 R.S. 181, 38 Cr.L.J. 379, 31 S.L.R. 403. This section empowers the High Court to quash an order of commitment on a point of law, but it does not, in any way, restrict the power of the High Court to pass any subsequent order after the commitment is quashed. The High Court can, therefore, pass an order sending the case back to the Magistrate for trial by himself—Sher Alam, A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 494, 35 Bom.L.R. 1062, 1933 Cr.C. 1598, 147 I.C. 879, 35 Cr.L.J. 479.

A commitment once made stands, unless quashed by the High Court, and if the High Court is not moved to quash the commitment, the trial of the persons must take place in pursuance thereof. If a trial has already taken place, it serves no purpose to impugn the commitment, and it is futile to contend in appeal or in revision that the commitment was illegal—Nazir, 7 Lah.L.J. 423, 26 P.L.R. 767, 27 Cr.L.J. 134.

When commitment cannot be quashed :—A commitment cannot be quashed after the accused has been put on his trial and has pleaded to the charge before the Sessions Judge—Sagambar, 12 CLR 120; Haji, 1 SLR. 6, 9 CrLJ. 250; Arokia Padayachi, 2 Weir 262; Kasim Molla, 42 CLJ. 114, 26 CrLJ 1560 (1561), 90 IC. 440, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 410. An illegality in commitment does not vitiate the trial—Kasim Molla, supra. In such a case, the Judge should proceed according to law and dispose of the case, or the Public Prosecutor may, with the consent of the Court withdraw the prosecution under sec. 494—Arokia, 2 Weir 262. In Shibo Behara, 6 Cal. 584, and Hari Charan, 12 Pat. 353, 1933 CrC 755 (757), 34 CrLJ 938, 145 IC 368, 14 P.L.T. 281, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 273, however, it has been held that the High Court can quash a commitment at any stage of a criminal proceeding.

'Only by the High Court' :—A commitment can be quashed only by the High Court. A Magistrate cannot quash the commitment and discharge the accused even though the complainant wishes to compound the case—Jangbir, 4 All 150. A Sessions Judge cannot set aside the commitment and direct the Magistrate to try the case himself—Bheema, 16 MLJ 525, 5 CrLJ. 99 (100).

The Judicial Commissioner, when sitting in the Sessions division, is not divested of his capacity as a High Court Judge, and he has full power to make an order under sec. 215 even when sitting as a Sessions Judge—Uthbai, 17 SLR. 188, 26 CrLJ. 148.

Where the commitment is made to the High Court (Original Criminal Jurisdiction), the Appellate Criminal Bench of the High Court cannot quash the commitment. In such a case the practice is to apply to the Judge exercising original criminal jurisdiction in the High Court—Phanindra, 36 Cal 48. That is, the Judge of the High Court sitting in Sessions has power to quash a commitment made to him by a Magistrate—Girish Chandra, 34 CWN 13 (28), 1929 CrC 468, 50 CLJ 408, A.I.R. 1929 Cal 756, 57 Cal 1042, 123 IC 433, 31 CrLJ 506, Ind Rul 1928 Cal 321 (FB); M. I. Mamsa v. The King, 39 CrLJ 470, 174 IC 824, 10 RR 433, A.I.R. 1938 Rang 105; Girish, 56 Cal 785, 1929 CrC 521, A.I.R. 1929 Cal 777, 120 IC 813, 31 CrLJ. 184. See Maniram, 34 CrLJ. 14, 140 IC. 485, A.I.R. 1932 Sind 157, 26 SLR 407, 1932 CrC 693, Ind. Rul 1932 Sind 189. But in Bhagavathi, 42 Mad 83 (84), the Madras High Court held that an application to quash such a commitment should be made to the Appellate Side of the High Court and not to a Judge exercising original criminal jurisdiction. A similar opinion was expressed in Colin M Mackey, 53 Cal 350, 30 CWN 276, 27 CrLJ 385, 93 IC. 33, A.I.R. 1926 Cal 470, 43 CLJ. 310 (FB). If an order of commitment is made by the Original civil side of the High Court under sec. 478, an appeal against the order of commitment may be preferred to the Appellate Side of the High Court—Venkatagiri v. N M Firm, 43 Mad 361.

Effect of order quashing commitment :—The primary effect of an order quashing the commitment is to supersede any action taken by the Magistrate under sec. 210 and his proceedings subsequent thereto; and it is necessary for the Magistrate to go back to the point at which he took cognizance of the complaint. There is no need for a fresh complaint, but it is necessary for the Magistrate to treat the case as a warrant case and not as a subject matter of an inquiry under Ch. XVIII. The Magistrate is to begin the trial afresh under sec. 252—Girish Chandra, 34 CWN 13 (30), A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 756, 1929 CrC 468, 123 IC. 433 (FB). The effect of quashing of commitment under sec. 215, Cr. P. C., is that the case should start again from the beginning. It must go on from the point at which the Magistrate took cognizance of the complaint. No fresh complaint, however, need be made—Ghousbaksh, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 32 (33), 167 IC. 379, 9 RS 181, 38 CrLJ. 379, 31 SLR. 403. This section empowers the High Court to quash an order of commitment on a point of law, but it does not, in any way, restrict the power of the High Court to pass any subsequent order after the commitment is quashed. The High Court can, therefore, pass an order sending the case back to the Magistrate for trial by himself—Sher Alam, A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 494, 35 BomLR. 1062, 1933 CrC. 1598, 147 IC. 879, 35 CrLJ. 479.

214. * * * * *

This section has been omitted by sec. 10 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act (XII of 1923). It provided that if an European British subject and an Indian subject were jointly accused of an offence triable by a Court of Session, the Magistrate must commit the case to the High Court and not to the Sessions Judge.

215. A commitment once made under section 213 or section 214 by a competent Magistrate or by a Court of Session under section 477 or by a Civil or Revenue Court under section 478, can be quashed by the High Court only, and only on a point of law.

215. A commitment once made under section 213 * * by a competent Magistrate * * or by a Civil or Revenue Court under section 478, can be quashed by the High Court only, and only on a point of law.

Change:—The words "or section 214" occurring in the old section have been omitted by sec. 11 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, XII of 1923. This is consequential to the repeal of sec. 214. The words "or by a Court. . 477" have been omitted by sec. 59 of the Cr P. C. Amendment Act XVIII of 1923. This is consequential to the repeal of sec. 477.

716. Scope of section:—This section applies only to commitments made under the two sections specified; therefore, an order of commitment under sec. 436 (now sec. 437) cannot be quashed under this section—Jogeshwar, 31 Cal. 1; such commitment can be quashed only under the revisional powers of the High Court—Prithi Chand v. Sampatia, 7 C.W.N. 327; and in that case the High Court can quash the commitment on point of law and not of fact—Rash Behari, 12 C.W.N. 117, 6 Cr.L.J. 406; Tambi, 12 Bur.L.T. 62, 9 L.B.R. 208, 19 Cr.L.J. 801. Similarly, an order of commitment made by the Sessions Judge under sec. 423 cannot be quashed under this section, but can be dealt with by the High Court under its revisionary powers—Nga Thet She, 1 Bur.L.J. 520. But a commitment made under an order of the High Court under sec. 526, clause (iv) can neither be quashed under this section nor under the High Court's revisional powers, as the High Court cannot quash a commitment ordered by itself—Kalagava, 27 Mad 54 (56).

This section does not apply to a commitment which is ab initio void, e.g., a commitment made by a Magistrate having no jurisdiction over the offence. No reference to the High Court is necessary to set aside such a commitment—Alim Mundle, 11 C.L.R. 55. An illegal commitment, e.g., a commitment in a case falling under sec. 196A without the sanction of the Local Government, need not be set aside by the High Court. In such a case, the Magistrate can entertain a fresh complaint, after the sanction has been obtained, and again proceed with the inquiry under Ch XVIII—Hari Charan, 12 Pat. 353, 14 P.L.T. 281, 1933 Cr.C. 755 (757).

717. Quashing commitment:—This section refers only to a commitment actually made. Where a Sessions Judge under sec. 436 (now sec. 437) set aside a Magistrate's order of discharge, and directed a commitment to be made, the High Court could interfere in its revisional powers, and could consider the facts as well as the question of law involved—Mutha Chetty, 30 Mad. 224, 16 M.L.J. 529.

A commitment once made stands, unless quashed by the High Court, and if the High Court is not moved to quash the commitment, the trial of the persons must take place in pursuance thereof. If a trial has already taken place, it serves no purpose to impugn the commitment, and it is futile to contend in appeal or in revision that the commitment was illegal—Nazir, 7 Lah.L.J. 423, 26 P.L.R. 767, 27 Cr.L.J. 134.

When commitment cannot be quashed :—A commitment cannot be quashed after the accused has been put on his trial and has pleaded to the charge before the Sessions Judge—Sagambar, 12 C.L.R. 120; Haji, 1 S.L.R. 6, 9 Cr.L.J. 250; Arokia Padayachi, 2 Weir 262; Kasim Molla, 42 C.L.J. 114, 26 Cr.L.J. 1560 (1561), 90 I.C. 450, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 410. An illegality in commitment does not vitiate the trial—Kasim Molla, supra. In such a case, the Judge should proceed according to law and dispose of the case, or the Public Prosecutor may with the consent of the Court withdraw the prosecution under sec. 494—Arokia, 2 Weir 262. In Shibo Bekara, 6 Cal. 584, and Hari Charan, 12 Pat. 353, 1933 Cr.C. 755 (757), 34 Cr.L.J. 938, 145 I.C. 368, 14 P.L.T. 281, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 273, however, it has been held that the High Court can quash a commitment at any stage of a criminal proceeding.

'Only by the High Court' —A commitment can be quashed only by the High Court. A Magistrate cannot quash the commitment and discharge the accused even though the complainant wishes to compound the case—Jangbir, 4 All. 150. A Sessions Judge cannot set aside the commitment and direct the Magistrate to try the case himself—Dheema, 16 M.L.J. 525, 5 Cr.L.J. 99 (100).

The Judicial Commissioner, when sitting in the Sessions division, is not divested of his capacity as a High Court Judge, and he has full power to make an order under sec. 215 even when sitting as a Sessions Judge—Ulibai, 17 S.L.R. 188, 26 Cr.L.J. 148.

Where the commitment is made to the High Court (Original Criminal Jurisdiction), the Appellate Criminal Bench of the High Court cannot quash the commitment. In such a case the practice is to apply to the Judge exercising original criminal jurisdiction in the High Court—Phanindra, 36 Cal. 48. That is, the Judge of the High Court sitting in Sessions has power to quash a commitment made to him by a Magistrate—Girish Chandra, 34 C.W.N. 13 (28), 1929 Cr.C. 468, 50 C.L.J. 408, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 756, 57 Cal. 1042, 123 I.C. 433, 31 Cr.L.J. 506, Ind. Rul. 1928 Cal. 321 (F.B.); M. I. Mamsa v. The King, 39 Cr.L.J. 470, 174 I.C. 824, 10 R.R. 433, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 105; Girish, 56 Cal. 785, 1929 Cr.C. 521, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 777, 120 I.C. 813, 31 Cr.L.J. 184. See Maniram, 34 Cr.L.J. 14, 140 I.C. 485, A.I.R. 1932 Sind. 157, 26 S.L.R. 407, 1932 Cr.C. 693, Ind. Rul. 1932 Sind. 189. But in Bhagavathi, 42 Mad. 83 (84), the Madras High Court held that an application to quash such a commitment should be made to the Appellate Side of the High Court and not to a Judge exercising original criminal jurisdiction. A similar opinion was expressed in Colin M. Mackey, 53 Cal. 350, 30 C.W.N. 276, 27 Cr.L.J. 385, 93 I.C. 33, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 470, 43 C.L.J. 310 (F.B.). If an order of commitment is made by the Original civil side of the High Court under sec. 478, an appeal against the order of commitment may be preferred to the Appellate Side of the High Court—Venkatagiri v. N. M. Firm, 43 Mad. 361.

Effect of order quashing commitment —The primary effect of an order quashing the commitment is to supersede any action taken by the Magistrate under sec. 210 and his proceedings subsequent thereto; and it is necessary for the Magistrate to go back to the point at which he took cognizance of the complaint. There is no need for a fresh complaint, but it is necessary for the Magistrate to treat the case as a warrant case and not as a subject matter of an inquiry under Ch. XVIII. The Magistrate is to begin the trial afresh under sec. 252—Girish Chandra, 34 C.W.N. 13 (30), A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 756, 1929 Cr.C. 468, 123 I.C. 433 (F.B.). The effect of quashing of commitment under sec. 215, Cr. P. C., is that the case should start again from the beginning. It must go on from the point at which the Magistrate took cognizance of the complaint. No fresh complaint, however, need be made—Ghousbaksh, A.I.R. 1937 Sind. 32 (33), 167 I.C. 379, 9 R.S. 181, 38 Cr.L.J. 379, 31 S.L.R. 403. This section empowers the High Court to quash an order of commitment on a point of law, but it does not, in any way, restrict the power of the High Court to pass any subsequent order after the commitment is quashed. The High Court can, therefore, pass an order sending the case back to the Magistrate for trial by himself—Sher Alam, A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 494, 35 Bom.L.R. 1062, 1933 Cr.C. 1598, 147 I.C. 879, 35 Cr.L.J. 479.

The Magistrate cannot question the legality of the order of the High Court quashing the commitment—Girish Chandra, supra.

718. Point of law:—The High Court cannot quash a commitment made under secs. 213 and 478 except upon a point of law—Goda Ram, 15 A.L.J. 756, 19 Cr.L.J. 224; Ramaswami Goundan, 39 Cr.L.J. 894, 177 I.C. 494, 1938 M.W.N. 577, 48 M.L.W. 139, 11 R.M. 330, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 675, 1938 M.Cr.C. 67; Rashbehari, 12 C.W.N. 117, 6 C.L.J. 760, 6 Cr.L.J. 406; Mishi Lal, A.I.R. 1940 All. 396 (398). Though an appeal lies under clause 15 of the Letters Patent from an order of commitment made under sec. 478 by a Judge of the High Court in the original civil side, the order cannot be set aside except on a point of law—Venkatagiri v. N. M. Firm, 43 Mad. 351.

The High Court can quash a commitment on the following points of law :—

(1) Where the Magistrate who committed the case was competent to try it himself and to inflict adequate punishment for the offence—Dharam Singh, 3 A.L.J. 14, 3 Cr.L.J. 94; Jagmohan, 6 A.L.J. 989, 11 Cr.L.J. 54; Utlibai, 17 S.L.R. 188, 26 Cr.L.J. 148, 83 I.C. 708, A.I.R. 1924 Sind 61; Allahabad, 31 Cr.L.J. 596, 123 I.C. 702, A.I.R. 1930 Sind 145, 24 S.L.R. 157; Kesar, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 263, 33 P.L.R. 185, 138 I.C. 701, 1932 Cr.C. 328, 33 Cr.L.J. 680; Mir Ahmad v. Madan Lal, A.I.R. 1936 Pesh. 139; Ghousbaksh, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 32, 167 I.C. 379, 38 Cr.L.J. 379, 9 R.S. 181, 31 S.L.R. 403; Waroo, 39 Cr.L.J. 507, 174 I.C. 920, 10 R.S. 271, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 79. The failure of a Magistrate rightly to exercise his jurisdiction under sec. 347, Cr. P. C., is a question of law on which a commitment wrongly made by him can be quashed under sec. 215, Cr. P. Code. Failure to exercise jurisdiction under sec. 254, Cr. P. C., is as much as the wrongful exercise of jurisdiction under sec. 347, Cr. P. C., a point of law on which a commitment can be quashed—Ghousbaksh, supra; Utlibai, supra. See also Note 703 (4) and Note 719 (4) and (5).

(2) Where the case was triable exclusively by the Magistrate, and the Session Court had no jurisdiction over it, e.g., a commitment for an offence under the Opium Act (Act I of 1878)—Schade, 19 All. 465 (466); or under Madras Act I of 1866—Donoghue, 5 M.H.C.R. 277; or under sec. 29 of Police Act V of 1861—Indrobeer, 1 W.R. 5.

(3) Where a case triable by the Magistrate has been committed by him merely on the ground of its connection with another case which has been committed to the Sessions—Asha Bhatthi, 15 Bom.L.R. 998, 14 Cr.L.J. 657 (658). See Note 695.

(4) When there is absolutely no evidence sufficient to establish an offence and warrant a commitment (absence of evidence being a question of law and not of fact)—Chandra Kumar, 2 Cr.L.J. 46, 2 Cr.L.J. 383; Jagannath, 3 O.W.N. 308 (Sup), 28 Cr.L.J. 137; Nga Hmyin, 19 Cr.L.J. 102, 3 U.B.R. 29; Tambi, 9 L.B.R. 208, 19 Cr.L.J. 801; Jageshwar, 5 C.W.N. 411; Narotam, 6 All. 98; Ghansham, 31 P.L.R. 348, 31 Cr.L.J. 814. But see Note 719 (2) below.

(5) Where the commitment was made in the absence of the accused—Surya Narain, 5 C.W.N. 110 (113).

(6) Where the commitment was based on evidence recorded in the absence of the accused (i.e., while the accused was not arrested on the charge at all)—Chinnappan, 2 Weir 259 (260); Belli Gowder, 36 Cr.L.J. 319, 153 I.C. 256, 1934 M.W.N. 1095, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 691, 1934 Cr.C. 1306.

(7) Where the commitment was made by the Magistrate not in the exercise of his own discretion but at the suggestion of the District Magistrate or Sessions Judge—Mathura, 1906 A.W.N. 306, 4 Cr.L.J. 452; Munisami, 15 Mad. 39 (40).

(8) Where the commitment was made without examining the witnesses for the defence—Md. Hadi, 26 All. 177 (178); Ahmadi, 20 All. 264; Nga Khaing, 6 Rang. 531, 30 Cr.L.J. 1; Jhana, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 610, 35 P.L.R. 612, 36 Cr.L.J. 410, 153 I.C. 436, 1934 Cr.C. 942; Kunwar Jaswant Singh, 46 All. 137.

(9) Where the Magistrate committed the approver who had broken the conditions of pardon tendered to him, along with the other co-accused—Bhan, 23 Bom. 493; Brij

Narain, 20 All 529; or where such approver was committed before the trial of the other accused was finished—Sudra, 14 All 336

(10) Where the Magistrate gave no reasons whatever for the commitment, or gave reasons which are bad in law—Achaldas, 28 Bom LR 293, 27 Cr L.J. 479; Nanji, 38 Bom. 114, 14 Cr L.J. 609; Bhimaji, 42 Bom. 172. The mere fact that the committing Magistrate did not give his reasons for committing the case when there was a (sec 30) Magistrate in the district, cannot make the commitment illegal—Indoo, AIR 1934 Lah. 326 See also Note 719 (5).

(11) The fact that the committing Magistrate had no territorial jurisdiction over the offence is a question of law. But the commitment is valid inspite of the want of territorial jurisdiction, unless a failure of justice has in fact been occasioned by such commitment—Nga Taung, 7 Bur LT 26, 15 Cr L.J. 270; Abbi Reddi, 17 Mad. 402 (403).

(12) Where the committing Magistrate held the inquiry without the certificate of the Political Agent (sec. 188) which was necessary in the case—Ram Charan, 5 Lah. 416 (420), 27 Cr L.J. 218; Narain, 41 All 452 (454); Kathaperumal, 19 Mad. 423 (425); Ram Sundar, 19 All 109 (110); Buta Singh, 7 Lah 396, 27 Cr L.J. 1168

719. What are not proper grounds for setting aside commitment:—

(1) The High Court cannot set aside a committal merely because the Magistrate made a joint commitment of several accused, instead of making separate commitments—Govinda, 26 Mad 592; Salamatullah, 1900 A W N 206, Sita, 7 Bom L.R. 457, 2 Cr L.J. 432 (433)

(2) A commitment can be quashed only on a point of law and cannot be quashed on the ground that there was no evidence on the committing Magistrate's record to sustain the charge—Saleman, 13 Bom LR 201, 10 IC 802, 12 Cr L.J. 256; Gnish Chandra, 34 CWN 13 (28), AIR 1929 Cal 756, 1929 Cr C 468, 123 IC 433 (FB); Maroti, 36 Cr L.J. 1389, 158 IC 537, 18 NLJ 227, 1935 Cr C 1099, AIR 1935 Nag. 202; Ismail, 26 Cr L.J. 1045 (1047), 87 IC 965, AIR 1925 Nag 409, Hassan Din, 32 PLR 581, 32 Cr L.J. 867 (868), 132 IC 380, AIR 1931 Lah 467, 1931 Cr C 691, Ind Rul 1931 Lah 572 (dissenting from Ghansham, 31 PLR 348, 31 Cr L.J. 814); Waroo, 39 Cr L.J. 507, 174 IC 920, AIR 1938 Sind 79, 10 RS 271, Mithi Lal, AIR. 1940 All 396 (397), 1940 ALJ 357. In dealing with an application under his section the High Court is not required to appreciate the evidence but it proceeds on the assumption that the facts as stated in committal order will be proved at the trial. All that the High Court is required to apply its mind to, is that assuming that the facts are proved, do they justify the conviction of the accused or not? As so stated the point at issue before the High Court is a point of law pure and simple—Maniram, 34 Cr L.J. 14, 140 IC 485, AIR 1932 Sind 157, 26 SLR 407, 1932 Cr C. 693, Ind Rul. 1932 Sind 189. In re Sessions Judge, 27 MLJ 593, 15 Cr L.J. 665 (dissenting from 6 All. 98); so also, a commitment cannot be quashed because of doubts as to the credibility of the evidence for the prosecution, if there is in fact some evidence which would justify the Sessions Judge in leaving the question of guilt or innocence to the jury—Mahomed Moideen, 1 Rang 526, 25 Cr L.J. 261, 76 IC 821, AIR 1924 Rang 165; Naval Krishore, 30 Cr L.J. 519, 115 IC 692, 10 PLT. 101, AIR 1929 Pat 121, Ind. Rul. 1929 Pat 244. A commitment cannot be quashed merely on the ground that the evidence was doubtful. The proper course in such a case would be for the District Magistrate to instruct the Public Prosecutor to withdraw from the prosecution under sec. 494—Nga Taung, 7 Bur LT 26, 15 Cr L.J. 270. See also Maroti, supra.

There may be cases in which there is no evidence to warrant a commitment; then there may be another class of cases in which commitment is made on no legal evidence at all. In such cases action may be taken under this section. The High Court however will not quash commitments where there is a prima facie case against the persons who have been committed to take their trial to a Court of Session. In such cases no legal question arises and so the High Court has no power to quash the commitment. The commitment of the accused therefore cannot be quashed because of the possibility of the Sessions Judge's holding in favour of the accused and against the prosecution after he has heard the evidence. Under the law a very valuable right has been given to the parties to have their cases under certain sections decided by a Court of Session with the aid of assessors or jury and when the accused persons have been committed to the Court of Session by the committing Court then that commitment cannot possibly be quashed because the Court of Session is of opinion that eventually the prosecution case may not be proved—Mithi Lal, A.I.R. 1940 All. 396 (397, 398), 1940 A.L.J. 357.

A commitment cannot be quashed on the ground that the Magistrate committed the case without weighing the evidence himself and deliberately leaving to the Court of Session to decide whether the guilt of the accused had or had not been proved on the evidence on record—Muhammad Khan, 34 Cr.L.J. 39, 33 P.L.R. 1068, 140 I.C. 539, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 39, 1933 Cr.C. 119, Ind. Rul. 1933 Lah. 7. The High Court will not, sitting as a Revisional Court, decide whether the statement of a witness should or should not be believed and will not quash the commitment after such consideration—Bal Chand, 49 All. 181.

(3) The fact that some of the accused were committed while other persons who were acting in concert had not yet been arrested is not a ground for setting aside the commitment—Ramasami, 7 M.L.T. 187, 11 Cr.L.J. 333.

(4) The High Court cannot interfere when the Magistrate, being of opinion that he cannot adequately punish the accused, exercises his discretion by committing the case to the Sessions—Baldeo, 11 A.L.J. 439, 14 Cr.L.J. 304; Umrai, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 185, 1934 O.L.R. 328, 11 O.W.N. 556, 148 I.C. 653. See also Note 703 (4) and Note 718 (1).

(5) The High Court cannot quash a commitment where the Magistrate, though he can inflict the maximum sentence provided for the offence, commits the case, being of opinion that it should for other reasons be tried by a Court of Session—Bhagvathi, 42 Mad. 83, 85 M.L.J. 559; Ghani, 14 S.L.R. 85, 21 Cr.L.J. 791. The commitment of a case exclusively triable by a Court of Session is legal and cannot be quashed merely because the Committing Magistrate could give sufficient punishment by acting under sec. 30, Cr. P. C.—Mir Ahmad v. Madan Lal, A.I.R. 1936 Pesh. 139, 37 Cr.L.J. 852, 163 I.C. 611. See also Indo, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 326, 150 I.C. 769, 36 P.L.R. 218. But see Asha Bhatti, 15 Bom.L.R. 998, 14 Cr.L.J. 657 (658), cited under sec. 207.

(6) A commitment will not be quashed on the ground that the committing Magistrate has failed to observe the provisions of sec. 360 in respect of some of the witnesses; in such a case, the trial Court will be directed to recall the witnesses in respect of whom sec. 360 was not complied with, and to comply with those provisions so far as these witnesses are concerned—Abdur Rahim, 29 C.W.N. 698, 26 Cr.L.J. 1276. (Any irregularity in following the provisions of sec. 360 will now be cured by the ruling of the Privy Council in Abdul Rahman, 5 Rang. 53).

(7) Where there has been a commitment for the trial of charges some of which are triable by a Sessions Court and others triable by a Magistrate, the fact that during the trial the charges for the Sessions offences are withdrawn, is not a ground for setting aside the order of commitment and taking away the accused's right to a trial by jury—Monmotha, 31 C.W.N. 144, 28 Cr.L.J. 141.

216. When the accused has given in any list of witnesses

under section 211 and has been committed, for trial, the Magistrate shall summon such of the witnesses included in the list, as have not appeared before himself, to appear before the Court to which the accused has been committed:

Provided that, where the accused has been committed to the High Court, the Magistrate may, in his discretion, leave such witnesses to be summoned by the Clerk of the Crown, and such witnesses may be summoned accordingly:

Provided also, that if the Magistrate thinks that any witness is included in the list for the purpose of vexation or delay or of defeating the ends of justice, the Magistrate may require the accused to satisfy him that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the evidence of such witness is material, and, if he is not so satisfied, may refuse to summon the witness (recording his reasons for such refusal), or may, before summoning him, require such sum to be deposited as such Magistrate thinks necessary to defray the expense of obtaining the attendance of the witness and all other proper expenses.

719A. "Shall summon":—Where the accused has made an application for summoning witnesses, the Magistrate must deal with the application and pass an order either granting the prayer of the petition, or refusing it (under the second proviso). He should not simply order the application to be filed—Bhomar v Digambar, 6 C.W.N. 548. Where a witness once summoned failed to appear, there being some delay in the service of summons, the Magistrate is bound to make a second attempt (the first attempt being a nominal one) to secure the attendance of the absent witness—Ruknuddin, 4 All. 53. It appears from this section as well from sec 217 that the intention of the Legislature is to cast upon the Crown the charge of securing the attendance of witnesses whom the accused intends to examine at the trial. In a warrant case the accused has to summon his own witnesses and see to their attendance. But in a Crown prosecution, when the list is filed before the committing Magistrate, the witnesses named therein must be summoned and made to be present, and if they are not present their attendance has to be secured by some means by the Crown—Ran Mamud, 58 Cal 412, 34 C.W.N. 1014 (1016), 32 Cr.L.J. 316; Muktal Hossein, 31 Cr.L.J. 1077, 126 I.C. 720, A.I.R. 1930 Cal 362. See also Notes under sec. 211.

720. Second proviso:—The second proviso is not intended to enable the Magistrate to inquire generally into what the defence of the accused is to be, and to consider whether on learning the nature of the defence he is absolutely to abstain from summoning the whole of the witnesses cited by the accused. The meaning of this proviso is that if among the persons named by the accused as witnesses the Magistrate considers that any particular witness is included for the purpose of vexation and delay, he is to exercise his judgment and inquire whether such witness is material—Rajcoomar, 3 Cal 573. The Magistrate cannot require the accused person to satisfy him that the evidence of the witnesses to be summoned is material, unless he thinks that the witnesses were included in the list for the purpose of vexation or delay—Raja of Kantil, 8 All 668 (671).

Refusal to summon witnesses —The accused is entitled to have the witnesses mentioned in the list summoned and examined, and the only ground on which a Magistrate can refuse summons is when he thinks that the witnesses have been included in the list for the purpose of vexation and delay. If the witnesses named in the list are persons who have already given evidence on a previous occasion, the Magistrate should not refuse to summon those witnesses on the mere assumption that their evidence would not be reliable or material—Marinagi Reddi, 2 Weir 263 (264); Virasami, 19 Mad. 375 (381). Again, the fact that the accused stated that he did not wish to examine witnesses when the case closed, would be no reason for refusing to summon them to meet fresh evidence which had been taken by the Magistrate after hearing the arguments of the defence—Deela Mahton v. Sho Dyal, 6 Cal 714 (715).

The discretion of not summoning any witness named in the list submitted to the Magistrate by the accused vests in the committing Magistrate and not in the Sessions Judge. The latter is not justified in refusing to call any such witness—Ran Mamud, 58 Cal. 412, 34 C.W.N. 1014 (1016).

Recording reasons for refusal :—When a Magistrate refuses to summon witnesses, he must record his reasons for such refusal; and the reasons must show that the evidence of such witnesses is not material. The fact that the Magistrate thought that the reasons assigned by the accused for summoning a witness were insufficient, is not a good ground for supposing that the evidence of the witness was not material, and for refusing to summon him—Raja of Kantit, 8 All. 668 (671).

See also Notes 699 and 712.

Order to deposit expenses :—Though the Magistrate is competent to refuse to summon witnesses, still he should fix the amount which he considers necessary to defray the cost of the attendance of persons named in the list and intimate his readiness to issue summons on that amount being deposited—Subbaraya, 4 M.H.C.R. 81. An order refusing to issue summons should be sparingly passed; and such an order is improper in a case where the accused is unable or unwilling to deposit money and in consequence is convicted without his witness being heard, especially if the case is one in which a severe sentence is inflicted—Qadu, 1898 P.R. 7.

This section undoubtedly permits of fees being levied, where the Magistrate thinks necessary, for process-fees, but only if the Magistrate thinks that the witness is included in the list for the purpose of vexation or delay, or of defeating the ends of justice—Mg San Nyein, 27 Cr.L.J. 415, 93 I.C. 79, A.I.R. 1926 Rang. 13, 4 Bur.L.J. 187.

217. (1) Complainants and witnesses for the prosecution

Bond of complainants and witnesses. and defence, whose attendance before the Court of Session or High Court is necessary and who appear before the Magistrate, shall execute before him bonds binding themselves to be in attendance when called upon at the Court of Session or High Court to prosecute or to give evidence, as the case may be.

(2) If any complainant or witness refuses to attend before the Court of Session or High Court, or to execute the bond above directed, the Magistrate may detain him in custody until he executes such bond, or until his attendance at the Court of Session or High Court is required, when the Magistrate shall send him in custody to the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be.

721. "Whose attendance is necessary":—There is no law which obliges the committing Magistrate to cause the attendance at the Sessions Court of every one of the witnesses examined by him, irrespective of their evidence being material for the prosecution. It is for the Magistrate to judge as to the necessity of the attendance of those witnesses—Naik Lal, 1883 A.W.N. 37.

The words "whose attendance before the Court of Session or High Court is necessary and who appear before the Magistrate" indicate that only those witnesses who appear before the Magistrate can be bound down to appear before the Sessions Court. It also clearly shows that witnesses who do not appear before the Magistrate can appear before the Court of Session, the only disadvantage to the prosecution being that they cannot be bound down so to appear—Niamat, 37 Cr.L.J. 742 (744), 162 I.C. 976, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 533, 17 Lah. 176, 38 P.L.R. 421, 1936 Cr.C. 568 (F.B.).

218. (1) When the accused is committed for trial, the Magistrate shall issue an order to such person as may be appointed by the Provincial Government in this behalf, notifying the commitment and stating the offence in the same form as the charge, unless the Magistrate is satisfied that such person is already aware of the commitment and the form of the charge; and shall send the charge, the record of the inquiry and any weapon or other thing which is to be produced in evidence, to the Court of Session or (where the commitment is made to the High Court) to the Clerk of the Crown or other officer appointed in this behalf by the High Court.

(2) When the commitment is made to the High Court and any part of the record is not in English, an English translation of such part shall be forwarded with the record.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

219. (1) The Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, summon and examine supplementary witnesses after the commitment and before the commencement of the trial, and bind them over in manner hereinbefore provided to appear and give evidence.

(2) Such examination shall, if possible, be taken in the presence of the accused, and where the Magistrate is not a Presidency Magistrate, a copy of the evidence of such witnesses shall, if the accused so require, be given to him free of cost.

Change:—The italicised words in sub-section (1) have been substituted for the words 'The Magistrate' by s. 60 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. This amendment provides that the supplementary witnesses may be examined

219. (1) The committing Magistrate or, in the absence of such Magistrate, any other Magistrate empowered by or under section 206 may, if he thinks fit, summon and examine supplementary witnesses after the commitment and before the commencement of the trial, and bind them over in manner hereinbefore provided to appear and give evidence.

(2) Such examination shall, if possible, be taken in the presence of the accused, and where the Magistrate is not a Presidency Magistrate, a copy of the evidence of such witnesses shall * * be given to the accused free of cost.

not only by the committing Magistrate, but by another Magistrate in his absence who is empowered to commit for trial.

The words "if the accused so require" occurring in sub-sec. (2) of the old section have been omitted by the same Amendment Act. The accused is now given an absolute right to a copy of the evidence.

722. Scope:—This section provides for cases in which there may be accidental gap in the evidence. In such a case, the Sessions Judge may call additional evidence at the trial under sec. 540 or the committing Magistrate may himself take steps, before the trial, under sec. 219 to supplement the evidence—Mahabir, 23 Cr.L.J. 79 (Oudh).

The power of the committing Magistrate to call and examine supplementary witnesses ceases with the commencement of the trial. After the trial has commenced, the Sessions Judge can cause witnesses to be summoned before himself or under certain circumstances have them examined by commission. But he cannot direct the committing Magistrate to call additional witnesses and hold an inquiry—Hassan, 1888 P.R. 29. If, after receiving the order of commitment, the Sessions Judge, in view of the Magistrate's recorded opinion, thinks that further evidence should be taken, the proper course is to point out to the committing Magistrate that he should summon and examine any supplementary witnesses who can give evidence and bind them over to appear at the trial, and not to send the case to the Magistrate after the conclusion of the trial, and after the opinions of the assessors have been taken—Awalkhan, 1892 P.R. 4.

This section provides for the taking of supplementary evidence after commitment but before the trial, and there is no provision that the charge can be altered or a fresh committal order made by the Magistrate of his own motion, after the taking of such evidence. And so, though the additional evidence may be recorded by the committing Magistrate, it forms no part of the record upon which the accused has been, or could have been, committed for trial—Deogi Reddi Aukamma, 34 Cr.L.J. 278 (282), 142 I.C. 138, 1932 M.W.N. 1162, Ind. Rul. 1933 Mad. 199, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 247, 1933 Cr.C. 374, 65 M.L.J. 6, 38 M.L.W. 668.

The complainant is a 'witness' within the meaning of the word in this section and the Magistrate has a discretion to require the complainant as a witness under this section—Motilal, A.I.R. 1935 All. 267, 36 Cr.L.J. 446, 153 I.C. 907, 1935 A.L.J. 299.

Where the prosecution was allowed to examine new witnesses under this section long after the commitment and the Magistrate, to whom the accused applied in the first instance for summoning new witnesses to rebut the evidence of these new prosecution witnesses, was satisfied as to the relevancy of their evidence, held that the accused should be given an opportunity to examine those defence witnesses in the Court of Session—Brijnandan, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 577, 35 Cr.L.J. 85, 146 I.C. 527, 1933 Cr.C. 1344.

220. Until and during the trial, the Magistrate shall, subject to the provisions of this Code regarding the taking of bail, commit the accused, by warrant, to custody.

Custody of accused pending trial.

CHAPTER XIX.

OF THE CHARGE.

Form of Charges.

221. (1) Every charge under this Code shall state the Charge to state offence. offence with which the accused is charged.

(2) If the law which creates the offence gives it any specific Specific name of offence sufficient description. name, the offence may be described in the charge by that name only.

(3) If the law which creates the offence does not give it
How stated where offence has no specific name. any specific name, so much of the definition of the offence must be stated as to give the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged.

(4) The law and section of the law against which the offence is said to have been committed shall be mentioned in the charge.

(5) The fact that the charge is made is equivalent to a statement that every legal condition required by
What implied in charge law to constitute the offence charged was fulfilled in the particular case.

(6) In the presidency-towns the charge shall be written Language of charge. in English; elsewhere it shall be written either in English or in the language of the Court.

(7) If the accused has been
Previous conviction when to be set out previously convicted of any offence, and it is intended to prove such previous conviction for the purpose of affecting the punishment which the Court is competent to award, the fact, date and place of the previous conviction shall be stated in the charge. If such statement is omitted, the Court may add it at any time before sentence is passed.

(7) If the accused, having been previously convicted of any offence, is liable, by reason of such previous conviction, to enhanced punishment or to punishment of a different kind, for a subsequent offence, and it is intended to prove such previous conviction for the purpose of affecting the punishment which the Court may think fit to award for the subsequent offence, the fact, date and place of the previous conviction shall be stated in the charge. If such statement has been omitted, the Court may add it at any time before sentence is passed.

Illustrations.

(a) A is charged with the murder of B. This is equivalent to a statement that A's act fell within the definition of murder given in sections 299 and 300 of the Indian Penal Code; that it did not fall within any of the general exceptions of the same Code; and that it did not fall within any of the five exceptions to section 300, or that, if it did fall within Exception I, one or other of the three provisos to that exception applied to it.

(b) A is charged, under section 326 of the Indian Penal Code, with voluntarily causing grievous hurt to B by means of an instrument for shooting. This is equivalent to a statement that the case was not provided for by section 335 of the Indian Penal Code, and that the general exceptions did not apply to it.

(c) A is accused of murder, cheating, theft, extortion, adultery or criminal intimidation, or using a false property mark. The charge may state that A committed murder, or cheating, or theft, or extortion, or adultery, or criminal intimidation, or that he used a false property mark, without reference to the definitions of those crimes contained in the Indian Penal Code; but the sections under which the offence is punishable must, in each instance, be referred to in the charge.

(d) A is charged, under section 184 of the Indian Penal Code with intentionally obstructing a sale of property offered for sale by the lawful authority of a public servant. The charge should be in those words.

Change:—Sub-section (7) has been amended by sec. 61 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923 "There is some doubt whether under section 221 it is permissible to prove a previous conviction if the enhanced punishment which it is sought to award is not beyond the competence of the Court; and the amendment directs that in such a case evidence of the previous conviction may be given"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914).

723. Particulars to be stated in the charge:—The object of these sections is to enable the accused to know the substantive charges which he will have to meet and to be ready for them before the evidence is given—Ram Chandar, 17 Cr.L.J. 411, 35 I.C. 971 (All.). It is one of the elementary principles of criminal law that an accused person must know what the precise accusation against him is, before he is called upon to enter on his defence—Indar Pal, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 409 (411), 1936 Cr.C. 389. An accused is entitled to know with accuracy and certainty the exact nature of the charge brought against him. Unless he has this knowledge, he will be prejudiced in his defence, specially in cases where it is sought to implicate him for acts not committed by himself but by others with whom he is in company—Behari Mahton, 11 Cal. 106; Amritlal, 42 Cal. 957; Chhakari, 26 Cr.L.J. 567, 85 I.C. 711, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 439; Kedar Nath, 29 C.W.N. 408, 41 C.L.J. 172, 86 I.C. 705, 26 Cr.L.J. 849. An accused is entitled to be informed with the greatest precision what acts he is said to have committed, and under what section of the Penal Code these acts fall—Shoo Sankar, 2 O.W.N. 862, 27 Cr.L.J. 62. A charge is a first notice to the prisoner, of the matter whereof he is accused, and it must convey to him with sufficient clearness and certainty that which the prosecution intended to prove against him and of which he will have to clear himself—Ram Subheg, 19 C.W.N. 972 (988), 16 Cr.L.J. 611. Failure to state in any substantial form the nature and particulars of the offence alleged against the accused would in some cases be a fatal defect which would vitiate the whole proceedings. Where an offence charged involved consequences which may be stated in a general form, such as may arise in a case of arson where a man may by one act of arson set fire and destroy several stacks of hays of several persons, no particular is required, the nature of the offence being sufficiently stated by the date, time and place of the setting fire; but extortion or obtaining money from persons by unlawful means involves stating with some approach to accuracy the approximate amounts alleged to have been obtained from each person and the nature of the extortion used against each person—Ram Chandar, 17 Cr L J. 411 (All.).

The essence of a good charge is that it should contain such particulars of the manner in which the alleged offence was committed as will be sufficient to give the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged—Ghousbux, A I R. 1935 Sind 34, 28 S L R. 304, 36-Cr.L J. 598, 154 I.C. 915

The existence of aggravating circumstances which go to enhance the punishment must be set out in the charge—Mukta, Ratanlal 55 (56).

Abduction and Kidnapping:—Where although the accused was charged with the offence of kidnapping only, the Sessions Judge left it to the jury to convict the accused of the offence of abduction under the same section, namely, sec 366, I. P. C., held that notice of a charge of kidnapping under sec 366, I. P. C., is not a fair, proper or sufficient notice of a charge of abduction and that as it is impossible to say that no prejudice has been caused to the accused in the circumstances of the case, the conviction and sentence should be set aside—Isu Sheikh, 31 C.W.N. 171, A I R. 1927 Cal 200, 99 I.C. 937, 44 C.L.J. 584, 28 Cr L J. 201; Fedu Sheikh, 32 C.W.N. 1245.

Where the accused has been charged in one head under one charge with kidnapping or abduction, held that they are distinct offences and separate charges should have been drawn up if it was desired to charge him with both offences—Mafizaddi, 31 C.W.N. 940 (943), 28 Cr.L.J. 805, 104 I.C. 245, 45 C.L.J. 561, A I R. 1927 Cal. 644. But see Prafulla, A I R. 1930 Cal. 209, 1930 Cr.C. 209, 31 Cr.L.J. 903, 57 Cal 1074, 125 I.C. 656, 50 C.L.J. 593, where it has been laid down that one count of charge setting out both the offences in the alternative does not contravene the requirements of the law and does not in the least cause prejudice to the accused. Following Mafizaddi, and distinguishing Prafulla, it has been laid down that where the prosecution is in some doubt whether the offence disclosed is that of kidnapping or that of abduction, nothing is easier than to frame two charges and take the verdict of the jury upon them both—Mahomed Ali, A I R. 1933 Cal 194, 1933 Cr.C. 245, 34 Cr.L.J. 1107, 145 I.C. 925. The view taken in Isu Sheikh's case and Mafizaddi's case was also followed in Mozam Dofadar, A I R. 1933 Cal 563, 144 I.C. 93, 34 Cr.L.J. 682, 1933 Cr.C. 940 and Jangli Mian, 35 Cr.L.J. 814, 148 I.C. 791, 15 P.L.T. 228, A I R. 1934 Pat 170, 1934 Cr.C. 367. It is no doubt desirable that an accused should be charged separately on one head for kidnapping and on another for abduction. But the omission in splitting up the whole thing into two parts would not be sufficient for interference, unless it appears that that omission has caused a failure of justice or that the accused was in any way prejudiced thereby—Ramizulla, 37 C.W.N. 1071, 35 Cr.L.J. 487, 147 I.C. 828, A I R. 1934 Cal. 85, 1934 Cr.C. 50. The joinder of these two offences in the alternative in the one charge is an irregularity cured by sec 537, Cr. P. C., and not an illegality vitiating the trial—Rajabuddin, 37 C.W.N. 1074, 34 Cr.L.J. 1219, 146 I.C. 305, A I R. 1933 Cal 676, 1933 Cr.C. 1158; Allahrakho, A I R. 1934 Sind 164 (166), 36 Cr.L.J. 231, 1934 Cr.C. 1266, 152 I.C. 1061. See also Zamin, 8 O.W.N. 1325, 136 I.C. 243, A I R. 1932 Oudh 28, 1932 Cr.C. 60, Ind Rul 1932 Oudh 99, 33 Cr.L.J. 275.

It is always wise when a charge is made in respect of the same occurrence both of kidnapping and abducting that two heads should be made. But it is not necessary to go so far as to agree with the observation in Mafizaddi, supra, that it is illegal to make the two charges under one head. The point to be seen in each individual case is whether the accused person was prejudiced thereby. When the Judge carefully explained the difference between abduction and kidnapping and the jury fully understood the position and acquitted the accused men of the charge of kidnapping under sec. 366, I. P. C., but convicted them of abduction under sec. 366, I. P. C., the defect of the charge did not prejudice the accused men—Ebadi Khan v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 674 (676), 176 I.C. 104, A I R. 1938 Cal 410, 11 R.C. 36. See also Nanda Ghosh v. Emp., in Note 777.

Abetment:—It is open to the prosecution to charge abetment generally, and then, if the evidence did not establish abetment other than in one particular form, to rely on this particular form for a conviction. The charge will amount to notice to the accused that they have to meet a case of abetment in one or more of the different ways indicated in sec. 107, I. P. C. It will no doubt be better, having regard to the evidence which the prosecution have at their disposal, to make the charge more specific—Harendra Kumar Mondal v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 395 (396), A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 125 (126), 174 I.C. 36, 66 C.L.J. 196, 10 R.C. 607.

Adultery:—See Note 725.

Arson:—In a case of mischief by fire with intent to cause the destruction of a dwelling-house, the charge should lay the intent as an intent to cause the destruction, not of a house simply, but of a house used as a human dwelling—Durbarro Pote, 8 W.R. 30 (Cr.).

Cheating:—In a charge under sec. 420, I. P. C., it would be more proper to put the exact dates upon which the offences were alleged to have been committed. But it is not possible to set aside the conviction on the ground that no clear date than the month is given in the charge, unless it was clearly shown that the omission to give the exact date has materially prejudiced the accused at his trial—Farzand Ali, 27 Cr.L.J. 909, 96 I.C. 221, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 347, 1926 Pat.H.C.C. 207.

See also Note 729.

Lumping of several cases of cheating in one charge should be avoided—Chandra Narain Jha v. The King-Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 523 (524), A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 603, 6 BR. 554, 187 I.C. 862, 1940 P.W.N. 557. As for its effect see Note 747.

Conspiracy:—In a conspiracy case the accused can be charged with conspiring with persons unknown, but if they are charged with conspiring with persons known then such persons must be named in the charge—Lalit Mohan, 15 C.W.N. 98 (99). The plea that the charge is defective in so far as it does not specify the persons who are parties to the conspiracy is sufficiently cured by the provisions of sec. 537, Cr. P. C.—Haji Samo, 28 Cr.L.J. 426 (430), 101 I.C. 458, A.I.R. 1927 Sind 161. Under secs. 221 and 222, Cr. P. C., there is no duty on the prosecution to mention fellow conspirators by name in a charge of conspiracy. Where the accused knew perfectly well who his fellow conspirators were and their names are mentioned in the complaint, it cannot seriously be contended that he suffered any prejudice from the fact that their names were not mentioned in the charge—Manabendra, A.I.R. 1933 All. 498 (501), 1933 Cr.C. 833, 35 Cr.L.J. 768, 148 I.C. 833.

Where a charge of conspiracy contained the words that the three accused agreed with each other "or" with others unknown to commit a certain offence, it cannot be said on a plain reading of the charge that a conspiracy was charged in the alternative. The word "or" to which so much importance is attached is not used as a disjunctive, meaning that the charge is the one alternative or the other, but it is used merely because the complicity of other persons in the conspiracy was not so certain as that of the three accused. The reason for saying "or others unknown" instead of "and other unknown" is to avoid a possible argument that having charged a conspiracy of which the accused were members along with others, the prosecution could not succeed by merely proving a conspiracy among the three accused. A conspiracy only among the three accused would be distinct conspiracy from one to which the accused and others were parties, and as a conspiracy charge must be proved as laid, the prosecution would naturally not be taking any risks by charging a conspiracy other than the particular one which they might be able to prove. It is impossible to say that the terms in which the charge was actually framed could or did mislead the accused in any way: at no stage were they left in any uncertainty as to what was alleged against them. Even supposing there was any defect, it was not such as would not be sufficiently met by sec. 225 or sec. 537, Cr. P. C.—Ram Krishna Sinha v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 417 (422), 174 I.C. 513, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 195, 42 C.W.N. 246, 10 R.C. 693.

In cases of criminal conspiracy it would be unreasonable to require the Crown to establish with accuracy when the conspiracy began or ended. These facts are best known to the conspirators. Defrauding the public by deceitful means is an offence and the allegation in the charge of such an object without specifying the persons defrauded was sufficient to maintain a charge of conspiracy—Dur Mahomed, 35 Cr.L.J. 1337 (1339), 151 I.C. 494, 28 S.L.R. 119, 1934 Cr.C. 628, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 57.

There is a distinction between a charge of an offence and a charge of conspiracy to commit such an offence or offences. In the former, particulars are no doubt necessary, and such particulars must be within certain limits as laid down in the Code, but not so in the latter. It is well-settled that in stating the object of a conspiracy, the same certainty is not required as in indictment for the offence conspired to be committed. See Archibald's Criminal Pleading, Edition 29, p. 1419 and the cases cited there: Reg. v. Ripsal, (1762) 3 Burr 1320, 1 W Bl. 368; Reg. v. Blake, (1884) 6 Q.B. 126, 13 L.J.M.C. 131, 8 Jur. 145; and Sydsreiff v. Reg., (1848) 11 Q.B. 245, 12 Jur. 418. So an indictment charging a conspiracy "by divers false pretences and indirect means to cheat and defraud A of his money was held good"—Reg. v. Gompertz, (1847) 9 Q.B. 824, 16 L.J.Q.B. 121, 11 Jur. 204, 2 Cox. C.C. 145, 72 R.R. 458; Aspinall v. Reg., (1887) 2 Q.B.D. 48, 46 L.J.M.C. 145, 36 L.T. 297, 25 W.R. 283, 13 Cox C.C. 563 and Rex v. Gill, (1818) 2 Bl. & Ald 204, 20 R.R. 40. Ram Krishna Sinha v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 417 (421), 174 I.C. 513, A.I.R. 1938 Cal 195, 42 C.W.N. 246, 10 R.C. 693.

Where there is a charge of conspiracy a prisoner can be tried of all other offences committed in the course of the conspiracy case even if those offences are more than three—Bishambhar, 26 Cr.L.J. 1602 (1606), 90 I.C. 706, 2 O.W.N. 760, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 161. Accused persons may be charged at one trial with the offence of conspiracy and also with the offences alleged to have been committed in pursuance of the conspiracy because substantive offence of conspiracy and the offences committed in pursuance thereof form one and the same transaction. Such a joint trial is permissible under the provisions of sec 239, Cr. P. C. The fact that an accused person has been acquitted on a conspiracy charge, does not operate to show that the other offences with which he was charged were not part of the same transaction with the other offences charged at the trial, and vitiate the trial. Legality of the joint trial depends on the accusation and not on the result of the trial—Ram Das, 35 Cr.L.J. 1349 (1353), 151 I.C. 442, 1934 Cr.C. 130, 1934 A.L.J. 852, A.I.R. 1934 All 61. There is no illegality in the joinder of a main charge of conspiracy against all the accused persons with minor charges of different overt acts against different of them—C S Joseph v. Emp., 41 C.W.N. 251 (255); Akhil Bandhu Ray v. Emp., 10 R.C. 790, 39 Cr.L.J. 595, 175 I.C. 409, A.I.R. 1938 Cal 258, I.L.R. (1938) 1 Cal 588; *Ram Krishna Sinha v. (H.C.) 467, 1938 A.L.J. 769, 1938 A.Cr.C. 75; Surajpalsingh, 39 Cr.L.J. 818 (825), I.L.R. 1938 Nag. 516, 176 I.C. 853, 11 R.N. 81, 1938 N.L.J. 185, A.I.R. 1938 Nag 328. Where there is a conspiracy having one or more objects in view and certain offences are committed in pursuance of such conspiracy, the several offences generally form part of the same transaction within the meaning of that expression as used in sec. 235, Cr. P. C. The principle that where there is a conspiracy and certain offences are committed in pursuance of such conspiracy, those several offences will generally form part of the same transaction will also apply where the several offences are by different persons. It follows, therefore, that where there is a conspiracy and specific offences are committed in pursuance of such conspiracy, persons who are parties to that conspiracy and concerned in the specific offences can lawfully be tried in one and the same trial—Rash Behari Shaw v. Emp., A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 753 (759), 1936 Cr.C. 1043, 168 I.C. 657, 38 Cr.L.J. 545, 9 R.C. 853, 41 C.W.N. 225. To legalize such a trial it is only necessary to show that there was a bona fide accusation of conspiracy embracing all the criminal acts; it is not necessary for the prosecution to establish that in fact there was such a conspiracy. The matter must be looked at as it appeared to the Magistrate when framing charges—Sanyasi Gain v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 1018, 171 I.C. 183, 10 R.C. 235, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 269. Whatever scope of connotation may be included in the words "the same transaction", it is enough to say that if several persons conspire to commit offences, and commit overt acts in pursuance of the conspiracy (a circumstance which makes the act of one the act of each and all the conspirators) these acts are committed in the course of the same transaction, which embraces the conspiracy and the acts done under it. The common concert and agreement which constitute the conspiracy, serve to unify the acts done in pursuance of it—Babulal Choukhani v. King-Emp., 42 C.W.N. 621 (627), 174 I.C. 1, A.I.R. 1938 P.C. 130, 39 Cr.L.J. 452, 1938 A.L.R. 309, 1938 A.L.J. 382, 4 B.R. 490, 10 R.P.C. 250, 19 P.L.T. 343, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 647, 1938 O.W.N. 416, 1938 O.L.R. 189, 1938 M.W.N. 505, 67 C.L.J. 162 (P.C.). These observations apply to cases where a charge of conspiracy has been formulated, so that the alleged common concert serves to unify the acts done in pursuance of the conspiracy. It is entirely different where the charge is restricted in its scope to abetment by conspiracy to do a specified act. The scope of the enquiry is thereby restricted and not enlarged, so as to embrace all acts and sundry done in pursuance of a general conspiracy to do similar acts extending over not only the period involved in the charge of abetment, but over a much larger period, anterior and subsequent—Ramchandra Rango v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 579 (592), 181 I.C. 870, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 129, 41 Bom.L.R. 98. See also the rulings cited in Note 757, (5) and (10) and Note 778, (7) and (11). But a conspiracy and acts done in furtherance of its common object have no community with separate acts which may be committed by a conspirator for individual gain. Consequently acts, which are alleged to have been committed individually by the various accused outside the conspiracy and not in pursuance thereof, are not part of the same transaction and cannot form basis of charges triable jointly with the charge of conspiracy—Bishan Sahai, A.I.R. 1937 All. 714, 1937 A.W.R. 748, 1937 A.L.J. 1073, I.L.R. 1937 All. 779, 1937 A.L.R. 935, 171 I.C. 994, 1937 A.Cr.C. 119, 39 Cr.L.J. 38. If only a number of unrelated conspiracies were proved, the trial would be found to be bad for misjoinder of parties under sec. 239, Cr. P. C., although prima facie on the prosecution case as alleged the joinder was quite legal—Md. Ismail, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 97 (99), 38 Cr.L.J. 106 (108), 165 I.C. 913, 1936 Cr.C. 561, I.L.R. 1936 Nag. 152.

Recitals of specific offences committed in pursuance of the conspiracy are at most a surplusage and may be ignored—Kishinchand, A.I.R. 1926 Sind 171, 20 S.L.R. 18; Mohansingh, A.I.R. 1930 Sind 164 (167), 1930 Cr.C. 649, 31 Cr.L.J. 949, 126 I.C. 55. There is no objection to acts committed by conspirators in pursuance of a conspiracy being enumerated in a charge of criminal conspiracy. Whether they amount to separate offences or not, the object of the charge is to give reasonable notice to the accused of the accusation which they have to meet. If, in order to prove a criminal conspiracy, evidence is being led of a greater number of culpable acts alleged to have been committed in pursuance of the conspiracy, the more care should be taken to refrain from bewildering the accused or prejudicing them in the eyes of the jury by framing a great number of additional charges against them individually—Dur Afahomed, 35 Cr.L.J. 1337 (1340), 151 I.C. 491, 28 S.L.R. 119, 1934 Cr.C. 628, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 57.

There is no obligation on the Crown to specify in the charge the means used by the conspirators for gaining their unlawful object. The gist of the offence of criminal conspiracy is the agreement itself, and where the object of the agreement is to do an unlawful act and not to do a lawful act by an unlawful means, it is sufficient to specify the unlawful object without specifying the means adopted by all or any of the conspirators to gain that object—Haji Samo, 28 Cr.L.J. 426 (428), 101 I.C. 458, A.I.R. 1927 Sind 161. For a charge of conspiracy, only an agreement is sufficient; so it is sufficient to include in the charge the agreement which is alleged to have been arrived at between the conspirators—Bishambhar, 26 Cr.L.J. 1602, 2 O.W.N. 760, 90 I.C. 706, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 161.

There is no authority for the view that before an offence of criminal conspiracy under sec. 120A (1), I. P. C., can be charged, the charge must state in all its details the actual specific acts which the conspirators are alleged to have agreed to do or to cause to be done. It is sufficient to say that the accused have agreed to do or cause to be done an illegal act—Htin Gyaw, 29 Cr.L.J. 555 (560), 109 I.C. 491, 6 Rang. 6, A.I.R. 1928 Rang 118.

When separate charges for an offence of conspiracy and substantive offences committed in pursuance of the same conspiracy are framed in the same trial, specific charges for substantive offences need not contain a statement that they were committed in pursuance of the conspiracy. The specific charges are clearly to be read with the conspiracy charge—Ram Krishna Sinha v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 417 (422), 174 I.C. 513, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 195, 42 C.W.N. 246; Babulal Chaukhani v. King-Emp., 42 C.W.N. 621 (629), 174 I.C. 1, A.I.R. 1938 P.C. 130, 39 Cr.L.J. 452, 1938 A.L.R. 309, 1938 A.L.J. 382, 4 B.R. 490, 10 R.P.C. 250, 19 P.L.T. 343, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 647, 1938 O.W.N. 416, 1938 O.L.R. 189, 1938 M.W.N. 505, 67 C.L.J. 162 (P.C.); Maung Ba Chit, 7 Rang 821, 31 Cr.L.J. 387 (390).

The punishment for the offence of conspiracy under sec. 120B, I. P. C., depends upon whether the illegal act has or has not been carried out. In the former case the punishment will be in accordance with sec. 109, I. P. C., i.e., it will be the same as for the offence itself. In the latter case it will be in accordance with sec. 116, I. P. Code. When conspiracy is charged it is always open to the prosecution to charge further that the illegal acts which were the object of the conspiracy have been carried out. Acts done in pursuance of the conspiracy cannot be separately punished unless these acts are separately charged and particularized as required by the Code—Karamalli Gulamalli, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 481 (484), 40 Bom.L.R. 192, 40 Cr.L.J. 118, 178 I.C. 706, I.L.R. 1939 Bom 42.

Where the accused were charged with the offence of conspiracy to commit criminal breach of trust and with committing criminal breach of trust in pursuance of that conspiracy, and in the alternative, upon the same facts, when one of the accused was charged as the principal offender with criminal breach of trust and the others as abettors, the accused should be convicted under one or other of the alternative charges; they should not have been convicted under both—Balupal Hotchand, 39 Cr.L.J. 890 (891), 177 I.C. 346, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 171.

Where a conspirator is present at the commission of the offence, he may under the provisions of sec. 114, I. P. C., be deemed to have committed the offence, but if that is the way in which the accused is to be made responsible for the offence, he should be specially charged with such offence as read with the provisions of sec. 114, I. P. C.—Alimuddin, 52 Cal. 253 (266), 29 C.W.N. 173, 26 Cr.L.J. 487. See also Karamalli Gulamalli, supra.

A person cannot be convicted of the offence of criminal conspiracy without there being a charge under sec. 120B, I. P. Code—Bhikari, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 561 (563), 36 Cr.L.J. 17, 1934 Cr.C. 1215, 13 Pat. 729, 152 I.C. 282, 15 P.L.T. 523. It is a sickening waste of public time that charges of conspiracy which always mean a long trial, however convenient the prosecution may think it is to the success of their case, should be introduced when no sort of proper appraisal of the preliminary prosecution evidence has apparently been adopted by the prosecuting authorities before the case comes to its actual trial—Amitava Ghosh, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 693, 38 Cr.L.J. 201, 166 I.C. 384, 1936 Cr.C. 954.

Criminal breach of trust or dishonest misappropriation of money:— See Notes under sec. 222, Cr. P. Code.

The wording of sec. 222, Cr. P. C., refers to a single accused; and it must be so, because it is impossible to hold that two persons can be guilty of misappropriation of the same parcel of money. One may be guilty of misappropriating a portion of it or one may be guilty of abetting the other. The misappropriation of the actual money must be the act of a single person, and, therefore, sec. 239, Cr. P. C., has no application, because more than one person could not be charged with the offence of misappropriation of a single sum—Girwar Narain, 16 C.W.N. 600 (602), 13 Cr.L.J. 506, 15 I.C. 650. This case was followed by the Rangoon High Court in K. Meeriah, A.I.R. 1931 Rang 90, 1931 Cr.C. 378, 132 I.C. 549, 32 Cr.L.J. 930, 8 Rang. 632. But Otter, J. observed: "I wish, however, expressly to guard myself against expressing the opinion that in no case could more than one person be guilty of misappropriating the same sum of money, or that sec. 222 (2) of the Code could never apply to persons jointly charged." Obviously two persons cannot misappropriate the same sum of money independently, but there is no reason why they should not co-operate in doing it. Section 34, I. P. C., would enable two or more persons to be charged jointly with misappropriation of the same sum and it is not necessary to incorporate sec. 34, I. P. C., in the charge—Baburao Tatyrao, A.I.R. 1936 Bom 379 (383), 38 Bom L.R. 946, 38 Cr.L.J. 9, 165 I.C. 867, 1936 Cr.C. 924, 9 R.B. 171. Thus, the Bombay High Court has taken a view which is different from that of the Calcutta High Court.

Where nothing was stated in a charge under sec. 405, I. P. C., to indicate which of the several offences mentioned in the section was intended nor was it stated therein who made the alleged entrustment, or who suffered from the alleged breach of trust, the charge was prolix, indefinite and embarrassing—Abinash Chandra, 63 Cal. 18 (20), 161 I.C. 280, 37 Cr.L.J. 439.

The charge which does not unfold to the person accused of criminal breach of trust, even approximately, the dates between which he dishonestly converted to his own use the property in question, and leaves that part of the prosecution case in obscurity by referring merely to the date in which the conversion was discovered, must necessarily seriously prejudice the accused in his defence in the trial and is, therefore, bad in law—Baburao Tatyrao, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 379 (383), 38 Bom L.R. 946, 38 Cr.L.J. 9, 165 I.C. 867, 1936 Cr.C. 924, 9 R.B. 171.

Culpable homicide:—Causing of death of each person killed is a separate or different offence, and "distinct" within the meaning of secs. 235 and 233, Cr. P. C.; and under the first part of the latter section a single count of murder of several persons is bad. A separate charge should be framed in respect of each instance of murder when several offences of murder were committed in course of the same transaction—Alimuddin, 52 Cal. 253 (264), 29 C.W.N. 173, 26 Cr.L.J. 487. It is undesirable to lump together two separate offences of murder, even when committed by only one accused; under the one head of charge—Afsaruddin Naseraddi, 40 Cr.L.J. 290, 179 I.C. 910, 42 C.W.N. 1235, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 32, 67 Cr.L.J. 580. See also Raj Bahadur, 35 Cr.L.J. 1496, 152 I.C. 103, 11 O.W.N. 1309, 1934 Cr.C. 1379, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 499, where it was laid down that it would have been well, if the Sessions Judge had tried the accused in two separate trials in respect of murder of two persons. Where one night the accused killed his wife by hitting her on the head with a grinding stone, went to the house of a neighbour of his and caused grievous hurt to him with the stone and then went to the house of his sister's husband whom he killed with the stone in the course of an altercation and was put up upon his trial with respect to three separate incidents, two involving charges of murder and one the charge of grievous hurt, held that the joint trial of the two charges of murder and one of grievous hurt cannot be supported as these incidents cannot be contended to form part of the same transaction as according to the prosecution case they occurred at different times and in different places during the same night and there was no evidence to suggest any connection between them and that the proper procedure to be adopted is to frame two separate charges under sec. 302, I. P. C., against the accused in respect of the deaths of his wife and sister's husband in one trial under the provisions of sec. 234, Cr. P. C., and to hold a separate trial in respect of the offence of grievous hurt—Afsaruddin Naseraddi, supra. But see Ganganna v. Emp., 1937 M.W.N. 463 where, under similar circumstances, two murders were held to have been committed in the course of the same transaction. See also Fauzi, cited in Note 758 (9). A single head of charge under secs. 302/149, I. P. C., in respect of three persons killed in the same transaction, is illegal. The High Court thought it unsafe to uphold the conviction thereunder without going through all the facts to arrive at new findings for itself—Azimuddy, 54 Cal. 237 (248).

A charge of murder should set forth whether the blows inflicted were inflicted with the intention of causing death or they were sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death and were intentionally inflicted. A charge under sec. 302, I. P. C., should follow the language of sec. 300, I. P. C., which contains the definition of murder—Sheo Shankar, 27 Cr.L.J. 62, 91 I.C. 238, 2 O.W.N. 862, AIR 1926 Oudh 148.

Where the enquiring Magistrate committed the accused for trial of an offence under sec. 304, I. P. C., but the Sessions Judge altered the section to one under sec. 302, I. P. C., without changing the substance of the charge which remained the same, held that the trial was not a mere irregularity but an illegality not curable by sec. 537, Cr. P. C., and that the substance of the charge was stated in words and the matter was not cured by the mention of sec. 302, I. P. C.—Satnaram Lal, AIR 1935 Pat. 431, 16 P.L.T. 526, 36 Cr.L.J. 1506, 158 I.C. 1129, 1935 Cr.C. 1102.

Section 304, I. P. C., is divided into two parts. It is desirable that in the charge under this section so much of the definition of offence should be stated as to give the accused clear notice of the exact matter with which he is charged—Ditto, AIR 1935 Sind 23, 28 S.L.R. 295. But see Nga Tha Aye, AIR 1935 Rang. 299, where it has been laid down that the question of intention or knowledge should never be mentioned in a charge of homicide.

Dacoity:—Alternative charges under secs. 395 and 457, I. P. C., are not bad in law—Bikram Ali, 31 Cr.L.J. 610, 124 I.C. 66, 50 C.L.J. 467, AIR 1930 Cal. 139, 57 Cal. 801, 1930 Cr.C. 139. See also Gaur Mallu, cited in Note 725.

Defamation:—The charge should contain the name of the person whose reputation is injuriously affected—Weir, 3rd Edn., 357.

The plea that there was publication but not publication to the person mentioned in the charge is highly technical. The defect in the charge, if any, can be cured by sec. 537, Cr. P. C.—Tikamdas, 27 Cr.L.J. 947, 96 I.C. 499, AIR 1927 Sind 58.

The joint trial of more persons than one who are associated together in circulating on different occasions defamatory statements with the common object of injuring the complainant, is not illegal—Ali Mahomed, 30 Cr.L.J. 1073 (1074), 119 I.C. 532, AIR 1930 Sind 62, Ind. Rul. 1929 Sind 212. See Notes 725 and 779 (11).

False statements:—It is not proper to frame a single charge in respect of two or three statements alleged to be false. The proper course is that each distinct offence should be the subject of a distinct charge—Ramdin Lal v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 97 (98), 165 I.C. 970, 9 R.P. 246, 3 B.R. 117, 18 P.L.T. 91, AIR 1937 Pat. 176. See Notes 745 and 775.

Falsification of accounts:—A charge of falsification of accounts should specify the particular accounts which have been falsified. A charge containing a vague and general allegation of falsification is irregular—Matji Lal, 26 Cal. 560 (563). See Notes 726 and 754.

Forgery:—Where the charge under sec. 467, I. P. C., did not set out the intention of the accused, the charge is vitiated—Haider Ali, 17 C.W.N. 354, 14 Cr.L.J. 129.

House Trespass:—A comparison of secs. 456 and 457, I. P. C., would go to show that no specification of the intention is necessary for a conviction under the former section, though it must be proved that the intention was a guilty one. It is only where the charge is under sec. 457 that the intention is to be specifically alleged and proved—Balmakand v. Ghanasam, 22 Cal. 391 (403). To sustain a conviction under sec. 456, I. P. C., it is not necessary to specify the criminal intention in the charge; it is sufficient if a guilty intention is proved, such as is contemplated by sec. 441, I. P. C.—Karali Prasad, 44 Cal. 358 (364), distinguishing Jharu, 16 C.W.N. 696, where it has been laid down that although it is not necessary under sec. 456, I. P. C., to specify any particular offence, when such particular offence is specified under sec. 457, I. P. C., it is incompetent for the Court to convict of house-breaking with some other intent. Though it cannot be laid down as a general rule that in all cases a prosecution for house-trespass with the alleged object of theft must fail if the object is not proved, when a charge has been definitely framed in which theft is alleged, the accused cannot be convicted of house-trespass with some other object without an amendment of the original charge unless the Court is satisfied that he has not been in any way prejudiced in his defence by the omission to amend the charge—Hajari Sonar, 26 C.W.N. 344, 24 Cr.L.J. 119, 71 I.C. 247. See also Mahomed Hossain, 41 Cal. 743, 18 C.W.N. 1247 and Lala, 12 Cr.L.J. 483, 12 I.C. 91, 23 P.W.R. 1911 (Cr.).

A charge under sec. 457, I. P. C., stating that the accused did a particular act in order to commit a particular offence "or any other offence punishable with imprisonment" is improper as the accused should know the specific offence with which he is charged. The defect is, however, cured by sec. 537, Cr. P. Code—Balaram, 25 Cr.L.J. 1186, 62 I.C. 50, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 160. See Note 768.

Hurt:—Where only one charge was framed against the accused in respect of the hurt caused to two persons, held that the omission to frame two separate charges was an irregularity cured by sec. 537, Cr. P. Code—Ram Subheg, 19 C.W.N. 972, 16 Cr.L.J. 641.

A Magistrate will be well advised if he frames two separate charges for grievous hurt inflicted on one person and for simple hurt inflicted on another. To frame a single charge for these offences is a formal defect curable by sec. 537, Cr. P. Code—Meudi Lal, 35 Cr.L.J. 935, 149 I.C. 231, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 244, 11 O.W.N. 680. A single head of charge alleging offences under secs. 323 and 325, read with sec. 149, I. P. C., and a single head of charge of several offences under sec. 353, I. P. C., the offences mentioned in the two charges having been committed against different persons in the course of the same transaction, are illegal as contravening the provisions of sec. 233, Cr. P. C., and the High Court, to be on the safe side, set aside the convictions on the charges. There was, however, no illegality in maintaining the conviction under the remaining charge which was not open to objection—Radhanath, 50 Cal. 94. Two accused were charged jointly under sec. 324, I. P. C., for causing hurt to three different persons with a dao and were convicted under that section. The Appellate Court altered the conviction to one under sec. 352, I. P. C., as regards one of the accused for using lathi against two of them. Held that the irregularity in the charge might have prejudiced the accused in their trial and that they should be tried by a different Magistrate—Sital Chandra, 17 C.W.N. 419, 14 Cr.L.J. 212, 19 I.C. 308.

Where the accused is called upon to meet a charge under sec. 353, I. P. C., he cannot, on failure of that charge, be convicted under sec. 352, I. P. C., for assaulting a witness who did not even lodge any complaint—Akbar Momin, 6 C.W.N. 202.

Perjury:—In charges of false evidence under sec. 193, I. P. C., it is most important that the accused should know exactly what words or expressions he is charged with having uttered, and in what respect they are supposed to be false—Dowlut Moonshee, 8 W.R. 95 (Cr.). In a case of giving false evidence the charge should show the particular matter in respect of which the accused is put upon his trial. An accused is not properly tried upon a charge which merely sets out two long depositions made by him, which are in some respects contradictory to each other, leaving the person charged to find out for himself in respect of which particular contradiction it is that he is said to have committed the offence of giving false evidence. No more of the accused's depositions ought to be set out, or referred to, than is necessary in order to show the particular contradictions or false statements in respect to which the offence of giving false evidence is charged—Queen v. Soonder Mohoorree, 9 W.R. 25 (Cr.). See also Queen v. Udit Singh, 25 W.R. 46 (Cr.). A charge under sec. 193, I. P. C., for giving false evidence in answer to certain questions in the course of a deposition, contained the questions and answers but did not specify which answers were alleged to be false. Held that the charge was defective—Oates, 38 C.L.J. 163, 25 Cr.L.J. 177, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 104, 76 I.C. 417. It is irregular in a charge of intentionally giving false evidence to put the whole of a long statement bodily to a witness at once—Isab Mandal, 28 Cal. 348. Charges of perjury should contain a distinct assertion with regard to each statement intended to be characterised as perjury, that it was made, that it was untrue in fact, and that the accused knew it to be so when he made it; and the investigation of the Court should be directed to each of those points singly—Queen v. Kalichurn Laharee, 9 W.R. 54 (Cr.). It is the duty of a Magistrate making a commitment for giving false evidence to set out the precise words recorded, as used by the accused, containing the statement which he undertakes to prove false—Queen v. Boodhun Ahur, 17 W.R. 32 (Cr.). Charges of perjury ought to be based strictly upon the exact words which are used by the person who is charged. No evidence which does not profess to give those exact words can alone be a safe foundation for a conviction—Queen v. Mungal Dass, 23 W.R. 28 (Cr.). A criminal prosecution cannot go on such a vague charge as "You on or about the 7th day of May 1901 at Leslie gave false evidence in a judicial proceeding, namely, in a case under sec. 133 of the Code, and thereby committed an offence under sec. 193, I. P. C., within my cognizance"—Hira Nand Ojha, 10 C.W.N. 1099, 4 C.L.J. 558. A charge of perjury is drawn incorrectly when it charges the accused with having made statements in their depositions "which they knew or had reason to know to be false"—Dwarkanath, 34 Cr.L.J. 322 (329), 142 I.C. 335, 37 C.W.N. 514, 37 M.L.W. 584, 1933 M.W.N. 409, 1933 Cr.C. 442, 35 Bom.L.R. 507, 14 P.L.T. 305, 1933 A.L.J. 645, 57 C.L.J. 177, A.I.R. 1933 P.C. 124, 66 M.L.J. 466 (P.C.).

In framing a charge for giving false evidence under sec. 193, I. P. C., the charge should be precise, and where the accused is charged with giving false evidence on three different occasions, each occasion should form the subject of a distinct head in the charge—Queen v. Fejdar Roy, 9 W.R. 14. But the making of any number of false statements in the same deposition is one aggregate case of giving false evidence, and charges of false evidence cannot be multiplied according to the number of false statements contained in the deposition—Rakhai Chandra, 36 Cal. 808 (814), 9 C.L.J. 690, 10 Cr.L.J. 150, 12 C.W.N. 942, 2 I.C. 697, following 6 Mad.H.C. xxvii. For contra see Sejmal, 51 Bom. 310 (328), 29 Bom.L.R. 170, 28 Cr.L.J. 373.

It is wholly incorrect to charge a number of persons jointly with intentionally giving false evidence under sec. 193, I. P. Code. A charge under that section should show what the statement is which the accused persons or any one of them are alleged to have made, and it should disclose the exact date on which the offence charged was committed, and the Court or officer before whom the false evidence was given—Queen v. Moharaj Misser, 16 W.R. 47 (Cr.).

As for the joint trial see Note 775. See also Note 763.

Provoking a breach of the peace:—In a case under sec. 504, I. P. Code, where the accused was perfectly aware of the words complained of, for using which he was being tried, the failure of the Magistrate to specifically mention the objectionable words in the charge did not vitiate the trial as the accused was not in any way prejudiced by such omission—Shankar Lal, 28 Cr.L.J. 821 (822), 104 I.C. 437, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 702, 9 Lah. 280, 29 P.L.R. 469.

Publication of Obscene Books:—In a charge for having published an obscene book the particular passages alleged to be obscene should be specified; but omission to do so is not fatal to the trial if the accused is not prejudiced—Kailash Chandra, 36 C.W.N. 985, 33 Cr.L.J. 771, 56 C.L.J. 123, 139 I.C. 461, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 651, 1932 Cr.C. 608, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 623.

Rioting:—It is not necessary in a charge of rioting to set out the allegation that there were five or more persons actuated by a common object. Rioting is an offence with a specific name and it is sufficient to describe the offence by that name and that name only. Section 222, cl. (2), Cr. P. C., clearly contemplates a case of this description and was enacted to meet a case of this kind. Where a person is charged with rioting it means that prosecution alleges that all the necessary ingredients constituting the offence of rioting are present. It is not necessary for the prosecution to set out what these ingredients are.—Ram Chandra, 29 Cr.L.J. 823 (825), 111 I.C. 327, 55 Cal. 879, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 732. See also Kudrutulla, 39 Cal. 781, 13 Cr.L.J. 218, 14 I.C. 314. Where the charge sheet simply charged the accused with rioting and voluntarily causing simple hurt without explaining what rioting meant, the irregularity in the charge sheet was certainly cured by the provisions of sec. 535 or 537, Cr. P. C., as there was no prejudice to the accused all of whom were represented by Counsel.—Deep Chand, 36 Cr.L.J. 1260, 157 I.C. 915, A.I.R. 1935 All. 627, 1935 A.L.J. 666, 1935 Cr.C. 641.

In a charge of rioting, the common object of the unlawful assembly should be specified; otherwise the accused cannot be properly convicted of rioting.—Tafazzul Ahmed, 26 Cal. 630; Behari, 11 Cal. 105; Paresh Nath, 33 Cal. 295. The common object should always be stated when a charge is framed under sec. 143, I. P. C., or the connected sections—Kashi v. Damu, 25 Cr.L.J. 524, 77 I.C. 988, 27 C.W.N. 28. In all cases in which there is a charge under sec. 147, I. P. C., the common object ought to be stated. But where the common object is not stated and a conviction has been had upon the charge the conviction is not necessarily bad. It is necessary to see whether or not the accused has been misled by the omission and the omission has caused a failure of justice.—Budhu v. Lachmina, 9 C.W.N. 599. Failure to specify the common object in a charge under sec. 147, I. P. C., is only an irregularity covered by sec. 537, Cr. P. C.—Bishnath, 36 Cr.L.J. 1198, 157 I.C. 378, 1935 O.W.N. 922, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 488, 1935 O.L.R. 471; Ghazi-Din, 9 O.W.N. 1109, 142 I.C. 684, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 19, 1933 Cr.C. 57, Ind. Rul. 1933 Oudh 127, 34 Cr.L.J. 393. The failure to specify the common object in a charge under sec. 145, I. P. C., would not be fatal to the trial if it can be shown that there was ample evidence on the record to prove what the common object of the assembly was.—Ramchandra Narayan, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 520, 55 Bom. 725, 33 Bom.L.R. 1169, 1931 Cr.C. 952, 134 I.C. 1226, 33 Cr.L.J. 64; Kudrutulla, supra. See also the rulings cited in paragraph 2 of Note 730. As a matter of law it is otherwise with a charge under sec. 149, I. P. C. When there is no specific name for the offence, and the fact that any offence is committed, in prosecution of the common object, is of the essence of the case and there could be no conviction for any offence committed with a different common object. It is, therefore, obligatory to set out the common object in a charge under sec. 149, unless it has been already specified in the main charge under sec. 147.—Kudrutulla, supra.

Where there are two objects of an unlawful assembly, both the objects must be specified and not one. If the charge against the accused mentions only one common object of an unlawful assembly but the Judge in his charge to jury propounds two different common objects, the trial is illegal and the conviction must be set aside.—Sabir, 22 Cal. 276. See also Allah Dad, 25 Cr.L.J. 43, 75 I.C. 731, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 667.

Where the common object of the unlawful assembly is to take possession of some property, the property must be specified in the charge.—Paresh Nath, 33 Cal. 295. No doubt, in some cases it is said when there is dispute and uncertainty as to possession of the parties it is better to frame a charge of rioting with the common object of assault; but in all cases the principal and the prominent common object should form the subject of the charge and not the incidental happenings.—Aklu Mian, 29 Cr.L.J. 390 (393), 108 I.C. 421, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 405. It is one thing to say that the common object was to get possession of the disputed land, it is quite another to say that the common object was to beat apparently for the mere pleasure of beating. It is quite wrong to include those two contradictory cases at the same trial even more so in one charge—Alkasulla, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 429, 40 C.W.N. 1409, 38 Cr.L.J. 68, 165 I.C. 666, 1936 Cr.C. 654, 9 R.C. 444. In a charge of an offence of rioting it is quite sufficient to say that the common object was to assault a person or persons. It is the usual form of charge when the common object is to do violence to some person. It is immaterial whether the offence to commit which there was a common object was assault, simple hurt, or grievous hurt—Chhauka Dhanuk, 28 Cr.L.J. 769, 101 I.C. 97, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 398, 6 Pat. 832, 8 P.L.T. 825

It cannot be laid down as a general proposition of law that a conviction under sec. 147 cannot be supported whenever the common object as stated in the charge is not precisely made out. The question in each individual case is whether the common object established agrees in essential particulars with the common object as stated in the charge. Where the common object, as stated in the charge, was to assault the complainant and his men who were cutting the paddy of their land and thereby to oust them from the land but the common object established upon the evidence was to maintain possession of the land by the accused persons, held that the common object, as stated in the charge, was not substantially established and that the conviction under sec. 147, I. P. C., was, therefore, bad—Silajit Mahlo, 36 Cal. 865, 13 C.W.N. 853. Where the common object mentioned in a charge under sec. 147, I. P. C., was one of causing hurt to the complainant but the conviction was for causing hurt to another person, held that the conviction under sec. 147, I. P. C., was illegal and that secs. 535 and 537 (a) did not apply to such a case—Sita Ahir, 40 Cal. 168. Where the accused were convicted of rioting with the common object of assaulting the complainant but it was found that the common object could not be to assault the complainant but to set fire to a house, held that the accused were entitled to an acquittal as the charge laid in the case had not been established against them—Aklu Mian, 29 Cr.L.J. 390, 108 I.C. 421, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 405. The Magistrate convicted the accused of rioting, the common object of the unlawful assembly being the forcible taking away of mangoes belonging to the complainant. On appeal the Sessions Judge affirmed the conviction, holding that the common object was not the taking of mangoes but that it was something else. Held that as the accused were convicted on a different finding of fact from that to which they were called upon to plead and to defend themselves at the trial they were entitled to an acquittal—Rahimuddin v. Asgar Ali, 27 Cal. 990. Where the common object of an unlawful assembly is stated in the charge to have been to cause obstruction to measurement and demarcation of khas mahal land, held, that if it was not established affirmatively that the land on which the alleged riot took place was in the actual possession of the Government, the charge as laid was not proved—Panchanan, 30 C.L.J. 19.

Where the accused were charged with rioting with intent to dispossess the complainant from certain land and were found by the Magistrate guilty of rioting with the same intent but the Sessions Judge, on appeal, thought that the question of possession of the land was not clear and upheld the conviction, holding that they committed rioting with the intention of enforcing their rights or supposed rights to the land, held that the difference between the common object charged by the Magistrate and that held by the Judge to have actuated the accused was very slight and that as both common objects raised the same question of law and the accused had not been in any way prejudiced in their defence, the conviction was not bad—Maniruddin, 12 C.W.N. 579, 35 Cal. 381, 7 Cr.L.J. 374. Regard being had to the provisions of sec. 225, Cr. P. C., a conviction under sec. 147, I. P. C., is not illegal although the charge against the accused referred to the taking of paddy from the land of B while paddy was actually taken from the land of K who was examined as a witness in the case, as the accused were not in any way prejudiced by the omission in the charge of any reference to K's land to which the Judge referred in his summing up—Rahamt Ali, 4 C.W.N. 195.

Where in a prosecution for an offence under sec. 147, I. P. C., the common object charged was by means of criminal force to obtain possession of certain lands which comprised two plots and it was found by the Court that the offence was committed for obtaining possession of one of those plots, held that the variance between the common object alleged and that proved was not such as to invalidate the conviction—Babbon, 14 C.W.N. 422 (425). The accused were charged under sec. 147, I. P. C., with the common object of abducting the complainant's wife and were convicted under that section. They were also charged under secs. 366 and 498, I. P. C., and were acquitted of those offences. The Sessions Judge directed the jury that, if they found that she was abducted by dragging her by the hand or the hair, then such abduction would amount to offences under secs. 341 and 352, I. P. C. Held that the conviction under sec. 147, I. P. C., with the common object of abduction under circumstances constituting the offences under secs. 341 and 352, I. P. C., was legal, as the latter offences were minor offences within sec. 238, Cr. P. C., involved in the charge of rioting as actually framed—Torap Ali, 53 Cal. 599.

To comply strictly with the law a Court trying an accused person for an offence which is an offence by force of sec. 149, I. P. C., ought to state, that fact and name that section in the charge—Thaikkottathil, 25 Cr.L.J. 212 (214), 76 I.C. 614, 18 M.L.W. 946, 33 M.L.T. 210, 1924 M.W.N. 47, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 338. See also Note 766.

Sedition:—In a charge of sedition, the actual seditious words need not be set out in the charge if the substance of the words is given—Ahmed, 1 S.L.R. 14, 9 Cr.L.J. 256. Even though the substance of the speeches is not given, still if the allegations made by the prosecution are of a simple nature, and the accused is not under a misapprehension as to the nature of the charge, the defect in the charge is not material—Chint Ram, 32 P.L.R. 13, 32 Cr.L.J. 1202 (1203), 134 I.C. 580, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 186, 1931 Cr.C. 206, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 964. See also Note 730.

In cases of sedition the printer and publisher are concerned in the same transaction in regard to the publication of the seditious matter and they may be tried jointly in proper cases—Shantaram, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 139, 30 Bom.L.R. 320, 29 Cr.L.J. 683, 110 I.C. 235.

Stolen property:—Where the charge did not specify the particular articles for the possession of which each of the accused was being prosecuted, the charge was no doubt defective but the defect was covered by sec. 537, Cr. P. C., unless it was shown that the accused were prejudiced on account of this defect in the charge—Shakur, 35 Cr.L.J. 1206, 157 I.C. 562, 1935 O.W.N. 911.

Theft:—A charge of theft of electricity in a general form that the accused committed theft between two given dates, when in fact a multiplicity of separate offences committed on particular dates are alleged, is most irregular and regrettable, but the defect does not vitiate the conviction when the specific offences are satisfactorily proved by competent evidence, corroborated in all necessary respects. In addition the irregularity was such as could be, and was cured by secs. 225 and 537, Cr. P. C., by the finding that the accused had not been prejudiced—Babul Choukhani, 42 C.W.N. 621 (629), 174 I.C. 1, A.I.R. 1938 P.C. 130, 39 Cr.L.J. 452, 1938 A.L.R. 309, 1938 A.L.J. 382, 4 B.R. 490, 10 R.P.C. 250, 19 P.L.T. 343, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 647, 1938 O.W.N. 416, 1938 O.L.R. 189, 1938 M.W.N. 505, 67 C.L.J. 162 (P.C.).

Unnatural offence:—See Note 725.

Subject matter of offence:—Where the law and the section as well as the words of the section are mentioned in the charge, the subject matter of the offence need not be specified. Thus, where the illegal act charged is the unlawful and malicious possession of explosive substances within the meaning of sec. 4 of the Explosive Substances Act, it is not essential to specify in the charge the explosive substance which the accused had in their possession—Amrita Lal, 42 Cal. 957, 19 C.W.N. 676, 16 Cr.L.J. 497, 21 C.L.J. 331, 29 I.C. 513.

Liability of whipping :—Where the accused is liable to be punished under the Whipping Act, the charge must state the liability—Baidya, 5 Mad. 158

"Law and section of the law" :—In framing a charge the Court should adhere to the language of the section, as far as practicable—Amritalal, supra; Chhakari, 26 Cr.L.J. 567, 85 I.C. 711, A.I.R. 1926 Cal 439 It is not sufficient merely to charge the accused in the bare words of a section of the Code; particulars must always be given sufficient to give him notice of the matter with which he is charged—Rajabuddin, 37 C.W.N. 1074 (1075), 34 Cr.L.J. 1219, 146 I.C. 305, A.I.R. 1933 Cal 675, 1933 Cr.C. 1158 Where the law and section were mentioned in the charge, and the accused fully understood the nature of the offence with which they were charged, the omission of the words "unlawfully" and "maliciously" and "in British India" occurring in the section was held not so material as to prejudice the accused—Amritalal, supra Where the accused knew full well what the charge he would have to meet was, his conviction would not be illegal even if there was any mistake in the number of sections of the Act in as much as the accused cannot be said to have in any way been prejudiced thereby—H. B. Spiers v. Johiuddin, Ind Rul. 1932 Cal 419, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 461, 1932 Cr.C. 451, 33 Cr.L.J. 549, 138 I.C. 98, 36 C.W.N. 246, 59 Cal. 113 But see Lal Chand, 35 Cr.L.J. 1161, 11 O.W.N. 828, 1934 Cr.C. 1156, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 370, 150 I.C. 941.

Section 34, I. P. C., does not create any offence but merely sets out in what circumstances a person can be held liable for an act done by himself and others as if it had been done by him alone It is, therefore, not essential that the words of sec 34 should be incorporated in the charge, although it is desirable that some reference should be made to the common intention alleged against the accused and their confederator. If, however, it is clear that the accused could have been in no doubt as to the nature of the facts alleged against them, then it is immaterial if there is no definite reference in the charge of this common intention, for the accused can have in no wise been misled in their defence—Nga Tha Htin, A.I.R. 1935 Rang 304

724. Sub-section (7)—Previous conviction :—The prosecution is bound to prove the previous conviction, and the identity of the accused with the person previously convicted—Yippaka Daligadu, 2 Weir 266 Where the fact of previous conviction is not mentioned in the charge, it cannot be used for the purpose of enhancing the sentence—Annaji, Ratanlal 70; Hardar, 1883 A.W.N. 110, e.g., for the purpose of adding the sentence of whipping to imprisonment—Anonymous, 2 Weir 265 (266) and 267 (268) In Abbulu, 7 M.L.T. 77, 11 Cr.L.J. 217, 5 I.C. 743, and Bisakhi, 1917 P.R. 29, 18 Cr.L.J. 875 (878), however, it is held that the omission to set out the previous conviction in the charge is not a sufficient reason for interfering with the enhanced sentence in appeal or revision, unless there has been a failure of justice by reason of such omission. See sec. 535 Where the accused was at the time lying under sentence of the previous conviction referred to, the omission to mention the particulars of the previous conviction would in no way prejudice the accused and would afford no ground for interfering with the enhanced sentence—Raghub Ali, 1881 A.W.N. 32. The omission to state the fact, date and place of previous conviction is not material where the previous conviction was put to the accused and admitted by him before judgment was passed—Nga Hla, 8 L.B.R. 461, 18 Cr.L.J. 79, 37 I.C. 63

When a person is charged with previous conviction, it is not sufficient to state that the accused is an 'old offender', as that does not sufficiently bring home to the accused person the particular offence or class of offences which renders him liable to a more severe sentence than would otherwise be imposed—Yippikka, 2 Weir 226

The previous conviction must be entered in the charge and the accused should be called on to plead thereto; the mere admission by the accused that he had once been in jail is insufficient to show that he pleaded guilty to the charge of previous conviction—Govind Sakharani, 4 Bom.L.R. 177.

In passing an order under sec 565 it is not necessary that the details of the previous conviction should be mentioned in the charge—Jhargu, 9 N.L.R. 88, 14 Cr.L.J. 390, 20 I.C. 314 (cited under sec. 565).

Where in a prosecution for an offence under sec. 147, I. P. C.; the common object charged was by means of criminal force to obtain possession of certain lands which comprised two plots and it was found by the Court that the offence was committed for obtaining possession of one of those plots, held that the variance between the common object alleged and that proved was not such as to invalidate the conviction—Babbon, 14 C.W.N. 422 (425). The accused were charged under sec. 147, I. P. C., with the common object of abducting the complainant's wife and were convicted under that section. They were also charged under secs. 366 and 498, I. P. C., and were acquitted of those offences. The Sessions Judge directed the jury that, if they found that she was abducted by dragging her by the hand or the hair, then such abduction would amount to offences under secs. 341 and 352, I. P. C. Held that the conviction under sec. 147, I. P. C., with the common object of abduction under circumstances constituting the offences under secs. 341 and 352, I. P. C., was legal, as the latter offences were minor offences within sec. 238, Cr. P. C., involved in the charge of rioting as actually framed—Torap Ali, 53 Cal 599.

To comply strictly with the law a Court trying an accused person for an offence which is an offence by force of sec. 149, I. P. C., ought to state that fact and name that section in the charge—Thaikkottathil, 25 Cr.L.J. 212 (214), 76 I.C. 644, 18 M.L.W. 946, 33 M.L.T. 210, 1924 M.W.N. 47, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 338. See also Note 766

Sedition:—In a charge of sedition, the actual seditious words need not be set out in the charge if the substance of the words is given—Ahmed, 1 S.L.R. 14, 9 Cr.L.J. 256. Even though the substance of the speeches is not given, still if the allegations made by the prosecution are of a simple nature, and the accused is not under a misapprehension as to the nature of the charge, the defect in the charge is not material—Chint Ram, 32 P.L.R. 13, 32 Cr.L.J. 1202 (1203), 134 I.C. 580, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 186, 1931 Cr.C. 206, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 964. See also Note 730.

In cases of sedition the printer and publisher are concerned in the same transaction in regard to the publication of the seditious matter and they may be tried jointly in proper cases—Shantaram, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 139, 30 Bom.L.R. 320, 29 Cr.L.J. 683, 110 I.C. 235.

Stolen property:—Where the charge did not specify the particular articles for the possession of which each of the accused was being prosecuted, the charge was no doubt defective but the defect was covered by sec. 537, Cr. P. C., unless it was shown that the accused were prejudiced on account of this defect in the charge—Shakur, 36 Cr.L.J. 1206, 157 I.C. 562, 1935 O.W.N. 911.

Theft:—A charge of theft of electricity in a general form that the accused committed theft between two given dates, when in fact a multiplicity of separate offences committed on particular dates are alleged, is most irregular and regrettable, but the defect does not vitiate the conviction when the specific offences are satisfactorily proved by competent evidence, corroborated in all necessary respects. In addition the irregularity was such as could be, and was cured by secs. 225 and 537, Cr. P. C., by the finding that the accused had not been prejudiced—Babulal Choukhani, 42 C.W.N. 621 (629), 174 I.C. 1, A.I.R. 1938 P.C. 130, 39 Cr.L.J. 452, 1938 A.I.R. 309, 1938 A.L.J. 382, 4 BR 490, 10 R.P.C. 250, 19 P.L.T. 343, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 647, 1938 O.W.N. 416, 1938 O.L.R. 189, 1938 M.W.N. 505, 67 C.L.J. 162 (P.C.).

Where the law and section were mentioned in the charge, and the accused fully understood the nature of the offence with which they were charged, the omission of the words "unlawfully" and "maliciously" and "in British India" occurring in the section was held not so material as to prejudice the accused—Amritlal, supra. The enhanced punishment, referred to in this sub-section, relates to infliction of enhanced punishment as provided by sec. 75, I. P. C., as the punishment of a different kind referred to in the same sub-section relates to the provisions of the Whipping Act. The provisions of sec. 75, I. P. C., are not to be brought into action where the sentence intended to be awarded is within the competence of the Court to award under the ordinary provisions of the Code—Abdul Karim, 34 Cr.L.J. 1166, 146 I.C. 15, AIR 1933 Nag. 315, 1933 Cr.C. 1313, 29 N.L.R. 300. When enhanced sentences are contemplated under sec. 75, I. P. 222. (1) The charge shall contain such particulars as to Particulars as to time, the time and place of the alleged offence, place and person. and the person (if any) against whom, or the thing (if any) in respect of which, it was committed, as are reasonably sufficient to give the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged.

(2) When the accused is charged with criminal breach of trust or dishonest misappropriation of money, it shall be sufficient to specify the gross sum in respect of which the offence is alleged to have been committed, and the dates between which the offence is alleged to have been committed, without specifying particular items or exact dates, and the charge so framed shall be deemed to be a charge of one offence within the meaning of section 234:

Provided that the time included between the first and last of such dates shall not exceed one year.

725. Particulars as to time, place, etc.:—The charge must contain sufficient particulars as to time, place, person and circumstance, so that the accused may have notice of the matter with which he is charged—Fakirappa, 15 Bom. 491. The object of this section is to ensure that the accused may have as full particulars as possible of the accusation made against him—Rahim Baksha, 34 C.W.N. 901, 1930 Cr.C. 1117. A charge for house-breaking and theft is bad for vagueness if it does not specify the articles stolen or the name of the person whose house was broken into, and omits to mention one of the places where the offences were committed—Subbadu, 28 M.L.J. 381, 16 Cr.L.J. 298. Where the charge did not specify the particular articles for the possession of which each of the accused was being prosecuted, the charge is no doubt defective but the defect is cured by sec. 537, Cr. P. C.—Shakur, 36 Cr.L.J. 1206, 157 I.C. 562, 1935 O.W.N. 911, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 475, 1935 O.L.R. 483. A charge of defamation is defective if it does not set forth the particular occasion on which it was said to have been committed—Biswanath v. Keshab, 30 Cal. 402, 7 C.W.N. 74; Protap, AIR 1925 Cal. 1121, Ali Mahomed, 30 Cr.L.J. 1073 (1075), 119 I.C. 532, A.I.R. 1930 Sind 62, Ind. Rul. 1929 Sind 212. But where the exact words were not given in the charge but were given by the prosecution witnesses, the accused was not prejudiced in any way and the irregularity was covered by sec. 225—Samrathmal, A.I.R. 1932 Nag. 158, 1932 Cr.C. 853, 141 I.C. 438, 34 Cr.L.J. 154. Where a charge of dacoity under secs. 395 and 397, I. P. C., did not specify the dates on which the looting took place, held that the conviction must be quashed, as the charge did not give the accused sufficient notice and particulars of what they had to meet—Gan Mallu, 49 Mad. 74, 26 Cr.L.J. 1513. The accused was charged with having committed assault on a certain date. He produced evidence of alibi and was convicted of having committed the assault on a different date. Held that this was a material irregularity which prejudiced the accused and that his conviction was illegal—Kishori Lal, 36 Cr.L.J. 282, 153 I.C. 32, 35 P.L.R. 449, A.I.R. 1934 Lah 455, 1934 Cr.C. 703. Where an accused is charged with having beaten the complainant at a particular place at a particular time and the prosecution evidence fails to establish the charge, he cannot on that evidence be convicted of having beaten the complainant at a different place on a different occasion—Jalal-ud-din, 25 Cr.L.J. 471, 77 I.C. 823, A.I.R. 1924 Lah 616. Where an offence was committed in two places but only one place was mentioned in the charge, the conviction was not illegal if the accused was not misled in his defence—Nankhoo Mahton, A.I.R. 1936 Pat 358. A conviction under sec. 377, Indian Penal Code, is illegal on a charge which does not set forth the time, place or the person with whom the offence was committed, but only states that the accused habitually wore woman's clothes and exhibited physical signs of having committed that offence—Khairati, 6 All. 204. In a charge of adultery it is sometimes impossible to specify the particular date or dates on which the sexual intercourse took place; it is sufficient to specify two dates between which the offence is alleged to have been committed—Bhola Nath, 51 Cal. 488 (492), 28 C.W.N. 323, 25 Cr.L.J. 997. In cases of criminal conspiracy it would be unreasonable to require the Crown to establish with accuracy when the conspiracy began or ended. These facts are best known to the conspirators. There appears no objection to approximate dates being entered in the charge. Defrauding the public by deceitful means is an offence and the allegation in the charge of such an object without specifying the persons defrauded is sufficient to maintain a charge of conspiracy—Dur Mahomed, 35 Cr.L.J. 1337, 151 I.C. 494, 28 S.L.R. 119, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 57, 1934 Cr.C. 628.

726. Sub-section (2):—This sub-section did not exist in the Code of 1882. The ruling in Ekram Ali, 2 C.W.N. 341 and Pursotam, 24 Cal. 193 decided under the Code of 1882 is no longer good law. As the law stood before, there was great difficulty in convicting where there was a running account and where the prosecution were unable to put their hands on a specified item out of which the particular sum was embezzled. This difficulty has been removed after 1898—Khurud Kumar, 29 C.W.N. 54, 40 Cr.L.J. 555, 26 Cr.L.J. 532, 85 I.C. 372. This sub-section was primarily enacted so that persons who showed a deficiency in the accounts with which they were entrusted could be convicted of criminal misappropriation even when it could not be shown that they had misappropriated this or that specific sum—Shyam Sunder, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 145, 6 Luck. 435, 9 O.W.N. 216, 1932 Cr.C. 222, 33 Cr.L.J. 343, 136 I.C. 810. Where the accused has committed three acts of misappropriation within a year, it is sufficient, under the present law to frame only one charge in respect of the offence, mentioning only the gross sum; it is not necessary to draw up three charges of misappropriation and to specify the three sums separately—Raman Behari, 41 Cal. 725.

The case referred to in sec. 222 (2), Cr. P. C., is a case in which the charge is criminal breach of trust or dishonest misappropriation of money and it does not apply to a case of criminal breach of trust or dishonest misappropriation of goods, and affords no justification for mixing up money and goods or for framing a single charge in respect of the total of the cash said to have been misappropriated and the total value of the goods said to have been misappropriated—Public Prosecutor v. N. S. Sharma, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 575, 1939 M.W.N. 468, 1939 M.Cr.C. 178, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 518, 40 Cr.L.J. 851, 184 I.C. 51, 50 M.L.W. 515.

This sub-section applies only to a charge of criminal breach of trust or misappropriation; it does not apply to a charge of falsification of accounts under sec. 477A, I. P. C.—Kalka Prosad, 38 All. 42, 13 A.L.J. 1059, 16 Cr.L.J. 813, 31 I.C. 829; Matlal, 26 Cal. 560 (564), 3 C.W.N. 412; Raman Behari, 41 Cal. 722 (725), 22 I.C. 729, 15 Cr.L.J. 153, 18 C.W.N. 1152; Rameshwar, 34 Cr.L.J. 673, 144 I.C. 94, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 327, 1933 Cr.C. 1328, Ind. Rul. 1933 Nag. 200; or to a charge of cheating—Raja Khan, 1 A.L.J. 599; Abdur Rahim, 32 Cr.L.J. 611, 130 I.C. 795, A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 102, 12 P.L.T. 12, 1931 Cr.C. 230, Ind. Rul. 1931 Pat. 204.

This sub-section allows a charge to be framed in respect of the gross sum misappropriated during a period of one year. But this charge can only be joined with the other charges at the same trial if the offences of misappropriation formed part of the same transaction with the offences of forgery. The same applies to the charges of cheating also—Shapurji Sorabji, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 154 (159), 37 Cr.L.J. 688, 162 I.C. 399, 38 Bom.L.R. 106, 60 Bom. 148, 1936 Cr.C. 338.

Section 222 (2) only dispenses with the particulars which would otherwise be required; but it does not say that the gross sum is to include every act of misappropriation committed within the date specified in the charge. Therefore, where there have been defalcations in respect of different items in the course of a year, the Court can try a man at first in respect of a lump sum consisting of some of the items misappropriated and then subsequently in another trial, try the man in respect of another item misappropriated during the same period. The offence which is the subject of the second trial is not the same which was the subject of the charge in the first trial, and therefore, the second trial is not barred by the provisions of sec. 403—Nagendra Nath, 50 Cal. 632, 27 C.W.N. 578 (581); Kashinath, 5 I.C. 970, 12 Bom.L.R. 226, 11 Cr.L.J. 337; Sreemakurti, 32 Cr.L.J. 223, 129 I.C. 75, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 978, 59 M.L.J. 854, 1930 M.W.N. 1097, 1930 Cr.C. 1194, 32 M.W.N. 789, Ind. Rul. 1931 Mad. 219; Brijikan, 53 All. 411, 129 I.C. 558, 1931 Cr.C. 224, A.I.R. 1931 All. 209, 1931 A.L.J. 98, 32 Cr.L.J. 376 (dissenting from Appadurai, 17 Cr.L.J. 30, 32 I.C. 158). But see Note 1092.

Where the real case against A was one of abetment and the case against B was in respect of a part only of the amount charged against the other two, the case does not fall within this sub-section and there is a misjoinder of charges vitiating the trial—K. Muriah, 32 Cr.L.J. 930, 132 I.C. 548, 8 Rang. 632, A.I.R. 1932 Rang. 90, Ind. Rul. 1931 Rang. 180, 1931 Cr.C. 378.

727. Mention of gross sum is sufficient:—Under clause (2) of this section in a charge of criminal breach of trust the gross sum in respect of which the offence is alleged to have been committed should be stated as well as the dates between which the offence is alleged to have been committed. It is not necessary to specify particular items or exact dates—Abdur Rahman, 28 Cr.L.J. 170, 99 I.C. 602, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 109. See also Ramchandra Rango v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 579 (587), 181 I.C. 870, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 129, 41 Bom.L.R. 98. This sub-section is an enabling provision which permits what otherwise would be a large number of separate charges to be joined together for the purpose of convenience. Nowhere, is it prescribed that separate charges in respect of separate amounts misappropriated shall not be resorted to and that if an accused has misappropriated several sums within a year they all should be added together and made into one gross sum and tried as one charge—Sreemakurti, 32 Cr.L.J. 223, 129 I.C. 75, 32 M.L.W. 789, 59 M.L.J. 854, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 978, Ind. Rul. 1931 Mad. 219, 1930 M.W.N. 1097, 1930 Cr.C. 1194. This is an enabling section and it enacts that it is sufficient to specify the aggregate sum without going into details. It dispenses with the necessity of enumeration of various items, but it does not prohibit such enumeration—Datto Hanmant, 30 Bom. 49, 7 Bom.L.R. 633, 2 Cr.L.J. 518. It is optional with the complainant either to mention the gross sum or to specify all the items misappropriated. And this section does not make compulsory either the one or the other. The complainant may choose to specify all the particular items in addition to mentioning the gross sum, and this will be treated as a mere superfluity but not an illegality—Samiruddin v. Nibaran, 31 Cal. 928, 8 C.W.N. 807; Gulazari Lal, 24 All. 254; Rahim Baksha, 129 I.C. 359, 34 C.W.N. 901 (904), 32 Cr.L.J. 321, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 717, 1930 Cr.C. 1117, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 167, or the complainant may mention only the gross amount even where the particular items can be specified—Thomas, 29 Mad. 558. But although it is sufficient to frame a general charge of the gross amount without specifying particular items, still where the accused is likely to be prejudiced by the vagueness of the charge, the Magistrate should deal with some at least of the items—Mohammad Shah, 1907 P.W.R. 16, 6 Cr.L.J. 137 (139).

Though it is sufficient to mention only the gross sum and not necessarily the particular items, still the prosecution must prove what total sum the accused has unlawfully expended or failed to account for in such a way as to leave no doubt that he has been engaged in a criminal misappropriation, and how that total sum is made up. There must be a definite finding of a certain definite sum traced to the accused and clearly shown to have been wilfully and unlawfully appropriated to his own use. It is not sufficient to fling into the charge an alleged balance or net profit which the accused, an agent of the complainant, is supposed to have earned, and say that in respect of that net profit he is guilty of misappropriation of every rupee which he cannot produce or explain for—Mohan Singh, 42 All 522, 22 Cr.L.J. 84, 18 A.L.J. 633, 59 I.C. 372. In other words, the Allahabad case lays down that an accused cannot be convicted on a charge of criminal misappropriation based on a general deficiency in accounts, shown by the difference between the sums actually received by the accused and the sums actually credited. But the Oudh Chief Court is of opinion that it is impossible for the prosecution to allow the money in the hands of an accused person and to prove that he spent a certain specific sum in any particular manner. The prosecution has done its duty when it has proved that the accused has received the money and has failed to show in his master's accounts. Consequently, a charge of misappropriation based on a general deficiency in accounts is valid—Shiam Sundar, 6 Luck. 435, 1932 Cr.C. 222 (223, 224) (dissenting from 42 All. 522). The same view is taken in Vinayak Laxman, 53 Bom. 119, 30 Cr.L.J. 185 (189), distinguishing the above Allahabad case. See also Buddhu v. Babu Lal, 18 All. 116 and Q.-E. v. Kellie, 17 All. 153 in this connection.

Where the Magistrate examined the evidence in respect of each item of money embezzled which went to make up the total amount of the sums embezzled as entered in the charge-sheet, held that this was a way of examining the facts of the case which was most favourable to the accused, and he certainly cannot complain that he has been in any way prejudiced by the manner in which the evidence against him has been scrutinized—Krishna Priya, A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 376, 164 I.C. 302, 1936 O.W.N. 607, 37 Cr.L.J. 941.

728. "Charge so framed . . . charge of one offence":—This section clearly admits the trial of any number of acts of breach of trust committed within the year as amounting only to one offence—Datto Hamant, 30 Bom. 49, 7 Bom.L.R. 633, 2 Cr.L.J. 518. A trial involving offences under sec. 406, I. P. C., committed on five different dates is not bad in view of the provisions of sub-section (2) of this section—Anil v. Badam, 30 Cr.L.J. 706, 116 I.C. 722, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 175, Ind. Rul. 1929 Cal. 498. Where a man is charged with criminal breach of trust in respect of various sums of money embezzled from time to time on different occasions, a charge of criminal breach of trust may be framed in respect of the gross sum without specifying the particular items; such a charge is a charge of one offence and not of several offences—Ibrahim, 33 All. 36, 7 A.L.J. 897, 11 Cr.L.J. 442. If a person is charged with embezzlement of the sum total of different items, and the charge also specifies the various items collected and embezzled, the charge is really a charge of one offence and is perfectly valid. It does not contravene the prohibitions contained in sec. 234 by reason of the fact that the items specified exceed three in number—Gulzar Lal, 24 All. 254; Datta, 30 Bom. 49, Rahim Baksha, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 717, 1930 Cr.C. 117, 34 C.W.N. 901, 32 Cr.L.J. 321. But where the accused is charged with having misappropriated "various sums" without mentioning the sum total or different items, which are six in number, the charge is illegal—Parey Lal, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 273, 154 I.C. 320, 1935 O.W.N. 185, 1935 O.L.R. 157, 36 Cr.L.J. 518. Where a charge of criminal misappropriation consisted of three counts alleging misappropriation on three different occasions and two of these items were made up of three smaller sums of money each, and the accused was convicted on all the three counts, held that the trial was really for three offences and not seven, and was not illegal under sec. 234—Ishaq, 27 All. 69. Where a person was put upon his trial for embezzlement of three sums in one year, and one charge was drawn up, in which all the three sums and the persons from whom he collected were specified, but he was not charged with three offences under sec. 409, I. P. C., but with one offence, and was convicted of one offence and sentenced to one term of imprisonment, held that the charge was not illegal as it was in accordance with secs. 234 and 222 (2)—Sat Narain, 32 Cal. 1085, 10 C.W.N. 51, 3 Cr.L.J. 138. The accused was charged with having embezzled four sums of money on three specified dates within two months; only one charge was framed in which the amounts and the dates of embezzlement were specified. The Magistrate convicted the accused for embezzlement committed on the three dates, and sentenced him to two years on each count, the sentences to run concurrently. Held that the charge was correctly drawn up; and that the Magistrate was not correct in sentencing the accused separately on each of the three counts, but should have passed one sentence, but this irregularity was of no importance as the sentences were to run concurrently—Prem Narain, 52 All. 941, 1930 A.L.J. 1130, 32 Cr.L.J. 155 (156, 157). 128 I.C. 595, A.I.R. 1931 All. 267. See also Ram Kishoon, 35 Cr.L.J. 876, 148 I.C. 900, 15 P.L.T. 126, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 232, 1934 Cr.C. 461, where a charge was held to have been correctly drawn up under sec. 222 (2), although it did not set out the total of the money embezzled but specified separately three items of money misappropriated by the accused. But see Piary Lal, 36 Cr.L.J. 518, 154 I.C. 320, 1935 O.W.N. 185. Where an accused person is tried on charges of criminal breach of trust in respect of two cheques and also on another charge in respect of a gross sum made up of three distinct items which might have been but were not specified, the trial is in fact not on five distinct charges but is only for three offences (in respect of two cheques plus gross sum) and is, therefore, legal under sec. 234—Thomas, 29 Mad. 558.

This sub-section enacts that the charge in respect of a gross sum appropriated within one year shall be treated as a charge for one offence within the meaning of sec. 234, but it does not follow that the several acts of misappropriation should be deemed as forming one transaction within the meaning of sec. 235—Kasi Viswanathan, 30 Mad. 328, 5 Cr.L.J. 341. It is not easy and indeed possible to give an exact definition to the word "transaction," but it may be said that it means a group of facts so connected together as to involve certain ideas, namely, unity, continuity and connexion. In order to determine whether a group of facts constituted one transaction it is necessary to ascertain whether they are so connected together as to constitute a whole which can properly be described as a transaction. Where a clerk or cashier sets out to rob his employer, having regard to the fact that sec. 222 (2) provides that he may be charged with having misappropriated the total of whatever sums he may have appropriated in course of one year, it is not unreasonable to say that for the purposes of the section the year's illicit operations can be regarded as one transaction—Kashiram v. Hurdut Rai, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 312 (314), 62 Cal. 808, 39 C.W.N. 703.

See also Madhusudan v. Emp., in Note 751.

'One year':—The time covered by the several acts must not be more than one year; where the charges related to items misappropriated in the course of two years, the conviction was quashed—Dhanjibhoy v. Kaim Khan, 14 P.R. 1905, 64 P.L.R. 1905. Thus, where the accused was charged with criminal breach of trust in respect of eight necklaces, committed from February 1922 to January 1924 (i.e., in the course of two years), held that the trial was vitiated. Sec. 235 did not apply, as the act of breach of trust in respect of each necklace was a separate transaction—Raman Lal, 49 All. 312, 25 A.L.J. 317, 28 Cr.L.J. 171, 99 I.C. 603, A.I.R. 1927 All. 223.

The charge of a lump sum extending over a period of more than one year is in violation of the express provision of the Cr. P. C. and is illegal—Munnoolal, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 241, 1935 O.W.N. 126, 1935 O.L.R. 141, 151 I.C. 258, 36 Cr.L.J. 477; Dionarain, 35 Cr.L.J. 693, 148 I.C. 519, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 132.

It is not enough to show that there was embezzlement at some time before, during, or after the period mentioned in the charge, because the charge is framed under the special provision contained in cl (2) of this section and the proviso thereto, and upon a charge so framed it is at any rate necessary to show an act or acts of embezzlement in respect of the gross sum named or some part of it, committed within the space of the year—Promotha, 17 C.W.N. 479 (483), 14 Cr.L.J. 219, 19 I.C. 315.

223. When the nature of the case is such that the particulars mentioned in sections 221 and 222 do not give the accused sufficient notice of the matter with which he is charged, the charge shall also contain such particulars of the manner in which the alleged offence was committed as will be sufficient for that purpose.

Illustrations.

(a) A is accused of the theft of a certain article at a certain time and place. The charge need not set out the manner in which the theft was effected

(b) A is accused of cheating B at a given time and place. The charge must set out the manner in which A cheated B

(c) A is accused of giving false evidence at a given time and place. The charge must set out that portion of the evidence given by A which is alleged to be false.

(d) A is accused of obstructing B, a public servant, in the discharge of his public functions at a given time and place. The charge must set out the manner in which A obstructed B in the discharge of his functions.

(e) A is accused of the murder of B at a given time and place. The charge need not state the manner in which A murdered B.

(f) A is accused of disobeying a direction of the law with intent to save B from punishment. The charge must set out the disobedience charged and the law infringed.

729. The question as to whether further particulars are necessary under this section is a question of discretion in each case—Kudrutulla, 39 Cal 781. In a case of cheating, the charge must set out the manner in which the offence was committed. Whether the words of the charge are reasonably sufficient to give the accused notice of the accusation which he has got to meet, depends upon the circumstances of each particular case. The omission to state the manner of cheating is regarded as material or not according as the accused has or has not in fact been misled by the omission and the omission has or has not occasioned a failure of justice [sec 225, Ill (b) and (c)]—Kedar Nath, 29 C.W.N 408, 41 C.L.J 172, 26 Cr L.J. 849. Where the manner of the cheating was set out as follows —“By deceiving with false representations and promises as well as by conduct,” held that the expression used was too vague and indefinite to give the accused proper notice of the manner of deceit—Kedar Nath, supra.

The word “manner” in this section can fairly be interpreted as including every ingredient by virtue of which the act ceases to become one of mere non-criminal deception and becomes one of “cheating” within the meaning of sec 415, I P. C., and the effect of the deception upon the victim’s body, mind, reputation or property would thus be a part of the “manner” of cheating. But even if this is held to be too wide an interpretation of the word “manner”, the illustration is only an illustration and by analogy if sec. 223, Cr. P. C., demands that the manner shall be set out it must also demand that in the case of cheating the particular consequence by virtue of which the deception becomes an offence should also be set out. When, therefore, a charge under sec 419, I. P. C., was to the effect “I (Magistrate) charge you Gian Singh that you, on or about 7th July 1936 at Lahore Civil Courts cheated by personation by knowingly substituting a certain person for Roshal Lal (deceased) who had before that date died representing to Babu Lal that that person was Roshan Lal, a respondent to the notice Ex Pk,” held that the charge did not make it clear to the accused by virtue of which of the various consequences referred to in sec 415, I. P. C., he must be held liable to the offence of cheating, that the defect in the charge was material and not curable under sec. 225, Cr. P. C., and that the conviction must be set aside—Gian Singh v. Emp, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 828 (831), 40 Cr.L.J. 371 (374), 180 I.C. 485.

Where the charge contained a bare statement that the accused cheated by receiving a sum under an award and not acting in accordance with the award but it contained no allegation that the accused acted dishonestly or that he deceived the complainant, the charge disclosed no criminal offence and ought to be set aside—Varumal Lahrumal v. Emp, 34 Cr.L.J. 1049 (1050), 145 I.C. 617, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 169, 1933 Cr.C. 533, 6 R.S. 36.

A charge of an attempt to cheat must specify the person attempted to be cheated and the manner in which the attempt was made—Imam Ali, 8 C.W.N. 278.

224. In every charge words used in describing an offence shall be deemed to have been used in the sense attached to them respectively by the law under which such offence is punishable.

729A. Although a word used in a charge under the I. P. Code must be taken to have been used in the sense attached to the word by the I. P. Code, still when a general expression such as "assault" is used, it must not necessarily be taken to have the meaning which it bears in sec. 351, I. P. C., but it also includes any bodily injury or violence to some person, such as hurt or grievous hurt. And so, where the accused were charged with rioting with the common object of committing 'assault', and they were convicted of rioting with the common object of causing hurt, held that there was no error or illegality in the charge, because the word 'assault' denoted hurt, and no alteration of charge was necessary—Chhanka Dhanuk, 6 Pat. 832, 28 Cr.L.J. 769 (771).

225. No error in stating either the offence or the particulars required to be stated in the charge, and no omission to state the offence or those particulars, shall be regarded at any stage of the case as material, unless the accused was in fact misled by such error or omission, and it has occasioned a failure of justice.

Illustrations.

(a) A is charged under section 242 of the Indian Penal Code, with "having been in possession of counterfeit coin, having known at the time when he became possessed thereof that such coin was counterfeit," the word "fraudulently" being omitted in the charge. Unless it appears that A was in fact misled by this omission, the error shall not be regarded as material.

(b) A is charged with cheating B, and the manner in which he cheated B is not set out in the charge, or is set out incorrectly. A defends himself, calls witnesses and gives his own account of the transaction. The Court may infer from this that the omission to set out the manner of the cheating is not material.

(c) A is charged with cheating B, and the manner in which he cheated B is not set out in the charge. There were many transactions between A and B, and A had no means of knowing to which of them the charge referred, and offered no defence. The Court may infer from such facts that the omission to set out the manner of the cheating was, in the case, a material error.

(d) A is charged with the murder of Khoda Baksh on the 21st January 1882. In fact the murdered person's name was Haider Baksh, and the date of the murder was the 20th January 1882. A was never charged with any murder but one and had heard the inquiry before the Magistrate, which referred exclusively to the case of Haider Baksh. The Court may infer from these facts that A was not misled, and that the error in the charge was immaterial.

(e) A was charged with murdering Haider Baksh on the 20th January 1882 and Khoda Baksh (who tried to arrest him for that murder) on the 21st January 1882. When charged for the murder of Haider Baksh, he was tried for the murder of Khoda Baksh. The witnesses present in his defence were witnesses in the case of Haider Baksh. The Court may infer from this that A was misled and that the error was material.

730. Error or omission:—The accused was charged under secs. 304 and 149, I. P. C., for "joining an unlawful assembly knowing that it was likely that force would be used, and in which force was used, and for causing the death of one N by a blow of lathi on his head in taking away mangoes from a garden in charge of N." The charge mentioned only one common object, viz., to take away mangoes from a garden. But the Judge in summing up the case propounded two common objects, viz., to take away mangoes and to cause injury to N who was in charge of the mango-trees. It was held that the omission to specify both the objects in the charge was material, in as much as it was difficult to say which of the two common objects had been accepted by the jury; and it might well have been that the jury had accepted that object which was not mentioned in the charge and which the accused had no opportunity of meeting; consequently there had been a failure of justice—Sabir, 22 Cal. 276 (285). Where the common object mentioned in a charge of rioting was the forcible taking away of mangoes belonging to the complainant, the accused could not be convicted of rioting committed with an entirely different object—Rahimuddin v. Asgar Ali, 27 Cal. 990 (991). When the charge against the accused was that he committed criminal breach of trust in respect of some deeds, but he was convicted of embezzling the amounts obtained by dealing with those deeds, it was held that the charge was materially defective and the conviction must be set aside—Bisra Das v. Nirodmani, 12 C.W.N. 577, 7 Cr.L.J. 372.

Where the common object of the unlawful assembly was set out in the complaint and was found by the Magistrate, but was not mentioned in the charge, but it appeared that the accused had been in no way prejudiced by the omission in the charge, held that sec. 225 applied and the omission did not vitiate the trial—Jeshwant, 28 Bom.L.R. 497, 27 Cr.L.J. 744, following Basiruddin, 21 Cal. 827. Where the charge did not mention the common object of the unlawful assembly but there was ample material in the evidence on the record to show that the accused were members of an unlawful assembly and to show what their common object was, held that the omission was not a ground for setting aside the conviction—Basiruddin, supra; Ghaziuddin, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 19, 9 O.W.N. 1109, 1932 Cr.C. 57, 142 I.C. 684, 34 Cr.L.J. 393, 8 Luck. 199. See Note 723. A charge of sedition is not defective if it omits to state the particular passages or particular words used by the accused; it is sufficient if the substance of the words is set out. Even if it is defective, it will be cured by this section—Tribhuvan, 33 Bom. 77; Mylapore Krishnasami, 32 Mad. 384; Chidambaram, 32 Mad. 3 (12); Chint Ram, 32 P.L.R. 13, 32 Cr.L.J. 1202 (1203); Ahmed, 1 S.L.R. 14, 9 Cr.L.J. 256. In a charge under sec. 420, I. P. C., it is proper to state the exact date of the offence, but when the time of the alleged offence is approximately indicated, the omission to give the date does not affect the legality of the trial—Farzand, 27 Cr.L.J. 909 (Pat.). Where in the form of the charge, the word 'or' was by mistake used for 'and' between two charges framed under secs. 221 and 342, I. P. C., and the accused were not prejudiced by the fact that in form the charge was in the alternative whereas in substance two distinct offences were charged, held that the conviction of the accused in respect of both the charges was not bad—Nababali, 34 C.W.N. 1151, 32 Cr.L.J. 228, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 708, 53 C.L.J. 54, 129 I.C. 99, 1930 Cr.C. 1108. A mistake in the numbers of the sections does not invalidate the trial, if the accused knew full well what was the charge he had to meet—Spiers v. Johiuddin, 59 Cal. 113, 36 C.W.N. 246 (247), 33 Cr.L.J. 549. The omission of words such as “dishonestly” or “unlawfully”, or “in British India” is not material, and is cured by this section—Rakhma, 10 B.H.C.R. 373; Amritlal, 42 Cal. 957. So also, the omission of the words “in pursuance of the same conspiracy” is not a very material defect in charges for offences committed in the same transaction—Maung Ba Chit, 7 Rang. 821, 31 Cr.L.J. 387 (390).

If the charge is drawn up clumsily or in a somewhat informal manner, but is sufficiently explicit as to give the accused notice of the charge, the irregularity will be cured by this section—Tribhuvan, 33 Bom. 77; Bachchu v. Piyara, 2 Luck. 430, 4 O.W.N. 341, 28 Cr.L.J. 409 (410).

Test to determine whether error is material :—In determining whether the error or omission has occasioned a failure of justice the Court should have regard to the manner in which the accused has conducted his defence and to the nature of the objection—Ramji, 10 Bom. 121. Where the charge did not correctly set out the facts of the case for the prosecution upon which it was founded, but it was clear from the answer which the accused gave to the Court when examined under the provisions of sec. 342 that he understood exactly what the case against him was, held that the defect in the framing of the charge did not prejudice the accused in any way—Gokul, 29 C.W.N. 483, 26 Cr.L.J. 906. Where the accused did not make any objection to the defect in the form of charge, at the earliest possible occasion, and as a matter of fact no protest was made either in the Appellate Court or in the Revisional Court below, and they knew perfectly well what offences they were charged with, held that the irregularity had not occasioned any failure of justice—Bachchu v. Piyara, 2 Luck. 430, 4 O.W.N. 341, 28 Cr.L.J. 409; see also Chidambaram, 32 Mad. 3 (12, 13). Where the wording of the charge was neither accurate nor clear, but the accused and his counsel understood the real charge, and an objection as to the validity of the charge was raised by the counsel for the first time during arguments, held that the defect was not material and was cured by sec. 537—K. C. V. Reddy, 8 Rang. 25, 31 Cr.L.J. 793 (796, 797). See also Ghousbux, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 34, 28 S.L.R. 304 and Palani Goundan v. Emp., 1937 M.W.N. 1331.

The benefit of doubt as to the particular weapons which the accused carried cannot entitle them to be acquitted altogether of the charge although they are specifically charged with using particular weapons. The accused, though they may not be convicted for a more serious offence in the absence of proof of use of particular weapons, may still be convicted of a lesser offence—Palani Goundan v. Emp., supra.

When the charge was framed in clear violation of sec. 234 and the accused was prejudiced in his defence, neither sec. 225 nor sec. 537, Cr. P. C., can cure the defect—Piarey Lal, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 273, 154 I.C. 320, 1935 O.W.N. 785, 1935 O.L.R. 157, 36 Cr.L.J. 518.

Duty of Magistrate :—Where a charge is erroneous as to the intention with which the offence was committed, it is the duty of the Magistrate, before convicting the accused for committing the offence with a different intention, to amend the charge to that effect so as to give notice to the accused of what he is charged with. Thus, where the charge was house-breaking with intention to commit theft, but the Magistrate finding that the intention was criminal intrigue with a woman in the complainant's house, convicted the accused of house-breaking with the latter object, held that before convicting the accused for the latter intention, it was the bounden duty of the Magistrate to have given the accused notice of that finding by drawing up a charge clearly stating what it was that he was accused of committing. The conviction was set aside—Mahomed Hosain, 41 Cal. 743. But see Karali Prasad, 44 Cal. 358 (364), in which it has been held, under the identical circumstances, that it is not necessary for the Magistrate to amend the charge; the accused having been charged with criminal trespass with a guilty intention, it is competent to the Court to convict him of criminal trespass with some other guilty intention, and in such a case the accused is not in fact prejudiced by the conviction.

226. When any person is committed for trial without a charge, or with an imperfect or erroneous charge, the Court, or, in the case of a High Court, the Clerk of the Crown, may frame a charge or add to or otherwise alter the charge, as the case may be, having regard to the rules contained in this Code as to form of charges.

Procedure on commitment without charge or with imperfect charge.

Illustrations

1. A is charged with the murder of C. A charge of abetting the murder of C may be added or substituted

2. A is charged with forging a valuable security under section 467 of the Indian Penal Code. A charge of fabricating false evidence under section 193 may be added.

3. A is charged with receiving stolen property knowing it to be stolen. During the trial it incidentally appears that he has in his possession instruments for the purpose of counterfeiting coin. A charge under section 235 of the Indian Penal Code cannot be added

731. 'Without charge':—These words apply not only to the cases where there is no charge at all, but also to cases in which there is no charge in respect of such offence as the Sessions Judge or Clerk of the Crown may think the accused ought to be tried for—Appa, 8 Bom 200

'Frame a charge' .—At the beginning of the trial if the Judge finds that the Magistrate has omitted to frame a charge, he may supply the omission and frame the charge that is made out on the evidence recorded by the Magistrate—Dodo, 9 S.L.R. 37, 16 Cr.L.J. 573, 20 I.C. 125.

732. Addition of charge:—If the charge framed by the Magistrate is 'imperfect or erroneous, the Sessions Judge may alter or add to the charge, having regard to the offences disclosed in the evidence recorded by the Magistrate. When a charge is added to or altered under sec 226, the added or altered charge must be for an offence made out by the evidence recorded before the committing Magistrate—Dodo, 9 S.L.R. 37, 30 I.C. 125, 16 Cr.L.J. 573 (574); Mula Singh, 24 Cr.L.J. 177, 71 I.C. 593; Deogi Redoli Ankamma, 34 Cr.L.J. 278, 142 I.C. 139, 1932 M.W.N. 1162, A.I.R. 1933 Mad 247, 1933 Cr.C. 374, 65 M.L.J. 6, 38 M.L.W. 668, Ind. Rul. 1933 Mad. 199. See also Surat, 25 Cr.L.J. 1162, 81 I.C. 986, 11 O.L.J. 640, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 158, 1 O.W.N. 362. But the Sessions Judge cannot go beyond the evidence recorded by the Magistrate. He cannot add or alter a charge upon the evidence recorded by himself at the trial. If he does so, the effect is that he takes cognizance of an offence without any preliminary inquiry under Chap. XVIII and the provisions of sec. 193 of this Code are rendered nugatory. Thus, a charge was drawn up by the Magistrate under sec. 202, I.P.C., and the accused pleaded guilty to the charge in the Sessions Court, and then the Sessions Judge, on the application of the Public Prosecutor, added a charge for an offence under secs. 109 and 201, I.P.C., examined a witness, and then convicted the accused on the added charge also; it was held that the addition of the charge was not merely an error of procedure but an improper assumption of jurisdiction—Rama Varma, 3 Mad. 351. See also Notes under sec. 227, under heading "Power of Sessions Court".

Again, the Sessions Court can add or alter a charge with reference to the immediate subject of the prosecution and committal, and not with regard to a matter not covered by the indictment. Thus, where a prosecution was instituted by A on a charge under sec. 417, I.P.C., and the Sessions Judge altered the charge into one for an offence under sec. 420, I.P.C., for cheating B, it was held that the procedure was illegal inasmuch as there was no complaint by B, and the prosecution was instituted by a person in respect of a matter with which B was not concerned, and the Magistrate did not commit the accused with respect to any offence committed against B—Birendra, 32 Cal. 22, 8 C.W.N. 784, 1 Cr.L.J. 794. This ruling was approved of in a decision of the Madras High Court reported in Muthu Goundan, 21 Cr.L.J. 57, 54 I.C. 409, 1920 M.W.N. 149, 11 M.L.W. 317, 27 M.L.T. 231 and dissented from in Dodo, 30 I.C. 125, 16 Cr.L.J. 573, 9 S.L.R. 37 and Gulzari, 35 Cr.L.J. 63, 146 I.C. 424, 10 O.W.N. 738, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 375, 1933 Cr.C. 1092. When the evidence recorded by the committing Magistrate disclosed an offence under sec. 395, I. P. C., the Sessions Judge is justified in framing a charge under that section, despite the fact that the committing Magistrate did not himself believe that evidence—Gulzari, supra. Similarly, where the accused was committed to the Sessions for the murder of A, the Sessions Judge could not add a charge for causing grievous hurt to B—Shah Din, 1909 P.W.R. 20, 11 Cr.L.J. 131. In Kharga, 8 All. 665, however, such a procedure was not treated as an illegality but a mere irregularity, and the High Court refused to interfere because no prejudice was caused to the accused. But where the Magistrate committed the accused H for murder of M, and the accused R for causing grievous hurt to K, and in his order of commitment the Magistrate stated that there was ample evidence to show that H committed murder by causing the death of M and K, and that R in furtherance of the common intention with H committed murder by causing the death of M and K, it was held that the Sessions Judge could properly add charges against both the accused for the murder of K, as the murder of K could be said to be an immediate subject of the prosecution—Hassenulla, 28 C.W.N. 561, 26 Cr.L.J. 5 (7), 83 I.C. 485. In a Sind case, however, it has been observed that the added charge need not be clearly related to the original charge. Provided that no prejudice has been caused to the accused, the Sessions Court has power under secs. 226 and 227 to add charges for offences different from those framed by the committing Magistrate. The subsequent sections 228 and 231 do not show that this power is limited in any way. On the contrary, the provisions for adjourning the trial, for directing a new trial (sec. 229), for recalling witnesses (sec. 231), and even for obtaining sanction to the prosecution (sec. 230), indicate very clearly that there need not necessarily be any connection between the added charge and the charge as originally framed—Dodo, 9 S.L.R. 37, 16 Cr.L.J. 573 (574).

The Sessions Judge's power to add to a charge is not fettered by the fact that a complaint in respect of it had been previously preferred before the Magistrate and dismissed by him—Vajiram, 16 Bom. 414.

Power to expunge a charge:—The Sessions Judge has power to frame, add or alter a charge, but he has no power to expunge a charge duly framed by the committing Magistrate—Poreshollah, 7 C.L.R. 143. See also Sadasibo, in Note 785.

733. Alteration of charge:—The Sessions Judge should carefully examine the charge-sheet on which the accused has been committed, and if the charge-sheet has been carelessly and badly drawn up by the committing Magistrate, the Judge should make such amendments and alterations as are called for—Shanker, 11 A.L.J. 188, 14 Cr.L.J. 116. The Sessions Judge can substitute a charge of abetment for a charge of the substantive offence—Govind, 11 B.H.C.R. 278. If the committing Magistrate does not frame a charge with separate heads for each distinct offence, the defect should be corrected by the Sessions Judge—Shanker, supra. In a case in which the accused is charged with 45 offences and committed to the Sessions, the proper procedure is to amend the charge and to hold separate trials and not to confine the prosecution to three heads of charges, acquitting the accused of all the rest—Sreenath, 8 Cal. 450.

Altering a charge includes the withdrawal of a charge which has been added by the committing Magistrate—Dwarka Lal v. Mahadeo, 12 All. 551.

227. (1) Any Court may alter or add to any charge at any time before judgment is pronounced, or, in case of trials before the Court of Session or High Court, before the verdict of the jury is returned or the opinions of the assessors are expressed.

(2) Every such alteration or addition shall be read and explained to the accused.

734. Addition or alteration of charge:—Where a Magistrate summoned the accused under a certain section of the Penal Code, but the evidence disclosed an offence under another section, he could amend the charge—Birao Sardar v. Ariff, 26 Cr.L.J. 302 (Cal.). When facts are proved constituting an aggravated offence, the Magistrate must either alter the charge under this section, or refer the case under sec 347—Kuttuva v. Suppan, 25 L.W. 86, 28 Cr.L.J. 164 (166).

In amending a charge, the Magistrate should not write over the original charge but should leave it on the file for reference and should write the new charge separately and correctly date it—Nga Pan, 8 Bur.L.T. 17, 16 Cr.L.J. 2, 26 I.C. 306.

The Court in substituting one charge for another cannot ignore the preliminary requisites of a charge; thus a charge for rape cannot be altered into a charge for adultery, because the complaint of the husband is a preliminary requisite in the latter offence—Chemon, 29 Cal 415; nor can the Court alter a charge of rape and adultery in the alternative—Kallu, 5 All. 233. The Sessions Court has no power to inquire into or hear charges under sections 497 and 498, I. P. C., without a previous enquiry before the committing Magistrate—Abdul Aziz, 32 Cr.L.J. 1135, 134 I.C. 314, 53 C.L.J. 346, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 524, 1931 Cr.C. 676, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 810. See Notes under sec. 199.

But the power to add a charge is not limited by the terms of the certificate under section 188. Once a certificate has been obtained, the Court has power to add any charge for any offence disclosed by the facts though not specified in the certificate—Krishna Nath, 33 All 514. See Note 581 under sec 188.

Where a prisoner has been extradited for dacoity, the Court may alter the charge of dacoity into a minor charge which is not extraditable, e.g., theft—Khodu, 17 Bom. 369.

Power of Sessions Court—Section 226 confers on the Sessions Court the power to add or amend the charges framed by the committing Magistrate, if the added or altered charges are made out by the evidence recorded by the Magistrate, and sec. 227 empowers a Sessions Court to add to or alter the charges framed by itself, if the added or altered charges are made out by the evidence recorded in the Sessions Court—Dodo, 9 S.L.R. 37, 30 I.C. 125, 16 Cr.L.J. 573 (574); Deogi Reddy Ankamma, 34 Cr.L.J. 278, 142 I.C. 138, 1932 M.W.N. 1162, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 247, 1933 Cr.C. 374, 65 M.L.J. 6, 38 M.L.J. 668, Ind. Rul. 1933 Mad. 199. But in a later Sind case it has been doubted whether section 227 intended to confer jurisdiction on a Sessions Court to add or substitute a new charge on fresh evidence led or to be led in the Sessions Court for the first time—Stewart, 21 S.L.R. 55, 27 Cr.L.J. 1217 (1224).

The Court's powers, as contained in sec. 227, Cr. P. C., to alter a charge are very wide. Any restriction of those powers must inevitably lead to failure of justice. If the Courts' power under sec. 227 can be exercised within certain limits, the provisions of the section would be rendered nugatory. If, therefore, the alteration of the charge leads necessarily to the discharge of the former jury, that result must be implied in the power of the Court to alter the charge. The fact that there has been a challenging of the common jury already empanelled cannot affect the power of the Court to alter the charge. Nor can rule 865 of the High Court Rules (O.S.) operate as a bar to the trial of accused by a special jury upon the altered charge—Yeshwant Vitlu, 38 Cr.L.J. 850 (851), 170 I.C. 153, I.L.R. 1937 Bom. 369, 10 R.B. 49, 39 Bom.L.R. 355, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 260.

Where the Committing Magistrate framed charges of murder against some of the accused and abetment of murder against others but, when the case came on for hearing in the Court of Session, the Judge at the request of the Public Prosecutor jettisoned these charges altogether and substituted for them a charge under sec. 302 read with sec. 120B, I. P. C., with the result that the accused, instead of being tried by a jury, were tried by the Judge himself with the aid of assessors, held that it would be very difficult to say that the accused had been properly tried when they were deprived of a trial by a Jury by a manoeuvre of this kind—Khidir v. King-Emp., 66 C.L.J. 575 (576). See also Samsundar, infra.

The accused were committed to the Court of Sessions under sec. 395, I. P. C. The Sessions Judge without assigning any reason amended the charge to one of robbery, thereby, before hearing the evidence, changing the character of the charge altogether. Held that the accused must have been prejudiced by the unauthorized amendment—Paimullah, 16 C.W.N. 238, 13 Cr.L.J. 127, 13 I.C. 783.

Amendment must not prejudice accused :—Although this section gives power to the Court to add to or alter a charge, still this power should be exercised with discretion, and it is the duty of the Court to see that the accused is not prejudiced by the addition or alteration of the charges—Dodo, 9 S.L.R. 37, 30 I.C. 125, 16 Cr.L.J. 573 (575); Govindas, 6 B.H.C.R. 76. Thus, an addition of a grave charge or alteration of a charge at a late stage of the proceedings (e.g., after the close of the defence evidence) would prejudice the accused in his defence and would be illegal—Madura, 6 C.W.N. 72; Isap Mahomed, 31 Bom. 218. Where during the trial of an accused person upon specific charges in a Court of Session, it was found at the conclusion of the trial that the charges as framed disclosed no offence against the accused, it was illegal and prejudicial to the accused to alter or amend the charges and to convict him on the amended charges without affording him an opportunity of meeting the amended charges. The fact that the accused cross-examined the prosecution witness to prove the unsustainability of the charges as originally framed, is no ground for holding that by substantially altering the charges, the accused was not prejudiced—Muthu Goundan, 27 M.L.T. 231, 21 Cr.L.J. 57, 11 M.L.W. 317, 1920 M.W.N. 149, 54 I.C. 409 (411). It is open to a Sessions Judge to add an alternative charge, but it is not a proper exercise of discretion to withdraw the charge (of an offence triable by jury) which the committing Magistrate thought to be proved, and to put the accused under a disadvantage by substituting another charge (of offences triable with assessors) so that he might be deprived of the right of trial by jury—Samsundar, 5 Pat. 238, 7 P.L.T. 178, 27 Cr.L.J. 512. See also Khidir v. King-Emp., 66 C.L.J. 575 (576). A Court may alter a charge at any time before judgment is pronounced; but if in certain circumstances such alteration has occasioned a failure of justice, the Appellate or Revisional Court may interfere. No ruling can establish a proposition in law limiting the discretion conferred upon the trial Court by this section and preventing it absolutely from altering the charge at certain stages of the case. A discretion conferred by Statute cannot be whittled by ruling—Subramania, 32 Cr.L.J. 756, 131 I.C. 461, 1931 M.W.N. 399, A.I.R. 1931 Mad 439, 1931 Cr.C. 487, Ind. Rul 1931 Mad. 525.

Amendment cannot cure illegality :—An illegal charge cannot be amended or altered, and such amendment will not cure the illegality. Thus, where a charge is drawn up of four offences (committed within one year) it is wholly illegal under sec. 234, and the illegality cannot be cured by striking out one of the offences and convicting the accused for the remaining three—Manavala Chetty, 29 Mad 569, 5 Cr.L.J. 94. So also, where a Magistrate at first framed a charge under secs 352 and 504, I. P. Code, but finding that the two distinct offences which were in no way connected with one another could not be tried together, he struck out the charge framed and framed a charge under sec. 504 alone, held that the procedure adopted by the Magistrate was illegal—Krishna Murthi v. Narayanaswami, 49 M.L.J. 93, 26 Cr.L.J. 1618.

There is nothing in the wording of sec. 227, Cr. P. C., which limits the operation of that section to mere irregularities or its operation to any particular stage of the case prior to the time that judgment is given or the verdict of the jury is returned. Until that time, it is open to the Court to alter or add to the charge, and the provisions of secs 228, 229, 230 and 231, Cr. P. C., amply provide that the accused shall not be embarrassed or prejudiced by the alteration of the charge. The Magistrate must use a careful and wise discretion and where evidence relating to six charges has gone on the record, whereas there should be evidence only as to three, it may well be the Magistrate would exercise a wise and just discretion in directing a new trial under the provisions of sec. 229, Cr. P. C., but the trying Court itself has that power and there is no need to refer the case to the High Court—Mohammad Ismail, 38 Cr.L.J. 324, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 1, 166 I.C. 845, 9 R.S. 156, 30 S.L.R. 391, not following Manavala Chetty, supra

735. Addition or alteration when to be made:—A charge must be amended before the judgment is pronounced. If a charge is defective, e.g., if more than three offences are included in one charge, which is invalid under section 234, the Magistrate cannot remedy the defect by saying in his judgment that he would proceed on only three charges. If he wishes to strike out any of the charges he should do so before concluding the trial, and should give the accused an opportunity of making such defence as he thinks fit; otherwise the trial is vitiated—Chetty, 49 Cal 555, 24 Cr.L.J. 86.

Although a charge may be added or altered at any time before the judgment is pronounced, still it is illegal to do so at a late stage of the proceedings, e.g., after the prosecution case has been closed and the defence evidence has been recorded—Isap Mahomed, 31 Bom. 218; Mathura, 6 C.W.N. 72. See also Mahanlal Aditram, 30 Cr.L.J. 191, 113 I.C. 617, 30 Bom.L.R. 1253, A.I.R. 1928 Bom 475, Ind. Rul 1929 Bom. 185. In Queen-Emp. v. Gordon, 9 All. 525 the High Court added a charge under sec. 193, I. P. C., when the prosecution case under sections 467 and 471, I. P. C., had concluded and the accused made a statement. See also Girdhari Lal, 12 Cr.L.J. 217, 10 I.C. 156.

If the complainant compounds the offence, the Court should acquit the accused upon the presentation of the petition of composition, and has no power to alter the charge already drawn up—Hasta, 1914 P.R. 29, 16 Cr.L.J. 81, 26 I.C. 993; Giyan Singh, 24 I.C. 948, 15 Cr.L.J. 540.

When the Sessions Judge altered the charge so as to make it one of an offence different in nature from that set out in the original charge, the Court would have no jurisdiction to convict the accused without calling on him to answer the charge and without taking the opinion of the assessors—Gulab Singh, A.I.R. 1935 All 458, 36 Cr.L.J. 1294, 158 I.C. 38, 1935 Cr.C. 486, 1935 A.L.J. 843.

In a trial by jury or assessors, the Sessions Court has no power to alter the charge after the delivery of the verdict of the jury or the opinion of the assessors—Shek Ali, 5 B.H.C.R. 9; Harbans, 1916 P.R. 33, 36 I.C. 134, 17 Cr.L.J. 545. The words "return of verdict" mean the return of the final verdict which the Judge is bound to record—Appa Subhana, 8 Bom. 200.

Application for alteration of charge.—An application for alteration of charge must be made immediately after the original charge has been read and explained by the Magistrate—Abdul Rahaman, 27 Cal 839; Karuppa, 18 Cr.L.J. 346, 38 I.C. 730. If the application is made before the Sessions Court at the commencement of the trial, the Sessions Judge should consider the application at once and not postpone passing his order till the conclusion of the trial—Vajram, 16 Bom 414, Dodo, 16 Cr.L.J. 573, 30 I.C. 125, 9 S.L.R. 37.

736. Sub-section (2):—An alteration of charge must be read over and explained to the accused. It is not the intention of the Legislature to empower a Court to convict an accused person of an offence of which he has not been told anything. Where a person was summoned to answer a charge under sec. 34, Police Act, but the Magistrate finding that the facts did not prove such offence, convicted him under sec. 279, I. P. C., without his being informed of the alteration of the charge, held that the conviction was illegal—Dhum Singh, 23 A.L.J. 436, 88 I.C. 1, 26 Cr.L.J. 1057; Raghunath, 24 A.L.J. 168, 27 Cr.L.J. 152, 91 I.C. 888. When a new charge was read aloud to the jury but was not specially explained to the prisoner, and he was not called upon to plead to that charge, but his counsel on being asked did not require a new trial (under sec. 229), it was held that the accused was not prejudiced by the addition of the new charge, and the omission to explain the new charge did not affect the trial—Appa Subhana, 8 Bom. 200.

228. If the charge framed or alteration or addition made under section 226 or section 227 is such that proceeding immediately with the trial is not likely, in the opinion of the Court, to prejudice the accused in his defence or the prosecutor in the conduct of the case, the Court may, in its discretion, after such charge or alteration or addition has been framed or made, proceed with the trial as if the new or altered charge had been the original charge.

237. The addition or alteration of a charge does not open up the trial from the beginning, and the Court may immediately proceed with the trial if it is of opinion that there will be no prejudice to the accused. If the accused has already been examined under sec. 342, before the amendment of the charge and before he has been called upon to enter on his defence, it is not incumbent on the Court to re-examine the accused after the amendment of the charge—Shamlal, 1 Pat. 54, 3 P.L.T. 91, 23 Cr.L.J. 146.

229. If the new or altered or added charge is such that proceeding immediately with the trial is likely, in the opinion of the Court, to prejudice the accused or the prosecutor as aforesaid, the Court may either direct a new trial or adjourn the trial for such period as may be necessary.

238. New trial:—The intention of the Legislature is that whenever an amendment of the charge in any way tends to the prejudice of the prisoner, steps should be taken to prevent that consequence, by ordering a new trial or suspending the trial going on, to enable him to make his defence or to examine any material witness or to recall any witness already examined (sec. 231). It is only in the case of charges clearly related to one another that a trial goes on forthwith (sec. 228) after an amendment—Govind, 11 B.H.C.R. 27.

Where the original and the altered charges are nearly related to each other (the original charge being one of murder, and the altered charge being one of abetment of murder), and the accused did not object to the amendment, it was held that there was no such material prejudice as would have necessitated a new trial under this section—Govind, 11 B.H.C.R. 278. If, however, the amendment of charge would raise different questions of law and would admit of a different line of defence, the accused would be prejudiced and a new trial would be necessary—Govindas, 6 B.H.C.R. 76.

In a new trial, the Court would not be justified in referring to the record of the former trial as a whole, but he may refer to such depositions as are especially put in evidence—Devi Dutt, 7 C.L.R. 193.

230. If the offence stated in the new or altered or added charge is one for the prosecution of which previous sanction is necessary, the case shall not be proceeded with until such sanction is obtained, unless sanction has been already obtained for a prosecution on the same facts as those on which the new or altered charge is founded.

Stay of proceedings if prosecution of offence in altered charge require previous sanction

739. Sanction for one offence, conviction for another:—The mere fact that the sanctioning authority is of opinion that the facts constitute an offence under one section of the Act is in itself no bar to a conviction of the accused person for another offence under another section, provided, of course, that the facts stated in the order giving sanction are the same as those upon which the conviction is based. In such a case it is not necessary that fresh consent to the trial upon such altered charge would have to be given by the sanctioning authority. Section 230 makes full provision for a case of this kind—Amar Singh, 1919 P.R. 31, 21 Cr.L.J. 230, 55 I.C. 102.

Where sanction has been obtained under sec 197 in respect of a substantive offence, it will avail in respect of abetment of such offence, and no fresh sanction is necessary. Therefore where sanction was obtained for the prosecution of a Sub-Registrar for an offence under sec. 468, I. P. C., the trial of the Sub-Registrar for the abetment of that offence founded on the same facts required no further sanction—Profulla, 30 Cal 905 (908).

231. Whenever a charge is altered or added to by the Court after the commencement of the trial, the prosecutor and the accused shall be allowed to recall or re-summon, and examine with reference to such alteration or addition, any witness who may have been examined, and also to call any further witness whom the Court may think to be material.

740. Recall of witnesses:—The provisions of sec 231 are peremptory, and therefore when a charge is altered, the Court is bound to recall any witnesses whom the prosecution or the accused desires to recall; the Judge cannot refuse to call them merely because the accused cannot show on what points further cross-examination is necessary—Chhanka, 6 Pat 832, 28 Cr.L.J. 769 (771), 104 I.C. 97, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 398, 8 P.L.T. 825. Under this section the accused has the right to recall the prosecution witnesses after the alteration of the charge, even if that alteration does not affect his defence. The Magistrate has no discretion in the matter, he is bound to recall those witnesses whom the accused wishes to recall—Ramalinga, 52 Mad 346, 30 Cr.L.J. 223 (224). And the Magistrate cannot refuse to recall the witnesses on this ground that the alteration is not material—Nagendranath, 36 C.W.N. 512 (543), 33 Cr.L.J. 265, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal 184, 136 I.C. 136, 55 C.L.J. 111, 1932 Cr.C. 478, A.I.R. 1932 Cal 486. When a charge is amended, the accused has a right to recall and cross-examine all the prosecution witnesses. The right is not restricted to the recalling of those witnesses only who have deposed to the subject matter of the amendment in the charge—Hazara Singh, 26 Cr.L.J. 1497, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 60, 90 I.C. 153. Where a charge has been altered, having regard to the provisions of secs. 231 and 257, Cr. P. C., the accused is entitled to have his new witnesses examined, unless for reasons mentioned in section 257 the Magistrate thinks that the application is made for the purpose of vexation or delay or for defeating the ends of justice. The two secs 231 and 257 have to be read together—Ramalinga v. Ramaswamy, 31 Cr.L.J. 455, 122 I.C. 785, 57 M.L.J. 478, 1929 M.W.N. 580, 30 M.L.W. 741. Where the Magistrate trying a warrant case at first framed a charge under sec 324, I. P. C., and then at a late stage of the proceedings, altered the charge into one under sec 307, I. P. C. (Sessions offence) without giving the accused an opportunity of re-examining the witnesses for the prosecution and producing his defence in regard thereto, and committed the accused to the Sessions on the charge so altered, held that the procedure of the Magistrate was entirely illegal and likely to prejudice the accused in his trial before the Court of Session—Mohan Lal, 22 A.L.J. 239, 25 Cr.L.J. 798, 81 I.C. 318, A.I.R. 1924 All. 665 (666). But quære, whether sec. 231 applies to such a case. It really falls under sec 317. Section 231 does not apply where during a trial of a warrant case the charge is altered into a charge for a Sessions offence, and the trial is converted into an inquiry under Ch. XVIII. Such a case is specifically provided for in sec. 317—Ram Ghulam, 1931 A.L.J. 587, 32 Cr.L.J. 849 (850), Ind. Rul 1931 All. 479, 132 I.C. 47, 1931 Cr.C. 706, A.I.R. 1931 All. 431, doubting Mohan Lal, supra. But it should be noted that there is no duty laid on the Court to ask the accused whether he wishes to recall or re-summon prosecution or defence witnesses, and so there is no breach of any provisions of sec. 231 if the Court does not so inquire. It is the accused who is to ask the Court to recall the witnesses. And there would be a breach of the provisions of this section if the Court refused the request of the accused to recall or summon witnesses—Konmal; 52 All 455, 1930 A.L.J. 572, 32 Cr.L.J. 22 (23).

232. (1) If any Appellate Court, or the High Court in the exercise of its powers of revision or of its powers under Chapter XXVII, is of opinion that any person convicted of an offence was misled in his defence by the absence of a charge or by an error in the charge, it shall direct a new trial to be had upon a charge framed in whatever manner it thinks fit.

(2) If the Court is of opinion that the facts of the case are such that no valid charge could be preferred against the accused in respect of the facts proved, it shall quash the conviction.

Illustration.

A is convicted of an offence under section 196 of the Indian Penal Code upon a charge which omits to state that he knew the evidence, which he corruptly used or attempted to use as true or genuine, was false or fabricated. If the Court thinks it probable that A had such knowledge, and that he was misled in his defence by the omission from the charge of the statement that he had it, it shall direct a new trial upon an amended charge; but if it appears probable from the proceedings that A had no such knowledge, it shall quash the conviction.

741. Scope:—This section lays down that if any person convicted of an offence has been misled in his defence by the absence of a charge or by an error in the charge, a retrial is to be ordered; and this rule applies as well to cases in which the conviction was in compliance with the terms of the law as to cases in which the conviction was irregular—Mallu Gope, 10 P.L.T. 875, 30 Cr.L.J. 891 (893), 118 I.C. 323.

Errors in the charge:—If the High Court thinks that in consequence of material errors in a charge, the accused has been misled, it is bound to direct a new trial to be had upon a charge framed in the proper manner—Harbans, 1916 P.R. 33, 17 Cr.L.J. 454, 36 I.C. 134. Where the owners of land were charged under sec. 153, I. P. C., for omission to give information of the riot to the thana, but they were convicted for the omission on the part of their agents, and not of themselves, it was held that the error in the charge prejudiced the accused, and a new trial was ordered by the Appellate Court—Sarat Chandra, 7 C.W.N. 301. Where the charge framed against the accused was to the effect that they caused hurt under sec. 324, I. P. C., to a certain person by means of a dao (a cutting instrument), but in fact there was no case of hurt by dao, but a lathi was used, and they were convicted under sec. 352, I. P. C., for assault with a lathi, it was held that the accused might have been prejudiced in their defence by this error in the charge, and a retrial was ordered—Sital Chandra, 17 C.W.N. 419, 14 Cr.L.J. 212 (213), 19 I.C. 308. Where the charge against the accused was under secs. 149 and 304, I. P. C., but the High Court found that the accused ought to have been charged under sec. 147, I. P. C., the High Court ordered a retrial under a properly framed charge under the latter section—Sabir, 22 Cal. 276 (285).

Where the prisoner refused to defend himself and refused to recognize the authority of the Courts, it cannot be said that he was misled in his defence by any error or omission in the charge or that there was any failure of justice under sec. 225 by reason of such error or omission—Ramendra, 58 Cal. 1303, 32 Cr.L.J. 844 (847), 35 C.W.N. 716, 132 I.C. 174, 1931 Cr.C. 506, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 410, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 558. But see Shailabala, A.I.R. 1933 All. 678 (685), 1933 A.L.J. 1059, 1933 Cr.C. 1190, 145 I.C. 977, 34 Cr.L.J. 967 (F.B.), where it has been laid down that if the illegality of a conviction is brought to the notice of the High Court there should not be a refusal on its part to interfere merely because the accused concerned is quite content with the order and does not wish to challenge it or because he had no objection to his being prosecuted and convicted.

742. Absence of charge:—Charge for one offence, conviction for another :—

Where an accused person was summoned for offences under secs. 143 and 379, I. P. C., and the trying Magistrate drew up a charge only for an offence under sec. 379 but convicted the accused for an offence under sec. 143, I. P. C., held that the conviction must be set aside. The accused was summoned for two offences, and when the Magistrate framed a charge under sec. 379, the accused had good reason to suppose that the other offence had been dropped by the Magistrate. Under such circumstances the accused was misled in his defence by the absence of a charge under sec. 143, I. P. C., and his conviction for that offence was therefore illegal—Hossein v. Kalu, 29 Cal. 481 (482). Where the accused were charged with and convicted of rioting (sec. 147, I. P. C.) and on appeal the Sessions Judge set aside the conviction for rioting, but convicted them for house-trespass and hurt (secs. 448 and 323, I. P. C.), it was held that the latter offences, being distinct and separate offences from rioting, should have formed the subject of separate charges, and the accused had been prejudiced within the meaning of this section by the omission of charges for the latter offences—Yakub Ali v. Lethu, 30 Cal. 288 (290). See also Har Narain, 18 C.W.N. 1274, 16 Cr.L.J. 42 (43), and Genu Manjhu, 18 C.W.N. 1276, 15 Cr.L.J. 704 (705), where the conviction was quashed on similar grounds.

Where the accused was charged for dishonestly using as genuine a forged instrument, but was convicted for defamation, it was held that not only should the conviction be set aside, but also as there was nothing to show that any valid charge could be preferred against the accused for the offence of defamation, no trial could be held (see sub-sec. 2)—Gobinda Persad v. Garth, 28 Cal. 63, 5 C.W.N. 819.

The accused persons were placed upon their trial upon charges of mischief under sec. 427, I. P. C., and of rioting under sec. 147, I. P. Code. No substantive charge in respect of the assault upon the Manager was framed against any of them. The trial Court discussed the evidence and came to the conclusion that the accused persons ought to be acquitted of all the charges framed against them. They were, however, convicted of an offence under sec. 323, I. P. C., for having assaulted the Manager. The Appellate Court came to the conclusion that as no charge had been framed under sec. 323, I. P. C., the accused could not but be acquitted. Held that the order of acquittal was bad in law in view of the provisions of sections 232 (1) and 535 (1), Cr. P. C., and that the appeal ought to be reheard in the light of these sections—Suraj Mull v. Scopujan Singh, 44 C.W.N. 400.

is accused there shall be a separate charge,
 Separate charges for distinct offences. and every such charge shall be tried separately, except in the cases mentioned in sections 234, 235, 236 and 239.

A is accused of a theft on one occasion, and of causing grievous hurt on another occasion. A must be separately charged and separately tried for the theft and causing grievous hurt.

743. Object of section:—The object of this section is to see that the accused is not bewildered in his defence by having to meet several charges in no way connected with one another—Ram Subheg, 19 C.W.N. 972, 16 Cr.L.J. 641 (654). Another object is to see that the mind of the Court is not prejudiced against the prisoner if he were tried in one trial upon different charges resting upon different evidence. It might be difficult for the Court trying him on one of the charges not to be unduly influenced by the evidence against him on the other charges—Juala Prasad, 7 All 174; Ram Subheg, supra. If in any case the accused are likely to be bewildered in their defence by having to meet many disconnected charges, or the prospect of a fair trial is likely to be endangered by the production of a mass of evidence directed to many matters and tending by its mere accumulation to induce an undue suspicion against the accused, then the propriety of combining the charges may be questioned—Fakirapa, 15 Bom 491; Rasul, 3 Luck. 664, 5 O.W.N. 612, 29 Cr.L.J. 801 (802).

The general law as to the trial of accused persons is embodied in this section which provides for separate trial of each accused person for every distinct offence, and the exceptions are laid down in secs 234, 235, 236 and 239 which must be strictly construed, so as not to defeat the right of independent trial conferred by the general law—Tepanidhi, 5 P.L.J. 11, 1 P.L.T. 180, 21 Cr.L.J. 161.

744. Scope of section:—These sections (233-239) relating to joinder of charges refer to the trial of the accused. The ruling in Subrahmaniya Aiyar's case, 25 Mad 61 (cited below) cannot be extended to preliminary inquiries held by Magistrates committing a case to the Sessions, so as to render the commitment itself illegal on the ground of misjoinder of offences or offenders at the preliminary inquiry—Govinda, 26 Mad. 592; Sessions Judge, 35 M.L.J. 259, 20 Cr.L.J. 514. See Notes under sec. 215. In a warrant case the trial proper does not begin until the accused is charged and called upon to answer. The stage up to then is only an inquiry and not a trial; and therefore where the accused are discharged under sec. 253 (i.e., before frame of charge), no question of illegality of joint trial arises—Manbodh v. Jhaboolal, 30 Cr.L.J. 404, 115 I.C. 164, A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 237, Ind. Rul. 1929 Nag. 100.
